PROF. OWENS TELLS NEW STUDENTS OF FORMER TIMES

TELLS FRESHMEN TALES OF MANY CUSTOMS OF OLDEN DAYS

Prof. Davis Shows Slides

Students have always been students apparently, if we are to take the word of Professor William Gundy Owens, who talked to the Bucknell freshmen in the living room of the Seminary last night on Bucknell traditions and customs of earlier days. According to Professor Owens it was once a practice for students to slip up behind their fellows and suddenly leap on their backs. On one occasion a student named John T. Bell mistook Professer "Bossy" Bliss. the stately and dignified teacher of Greek, for a fellow student, and slipping up behind him in the dark, suddenly leaped high on his shoulders and wrapped his legs about the professor's neck. The result was astonishing. Instead of the expected result, the joker heard the dignified voice of his Greek teachr say, "Well, young man, what do you want up there?" The student didn't wait to explain what he wanted; but dropping to the ground, he scurried away in the dark.

In those early days, Professor Owens said, students came to college to study, even though they played jokes on one another. A certain stu-

Stadium Marks Birth of Greater Bucknell

Memorial Both To Soldier Dead And To Loyal Alumni

Standing as a memorial to her boys who served in the great war the Bucknell Memorial Stadium stands also as a tribute to the loyalty and generosity of her alumni and friends. It represents the contributions of thousands of people, the careful planning of a lesser number and the unceasing, devoted drudgery of a few who bore the burden of responsibility.

Plans fora memorial were beginning to form at Bucknell more than five years ago. At that time little was thought of the plan except by a few enthusiasts. However the next few years saw the movement grow in power and popularity and by the summer of 1922 work on the ground was begun.

During the session of 1922-23, drive after drive was launched among the alumni in the Eastern cities and exceeded quotas were reported after almost every drive. The student body, asked to pledge fifty thousand dollars, responded with more than sixty thousand, and Lewisburg did as well. Before the end of the year the contract was let and work on the new athletic field begun.

Early in the spring of 1924 steam shovels began tearing into the hills where the stadium now stands. Thomas J. Foley, a former member of the class of 1913 and president of

SPECIAL NUMBER

This issue of the BUCKNELLIAN is a special number published to help the freshmen in acquainting themselves with their surroundings. It is given to you with the compliments of the University and of the staff.

When you have read the paper you may wish to send it home or you may want another to send back to the folks. They will be given out free of charge as long as the supply lasts.

The first regular issue of the BUCKNELLIAN will be published Wednesday, September 16. The paper consists of eight pages of news, features, athletics, and advertisements, printed on regular news paper and paid for through the student budget. It will be published every Wednesday afternoon throughout the term.

FROSH RULES AND COLLEGE CUSTOMS

"Read 'Em And Weep," But Learn Them Anyway

The conduct of freshmen is carefully governed in some respects by clearly defined rules that have been made by student governing bodies of the past and are enforced by the student and interfraternity councils of today. Many of these rules originated in the early customs that were almost universal in all of the colleges of the land while others have a more modern origin.

The following are some of the rules and customs which the freshman would do well to acquaint himself with, if he desires tocarry on his work without interuption when the college classes proper begin. Failure to meet the requirements may cause great embarrassment and in some instance has been known to bring physical pain.

1. Freshmen must attend all mass meetings and cheering practices.
2. All freshmen must wear blue skull caps with green buttons, black ties and socks every week day except to the Punior Prom.
3. The caps (dinks) must be worn on the top of the head and must not be disfigured in any way.
4. Freshmen must at all times salute members of the faculty and show due respect to all upperclassmen. (Juniors and seniors are upperclassmen.)
5. Except in the company of an upperclassman, freshmen must not be seen with a young lady before Washington's Birthday. "Fussing" is allowed at college functions but calling at the "Sem" or in town before February 22 is forbidden. This rule does not apply to sisters.
6. Freshmen must not cut across the campus or the athletic field.
7. Freshmen must speak to everybody at all times. They must carry

Buildings Have Beauty

Old Main And Biology Buildings Designed By Famous Architect

When Mr. Carrere, of the celebrated firm of Carrere and Hastings, New York City architects, first came to Bucknell, he stood entranced before Old Main. So simple and plain is this old structure that some persons fail to comprehend its stately beauty. But Mr. Carrere's trained eye saw at once how magnificent it really was. When he had "sized it up" to his heart's content, he said that the college authorities ought never to allow any one to change a line of it.

Old Main is typical of many things at Bucknell. It is plain and simple. but is of first quality. The beauty of it sinks into the mind gradually. Its stateliness grows on one. It is a good symbol for the college. ForBucknell aims to be just like Old Main—quiet and simple but of fine quality.

That spirit has been typical of Bucknell from the beginning. while the institution was still in its infancy, and its classes were tiny, men of vision planned this magnificent old structure. The college hadn't money enough in those days to build it all at once, so the building was erected in sections. West Wing first, then the main section, and finally the East Wing. When finally it was completed, it was the largest college building in America, with one exception. That was the main building at the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor. Also it was planned by an architect able enough to be chosen by the United States government to design the dome and the senate wing of the national capitol, Thomas U. Walter. No wonder that Mr. Carrere found Old Main so worth while a structure.

But though Old Main is the largeest building at Bucknell, it was not the first building. The first building was the old Acaddemy, which for so many years housed the preparatory school at Bucknell. It, too, was planned by Mr. Walter, and its lines are of the same simple, stately type as those of Old Main. To appreciate them, one should view the building from a distance. The East Hall, connected with the Academy by a covered passage, was added to the building many years

PRESIDENT EMORY W. HUNT

To the Members of The Class of 1929

We wish you to feel, on coming to Bucknell, that you are coming among friends who will have sympathy with your highest purposes in college, will wish to help you with your problems, and will rejoice with you in your successes here and in the career to which you go.

Bring with you, not only your tennis raquet and other recreational equipment; not only your mind, with the training your schools and experience have given you; but also a heart of love for those you are leaving at home, of loyalty to the fine ideals which they have held before you, and clear grit to preserve and defend those ideals against any influence which would mar them.

Without these a college course is not a gain, but a loss.

EMORY W. HUNT.

Lewisburg a Town of Many Churches

Well Trained Clergymen Minister To Spiritual Welfare Of Students

The town of Lewisburg has perhaps more churches for its population than any town in the state. Seven church buildings are maintained and six of them are in charge of regular ministers.

In consideration of the presence of the University in the town, it appears that each of the various denominations makes an effort to send Lewisburg one of its best trained ministers. The seven ministers of the town are all college graduates in addition to having seminary training.

The Baptist church which was responsible for the establishment of the University, and from which a great deal of its present support is drawn, is located at the corner of Third street and St. Louis. It is in charge of the Rev. Dr. R. M. West, a graduate of Bucknell in the class of '89. Preaching services are held at eleven and seven-thirty each Sunday and the Sunday school meets at nine-fifteen.

Just across the street is the Beaver Memorial Methodist Church of which the Rev. H. F. Babcock is pastor. Mr. Babcock is a graduate of Dickinson college and was for several years Methodist student pastor at the Pennsylvania State College. The preaching services of the Methodist church are held at ten-thirty and seven-thirty and the Sunday school at nine-fifteen.

The third of the Third Street churches is on the opposite corner from the Baptist church and belongs to the Lutherans. The Rev. Mr. R. B. McGiffen, its pastor, is a graduate of Wittenberg College at Springfield, Ohio. The preaching services of this

Football Team Faces 11 Strenuous Games

Bucknell Has Traditional Athletc Prestige—Look For Defeatless Season

Bucknell is a school where athletic tradition runs high. Beginning in the early days when the boys of the University fought for the right to have competitive games at all, down to the present time when the name of Bucknell is rapidly becoming synonomous with athletic prowess throughout the country, there have been great athletes and great teams prduced at Bucknell.

Professor Bartol was a member and captain of one of the college's earliest baseball teams. His accounts of the means which were necessary at the time in order to have a game with an outside team make us appreciate the strides that have been taken since his days in the student body.

Even in the days before professional coaching had taken its place in the field of intercollegiate athletics Bucknell had carved for herself a niche in the gallery of fame. Her football team in 1891 defeated Lafayette, 16-10; Cornell, 4-0, and State 12-10. The years intervening are filled with records of surprising victories and crushing defeats. One year would produce a powerful team which in another would vanish.

The beginning of consistent progress at Bucknell came with the introduction of her first professional coach and trainer, George Hoskins, who began his work in 1908. Since that time there has been constant development in the power of the teams. Games with Pitt, Navy, Lafayette, Lehigh, and other schools having strong teams came to be annual events.

STUDENT COUNCIL GOVERNS COLLEGE

Plan Of Student Government Outlined, Purpose Stated

The government of the student body of Bucknell is in the hands of a student council and an interclass council as it was determined by the students and faculty last year.

The student council, whose stated purpose is to preserve the worthy traditions of the university, control class and fraternity activities affecting the whole student body, and look out for the moral and scholastic standards of the students, is composed of the president of the senior class who is also president of the council, the presidents of the various social fraternities, a representative of the non-fraternity men and the president of the interclass council who is the vice-president of the senior class.

The interclass council which served under the jurisdiction of the student council and as an auxillary to it, taking care of the violations of ordinary customs such as speaking and fussing rules, consist of the vice-president of the senior class, four members of the junior class, three members of the sophomore class, and the freshman president who attends all meetings but has no vote in any matter. The members of the council are elected at the regular class elections.

The meetings of the councils will occur on Monday nights at nine o'clock. The student council meets every two weeks and the interclass council every week.

The councils will operate to secure a fair and effective enforcement of the college rules. Corporal hazing will not be used by them but all other penalties are within the power of the interclass council. The student council may, if it deems the action proper, recommend to the president of the University the suspension of any student.

Rushing Rules

New Restrictions Give Freshmen Chance To Look Around

The class of 1929 will be first in many years to find the fraternities governed by restricted rushing rules.

Late in the second semester of last year a committee chosen by the presidents of the social fraternities of the University drew up a set of regulations for the pledging of freshmen to membership in fraternities. These were favorably voted on by the student body and then approved by the faculty.

Rushing is defined by these rules as "any attempt to influence a new student in his choice of a fraternity or to entertain him in any fraternity house." The student council is to enforce the rushing rules.

No new student may be pledged until one month after the official opening of college. The closed season this year will be from September 1 to September 23, and from October 7 to October 14. The two intervening weeks will be a period of intensive rushing. A common bid day will be announced.

No alumnus may rush a freshman out of season. When a man has broken his pledge or it has been broken by the fraternity, he may not be rushed for a period of three months.

Each fraternity is responsible for infractions of the rushing rules by any individual member. The penalty for violations is a fine of fifty dollars; or exclusion from representation in the student council and the giving up of the right of any of the members of the fraternity to hold any campus office until reinstatement in good standing.

The freshmen will profit by these rules because they will have a month in which to get acquainted and adjusted, and then to make a more deliberate and judicious choice of the group with whom they are to associate for the rest of their college career. A like advantage for the fraternity will result.

Professor Roy F. Howes, head of the department of Political Science returned to Lewisburg last week. He spent the summer attending the session of the law school at Cornell University.

FINE ENTHUSIASM MARKS ACTION OF FRESHMEN

FROSH HEAR LECTURES; ATTEND ALL MEETINGS; CLASS WORK SOON

Many Activities Planned

The activities that have been undertaken in the work of Bucknell's first Freshman Week have been characterized by an abundance of "pep". As Professor Lawson remarked in speaking at the first meeting that occured in the living room of Women's College, they're "the freshest looking bunch of freshmen!"

Getting in and getting locatd occupied the newcomers throughout the morning and afternoon of Wednesday and some even found it better to come a day earlier "to avoid the rush." In this getting-located process the services of the "Y" members who came back to college a week in advance was greatly appreciated. They made finding rooms and offices a simple matter for everybody.

The first big meeting was a reception for all of the new students that was held at the Women's College. It was held on Wednesday evening and by that time well over two hundred of the first year class had reported. Singing led by Professor Stolz and a reception line that included everybody did much to break down the

B. U. Spends $50,000 For Improvements

Maintenance, Service, Light, Heat, etc. Cost $90,000 More Each Year

The work of the last two years in the improvements and remodelling of college buildings has cost the University over fifty thousand dollars. This has to do only with the extraordinary work required in making the rooms more convenient and useful and is entirely separate from the bills for repairs and maintenance.

The work included the building of fire escapes on many of the buildings, the cutting of fire doors, alterations on the biology building and Bucknell Hall, the tearing down of the hall that was used for an S. A. T. C. mess hall and the enlargement of the dining room at the Women's College.

In addition to this the budget for upkeep and repairs on the buildings, along with the maintenance of the campus and paths, the replacement of furniture, and ordinary improvements calls for an annual expenditure of over ninety thousand dollars. Included in this is a payroll for janitor service, mechanics, and men who keep the campus in condition that runs between two thousand and two thousand five hundred dollars every two weeks, and a bill for ordinary repairing materials such as wall paper, glass, etc. that amounts to more than twentythousand dollars every session.

The money paid by the student for this service is far from adequate to meet the expense. The difference is paid for out of the income from the endowment and by the gifts of various persons who are interested in the college. It is not paid for by the public but only through the interest of men who believe in the college. That the college is able to continue to give its present service is possible only through the greatest economy on the part of the administrative officers. Although the student at Bucknell pays a relatively small amount for the rent and upkeep of his room, service, light, heat, etc., when compared with the amount paid for the same commodities in other institutions, he pays a greater percentage of his own expenses than the students in many of the colleges having an equal student body and a larger endowment. This is the proof of that economy.

The administration is planning to improve the buildings and grounds as rapidly and economically as possible. Each year will see added comforts and conveniences, remodelling here and there, until the college will have been modernized in every respect.

In these first few days during which the University is almost exclusively the property of the class of 1929 we hope that you will come to feel at home in the surroundings that you contemplate making your home for the coming four years. We hope that period may pass happily and that at its end you may look back with no cause for regret. In short we are glad you are here and we want the college to mean to you everything that you have expected it to mean. As you are now a part of Bucknell your welfare is a part of ours and we hope that our relations with each other may be mutually beneficial.

its organization which will take place next Monday afternoon at 2:40, it will meet the returning sophomores and upperclassmen as a unit and will not go leaderless until just the day beore the initial combat, the annual scrap.

Unknown to each other as the majority of the new men naturally are they will have no way of telling who will make the best men for their officers. The best they can do is to make sure that every man attends the meeting and takes part in the elections. Then it is to be hoped that they will support their officers loyally. Class spirit and willingness to accept ones responsibilities as a member of the college community are two of the things that are to be fostered.

FOOTBALL TEAM FACES 11 STENOUS GAMES

With the increased interest in colleges and college athletics of the last few years the teams of Bucknell have come into increasing prominence. Under the teaching of "Pete" Reynolds, now head coach of the Syracuse University grid squad, the team undertook a schedule of unprecedented difficulty. In 1922 Lafayette, Navy, Pitt, and Georgetown were played within four weeks. The following year the Bison team invaded New Haven and while losing to Yale, won all the glory of the game in scoring fourteen points during the last quarter. That game marked the height of Bucknell's glory for the year.

In 1924 Charles B. Moran, the famous "Uncle Charley" who took a handful of students at Center College in Kentucky and produced a team that threw terror into the ranks of the colleges of the East, the man who developed "the praying Colonels", came to take charge of Bison football destiny. With him he brought Rhodes Ingerton as backfield coach and Ben Cregor to tutor the linemen. The season opened with a slow game in which Western Maryland was defeated 6-0. Succeeding games however showed rapid improvement and the 6-0 victory over the Navy and Rutgers' 12-7 setback brought the eyes of the world to what that team will do next year.

The schedule for this year is something of a poser. Six teams that have not appeared on a Bison schedule for many years make direct comparisons impossible. The adoption of the one after the Academy was built. When the preparatory school was abandoned at Bucknell, the Academy building was used for laboratory and recitation work. The biology and the English classes largely recite there.

Another of the original buildings is the "Sem." This dormitory for women was originally known as the Bucknell Female Institute. Also, it had a high board fence around it, and when the "female" occupants went outside the fence, they were usually lined up, with teachers fore and aft. But that was a long time ago.

To this building have been added the Bucknell cottage, commonly known as the Annex, and the Women's College Building.

Perhaps Bucknell is unusual in the fact that it possesses buildings that were both planned and built by members of the faculty.

The chemical laboratory was planned by Professor William C. Bartol, head of the Department of Mathematics, who was both architect and builder. A few years ago the building was remodeled and enlarged about a third. Another building erected by Dr. Bartol is the observatory, of which he had charge for many years. The most recent building erected by a faculty man is the new engineering building, which was built by Professor Burpee. When all the outside bids on the building had been opened, it was decided to put the construction in the hands of Professor Burpee. With his own Bucknell workmen he erected the structure for just half the amount of the lowest bid, saving the institution one hundred thousand dollars. Professor Burpee, who is a practical builder, is in charge of the college grounds and buildings.

One of the interesting structures on the campus is the home of the president. This was built by President Loomis and was his private property. Upon his death it was purchased by the University as a home for her presidents. But the structure as originally erected was very different from the present house. It was a square structure, consisting of that portion fronting on University Avenue. Dr. Loomis occupied it for a number of years, and was succeeded in his tenancy by President David Jayne Hill, who, since leaving Bucknell has been U. S. minister to Switzerland and to the Netherlands, and ambassador to Germany, and first assistant secretary of state for the United States. He is one of the foremost living authorities on international law and diplomacy.

Perhaps new students will find one of the most interesting structure to be the stadium. It is interesting from many points of view. Architecturally it speaks for itself. It is the gift of the college alumni, who pledged nearly half a million dollars for its erection. It was built by a Bucknell contractor, T. J. Foley, of Pittsburg. The work was supervised by two Bucknell professors, Professor F. E. Burpee and Professor C. A. Lindemann.

The oval of turf is as fine a piece of grass as can be found. To those who saw the rock-and-cinder-covered field only a few weeks before the Lafayette game kickoff, it seemed a miracle that the bare earth could be carpeted so quickkly and so beautifully. Deep down under the surface a network of parallel drains was laid so as to run off rain water quickly, and insure a dry playing field. Ten inches of cinders covered the leveled ground. Four inches of topsoil made a bed for the turf. This was a magnificent stand of sod bought from a farmer. The laborers went into the pasture and cut the sod in strips, according to pattern. These pieces were laid on the prepared bed, rolled, watered, and cut. Every night a watchman watered the great oval with lines of hose. The transformation was like magic. When Lafayette trotted out on the field, before the huge crowd on homecoming day, there wasn't a finer piece of turf in Pennsylvania. That sod will become a familiar sight during these fall days at Bucknell.

church are held at the same hours as those of the Methodist church. The Sunday school meets at nine thirty.

The Presbyterian church is located on Market street about a block from the river. The Rev. Mr. F. B. Everitt who is the minister graduated from Princeton. Sunday school is held at nine thirty and preaching services at eleven and seven thirty.

The Evangelical church is on Fourth street just south of Market. The Rev. Mr. Walter J. Dice, a graduate of the Central Pennsylvania College which later became a part of Albright College at Myerstown, is the pastor. The hours of the services are the same as those of the Methodist church.

The Reformed Church on the corner of Third street and St. John is in charge of the Rev. Mr. H. H. Rupp, a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College. Sunday school is held at nine o'clock and preaching services at ten thirty and seven thirty.

The Christian Church on Third street between Market and St. John does not have a regular pastor. Sunday school is held at nine o'clock and the pulpit is occupied from time to time, the services being held at ten thirty in the morning or seven thirty in the evening.

Although there is no building for the Episcopal people of the town, the Rev. Mr. J. T. Heistand, a Columbia graduate holds services at his home at 140 South Third street. It is expected that these services may be transferred to one of the college buildings or to one of the other churches during the year.

There is no Catholic church in the town but many of the Catholic students attend mass at the Milton church.

BAPTIST C. E. WELCOMES NEW STUDENTS

The Baptist Christian Endeavor will hold a welcome service for the new students, Sunday evening after the short evening church service there will be held as usual at 7:30. A short program consisting of talks by faculty members and upperclass students will occupy part of the time after which a period of getting acquainted will be enjoyed by the new and old students. The C. E. is ready to welcome every student and desires that this first "get together" shall be well attended by new and old students alike.

A meeting of all the "old" Baptist students has been called for Saturday evening at seven o'clock in the Baptist Church. The president, Albert Sheckells, Jr., urges that every Baptist turn out to this meeting, as it is very important.

BUCKNELL'S DRIVE FOR ENDOWMENT

The following article was written by Dr. Wood, assistant to the president, who has been actively engaged in the work of securing a larger endowment since the beginning of the movement.

Dr. F. R. Wood

The new students who are entering Bucknell this year will hear, if they have not already heard, a great deal about this drive for $1,000,000. Twelve years ago the trustees realized that Bucknell needed more invested funds to carry on its growing work. On 1914 the war came and held up the appeal. Four years later the drive was again approved, but the Baptist churches of the Northern United States launched a $100,000,000 campaign which was to cover five years and to include the needs of Baptist colleges. Bucknell fell in line with the understanding that if this drive was successful, she would receive $1,000,000 for her endowment and $500,000 for added equipment. This drive was far from successful and Bucknell received, in all, approximately $317,000.

In the meantime the trustees had purchased the Miller farm of 158 acres, had erected the new Engineering Building, had enlarged the Chemical Laboratory one-third, and made other improvements to the property. In 1923 the alumni demanded better athletic facilities, and launched the movement which resulted in the erection of the great and splendid stadium, for which $400,000 was pledged.

In 1924 the trustees were compelled to appeal to the Baptist churches of the state, the Alumni, and to all friends, for funds to increase the endowment, because an offer of $200,000 had been made by the General Education Board of New York City to Bucknell, on the condition that $450,000 more should be raised, in cash, by December 31st, 1925, and the University be out of debt.

For more than a year this intensive drive has been under way, with the result that $435,000 has been pledged to the endowment. This work is still being carried on with increased intensity, with the determined purpose that the whole $450,000 in cash shall be raised by December 31st next. If this is done, the University will receive $200,000 more from the General Education Board, and the total amount of invested funds will then aggregate $1,250,000. This is not a large sum when we compare it with the endowments of other colleges in our class, nor with the needs of our ever-increasing student body.

The new students are invited to fall in line with the upperclassmen to do all they can to help this movement. Nothing would improve the morale, or rather build up a stronger morale in the institution, than a united effort to attain the above result.

Student Activities Divide Budget Fees

Nine Dollar Charge Supports Many College Activities

When paying nine dollars per semester for a general item such as the student budget one naturally asks one self what is included in this fee. In making such an inquiry one is entirely justified for there are so many activities connected with the extracurricular side of college life, both among those that are included in the budget and those that are not, that it becomes necessary to know just what one has already paid for and supported and what one may subscribe to or not as one chooses.

The activities that are included under the student budget are those that have been considered by the majority of the student body and the administration to be such as merit the support of every student. Many others that are sanctioned by the college have also subjected their accounts to the faculty committee for auditing but are in no way supported by the general budget plan. The whole activity of the student organizations whose accounts have been so handled is taken up in the report which the faculty committee, of which Professor Drum is the head, has prepared and will be treated in more detail in an early issue of the BUCKNELLIAN.

The activities which are included in the general student budget account include athletics, the band, the BUCKNELLIAN, class dues, the class memorial reserve, debating, dramatic and literary activities, the glee clubs, the student council, the women's student government, and a limited support to the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. The apportionment that was made last year and which will probably be followed with a few minor exceptions during the coming term was as follows:

Bucknellian	.70 per student
Glee Club	.60 per student
Band	.50 per student
Debating	.30 per student
Dramatic and literary	.15 per student
Class memorial	.60 per student
Class dues	.25 per student
Y. M. C. A.	.38 per man
Y. W. C. A.	.50 per woman
Student Council	.05 per man
Women's Government	.25 per woman
Printing report	.10 per man
Budget reserve	.37 per man
	.15 per woman

Five dollars of the nine paid to the registrar is turned over to the athletic association which apportions the amount among the various games and sports. This amount pays for admission to all home contests in which the regular college teams take part if they are scheduled by the athletic association. It does not include interfraternity games nor interclass games except between freshmen and sophomores.

Another item that is paid at the time of registration is a fee for LAGENDA which has been placed at $4.25. LAGENDA is the college year book that is published each year by the junior class. Last year the student body voted to make subscription compulsory on all classes. The book is published during the spring and is an account of the college activities from the beginning of the second semester of the preceding session to the end of the first semester of the current session. The four volumes one receives during his college course thus form a valuable memo of student days and the large circulation makes it impossible for the price to be within the reach of all the students.

BUCKNELL OFFERS FINE FACILITIES FOR RECREATION

ORGANIZED ATHLETICS GIVE OPPORTUNITY FOR EXERCISE

Facilities for sport of all sorts are to be found at Bucknell. Just now interest naturally centers in football, and for the next three months or so a large number of Bucknell men will be found daily on the gridiron, kicking the pigskin. This present year is the first year that the one year eligibility rule will be strictly enforced at Bucknell. From this time on, no man may play on a Bucknell team who has not been in residence at the University a full year. This means that no freshman can play on the team and so will give added opportunity to some men of the upper classes to make the team.

On the other hand, it offers good opportunity for this year's freshmen to make the team next fall. By playing on the scrub squad, the new men can learn Moran's system, and demonstrate their ability, so that they will be in line for places next fall.

Basketball follows hard on the heels of football, together with winter work in the gymnasium. Because of the rapid growth in the size of the student body, the present gymnasium is not adequate to the needs of the situation. It has taken all available funds to build the new stadium, so that the need of a new gymnasium has had to be passed over. But that is a matter that will be remedied in time. The construction of the stadium has helped the gymnasium situation to this extent: it has taken the football and baseball squads out of the building and over to the stadium, thus leaving the locker and shower accommodations to other men.

In baseball Bucknell has always done fairly well. Many stars of the big leagues have had their early training at Bucknell. Among them were Christy Mathewson, ex-'02 who is regarded by many baseball lovers as the greatest pitcher who ever threw a ball. He is the pitcher who won three games in a world's series. "Moose" McCormick, who was pinch hitter for the New York Giants at the same time Mathewson was astar pitcher for that team,is graduate manager of athletics at Bucknell and acts as baseball coach. Walter Blair, one of our town merchants, is a Bucknell man who played with the New York Americans, for which team he was catcher. There are many other Bucknell men who could be mentioned, who made the big leagues. So it is evident that baseball is firmly and well established.

In track sports Bucknell has had some very poor teams and some very good ones. In the days of George Buskins, who was athletic coach here some years ago, Bucknell swept everything before her on the cinder path. For six successive years Bucknell won first place in her race at the Pennsylvania Relay Races. Last spring Bucknell took first place at the Central Pennsylvania Intercollegiate games at Harrisburg, thereby winning permanent possession of the handsome Public Ledger trophy cup, offered to that team which should be first to score three victories at these games. Both Dickinson and Bucknell had twice won the championship. Bucknell was able to repeat, and so took permanent possession of the cup. It can be seen, with other trophies, in the trophy case in the library.

In addition to such organized sports as those mentioned, Bucknell affords facilities for various other sports that should give great pleasure and benefit to hundreds of students. There is usually sufficient snow here to afford good coasting and skeeing. Neither sport has been developed as it should be, and there is abundant opportunity for great expansion in these sports. In other seasons Bucknell students go in great numbers to the mountains. Why should not Bucknell skeemen have a forest headquarters, with a cabin, where they can go on skeeing trips and hikes? At Dartmouth where winter sports have been developed to an unusual degree, long trips are taken on skees, and the skeemen have cabins in the mountains where they stay at night. Here is a possible activity that should attract the attention of many students.

Along with skeeing goes skating. Usually there is very good skating at the mouth of Buffalo Creek. This stream empties into the Susquehanna, just above the river bridge. Its sheltered waters freeze smooth and thick, affording good skating. The river also provides good skating ground at times. Hundreds of Bucknell students take advantage of these opportunities for sport.

Canoeing is another favorite sport, but there is no regular organization for such sports. It should be entirely possible to develop a good canoe club or clubs, and to have an annual canoe carnival. Such carnivals should provide aquatic games and competitions by day, with picturesque lighted canoe parades at night. At Springfield College, in Massachusetts, the canoe carnival is a very popular event. On the sloping shore Indian club performers take their stand at night, with illuminated clubs, with which they perform the usual club drills. The sight is novel and fascinating. The parade of illuminated canoes is a sight that brings multitudes of spectators. Bucknell has ample opportunity to have as fine canoe sports as most any college. Such sports cost little and can be participated in by a large number.

Another field of pleasure that offers is the mountain hike. In its location Bucknell is particularly fortunate. The nearby mountains offer most fascinating tramps along the trails and roads made by the foresters. Week-ends spent in the mountains should prove both profitable and enjoyable.

The fact is that Bucknell offers an unusually large field for pleasurable exercise. Mountain, river, forest, and field are at hand, each with its special attraction. The student body is large enough to supply a number of devotees of most any sort of sport. It remains only to take advantage of this situation to make life at Bucknell memorable for the days in the open.

PROF. OWENS TELLS OF FORMER TIMES

dent in Old Main made himself obnoxious by rolling a cannon ball up and down the hallway during study hours. His fellows warned him, but the student refused to desist. Thereupon a hole was chopped in the ice covering the pump trough—in those days students had to get their water at a pump—and the offending student was dumped into the trough and icy water pumped on him. There was no more rolling of cannon balls in the hall after that.

Professor Owens also spoke of the early attempt at athletics. There was a ball team very early, and it was a good one. Professor Bartol captained it.

But the team was forbidden to leave the campus, and whatever games were played with outsiders had to be played on the college grounds.

In this respect the ball players were little worse off than other students, for all students were required to leave their names at the office if they went out of town.

The co-eds were even worse off. They dared not so much as go down town to purchase a handkerchief unless a teacher went along as chaperone. Calling at the Seminary was taboo. Only brothers and cousins were allowed to visit at the Sem. According to Professor Owens there was an amazing lot of cousins in college in those days.

The speaker also told about President Loomis' coming upon some boys playing ball during study hour a thing strictly forbidden. The president was both rheumatic and short sighted, so when he gave chase to the offending students they simply withdrew faster than the president could advance, being careful to keep at the proper distance to prevent the president from identifying them. When he found he could not come up with them, the president wrathfully threw his cane at the offenders.

Despite the fact that there is so much more freedom nowadays about the college, Professor Owens says the students have improved in late years in morals and manners. He urged them to set high ideals for themselves and stick to their ideals; to study to learn and not merely to get their diplomas; and above all to get a Christian education.

Bucknell traditions, said Professor Owens, in summing up, are high ideals, high living, faithful study, clean sport, and sociable, straight, agreeable life.

After Professor Owens' talk, Professor Nelson Davis showed a number of lantern slides made from photographs illustrating the development at Bucknell.

Professor Clarence Johnson president, and Professor Paul Stolz kept things moving between times with popular songs.

President Hunt has just returned from a vacation in Canada. He and Professor N. F. Davis spent a part of every summer at a camp far in the wilds north of Quebec. During the college course you will doubtless often be entertained by their accounts of different Canadian adventures.

Professor Frank A. Sprague who teaches Spanish in the department of Romance Languages is now in Switzerland on the last leg of a tour through the British Isles, Spain, Italy, Southern France and the mountain republic. He will not return to the University until September 22. Mrs. Sprague will conduct his classes before his arrival.

BUCKNELL STADIUM

the Foley Construction Co., of Pittsburgh, had promised that the big "U" would be ready for the Homecoming-day game with Lafayette, October 18, 1924. There followed one of the rainiest seasons that has ever been known in this section of the country. There were whole weeks when practically no progress could be made in the construction work because of the condition of the clay ground. But when the ground did become firm enough to make operations practical the contractor brought all the resources at his command to bear on the problem. Double crews working day and night worked wonders in a few weeks and before the close of the college two sections of the stands were curing while the grading, draining and form building for the others went hastily on.

When October 18 came the work was done. A big white "U" enclosing a fine green field held the place that had formerly been a farmer's field.

The maroon and white of Lafayette alternated with the orange and blue of Bucknell in the stadium. Charles P. Vaughan, chairman of the stadium commission presented the deed to the vice-chairman of the board of trustees, Dr. J. Warren Davis. A bugler played "Taps" in memoryof Bucknell's soldier dead. Fifteen thousand people saw and the world has heard of the game that followed.how Wally Foster made the first score and how in the end the Bison was forced down in defeat. Still that day was a victory for it marked the birth of the greater Bucknell, the Bucknell that we are now beginning to see.

College Inn Prospers

Makes Many Changes And Alterations During Summer

BETTER THAN EVER

The College Inn has already reopened its doors after only a few short weeks that have passed since closing them at the end of the summer session. For the first time in several years the management of the Inn gave its full time to the needs of the summer session students, not dividing its time with any other outside business.

During the period between sessions the College Inn has been thoroughly renovated and some physical changes have taken place. With one successful year passed into history, Prowant's tailoring shop has come up out of the basement and established itself on the large side porch that is being enclosed with French windows to accomodate the larger line of goods that will be carried in the branch store this winter. Ray Farley from Williamsport, a World War veteran and an experienced tailor, will have charge of the shop.

The college barber shop, an institution long established in East Wing, has been purchased by the College Inn management and will occupy the room vacated by the tailor shop. A new chair is being installed along with long mirrors and a shampooing lavatory. A light, warm, and sanitary shop, it will in the future be a full time institution with Mr. Lloyd of Forest Hill in charge. It is expected that the new shop will be a greater convenience to faculty members and students who wish to get in a little tonsorial treatment between classes.

The College Inn proper, basing its support on an ever increasing business has added five full-time employees to its force, inducting a dining room girl, an extra lunch counter girl, and one in charge of the Triangle Stationery store, a new line of goods that the Inn has taken over after two years of student management, the entire force having graduated.

reserve that might have been found at such a first meeting and the group, before the evening was over had the appearance of having been associated for a long time. Dean Rivenburg gave the freshmen the welcome of the University in his short talk here and Miss Clark, Professor Lawson, and Professor Johnson, the chairman of ,the freshmen week committee, added their friendly messages.

The first chapel service was held in Bucknell Hall on Thursday morning and there the freshmen made their first acquaintance with President Hunt. A part of the time of the chapel period was given over to the learning and singing of Bucknell songs. The reshmen certainly are taking to singing with great enthusiasm. The freshmen cheering section this fall should make a formidable showing.

Following the chapel service Professor Lawson spoke to the class on "Adjustments that are to be Made in Passing from High School to College", taking up the principle differences that will be found in the methods of instruction, study,and life, and warning the students against mistakes that might be made in their attempts to pass in one step from the scholastic to the collegiate.

The remaining portion of the morning was given over to the study of the library under the direction of Miss Martin, college librarian. Miss Martin told the newcomers many interesting facts about the necessity for having its arrangement what it is. She pointed out the differences that exist between the use and purpose of college libraries and the use and purpose of general libraries and more specifically the characteristics of our own library as distinct from other school and college libraries. Miss Martin will give two more talks on the library covering the use of dictionaries and encyclopedias in one and of periodicals and works of special references in the other.

The afternoon was started with Dean Rivenburg's mesage of "Practical Advice to Freshmen." The dean opened his subject by referring to the article on "The Ten Marks of an Educated Man," written by Albert E. Wiggam, in the American Magazine. After considering Mr. Wiggam's position he stressed the importance of getting a good start in college work. He took up the points that might cause confusion in the work of registration, gave some hints on the procedure in classroom work and warned the reshmen of some of the mistakes into which they might fall. Among these he mentioned the feeling of over importance that comes to many college men, participation in too many or too few extracurricular activities, and the possibility of neglecting study for the pursuit of social pleasures.

At the close o the Dean's lecture the first opportunity for registration was given. The remainder of the afternoon was free time for the students and by most of them was passed in getting acbuainted with the town and each other.

In the evening the living room of Women's College again became the center of activities where Professor Owens retold many stories of the old days of the college and Professor Nelson P. Davis showed some beautiful and interesting pictures of the Campus, town, and former college folks. This meeting is reported more fully elsewhere in the paper.

Students Given Use of Town Library

Offers Many Books And Magazines Not Found In College

Among the institutions which Bucknell students will find both interesting and useful is the Himmelreich Library of the Presbyterian Church. This church is located on East Market Street, near the Susquehanna River bridge, and the library building adjoins the church.

This is a beautiful little structure, of Greek architecture,which was made possible through the generosity of the late William Himmelreich. Beautiful though the exterior is, the visitor is hardly prepared for the exquisite and inviting interior. The furniture, floor coverings, and decorations are excellently harmonized and fitted to their purpose.

The reading room occupies the front half of the building. There are well lighted reading tables which contain many of the best magazines. In the college library it has not been the custom to subscribe to such periodicals as the household and fiction magazines, and these will largely be found in the Himmelreich library. Thus the college student can use the town library to supplement the college library.

In addition to its periodicals, the Presbyterian library has a very considerable number of books, totaling several thousand volumes. On its shelves one will find the best of the fiction and non-fiction books.

Mr. Himmelreich, the creator of the library, left an endowment fund for its upkeep. In addition other sums have been left to the library by interested friends, and the money from these endowments provides for the purchase of a considerable number of books each year. In future years the Himmelreich endowment will be materially increased as certain trust funds revert to it.

The pastor of the Presbyterian Church is the Rev. Frank B. Everitt. He is a graduate of the Princeton Theological Seminary, and extends a warm welcome to all students to attend his church and to use the library. The librarian is Miss Emily Clingan. She will be found both cordial and helpful.

PRESBYTERIANS WILL ENTERTAIN NEWCOMERS

The Presbyterian Young Peoples' Society has arranged a welcome service for the new students of that denomination which will be held at the Presbyterian Church, Sunday evening at 7:30. "Older" Presbyterian students will wait at the Womens' College to accompany the girls who will go down to the church for this service. A short program will be given by prominent Presbyterians of the College and town. After the program a receiving line of all the members of the young peoples' group and church will welcome the new students.

The president of the Presbyterian Young Peoples' Society, Miss "Patty" Milliken, wishes to see all the Presbyterian Young People after Sunday school on Sunday morning at the church. This is to be a very important meeting and although it will be short, should not be missed by anyone.

All students who desire to try out for a position on the business staff of the BUCKNELLIAN are requested to givetheir names to the business manager, J. Harold Gamble. All freshmen are eligible to try for positions. Final selection will be made from among those trying out, solely upon merit. A position on the BUCKNELLIAN staff gives the holder a worth while experience, and may lead, in upper class days, to the business managership or the circulation managership, each of which carries with it a scholarship.

SEVEN TEACHERS ADDED TO FACULTY FOR COMING YEAR

MISS CLARK DEAN AT 'SEM' NEW INSTRUCTORS IN ARTS DEPARTMENT

Two Come As Professors

Several additions and changes in the personnel of the faculty have occured during the months since college closed. One of these which is of great importance to the women of the college is the appointment of Miss Amelia E. Clark, who served last year as assistant professor of French, to the position o acting dean. The board of trustees at its meeting here last Commencement voted Miss Carey dean of women, a year's leave of absence with pay, and Miss Clark was chosen to take care of her work during that time.

Miss Clark, who had served on the Bucknell faculty for only one year prior to her appointment, was formerly assistant professor of French at Elmira College, Elmira, New York. She was a student at that college, having obtained her baccalaureate degree there, and also studied at Columbia University where she obtained the master's degree.

Miss Clark's work here has been of the finest type and she has been well liked by the students, both men and women, rom the time of her arrival.

Miss Carolyn Hunt, a member of the class of '25 who taught French during her student days at the college has taken up some of the courses in the language department that Miss Clark's added responsibilities made it impossible for her to conduct.

In the department of religious education, Charles M. Bond will take the place of Professor L. Foster Wood who has taken a position at the Rochester Theological Seminary. Professor Bond has just completed the work for his doctor's degree in philosophy at the University of Chicago. His earlier training included work at the Peddie Institute, Heightstown, New Jersey, from which he entered Colgate University, the regular course at the Crozer Theological Seminary at Chester, and work at the University of Pennsylvania where he obtained the master's degree.

During his undergraduate days at Colgate, Professor Bond took an active interest in athletics and played on the football squad of the university under the coaching of Benkert.

During the war he was a Y. M. C. A. secretary doing relief work among the Russians both in Russia and in the refugee colonies in France. He was engaged in this work for two years.

For three years, from January 1922 to October 1924 Professor Bond was student pastor for all denominations at Ohio University, Athens, Ohio. He

CHESS CLUB TO MEET ON SEPTEMBER 24

The Bucknell Chess Club will hold the first meeting of the year in Main 1 on Thursday, September 24, at 7:30 P. M. All persons who are interested in the royal game are urged to attend this meeting. Two of last years varsity men have been added to the team and their places will be filled by players showing the greatest ability.

Last year the most notable accomplishments of the chess team were a draw with Yale, and victories over the Army and the Williamsport Chess Club. Many of last years substitutes are back and it is hoped that with new material from the freshman class a stronger team than last year's will be placed in the field.

NEW REGULATIONS TO GOVERN DANCES

To Be No More House Parties; Out Of Town Dances Taboo

At its first meeting for the college year, held in Bucknell hall on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock, the faculty passed several regulations affecting the social functions that are carried on by the student body. They are:

Fraternity house parties shall not be held at any time.

No out-of-town dances shall be held by any fraternity.

Chaperonage for all College dances must be obtained from the teaching staff.

The number of dances which any College organization may hold will be decided by a faculty committee after conferring with such organizations' representatives.

The purpose of the adoption of these rules was explained by President Hunt in speaking to a Bucknellian reporter after the meeting. His statement was to the effect that many of the alumni, parents, and resident students themselves have found the house-parties exceedingly expensive and have desired some means of cutting down the amount of money spent for such functions.

The dances outside of town seem to be for the purpose of obtaining a greater amount of freedom than can be had in Lewisburg and as a result of this greater freedom there have been some very undesirable conditions and reports. The board of trustees made specific requests that regulations governing these affairs should be made.

In addition to the social regulations, a few changes were made in the rules governing the administration of the colleg. Regarding registration the following rules will be effective:

"A fee of one dollar is charged for a change of registration within one week after the opening of a semester. For a change of registration after one week a fee of three dollars is charged.

"Only in very exceptional cass will permission be granted to enter a course more than two weeks after the opening of a semester.

"Courses dropped without permission will be marked a failure.

"No credit is allowed for a course for which a student is not officially registered.

Last Minute Changes Made in Schedule

Mostly In English Department French, Spanish, Chemistry Courses Also Altered

It has been found necessary to make several changes from the class schedule as it was published last spring. The changes have been made on copies of the schedule posted on the Main bulletin board and in the dean's office. The changes that have been made are noted here however to avoid any misunderstanding that may arise by consulting one of the unrevised schedules.

Processor Stewart's class in Biology 217, Scientific French, will meet Fri day at 11:30 instead of at 10:30.

Assistant Professor Schuyler will meet his class in Chemistry 213, Industrial Chemistry, Tuesdays and Thursdays at 8:00 instead of at 10:30.

The sections of the Rhetoric-Literature course, English 151, have been rearranged so as to eliminate one. Section A will meet with Professor Robbins at 10:30 Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, and Monday at 2:30 or Tuesday at 3:30. Section B will meet Mr. Warfel on the same mornings at 9:00. The lectures for both sections will take place at the same time. Recitations for both sections will be held in Biology 22. Section C which was to have been taught by Professor Coleman has been dropped. In its place Professor Coleman has taken up English 257 B, a course in Shakespeare, to meet Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday at 9:00 in Biology 32. The time for English 155 A, English survey, under Mr. Warfel has been changed from Wednesday and Friday at 8:00 to 10:30. The other periods for the class are unchanged. At these same periods he will meet the class in rapid survey,

First Bucknell Freshman Week Shows New Men College Life

EXPERIMENT PROVES HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL AS FROSH LEARN SONGS AND CUSTOMS WHILE HEARING LECTURES

The first Freshman Week in the history of the University came to a close yesterday afternoon at the end of Professor Rice's last lecture to the members of the class on the subject of "Hygiene." The week has been one in which social functions, examinations, and lectures have alternated with registration and the general getting acquainted process so that the entire time has passed quickly and profitably for the freshmen who attended.

Attendance at the Freshman Week was not required by the University for the practice is yet in its experimental stage. In fact Bucknell is one of the very few colleges that has begun the observing of such a period, Penn State being the only other to do so in the immediate college neighborhood. However a very large percentage of the incoming class did avail themselves of the opportunity to get acquainted with the college before the opening of classes and the first day saw nearly 250 of the young men and women on the campus.

After being met at the station by representatives of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. and given a start in the process of learning the whereabouts of things, the newcomers were left rather to their own devices until eight o'clock Wednesday evening when the first gathering was held at the Women's College. Here the freshmen displayed a remarkable amount of spirit and quickly fell into the songs under the leadership of Professor Stolz. A few short speeches were made by different faculty members and refreshments were served.

Eight o'clock Thursday morning found the new students at their first college chapel service in Bucknell Hall. President Hunt addressed the students here for the first time and the period was passed in learning college songs and cheers. Chapel services were held at eight o'clock each morning throughout the week, and followed the same general plan.

Immediately at the close of the chapel service the work in orientation was begun in a lecture by Professor Lawson. The purpose of Dr. Lawson's talk was to bring out the differences in habits of life and study that would be necessitated by the change from school to college classes. Miss Martin gave her first lecture on the use of the library the same morning pointing out the reasons for some of the practices at the college library that are not in accordance with plans used elsechere.

In the afternoon Dean Rivenburg addressed the class giving them some friendly pointers on the kind of work that makes for good results in college. The first opportunity for registration was also given in the afternoon and in the evening the new students heard of the traditions of the college from Professor Owens and saw several of the pictures that were made in the older days of

Glee Club to Begin Practicing at Once

Director Hartz Points Out Opportunity For New Men

The University Glee Club will begin its activities on Monday night in Buckrell Hall at 7:30. All men interested in glee club work should make an especial effort to be present at this meeting so that the management may know just who are going to compete for the various places in the club. From all reports it appears that a goodly number of fellows are entering this year that are promising material. It is also encouraging to note that a majority of the older men in the club are back again this year and as usual are manifesting a keen interest in the work of the club.

The management has made this statement relative to the organization and control of the glee club. "The glee club is organized entirely from the undergraduate body. It is composed of students interested in singing and the development of music at Bucknell. Admission to the club is gained by individual tryouts held every year and this is open to every student of the University. You may never know just how your chances are of making the club until you have made the initial step of attending this meeting of the club. Many times one underrates himself and he does not make any effort to see just how he measures up when he is put to the test. Do not make this mistake but come out to the first meeting and not only get acquainted with the other fellows but with yourself as well. The director may see more in your voice than you can possibly ascertain yourself."

The glee club makes three major trips during the college year. The first of the season is made during the Thanksgiving recess. The next tour is at the Christmas vacation time, and the spring trip is enjoyed during the Easter recess. The Thanksgiving tour in former years has been in the district of Scranton but this year the club will enter a new field. It has been the dream of the management for the past year to enter Northern New Jersey and all indications are that the club will make that trip this Thanksgiving. Most of the dates are practically settled but a few are as yet only tentative.

Another phase of the work of the club this year is the Inter-collegiate con-

Frosh Elect Coleman To Class Presidency

Anderson, Miss Branch, And Simpson Fill Other Offices

The first meeting of the class of 1929 was held in Bucknell Hall last Monday afternoon at 2:40 o'clock for the purpose of electing officers for the year. The meeting was under the direction of Fred Evans who was elected president of the senior class before the close of college last year.

The elections resulted strangly enough in the choice of two Lewisburg boys for the offices of president and treasurer. Harry Coleman, the son of Professor W. H. Coleman, was elected to the first position and Geddes Simpson, the son of Professor F. M. Simpson, to the second. The other officers are secretary, Miss Priscilla Branch, and vice-president, Leslie Anderson.

The first action after the opening of the meeting was the adoption of Roberts' Rules of Order, to govern the meeting. Nominations were opened for president and resulted in the placing of three bats in the ring: Coleman, Charles Rivenburg, and Jerry Hathaway. The vote on these candidates resulted in the score of 56, 31, and 49 respectively. This did not give a majority as required under the rules adopted but as there was no objection the plurality was considered as a valid election.

The choice of Anderson for vice-president was unanimous as was also that of Simpson for the money-handling position. Miss Branch was opposed by Miss Thomas for the office of secretary the vote being 90 to 42.

In speaking of the meeting after the election, senior president Evans said that he considered the turnout remarkably small for a freshman election. He appointed Miss Branch as secretary pro tem. for the meeting.

The president of the freshman class, who will be required to attend all meetings of the interclass council under the new constitution and will be more or less responsible for the conduct of his classmates, is a fellow of fine personality. His training has been rather cosmopolitan. Before coming to Lewisburg he was a student in the high school at Greenville, S. C., where he was president of several school clubs and societies. In the Lewisburg High School he became a member of the varsity debating

SUMMER SCHOOL HAD LARGE ENROLMENT

Teachers And Graduate Students Constitute The Majority.

The summer session of 1925 was a marked success in every way. The registration for the session was three hundred students, over sixty of whom were candidates for graduate credit. The greater portion of the students were preparing to teach however and the courses in education, both general and special, were well filled.

One of the features of the session was the demonstration school under the direction of Professor Frank G. Davis. Pupils from the Lewisburg and Milton schools attended sessions each morning from nine to half past twelve studying English, algebra, social science, and vocational guidance. The classes were in charge of experienced teachers and were open for observation to anyone who cared to enter. Professor Lawson who was director of the summer session says that a demonstration school in a liberal arts college is very unusual.

Entertainments of various kinds were staged during the session. The first Friday evening of the session brought Miss Hortense Nielsen, a world-famous impersonator, who gave her interpretation of Henrik Ibsen's "The Doll's House." Mrs. Francesca Kaspar Lawson, a Washington soprano, appeared in a concert near the end of the session. The Swarthmore Chatauqua was also here during one week of the session and was attended by large numbers of the students. Not the least of the entertainment program was the annual summer session picnic which was held at Blue Hill. Professor Gold was the head of the committee in charge of the affair which is as much as to say that everything went well or better than that. And there were parties at the "Sem" almost every week.

A baseball team was organized early in the session which played three games with moderate success. Two games with Susquehanna University summer session were scheduled and resulted in an even split. The opening game which was played against the local team of the West Branch League was lost by a close score.

A tennis tourney was arranged in both doubles and singles. It is note worthy that in both cases the champ-

Endowment Drive Has Gain in Summer

$300,000 Needed Before Dec. 31 To Claim $200,000 Offer Of Education Board

Although it was practically impossible to make very great progress in the drive for endowment during the summer months, many of the workers continued their activity throughout the vacation period and aided materially to the success of the drive. Very little progress could be made in securing pledges from the churches although several churches were visited by members of the faculty and the need of the college was presented from the pulpits.

President Hunt has conducted a continuous campaign among the alumni in various localities, sending out letters signed by himself. Mr. Ranck, the comptroller of the University, and Judge J. Warren Davis, the chairman of the board of trustees. Thomas F. Morgan, Jr., and Professor E. M. Heim were sent to Michigan, Minnesota, and the central western district. Mr. Homer D. Pease travelled by auto through the rural districts of Pennsylvania and New York and is now on a trip along the Atlantic seaboard that will extend to Florida. The Rev. Mr. Thomas S. Fretz of Burton, Washington, gave the entire month of August to visiting the alumni in Oregon and Washington. Professor Whyte is spending the early part of September in the Chicago district. Professor B. W. Griffith canvassed many alumni in the northern New Jersey and New York City area and had considerable success.

A representative of the University spoke at the Abbington Association of Baptist Churches in Scranton this week and conducted a conference with ministers whose churches had not contributed. Another similar address

FOOTBALL TEAM WILL INCLUDE MANY VETERANS

FRESHMAN CANDIDATES COACHED BY GEO. CHINN SHOWING UP WELL

Western Maryland Sept. 26

Both the varsity and the freshman teams have been getting down to the real hard work of preparing for the opening of the football season, and have spent the past ten days in the common hardening processes used throughout the football world, tackling the dummy, running back punts, and holding dummy line scrimmages. No regular scrimmage work has been undertaken as yet, but it is expected that Ingerton will send the varsity and freshmen elevens at each other in regular form within a few days.

Coach Moran has not yet arrived, being held by his duties as an umpire in the National League baseball circuit. However, Assistant Coach Ingerton is training the team until his arrival, which is expected on September 21.

The veterans of last year are showing up remarkably well in the daily workouts that are being held in the Memorial Stadium. In the backfield Hill Blaisdell, Diehl, Tuck Quinn, McCleary, and Myril Goodwin are leading the field while on the line Captain Kostos, Gus Shortz, Bill Stephens, Abbie Bibi, Hollinger, Spence, and Flesher are showing up well. Karmilovicz and Kirker are putting up a great fight for the snapper-back position, and at the wings Earl Goodwin, Magee, and Trimmer are lining up.

The freshman team, under the tutelage of George Chinn, Jr., is showing some fine material. Chinn, who was All-Southern tackle while under Moran's instruction, is a new addition to the coaching staff here, taking charge of Buckrell's first yearling team. His outstanding pupils at the present time are Halicki, formerly of Hanover Township High, and Jones of Benton High, in the backfield; Mahood, of Wilkinsburg, and Holmes, from the "Smoky City," on the line. Estes, a former classmate of Vernon Tuck, last year's varsity end who is showing up well in the backfield this year, is another likely contender for a berth on the youngster backfield staff.

With the Western Maryland game only ten days in the future, it will require constant practice to put the Bison aggregation in shape to meet its first antagonist. The well-fought, 0-0 game of last year coupled with stray reports that the southern team has been practising for the game for some time, has aroused student interest in the contest. Assistant Coach Ingerton, while not doubting the outcome of the game, expects a stiff struggle and is preparing the team for a hard game.

BUCKNELLIAN STAFF IN ITS NEW OFFICE

Furnishing of the new office of the Bucknellian, located over the University Print Shop, has been almost completed, and the staff has already made use of this additional facility in the publication of the special freshman extra. The old office in West Wing, diagonally across from the service office, will be used for reportorial work on the Hill, and the new office will be used for copy reading and proof correction as well as for the circulation department.

NOTICE

Lost articles should be reported to the service office at the west end of West Wing.

Articles that are found about the campus should be returned to the same office.

The BUCKNELLIAN will publish a list of lost and found articles as reported by the service office.

There will be a meeting of the board of editors and the associate editors of the BUCKNELLIAN at the office on the Hill, Thursday afternoon at 3:30. This meeting is of the greatest importance and must be attended by all of the members of the editorial staff.

PLAY FAIR

Much might be said about the adoption and enforcement of the so-called rushing rules. Indeed too much might be said. But one thing may not be out of place. Any system can be made to work if the fraternities are willing to make it work. On the other hand the system that will work if some group is unwilling to cooperate can not be devised. Good will and fair play are the only principles that will make restrictive rushing rules operate successfully here. Let us make those rules work!

IS THE START ALL?

One of the opening statements made by Dean Rivenburg when he spoke to the freshmen at the first reception at the Women's College, emphasized the desirability of getting a good start. The message, particularly fitted to the new men who are starting on a course that will cover four years, has also a great amount of significance for those who have but one or two or three years in which to complete their work here. If it is important to get a good start on the work of the course it is equally important to attack the work of the year, the work immediately in hand, with vigor.

To those who have been attacking the problems of college life for some time there comes another suggestion: that though it is fine to start well, it is much better to finish well. The importance of the start lies in the fact that it goes a long way in assuring a good finish, but it is not enough. The good finish also requires perseverance.

In short then there are two quanties that will make for success in college work. One is vigor, enthusiasm, drive, in getting the work under way; the other the ability to carry on, determination. Get a good start, and CARRY ON

NON-ATHLETIC ACTIVITIES

Within the next few days many of the non-athletic activities will be calling for candidates. The response to this call will be an indication of the regard in which the students hold the College. The tendency now is to center all interest in athletics and in the development of the physical side of life. Important as this may be in acquiring a good name for the college, the institution that bases its reputation on good athletics alone will not be upholding the aims of liberal education.

The value of education lies in the broadening, not in the centralization of interests. The man who can do one thing well may be successful in his line but there is little liklihood that he would succeed in some other work. Nor will his success in his own work be as great as that of the man who is equally well trained but who has developed an interest in other work and so sees the relationships that exist between his own efforts and those of his fellowmen.

Similarly with the college, the one-line school may develop successful men but their ability to make good will be impaired just in proportion as the college restricted the breadth of their training. And the college that trains for athletics only will draw from athletes only.

Alongside of our splendid traditions in football and baseball and tennis and track we should build up others in debating and dramatics and singing and journalism. In a world where the well rounded life commands the greatest respect we should strive to make our college a developer of men and women whose lives and interests will be well rounded.

team that won the Union county championship last year. Geddes Simpson the new treasurer was also a member of that team. Coleman is registered for the pre-legal course.

"Sem" Notes.

The "Sem" has many new things this year, of all of which the girls are duly proud. For instance, there is a new telephone installed on second floor New Building, which, it is hoped, will relieve some of the hectic congestion on the 180 line! Miss Clark's office has been beautifully refurnished in mahogany. The infirmary is now ruled over by Miss Ruhl, and has been moved to the old Bucknell suite. When the girls returned they found many pretty, modern rugs in their rooms in place of the old ones. And—there is a new chef, Mr. Moone!

What with all this plus a new dean of women, some new rules, and new freshmen, Women's College has certainly seen a revolution!

test of all clubs of the country. It is hoped that an elimination contest may be had in the vicinity of Pittsburg at which our club may compete. The winner of this contest will enter the regular competition at New York at a later date.

Students Welcomed At The Presbyterian Church.

The Presbyterian students were welcomed at an informal service at the church Sunday evening at 7:30. The pastor, the Rev. F. B. Everitt, presented the young people to the congregation, after which there were several welcoming addresses. Principal H. E. Stover, head of the Lewisburg High School, in a few well-chosen words gave a cordial greeting of friendship. Following his address, Professor N. F. Davis and instructor George Irland added a welcome that placed the guests entirely within the circle of the church. Individual introductions and welcome followed this short service.

and conference was held at Erie with the churches of that region.

Next week the Northumberland Baptist Association will meet in Lewisburg and both President Hunt and Dr. Wood will speak in the interest of the University. Dr. West will address the Center Baptist Association at Mount Union the next week, while Dr. Wood will speak at the North Philadelphia Association, the Indiana Association, and the Monongehela Association.

An S. O. S. appeal has been sent to every church in Pennsylvania that has not already contributed, asking that they send as large a gift as possible before the end of the year so as to be able to claim the offer of the General Education Board, namely, $200,000.

The following statement from Dr. Wood who has active control of the campaign will serve to show what must be done to make good on that offer.

"The next three months are critical times in the affairs of the University. In spite of the pledges that have been made, or that may be made, it is absolutely necessary to receive in CASH or accredited securities, more than $300,000 between this date and December 31. Every student who can add in this movement by securing friends for the University is urged to do all he can. Such an opportunity for so much helpfulness will hardly come again in a generation; and what a wonderful thing it will be for any student to remember in the future if he can recall that he helped to raise this fund in the hour of his Alma Mater's special need."

Signed, J. R. Wood.

SUMMER SCHOOL HAD LARGE ENROLMENT

lonship came to the men who were regular students at the University. The singles was won by R. K. Zortman while Zortman and Barth were the successful party in the doubles.

Several trips and excursions were made by different classes and groups during the session. These included a trip to Kitchen's Creek Falls, an excursion to New York City, a motor trip to the battlefield at Gettysburg, and various hikes in the surrounding territory, many of which were directed by the zoology department. Dr. H. V. Pike of the State Hospital at Danville conducted a clinic at that institution after delivering his series of lectures here.

Assembly was held every morning in Commencement Hall and was quite generally attended although not compulsory. Many of the instructors delivered talks at these meetings and these added greatly to the interest of the meetings. The record attendance was made on the morning when Professor Dan'l Earl Moyer, who was formerly professor of piano at the school of music, played. The service was transferred to Bucknell Hall that day and the smaller auditorium was packed.

At the close of the session it was announced that Professor Whyte is to be director of the summer session for 1926. Prof. Whyte made a short address to the students in which he opened his campaign for a bigger and better school for next summer. The last act of the student body as a group was expressed in their loud applause when Professor Melchoir voiced their sentiment in calling for a vote of thanks to Professor Lawson for his fine work in directing the school. The enthusiasm with which the proposition was greeted made the old hall echo as it seldom does at mass meetings and was a fitting close to the summer's work.

Baptist Students Greet Freshmen

The regular evening arrangement for the Baptist services were changed so that the Christian Endeavor meeting was held after the regular service which was shortened to a half hour. Albert Sheckells, Jr., president of the C. E. opened the meeting with a few words of welcome to the new students. After a splendid song service, with "Lew" Kessler at the piano, Acting Dean Clark was introduced and gave a very fine talk to the young people and the church members who were present on "Educating One's Heart." She emphasized the need for the development of the religious side of our lives and urged the co-operation of all the students in the incoming class toward the Christian Endeavor. Professor Norman Stewart also welcomed the new students and congratulated them upon their splendid class spirit. He urged that they use that same loyalty toward the C. E. and the church which was to be their church for the four years of their college course. The meeting closed with song.

Anna VanDine—Y. W. Leader.

Miss Anna VanDine, president of the Y. W. C. A., has endeared herself to the new students as they have come in contact with her this Freshman Week at Bucknell. She has started the work for the Y. W. with a splendid enthusiasm which promises fine things for the year that has opened so well. The plans that have been made and carried out this week show a world of pep and friendliness on the part of "Tiny" which is hard to surpass. Her many ideas are good ones and enable her to take her natural place as leader of the work for the girls this year. Her lovable smile has made the "Sem" cheery for many of the freshman girls who have been introduced by her to the friendly spirit of the Bucknell girls.

"Tiny" has been very active in Y. W. work ever since her freshman year when she was on the Freshman Commission. Last year she held the office of vice-president of the Y. W. She has also been on the "Student Ex" and is a member of the girls' glee club. Among her other college activities are the Kent Pre-Legal Club and the girls' hockey team for her first two years, here at Bucknell.

"Tiny" has always been loved by the upperclass girls and with the unfailing loyalty and love that the new girls are sure to accord to her, there will be a splendid year of congenial work done in the Y. W.

The first attempt of the freshmen to establish their supremacy over the sophomores comes Saturday morning at 10:30, when the annual class scrap will be held on Loomis Field. The class scrap is the only sanctioned physical encounter during the year between the two lower classes. It is conducted as follows: the freshmen line up at one end of the field and the sophomores at the other. At a given signal both lines rush at each other, and try to pull members of the opposing side behind their own goal line, and to hold them there until the whistle blows. The side then having the most men from the other class behind its line wins.

For several years the freshmen have been victorious because of their greater numbers, although the sophomores always manage to make things interesting. The freshmen will meet at Bucknell Hall at 10:00 to organize, and the sophomores will meet in front of the library.

SEVEN TEACHERS ADDED TO FACULTY

was later the pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle in Wilkes-Barre, Penn'a.

An assistant professor in the departments of economics and political science has been found necessary to meet the needs of two rapidly growing divisions. The work which was formerly carried in one department under Professors Heim and Howes was separated last February by action of the board of trustees. Robert L. Matz, who has been chosen to fill the new position, will have work that was formerly included in both departments however.

Assistant Professor Matz prepared for college at the Bloomsburg State Normal School and took his undergraduate work at Ursinus College, Collegeville, Penn'a., where he took his degree in 1912. For eight years he was head of the department of History and economics in the high school at Bloomfield, New Jersey. He was granted his master's degree at New York University in 1919 and has since taken graduate work at both the University of Pennsylvania and at Columbia University.

He was head of the department of finance and business administration from 1921 to 1923 and since 1923 has been with the W. H. Mapes Company of New York, distributors of dairy products. He was offered the managership of this company but refused preferring to return to the teaching profession.

At the School of Music the only change from the faculty as it existed last year has been the loss of Professor Moyer who has taken up a fine position at Oberlin College in Ohio and the addition of Isaac Edward Norris who comes to us from the position of director of music at Randolph-Macon Women's College at Lynchburg, Virginia. He will take the position of professor of piano which was vacated through Professor Moyer's resignation.

Professor Norris is a college graduate holding the degree bachelor of philosophy from DePauw University, Greencastle, Indiana. DePauw has an excellent school of music and it was this that decided Norris in his choice of a college.

After his graduation he taught for a period in Indiana and then went abroad to study in Vienna, Austria. There he studied for three years, the private student of Theodore Leschetitzky and his assistant, Frau Dr. Malwine Bree. He also studied from the two head teachers of theory, Professor Herman Graidener and Professor Robert Fuchs.

On his return to Indiana he took the head position in piano and theory in the DePauw University School of Music. After a few years there and further study in New York City he became director of music at Christian College, Columbia, Missouri. He was given two years leave of absence while in this position in order to serve with the entertainment division of the Y. M. C. A. with the army in France and England.

After his return from this service he studied piano for one year under Mr. Edwin Hughes of New York. Then he became director of music at the Tennessee College for Women at Murfreesboro. He has occupied the position of director at Randolph-Macon for three years.

Professor Norris was elected to Phi Beta Kappa during his senior year at college. He is also a member of Phi Mu Alpha, Sinfonia.

In the English department two instructors have been added replacing Mr. Beers and Mr. English. Mr. Beers has secured a position at the University of Minnesota in the English department and Mr. English is now the principal of the high school at Howard, Pennsylvania.

C. Willard Smith, one of the instructors who has been added to the English faculty is a Princeton graduate. After securing his A. B. degree from that university in 1922 he took up teaching in the Pingry School at Elizabeth, New Jersey. Later he returned to his Alma Mater for graduate study and was granted the master's degree last June. While in college he was a member of the Whig Hall debating and literary club and of the University Glee Club. Mrs. Smith is also a college graduate having secured her degree from Wells College, Aurora, New York, in 1922. After her graduation she was engaged in library work in the public library of New York for three years.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith are living on Market street in the apartment formerly occupied by Professor Moyer. Mr. Smith will have charge of several divisions of the class in Freshman Rhetoric and one section in English Survey numbered 153.

Robert C. Harris, the other English instructor, is a graduate of the University of Indiana which is located at Bloomington. He has done postgraduate work there since February of this year attending the summer session before coming east to take up his duties here. He is a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity and of the Theta Phi Alpha dramatic society. During his last year at college he was the editor of the Indiana magazine, "The Vagabond," a semi-monthly that is rated as one of the best college magazines in American colleges.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris are occupying a suite in the College Inn. Mrs. Harris is also an Indiana graduate of the class of 1924 and is a member of the Pi Beta Phi fraternity.

Mr. Harris will have sections in Freshman Rhetoric and one section in Sophomore Literature during the first semester.

Miss Helen King Bartol, daughter of Professor William C. Bartol, will teach two divisions in French. Miss Bartol holds both an A. M. and an A. B. from Bucknell. After teaching in high schools in smaller towns for some years, following her graduation from Bucknell, Miss Bartol taught in the Williamsport, Pa., high school. From there she went to Wilmington, Del., where for five years she has had charge of the work in French in the Tower Hill School. In addition to her work at Bucknell, Miss Bartol has spent two summers at Columbia University, and two more in France. Here she lived with a French family, where nothing but French was spoken. During these visits she took advanced work at the University of Grenoble.

A change which will not involve any change in the personnel of the faculty is the appointment of Professor James P. Whyte to the directorship of the extension courses and the summer session. Professor Whyte will thus probably find it necessary to turn over some of his work in the department of oral English to his brother professors but the department will still remain under his supervision.

Voris Blaine Hall, instructor in physics and Harry R. Warfel, instructor in English and German will return after a year's leave of absence spent in further study.

Among the largest one-man shovels in the world is this electric giant engaged in open-pit mining on the Mesabi Range in northern Minnesota. It picks up eight cubic yards of iron ore at a gulp, which it dumps into a waiting car.

A day's work in a minute

Mesabi Range, renowned iron ore deposit, is yielding its mineral wealth at the rate of 16 tons for every bite of an electric scoop.

A man with a shovel would work a whole day to mine and load eight cubic yards of iron ore which this 300-ton electric giant moves in one minute.

Of course, all mining is not done on the surface. But there are many mines in which electricity has changed our conception of mining operations. Wires, penetrating even to the deepest shafts and galleries, have brought light, power, ventilation and added safety to those who must work in the very bowels of the earth.

Electricity's contribution to mining may be of particular interest to the student of mining engineering, but it is of general interest to all college men as still another example of how electricity is simplifying the world's work.

In every branch of mining operations G-E equipment is very much in evidence. And there are engineers of the General Electric Company especially assigned to mining problems and requirements, just as there are others specializing in all major applications of electricity.

A new series of G-E advertisements showing what electricity is doing in many fields will be sent on request. Ask for booklet GER-1.

FIRST BUCKNELL FRESHMAN WEEK

the college and shown by Professor Nelson Davis.

Friday morning the class was taken to Commencement Hall for the purpose of taking the first division of the psychological tests, a practice that was started last year. In the afternoon Professor Drum continued the orientation work taking up the spending of both money and time while in college.

Another of the well planned parties for the entertainment of the freshmen was staged at the Tustin "Gym," Friday evening at eight o'clock. Costumes of striking originality were produced by the use of newspapers and numerous pins. During the grand march, which followed, many of the costumes were slightly damaged, but no other casualties occured.

The freshmen had been divided into geographical groups earlier in the day in order to prepare stunts for the entertainment of the entire assembly. Ray Daggs and Irving Carpenter introduced the various groups for their stunts, which were very creditably performed. After all the groups had demonstrated their originality, either by stunt or alibi, the entire company rounded out the evening with a rousing series of songs.

Saturday morning Professor Rice took up his discussions of hygeine. Miss Martin continued her lectures on the use of the library taking up the use of the dictionaries and encyclopedias, and Professor Everett gave a short talk on "How to Study."

The Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. planned and successfully carried out a picnic for the freshman class and a few of the upperclass people who were able to leave their various duties. A large number of cars was secured and the crowd which had gathered in front of the "Sem" quickly filled them. The trip out to Wolfeland was short and pleasant, enlivened by singing and cheers. The first cars left the "Sem" about two o'clock.

The afternoon was passed in a succession of games and sports. Volley ball and baseball were more popular than any other form of amusement to the girls as well as to the men of the college. The "dinner bell" proved a successful rival to both games and the "bread line" that formed quickly testified to the ability of the freshmen to fall in line with new ideas. "Johnny" Gobl, Ray Daggs, "Leetle Carl," "Tiny" VanDine, and other members of the Y. M. and Y. W. cabinets were kept busy handing out the beans, bananas, and buns to the hungry mob.

Rumbles of thunder finally diverted the minds of the picnickers from their plates and suggested that the "Hill" and "Sem" might be a good haven The cars were soon filled with the laughing crowd and the Big Day was over. The committee in charge of the day had staged a successful event which the freshmen, at least, will not forget and which the upperclassmen will hear about, regretting that they had no similar day to remember in their freshman year.

The Womens' College was hostess to the freshman class on Sunday afternoon at an informal reception from 4 to 5:30. Mrs. Emory W. Hunt and Mrs. Romeyn Rivenburg presided at the refreshment table, while Acting Dean Clark received the guests. Miss Carolyn Hunt delighted the guests with two vocal solos. After a happy afternoon of conversation and friendliness, the gentlemen responded to a hint that was dropped, that it was time for the ladies to adjourn to the dining-room.

A joint vesper service was held Sunday evening at six-thirty in Buck-nell Hall by the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. for the students who were already in college. Professor Groner took charge of the meeting and the Baptist Church choir furnished the music. After songs and scripture reading, Professor Groner introduced Professor Bond, the new professor of religious education, who gave a very fine talk to the students.

After the regular chapel service Monday morning Professor Hamblin addressed the freshman on the subject of "Manners." Miss Martin concluded her talks on the use of the library taking up in her last lecture the use of periodicals and books of special reference. In the afternoon Professor Rice continued his talk on hygiene.

The usual evening of interesting lectures was held on Monday at eight o'clock in the living rooms of Womens' College. The singing was peppy as usual and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Professor Clarence Johnson entertained the students with an illustrated travel talk on Norway. The lantern slides he showed were taken during the trip he and Mrs. Johnson took during their honeymoon and were very interesting ones. There were many pictures of the beautiful scenery in Norway and a few good pictures of Professor and Mrs. Johnson.

At the close of the lecture, Mrs. Johnson appeared in the bridal dress of the Norwegian bride, which especially delighted the girls.

In Tuesday morning's chapel Professor Rockwell spoke to the students on the acquiring of good study habits. The lecture immediately following was given by Professor Coleman, the subject being, "How to Get the Most Out of College." The remainder of the day was spent in the lectures of Professor Rice and in the work of registration.

LAST MINUTE CHANGES MADE IN SCHEDULE

In the work in French Miss Clark and Mrs. Sprague will be assisted by Miss Carolyn Hunt.

Professor Hamblin's course in Greek 101, Elementary Greek will meet at 9:00 in Main 11 instead of at 8:00 in Main 6. Greek 203, New Testament Greek, will be given at 9:00 Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday instead of Greek 301, Greek drama. The class will meet in Main 6.

The course in principles of religious education, Religious Education 301, will not be offered.

NEW REGULATIONS TO GOVERN DANCES

"Registration must be for a definite number o hours in each course and credit will be allowed only for the number of hours in each course and to complete any course shall be recorded as a failure in the whole course."

These rules were adopted in order to get the class rolls complete and authentic as soon as possible, according to a statement of Dean Rivenburg. The frequent changes in schedule that have been made in the past have kept the class lists of the professors in a state of confusion for the first few weeks of each semester. The object of increasing the fee for a changed registration after the first week is to bring all of the necessary changes at the opening of college rather than to secure money from the student.

The rules for absence were made more definite by the addition of the following:

"Absences from class are counted from the beginning of the semester, not from the date of enrolment.

"Flagrant cases of absence may necessitate withdrawal from the University."

One other regulation was made governing conduct. "A student who flagrantly neglects his work, or whose work is generally unsatisfactory, after due warning, may be dropped from the University at any time."

On the whole these rules will tend to make the regulations that are to exist between the college and the individual students and groups more definite, and anything that makes for definiteness lessens friction. The success of the application of the rules will depend on the manner in which they are administered and the attitude of the students toward them. It is to be hoped that they will be taken in a fair and open-minded way.

FROSH WIN SCRAP WITH SOPHOMORES BY 45-21 SCORE

Loomis Field Witnesses Hot 7-Minute Tussle Between Classes

The Freshman-Sophomore Scrap was held in the traditional manner last Saturday morning, September 19, on Loomis Field. The Frosh brought the contest to a close in traditional fashion also by winning by a 45-21 score.

The freshmen began assembling in front of Bucknell Hall at about ten o'clock and after receiving their standard equipment, namely generous doubings of green paint, they ran to the scene of the approaching struggle and arranged themselves along their white line, all the while yelling their defiance at their opponents who, as yet, had not made their appearance.

At quarter past ten the sophomores, led by their rather corpulent president, Frank Johnston, emerged from their meeting grounds in front of the library and charged down the hill in front of Old Main, yelling lustily. They, too, took their places on the field facing the "Frosh" line at a distance of forty yards.

The next few minutes were spent by the opposing forces in hurling vocal defiance at each other and in working up that spirit of bravado that is so essential to an occasion of this kind. Class yells resounded over the campus until a pistol shot sounded. A hush followed as the two lines charged at each other, each man looking for his best chance for victory and all pulling, tugging, and tussling in the effort to "get him across the line." As the struggle progressed the crowd that was present to witness the affair swept over the field, noisily cheering for the various persons found in the little groups into which the lines divided.

Seven exciting, fighting, breath-taking minutes were passed in this way before two more shots from the pistol held by Senior President Evans brought the Scrap to a close. Then the official count was taken and the sophomores and freshmen good-naturedly pulled each other to their feet and began to get acquainted.

Except for a few minor cuts and bruises, slightly wrenched shoulders, and sore muscles, no injuries were suffered by the participants in the scrap.

The event was attended by a large number of students and townspeople who thronged the athletic field and the hill seeking vantage points from which they might see and take snapshots of the annual contest. The obvious one-sidedness of the event

FRESHMAN PARADE IS "WET" AFFAIR

New Students, Doused By Frats, Wind Up In Town Fountain

The freshmen were so eager to begin the interclass activities of the year that they were prepared for the annual parade fully an hour before the time scheduled: eight o'clock, Wednesday night.

The Hill was in a buzz of excitement early in the evening and as the time approached the freshmen began to congregate in East College. At seven-thirty, under the supervision of the men of the sophomore class, the group gathered around the Library steps as is the custom on all such occasions, and listened to a short speech by their president. After several cheers had been given the parade got under way, the freshmen taking up the well-known song: "How Green I Am."

Freshmen and sophomores seemed to enjoy the event in equal measure as the parade moved to the Sigma Chi house and met the first watery reception. Thence they moved past the "Sem", where all hands were on deck to view the parade, and were subjected to the humid gushings from the hose of the Delta Sigma House. The S. A. E. men entertained the men in their hospitable manner and "a good time was had by all."

The Kappa Sigs were the next to welcome the underclassmen and did so very effectively but their next door neighbors, the Phi Gams, were unable to find their hose and were, consequently, very badly handicapped in their efforts to fulfill their social obligations. Theta U however tried to make up for the lack of water at the home of the "Fijis" and the results commended its efforts.

The visit to the Brady house that followed these various aqueous adventures was greatly enjoyed on account of the amorous pleadings of selected members of the class which, as usual, met with cold receptions on the part of the girls addressed. The girls seems to detract nothing from the interest in the occasion for the attendance increases year by year as does also the margin by which the freshmen prove their strength.

Twelve Frats and Six Sororities Here

Ages Of Local Chapters Differ Within Range Of 70 Years

Now that the freshmen, both men and women, are being introduced to the mysteries and workings of the fraternity life of the University, great interest centers on the history of the various organizations that are found on our campus today. As an aid in satisfying that interest we will undertake to state a few facts concerning the fraternities having chapters here, treating the different organizations in the order of the establishment of the local chapters.

The first fraternity to be organized at Bucknell University was the local chapter of Phi Kappa Psi and this made its appearance in 1855. The fraternity had been organized but three years previously, and this chapter, Pennsylvania Gamma was the fifth to enter the brotherhood.

Sigma Chi was the next of the present family to take its place, the local chapter, Kappa, having been organized in 1864. The fraternity was founded, however, in 1855, at Miami University and is one of the famous "Miami Triad" which included also Beta Theta Pi and Phi Delta Theta, fraternities having no chapter here.

Phi Gamma Delta was the third fraternity in the field. The chapter here was formed in 1882 and is the Delta chapter of the organization having replaced one of the earlier chapters that did not continue to exist. The national fraternity was founded in 1848, at Jefferson College, now a part of Washington and Jefferson College, where Phi Kappa Psi was also founded.

In 1893 the Pennsylvania Zeta chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon was established here. The first chapter had been founded at the University of Alabama in 1856. The fraternity had established its first chapter in the

Stunts Entertain Frosh at "Y" Affair

Y. M. and Y. W. Work Together ToAcquaint New Students With Organizations

More than six hundred students attended the reception given to the freshmen last Friday night, from eight to ten-thirty, in Tustin Gymnasium, by the University Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. For the first time in the history of this annual function both men and women were entertained together, and the idea found immediate and unqualified favor among all concerned.

A stunt show staged by a number of the representative organizations of the University made a novel program. This scheme was chosen not only as a new departure and for the sake of variety, but with the idea that it would prove the most effective manner in which to acquaint freshmen and new students with college life at Bucknell as it is really lived.

The Men's Glee Club did its bit through the college quartet, whose members are John Gilmour, Stanley McCaskey, Melvin Shuttlesworth, and Charles Kushell. This was the first appearance of these four men together, and considering their little practice, their singing was very good.

The student band, already in full swing for the 1925-26 season, filled in the gaps in the evening's program. "Bunny" Learn spoke to the gathering of the need for all the new players who can be secured this year, and outlined the year's prospective program.

Professor Whyte, representing the faculty, remarked that no man is really educated unless he can appear before a group of people and enter-

Bucknell Judge Devises System To Test Prisoners Stories

Federal Judge O. B. Dickinson, ex-'77, to whom Bucknell gave the degree, LL. D. in 1919, believes that one's Adam's apple is a sure indication of one's honesty.

"Last week," according to the Philadelphia Ledger for Tuesday, "the Judge said a witness with a shifty Adam's apple or 'flickering' eyes was not telling the truth. Yesterday in the same court, George F. Farentino, of Lancaster, pleaded guilty with Salvatore Mareere and Anthony Lattore, both of Brooklyn, to passing counterfeit bills on Lancaster storekeepers. As sentence was about to be imposed Farentino declared he had been unwittingly drawn into the scheme by the two other men, who posed as vacationists and hired his jitney to see the town.

New Rushing Rules Penalize S. A. E. Frat

Trial Before Student Council Results in $50.00 Fine For First Offender

Whether the rushing rules passed by the college should stand or fail received its initial test in the meeting of the Student Council last Friday afternoon when the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity was instructed to post a second fifty dollars to replace the forfeit after it was found guilty of an infringement of the rules.

The trial was held before the full council after charges had been brought by the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity representative to the effect that one of the members of the fraternity being tried had entertained four freshmen at a theatre in Milton, and had afterwards brought them to Lewisburg in a taxi and introduced them to several of the members of his fraternity.

During the trial the freshmen who had been entertained were called upon for evidence as was also the driver of the taxi. The facts thus presented proved that an infringement had occurred and the vote of the council was almost unanimously to this effect. The fraternity was then instructed to forfeit the fifty dollar deposit made at the beginning of the year and make another deposit within twenty-four hours. This ruling was complied with.

During the progress of the trial it developed that the fraternity had not been responsible for the act that constituted the infringement and that the whole affair had been brought about by the over-enthusiasm of one of the men, coupled with a misunderstanding of the interpretation of the rules.

SCIENCE GIVES REASON FOR "RAH" IN CHEERS

There is a real reason why college cheers so frequently contain the word "Rah." According to studies made by Dr. Irving B. Crandell and Mr. C. F. Sheia of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, men ordinarily speak this sound louder than any other vowel.

If the value of fifty be assigned to the amount of energy delivered to the air by a man's voice for this particular sound, then its nearest rival, the sound of "A" as in "tap" is rated at forty-four and as in "talk" at thirty-seven.

Women's voices present quite a contrast to men's in that there are four vowel sounds of practically the same loudness. These are the vowels in "tone", "talk", and "Rah." "Ah" is the easiest sound to produce because fewer throat and mouth muscles are tensed, hence it is the basic vowel in most languages.

Game With W. Maryland Will Show Strength Of Bison Eleven

If elusiveness, shiftyness, and sheer individual brilliance on the football gridiron were all the factors necessary in the molding of a successful eleven, the building of the 1925 Bucknell machine would be a comparatively easy job with the experienced backfield trio, Blaisdell, M. Goolwin, and Diehl as a nucleus. It is an impossible job to rank these scintillating stars in descending or ascending order, as impossible as an attempt to classify Ajax above Hercules or to argue that Hercules surpassed Ajax in strength.

Men in the "know" in the football world claim that "Red" Grange's sensational running was only made possible thru the interference of an unassuming halfback of the Illini who will never gain one tenth the notoriety or publicity of the celebrated Grange. There lies the work of the Bucknell tutor, "Uncle" Charlie Moran. To produce a winning team, he must train the mind and sinew of the individual player to work as a rythmic unit. He must teach the line men to coordinate with each another and with the backfield. Furthermore the backs must work together. The material is there. In this respect the backfield is more favored than the line, but the scrimmage with the Freshman eleven last Saturday proved that the teamwork, has at the present stage, but little polish.

With the Western Maryland game but a single week away, the Bucknell coaches have their work cut out. If the team is to defeat an eleven which, last year, allowed the Bison to cross its goal line only once. The Maryland team has many of its last season's regulars again in fighting togs, and reports from their camp indicate that they are coming to Lewisburg with a firm determination to carry the pelt of the Bison below the Mason-Dixon line.

The training of the teams in preparation for the football season, which opens with the Western Maryland

Girls Glee Club Holds Try Outs

Miss Jenkins, Director Is Pleased With Initial Showing

Try-outs for the girls' glee club were held on Monday and Tuesday of last week with the result that forty freshmen voices will be added to the fifty-one experienced ones of last year. The enrollment of these new members is scheduled for Monday, October 5.

Practice has started, and will be held every Monday and Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in the living room of Woman's College. Margaret Tennant, '26, will be the accompanist for the club this year, replacing Mary Hazel, who was graduated last June.

The special chorus of selected voices, with a few new members, will consist of about thirty girls. This year there will be two quartets.

Miss Jenkins, director of the glee club, is looking forward to a highly successful year. The club will make its first public appearance during the week before the Christmas vacation, when a Christmas Cantata will be given in the Baptist church. There will be no out-of-town engagements until the latter part of February, when the glee club appears in Northumberland, Milton, and possibly other towns.

NEW VENTILATOR COMES TO WOMEN'S COLLEGE

A powerful ventilator has been installed by Professor Burpee in the kitchens at Woman's College, through the request of Mrs. Sale, the dietitian. Work on the ventilator was completed on Tuesday, September 22.

When the dining room was enlarged, the outside windows of the dish room were closed up which made the room almost unbearable to work in. Now, all the hot air and odors are fanned out, and the vacuum created draws in fresh air from all sides.

This year has come more close to seeing an ideal condition in this de-

CONVOCATION HELD AT MATRICULATION FOR FIRST TIME

ACADEMIC PROCESSION GOES IMPRESSIVELY UP TO OLD MAIN

Prof. Lawson Gives Talk

Bucknell's first matriculation convocation, held in Commencement Hall last Thursday morning, was made memorable by the impressive academic parade, when the entire faculty and student body marched up the hill of learning from the President's house to Old Main, by way of the Chemical Laboratory, more than a thousand strong, and headed by the Bucknell band.

The faculty, colorfully garbed in academic gowns, assembled at President Hunt's home and formed in line on the sidewalk along Loomis Street. The seniors lined up a little to the west, having assembled at the east steps of Bucknell Hall. The juniors formed to the west of Bucknell Hall, extending the line of marchers toward Sixth Street, while the sophomores fell into line at Sixth Street, having assembled in front of Professor Owens' house, thus pushing the line onward to the Chemical Laboratory. Here the freshmen assembled, and the line led up the hill path.

Professor Walter K. Rhodes, chief marshal, led the faculty. M. W. Evans acted as marshal for the seniors. The juniors were led by P. L. Martin. Directing the sophomores was C. M. Pearson, while the freshman marshal was H. R. Coleman. Band master Calhoun was on hand to direct the band.

At a signal from the chief marshal, the band struck up a lively march and the procession started up the hill. Two by two the marchers walked, and in a few moments the hill path was filled from Old Main to the Chemical Laboratory with the moving mass of students. Eastward down Loomis Street the line extended, until the procession practically filled the entire length of the hill path and reached well toward Bucknell Hall.

It was a beautiful and impressive sight. It was full of color as well, for the gay hues of the women's gowns, and the bright colored hoods of the faculty stood out boldly in the brilliant sun. The crimson of Harvard, the blue of Yale, the red and blue of Pennsylvania, the orange and blue of Bucknell, and the colors of many another college were represented in the hoods of the faculty.

When the freshmen, at the head of the line, reached the entrance to Old

Student Activities Council Started At Boston College

The Student Activities Council of Boston College has attained definite shape. The aim of this organization is to bring all the activities of the student body into closer union and to aid the solution of various campus problems. Membership will include the heads of all campus clubs, such as the presidents of the class, the three publications, the three debating societies and various other clubs.

"It strikes me funny," said the man as a rotten egg splashed all over his suit.

STUDENT COUNCIL RESOLUTION

WHEREAS: We, the Student Council, desire to impress the student body with the honor and dignity that is due to the one who occupies the President's chair in Bucknell University, and

WHEREAS: We desire to foster and maintain proper respect for the one who now, and for whom ever in future, occupies that honored position, be it therefore

RESOLVED: That at any mass meeting or public gathering of students, said students shall rise in silent respect when the President of Bucknell University comes into their midst.

PHI MU ALPHA, SINFONIA

The men's musical fraternity, Phi Mu Alpha, Sinfonia, held its first meeting for the year at the S. A. E. house on Monday evening after the practice of the glee club. As this was the first meeting for regular business purposes that the fraternity has held since its installation here last June there were many matters for discussion. The president, Director Hartz, appointed several committees to stand for the year, among these being a committee on activities, on eligibility, on honorary membership, and on publicity.

The fraternity voted to hold its regular meeting on Monday evenings every two weeks, the place being tentatively set as one of the studios of the Music Hall. Director Hartz offered the use of his house for initiations and the fraternity accepted his offer with a vote of thanks.

Professor Norris, who is the new professor in piano and harmony in the School of Music, attended the meeting and gave a short talk. Professor Norris is a member of the chapter at DePauw University, Greencastle, Indiana.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Kappa Delta Rho has twenty-six active men at the house at present. From the consensus of opinion among the fellows, everyone spent an enjoyable and profitable summer; and they all feel certain that this year will be the best ever.

Brother Bertram Haines, of Pitman, N. J., came back this fall after being out a year. He is a sophomore. 'Hinky' started with the class of '27.

Brothers Carpenter and George, who are members of the "V" cabinet, helped to take care of the Frosh during Freshman Week.

Brothers "Andy" Gehret, '22, Harry Williams, '25, and Erfryn Jones, ex-'26, will attend Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia this year. They made a short visit at the house last week before leaving for Jeff.

During the summer just past, Brother W. Norwood Lowry, instructor in the physics department here at Bucknell, married Miss Thelma May Drake, of Waymart, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Lowry have already started housekeeping in Lewisburg.

Brother Frank Turner, '25, became engaged to Miss Mildred Spencer, '28, this summer.

Brother Wilfred Wilcox also gave his pin away this summer. He is engaged to Miss Campbell, of the faculty of the Bucknell School of Music. "Willy" spent the week-ends here at the house part of the time. He is assistant principal of Knoxville High School, Knoxville, Pa.

The fraternity purchased a baby grand piano this week.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

With the exception of Tel Costides and Gene Halleran, every man returned to school this fall. Two of the boys not here last year have re-entered Bucknell: "Ken" Horsman, of Erie, and Shultzabarger, of Conemaugh.

Ted Mitchell, ex-'28, of Mailison, N. J., now of the class of '29, is showing up well on the Frosh eleven.

Jay Stout, ex-'27, of Hightstown, N. J., Bill Thomas, '25, of Wiconisco, Johnny Lenox, '24, of Coraopolis, "Hap" Mussina, '24, of Williamsport, Worthington Kendrick, '23, Florida, and Red Jones, '24, of Shingletown, were week-end visitors.

BETA KAPPA

The opening of college found Beta Kappa with only one member missing. George B. Reed, '26, has transferred to the University of Pennsylvania. Three men who did not attend the college last year have returned: Paul M. Johnston, William Coughenour, and L. Fegley Hopp.

Earl S. Dunlap, '24, and Paul M. Johnston, ex-'27, now of the class of '28, former brothers in Phi Theta Sigma, were initiated into Beta Kappa, Saturday, September 19.

Fred R. Helwig, ex-'26, visited the brothers for a few hours last Saturday. He is now attending Maryland Institute at Baltimore.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Several of the brothers are not returning to school this year. Don Kaupp is selling insurance; Dick Lofft is selling Wear-Ever Aluminum; Charlie Coene is planning to enter Harvard; Dan Upton is going to Duquesne University; Don Streeter is going to the Philadelphia Academy of the Fine Arts; and Charlie Nedrow is working for the Snowdon Oil Company.

During the summer, Lambert Joseph, '24, married Miss Pauline Mummert of Youngwood, Pa.

Brothers Hub Grice, Jack Davis, Jack Griffiths, and Eddie Jones, and Pledge-brothers Phil Stanton, Max Moore, and Jim Mabee attended summer school.

Phi Gamma Delta takes pleasure in announcing the initiation of Phillips Stanton, James R. Mabee, Jr., and Maxwell Moore.

PHI KAPPA PSI

The brothers are pleased to have Addison Bibling among their number once more.

John Minnick and Anthony Hauckner, members of the class of 1928, have not returned to college this year.

Pennsylvania Gamma of Phi Kappa Psi welcomes Brother Isaac Edwin Norris, professor of piano at the School of Music, a member of Indiana Alpha, DePauw University, Greencastle.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Alpha Chi Omega is very happy and greatly honored that Mrs. Beatty, house mother of Brady and Deabler houses, and Mother to all the "Sens", has consented to be a patroness of the fraternity. The fraternity is also proud to announce that Mrs. T. J. Heidish, wife of the Episcopalian rector in Lewisburg and Milton, is also going to be a patroness.

Vivian Gummo, who spent her freshman year here at Bucknell, is now going to Wellesley. Since the Wellesley girls were not required to be back at school until September 24, Vivian came to Lewisburg for a few hours on Sunday to see her sisters. She likes Wellesley, but says that Bucknell stands first with her.

KAPPA GAMMA

Kappa Gamma moved into its new home at the Delmar Inn, Market Street, at the beginning of the school year. The fraternity is occupying the rooms formerly held by the Alpha Chi Mu fraternity.

John Latzo, ex-'27, was a recent visitor at the house.

Jim Hurley who has been ill at the Sayre Hospital for some time, has returned to take up his studies.

We understand that Harry Spranea, ex-'26, has transferred to Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster.

Jack Namischuk is teaching algebra in the junior high school at Nanticoke, Pa.

SIGMA CHI

Fred Moore of Kappa stopped in to visit the brothers while on his way to Annapolis.

The chapter is pleased to announce the affiliation of Brother David Thomas of Wabash College.

Warren Kopp and Randall Davis have returned to complete their college work after a year's absence.

Cheney and Berry have not returned to the University this semester but it is expected that they will return in February.

ALPHA CHI MU

Alpha Chi Mu is rapidly getting acquainted with its new neighbors and putting the touches of home on its house at 140 North Third Street. The fraternity moved to its new location at the opening of the term and is now quite well settled in the new home.

Merle Colvin, '24, a sophomore at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, visited here during the week-end. He was at the house a part of the time.

"Jakey" Ulmer, '27, spent the week-end at his home at Leesburg, Pa.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

"Chinky" Leehan, of the class of '25, was a week-end visitor at the chapter house.

Richard T. Nicholson, who would have been a junior this year, is another of the missing brothers.

Henry J. Pettit, Jr., and Fred Heather, of the class of '28, have returned to college this year.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Nevin Grieb, a baseball and football player who has been out of college for some years, has returned this year to finish his course. He reenters the college with senior standing.

"Si" Hawes visited the chapter during the week-end.

George Bender, '17, is paying an extended visit to the brothers at the house. He has just returned from a trip to Hollywood, Cal.

Brother McCullen, of the chapter at the University of Virginia, visited the local chapter Sunday night.

Nickinus, Kelley, Snyder, and Tex Goodwin are among the missing this year. Kelley and Goodwin have joined the ranks of the married men, it is reported.

DELTA SIGMA

A large number of the members of the fraternity did not return to college this fall. Among those are Dick Harvey, Howard Crawley, Pete Bartheld, Dan Robinson, and Lawrence Clawson.

Dick Harvey and Howard Crawley visited the boys at the house during the past week. T. E. Jones and C. A. Munro, both members of last year's class, also visited the house during the week-end.

Buster Hall, '24, one of the former backfield stars on the Bison team, dropped in for a short time last Saturday.

The "Demies" enjoyed ice cream at Slifer's expense last Saturday. Slifer's engagement to Miss Caryl Dutton, '27, was announced at that time.

KAPPA SIGMA

"Ken" McMurray and Carl Kivler are among the missing at the Kappa Sig house this year. McMurray is at his home while Kivler is expected to go to Temple University.

Zern Heberling, ex-'26, is attending the Jefferson Medical School in Philadelphia.

Warren Temeris visited here during the week-end. He expects to return to college during the second semester this year.

Most of the men have returned this year except those who graduated. A few others have not returned, mostly from among the members of the class of '28.

COMMONS CLUB

The beginning of the college year found all of the members of the club returned except Clarence Hurst who has transferred to Susquehanna University at Selinsgrove.

Patrick Youtz, who was formerly a member of the class of '27, has returned after a year's absence and is entering the ranks of the sophomore class.

Raymond Yeich was called home Tuesday morning on account of the death of his father.

GLEE CLUB HOLDS INITIAL PRACTICE

Year's Prospects Look Promising With Several Trips Ahead

The first meeting and rehearsal of the glee club was held in Bucknell Hall on Monday evening at seven-thirty.

At this time fully forty men appeared and took part in the rehearsals. A third of them were men of the new class. The new men include many who will make a strong bid for membership in the club when it takes the road within the next few weeks.

The meeting started promptly, Director Hartz opening with a practice of one of the songs that will be used during the year. This was laid aside after a time however and the meeting passed into a discussion of the work of the club and the plans for the year, largely for the benefit of the new men. Director Hartz spoke of the benefits derived from the work of the club, outlined the qualifications for entrance, and discussed the work and trips that are to be undertaken this year. He was followed by President Johnny Gilmour, Student Manager Davis, Kushell, and Carstater, each of whom added a note to the explanation of the workings and purposes and benefits of the organization.

Following this discussion the club turned again to practice and progressed so well that the men were willing to undertake their first piece in thorough style when President Hunt appeared in the hall for a short visit.

Three compositions were practiced at this meeting and Director Hartz was greatly pleased with the showing made. He claims that it was the best rehearsal for the first of the year that the club has ever had. He did note however that there is a preponderance of first bass singers in the organization while the second tenor section appears to be rather scanty. He urged the men to be on the lookout for students who can handle this part.

Who's Who at B.U.

Ray Edwards---Y. M. Leader

The president of the Y. M. C. A. has been an important figure in the work of Freshman Week, for it is the "Y's" work which has contributed so greatly to the success of this new plan. Ray Edwards, president, has always been an active worker in the Y. M. as well as in many other college activities. He attended Bloomsburg State Normal School but thought that Bucknell would be the place to finish his education. Ray is a member of Theta Upsilon Omega fraternity and the Ministerial Association. His splendid work in the work of the office on the Hill has won him a fine reputation for loyalty and ability that would be hard to duplicate. During his second and third years he was on the varsity debating team.

The Y. M. work, as it has been started this year, gives great promise for the best year it has ever had. There is greater interest in the organization on the part of the general student body and an increased sense of responsibility and ambition for the work this year. The entire cabinet, led by Ray, has already demonstrated its ability, interest in the new students, and its responsibility to the college. With Ray Edwards at the head of the work we are certain that the year will be a profitable and successful one in the interests of the Christian forces of the University.

Prof. Groner: (to incoming Frosh.) How could you distinguish between carbon monoxide and carbon dioxide?

Frosh: Smell them. The one that killed you would be carbon monoxide.

The class of '25 seems to have engaged a whole steamship on the sea of matrimony from the reports that are floating about. Some of the "Ex-"s seem to have slipped in as stow-aways too.

FRATERNITY OFFICERS HEAR ABOUT NEW RULES

Following the meeting of the faculty at which the rules governing dances were adopted, President Hunt called a meeting of the heads of all of the social fraternities of the campus at his home. This meeting was held at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon, September 16.

When the men had assembled Dr. Hunt informed them of the rules that had been passed and explained their purpose. His statements in the meeting were substantially the same as the one made through the Bucknellian last week. However by having the heads of the fraternities present and speaking in an informal manner, the President added a personal touch that went far in securing the approval of the men for the new regulations. He also informed the men there that the committee of the faculty that will act with the fraternity representatives to determine the number of dances that may be held during a year had been appointed.

This committee will hold a joint meeting with the fraternity representatives on Friday evening at nine o'clock in the President's house.

A side hint to all Bucknellians—"Wear a smile"—it's cooler in summer and warmer in winter than a frown, and cheaper than most clothes you can get nowadays.

Freshman rules will be cruel after the Freshman Week of fun, freedom, and feminine companionship.

Two Former Bison Football Men Play On Professional Teams

One of the Buffalo newspapers in an article on the Bison Professional team of that city mentions the names of Foster and Reed, former players for the Bucknell Bisons.

It is expected that Foster, who was captain of the 1924 eleven, will take his old position as quarterback in this new team. Reed, captain of the team the previous year, will be trying for the center position. Max played guard while in college but was center for the Lewisburg High team and for one of the service teams during the war. He has had some previous experience in the professional end of the game having played with some of the coal region teams last year while coaching the team of the Tamaqua High School.

Oxford Plans American School

Oxford University will soon have a school for Americans only, organized on the lines of the medieval Oxford halls which have developed into the present colleges of the University. The school will be open to American boys who wish to prepare abroad for entrance into either an English or an American university, or who wish a year abroad before entering business.

It is being organized by an American, Edgar C. Taylor, of New Hampshire, formerly Longefellow scholar at Oxford from Bowdoin College, and now a professor in Washington University of St. Louis. The new school will combine the methods of the English "public schools" with American preparatory schools.

No resident of Union County need accept this Fall a small amount of return in merchandise for his money.

That applies to the purchase of everything from French Doors to English Setters!

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

The arrival of the freshmen a week before the bulk of the upperclassmen had arrived settled at least one difficulty for them in giving them first choice of rooming and boarding places.

The election of freshman officers during Freshman Week gave them a little advantage in preparing for the events of the year. However an election such as this, based on the experience of but a few days, can hardly be said to be ideal.

Some of the men who returned to college early to serve with the Y. M. C. A. reception committee experienced the thrill that comes once in a life time when they took their first meal in the dining room of Woman's College. One of 'em said it was just like going into No Man's Land.

Miss Clark, in welcoming the freshmen men at the first reception last week, told them to come often. The freshmen might profit by reading their rules before they act on this suggestion.

The University is constructing four new tennis courts on the new athletic field. This would seem to be a net gain. And the tennis players should not raise a racket about that either.

The green-jerseyed players that you have seen on Loomis field are not the members of the freshman team. Lewisburg High School is going to profit by the example of the college and turn out a team.

The past few days have been almost as much a trial for some of the men of the college as a political campaign is to a politician. The amount of hand-shaking was something "just awful."

If it were not for a few late-comers the college might start the year by singing "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here." However we might as well sing anyhow, and the tune doesn't matter just so we all sing the same one.

BAND GETS TO WORK; BIG PROGRAM AHEAD

Hopes To Go To Out-of-Town Game; Will Play At Camp Devitt

"Although no definite plans have been made for the Bucknell University band this fall," said Director Callahan last Friday, "you may rest assured that an extensive program will be developed. With the addition of the new freshmen, our instrumentation is much better, and we can immediately begin rehearsals for the continuance of our concert work."

"In all probability," he added, "the band will give a concert at Camp Devitt, and also a twilight concert on the campus."

The band has had several practices, and made its initial appearance on Thursday, playing for the Convocation. Again on Friday night, the organization entertained at the "Y" reception in the gymnasium. About eight new men from the freshman class have reported for practice. This includes a drummer, a trombonist, four saxophonists, a bass player, and a clarinetist.

"Bunny" Learn, the manager, is quite optimistic over the prospects for a trip with the football team this fall. Plans are being made to go either to Worcester, Massachusetts, for the Holy Cross game on October 31, or to go to Washington for the Georgetown game the week before that. The trip with the football team is an annual event on the band schedule and it is just possible that the Thanksgiving trip to Detroit and Dayton will be the one this year. However this is too far in the future for consideration at present.

Director Calhoun and Manager Learn strongly urge that any student who has an instrument and plays it attend the rehearsals of the band. The next one will be held in Commencement Hall on Thursday evening at seven o'clock.

Floating University To Sail Soon

A floating university, the steamship Mount Clay, will sail out of New York harbor on one of the first days of October for a cruise around the world. With it will depart a faculty of instructors in academic subjects, and a large quota of students.

The steamship is actually a floating university, for the faculty will offer a curriculum covering biology, sociology, psychology, botany, economics, geography, navigation, history, English, French, Spanish, German, dramatics, public speaking, and art. The students in this unique college will study, learn, recite, listen to lectures, take notes, and pass examinations while they are cruising.

The Mount Clay, it is expected, will visit Cuba, Panama, Hawaii, Japan, Korea, China, the Philippines, Borneo, Java, Malay Peninsula, Sumatra, Burma, India, Ceylon, Arabia, Egypt, Palestine, Turkey, Greece, Italy, Africa, Spain, Portugal, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Scotland, and England.

The faculty includes teachers from Amherst, Harvard, Princeton, Clark University, Brown University, and the universities of Arizona, Illinois, Michigan, Texas, Delaware, and Virginia. The cruise is under the extramural division of New York University. But only one of the executive officers is credited to New York University, Dean James E. Lough. The president is Charles F. Tiering, president emeritus of Western Reserve University.

Use Slang Properly, Says Pattee

Get a hobby; use slang properly and in variety, if at all; increase your vocabulary; and learn to think straight through to the end of a problem, freshmen at Pennsylvania State College were told last Saturday by Dr. Fred Lewis Pattee, for thirty years a member of the faculty, a leading authority on American literature, and head of the English department.

"Most college men are unable to use slang with variety," said Dr. Pattee. "Be able to make use of slang if you want to, but don't be mastered by it."

Dr. Pattee believes in the recreative worth of a hobby. In speaking to the freshmen he said, "You are preparing for a vocation; prepare at the same time for an avocation."

Have you noticed the many varities of trees on the Bucknell Campus? It is worth your while to study these trees.

ANNUAL STAFF COMPLETE AND JUST RARIN' TO GO

After the election of C. I. Carpenter and Charles J. Kushell, Jr., to the editorship and business managership of LAGENDA of 1927 the other members of the staff were appointed and the names published in the BUCKNELLIAN. However, as many of the students had left before the issue carrying the announcement was published we are printing the list again.

The associate editors of the year book will be H. Willard Gardner and Warren G. Knierim. The assistant business managers named are: S. E. Warner, A. E. Reismeyer, and J. R. Lofft. Other members of the staff are: athletic editor, S. A. McCaskey; music editor, Marguerite Moyer; photograph editor, William Devitt; staff men and "Tubby" Hall were married, and also Mildred Walker and Clifton Buckley, Pauline Biery and Bill Evans, and Ruby Robinson and Clyde J. Kough.

Miss Clush and Miss Douglas attended Columbia during the summer.

Mary Graham holds the proud title of Supervisor of Music in the Northumberland public schools.

George R. Faint, '25, and Miss Frances Griscom, a graduate of the West Jersey Homeopathic Hospital in the class of '24, whose home was in Camden, New Jersey, were married at the Linden Baptist Church on July Fourth at two o'clock. They are now at home at 126 South Fifth Street.

During his college course Mr. Faint was secretary to the Dean. He is continuing in that capacity this year.

Harold S. Liddick, '24, was married to Miss Virginia Dace Burbick of Ashland, Ohio, according to cards received here last week. Mr. Liddick is a native of Lewisburg and graduated in the Chemical Engineering course. He is now holding a responsible position in the Ohio town.

One of the reporters attached to the governor's staff when he appeared in Lewisburg during the past week was Jesse Laventhal, a former student of the University. Laventhal is reporting for the Philadelphia Bulletin. When he was in college here in 1921-23, he was a reporter for the Bucknellian. Previous to that time and while in college he wrote for the Philadelphia Inquirer. Laventhal spent a part of Tuesday morning on the Hill renewing some of the acquaintances of former days.

Selective Instruction Is Best, Declares Prof. Silverman

College students should be trained on the basis by which the world will judge them, asserts Professor Alexander Silverman, head of the department of chemistry of the University of Pittsburgh, in recommending the adoption of a system of selective instruction.

He advocates grouping of students in small sections with the laboratory as the basis of instruction. This, he contends, would accelerate the progress of the exceptional young man or woman as well as "give the plodder an opportunity to make good." A ten-year trial of this plan, he holds, would raise the level of any American college or university.

"It is a matter of common observation today that in our large colleges and universities courses are outlined and curricula planned in such a fashion that all students are expected to complete the requirements in a given time," he explains.

"This assumption is clearly as fallacious as starting several thousands of automobiles of different types on a transcontinental race from New York City and expecting all of them to arrive in San Francisco at the same time. The differences in mental and physical equipment in students should make it clearly obvious that our present system of education is at fault."

Professor Silverman thinks that students should be advanced according to individual ability to progress, and favors a system of granting credits for quality of work done.

Swarthmore Forbids All Autos

A notice by Dean Walters has been posted on the College bulletin boards calling attention to the Board of Managers' regulation which forbids maintenance by undergraduates of automobiles at the College or in the Borough of Swarthmore. Dean Walters said to a representative of the Swarthmore Phoenix that he believes "the poor scholastic showing of certain students last June, which led to their being dropped, was due in some measure to distraction from work occasioned by automobile riding. The regulation will be strictly enforced this year."

BUCKNELL

Is Bucknell but some brick piles of dark reddish hue?
Are professors just common instructors to you?
Are our colors mere ribbons of orange and blue,
Or do all of these things have a meaning to you?
Are the students just classmates, or are they your friends?
Ask the sport if it's his name he bravely defends,
And if not, to what purpose his glory he lends;
To what force, for what reason his power he lends.
Ask the writers of story, and poem, and song,
What's the great inspiration that helped them along;
Ask the Council of Seniors, how they govern the throng,
There is only one answer, all others are wrong.
If you answer these questions, you'll find it is true,
That the answer to all is the same the way through;
For it's shown at our games, and in all that we do,
'Tis our Bucknellian spirit that ever rings true.

Alumni Notes

Elizabeth Hurst, '23 and Alice Rossister, '25, are teaching in the Stewart Junior High School in Norristown, Pa.

Dorothy Klotz, ex-'26, is attending Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, Pa.

Helen Morton, ex-'25, and Mary Kurz are teaching in Union Hill, Weehawken, N. J.

Mildred Biddison, '25, is teaching in Kennet Square, Pa.

It seems that quite a few Bucknellians joined the ancient hymeneal order recently. Kathryn Steckman and "Tubby" Hall were married, and also Mildred Walker and Clifton Buckley, Pauline Biery and Bill Evans, and Ruby Robinson and Clyde J. Kough.

Miss Clush and Miss Douglas attended Columbia during the summer.

Mary Graham holds the proud title of Supervisor of Music in the Northumberland public schools.

George R. Faint, '25, and Miss Frances Griscom, a graduate of the West Jersey Homeopathic Hospital in the class of '24, whose home was in Camden, New Jersey, were married at the Linden Baptist Church on July Fourth at two o'clock. They are now at home at 126 South Fifth Street.

It is probable that several changes in this staff will be necesary on account of withdrawals from college but these will be announced in the near future. Plans for the publishing of the annual will soon be formed by the staff.

During his college course Mr. Faint was secretary to the Dean. He is continuing in that capacity this year.

Harold S. Liddick, '24, was married to Miss Virginia Dace Burbick of Ashland, Ohio, according to cards received here last week. Mr. Liddick is a native of Lewisburg and graduated in the Chemical Engineering course. He is now holding a responsible position in the Ohio town.

Alumni Club Organized

The local alumni of the Delta Sigma fraternity or the Demosthenians, as they are more commonly known, organized an alumni club on Wednesday, September 9.

Several of the "Demie" alumni with their families gathered at the home of Mr. Harry R. Warfel, instructor in English, and enjoyed a social hour and basket lunch on the Warfel lawn. At dusk the men were left alone to carry out their plans. Charles F. Lindig, '24, opened the meeting, explaining that he had been commissioned by the general alumni president of the fraternity to form an alumni club here. The officers elected were: Professor Frank G. Davis, '11, president; and Harold S. Eisley, '21, secretary. The other charter members of the club are: Professor M. L. Drum, '02, Professor J. W. Rice, '14, Hayes L. Person, '20, Dr. Lester P. Fowle, ex-'20, Harry R. Warfel, '20, Paul A. Weaver, '22, Paul B. Cooley, '23, F. C. Wilson, '25, and Charles F. Lindig, '24.

It is planned to form alumni clubs of the fraternity in other cities such as Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Reading, Rochester, and New York, where there are several alumni members of the local fraternity.

Campus Serenaders Ready Again

The Campus Serenaders under the direction of Jack Gardner have been rehearsing for the past week for the coming dance season, and Jack says they will be better than ever.

The orchestra will be larger this year and instead of eight men will carry nine men and a soloist. Louis Goldstein will play his saxophone again, as will Arthur Shorts of the freshman class. The brass section will be composed of cornetists Karl Albig, and David Thomas, the latter a junior who transferred this year from Wabash University; Tony Blofski will play the trombone; and George Mattson will hold up the heavy end by playing bass horn. Paul Arow is to play the drums and traps, and Mira Bachman, a freshman, will thrum the banjo. Jack Gardner "himself" will be with his orchestra at the piano.

The feature of the orchestra this year will be Douglas MacKenzie, a senior, of Pasadena, California. His voice has been broadcasted many times from the Golden Bear State, and he has the distinction of having sung before many movie notables, among them Mae Murray and Douglas Fairbanks.

SPIRIT

College spirit is one of the most abused commodities that is connected with higher education. In its finer, deeper significance it means a pure love for the institution that gives you training and stamps you forever with the brand of its culture. It has been erroneously connected in some instances with the effervescent, shallow "Rah-rah" type of thing that comic strips often give as characteristic of the college man.

True college spirit is greatly to be desired. It finds its expression in habits of study, clean living, participation in extracurricular activities and in support of Bucknell traditions and organizations It may be evident without being audible, yet often does find expression through yells, songs and words that show sincere appreciation. Pep counts but it must be pep plus.

This is the kind of spirit that we are anxious to develop. It is the spirit that will make one work as hard in his study as he would on the field. It will make him support Bucknell whether aided or not. It will make him take up, for his school, the work that takes from his own time and gives to the University. It is the spirit that recognizes in "the Alma Mater" the meaning of those words, "the free mother," and gives to them the respect and loyalty that is their due.

RUSHING

To rush,or not to rush— that is the question. For years it has been the practice to rush, but now the good of the University, the welfare of the freshmen, and the benefit to the fraternities themselves, demand that some restrictions be placed upon the manner and method of doing this, in order that the new men be given a chance to look around, and that the fraternities cease the "knock-em-down-and-drag-em-in" system, along with the "cut-throat" method of attacking all other fraternities when talking to the new men.

The rules adopted last year were for the purpose of making the necessary restrictions, and in the sense that they were a step in the right direction they are, or have been, worth while. The freshmen have been given time to look around, and the fraternities have not resorted to the practices formerly in vogue here. However, they have done little to promote the fellow feeling among fraternities, and in some cases have actually created distrust that otherwise would never have existed.

The Rev. Dr. West, in his morning sermon at the Baptist Church, last Sunday, made the statement that the test of our ideas is their "livability." His statement finds an application here. The rushing rules that have been adopted here are new, almost untried ideas. Their test will lie in their livability, and present indications are that they will not prove livable.

Without adopting the "I-told-you-so" attitude, we should like to say that this has been caused by the lack of scientific method in drawing up those rules. The rules as they now stand were designed to fill a need. The object at the time of their adoption was to find some method of overcoming the objectionable features of open rushing. This was the predominant thing, and results would seem to indicate that it was the sole object, in the minds of the men who drew them up.

But what more should they have considered, will be asked. They should have looked also to the way in which those rules will operate. They should have looked, not merely for a system of restriction, but for a system that would be applicable to conditions here, a system that would prove livable.

In that the present rules have not proved reasonable we find them open to condemnation. On the other hand, in that they have prevented abuses, we can not advocate their abolition.

There is a middle course that we propose to follow. The fault of the open system of pledging lay in the fact that the fraternities resorted to unreasonable, unnatural, and unusual means in order to build up the physical, numerical side of their organizations. The fault of the present rules lies in the fact that those rules attempt to correct the situation by further unreasonable and unnatural restrictions. It is no more reasonable to request that a man stop entertaining his friends for a period of time than it is reasonable for him to give a total stranger the welcome of a long lost brother. To forbid that a man entertain his friends at his own home merely because that home is a fraternity house is unnatural. And to make any fraternity chapter responsible for the acts of its alumni is unusual, to say the least.

The success of any rule that may be made depends upon the consent of the people on whom it is to operate, for the basis of law is the consent of the governed. To pass rules which make obedience next to impossible is to bring discredit upon all rules. To be effective, the rule must be one that draws the moral as well as the mental support of the students.

In view of the experience of the past month, we suggest that the present rules of rushing be revised with a view to making them more practical, more in accordance with the natural tendencies of young men thrown together in a college community; revised so as to allow men to have personal freedom of action, still keeping the fraternities from abusing this freedom. In this connection it might be worth noting that it is easier to control the actions of the new men than it is to control the actions of the fraternities, and that a rule forbidding a new student to pledge to any fraternity before a given time, similar to the rule forbidding him from joining a fraternity until one year has been passed, might prove to be the means of covering the whole situation. The object of all is fair play, and a rule that is to be fair to all must be so in practice as well as in theory.

"DUE RESPECT"

One of the traditions of the college that no one seriously considers to be worth while is the one that demands that members of the sophomore and junior classes should deport themselves in the worst possible manner while attending chapel.

Short as has been the time since college has opened, and few as have been the assemblies held thus far, the tendency toward disorderliness and restlessness has already made itself apparent.

The removal of the freshman chapel to Bucknell Hall and the fact that the seniors are not required to attend the exercises leaves the responsibility for the disorderliness squarely on the shoulders of the two middle classes, the classes from which are selected the men who have undertaken to preserve and protect "the worthy traditions of the college."

Several times last year the Bucknellian took occasion to remind the students of the decorum that should be observed during the devotional exercises of the University but each time it appeared that the suggestions were either entirely overlooked or quickly and totally forgotten.

Unrest here, as in most other cases whose mob psychology is applied, is caused by the thoughtless or malicious acts of some few individuals who are not satisfied unless the whole time of the day is spent demonstrating their superior brightness and originality. We reserve our own opinions concerning those people who have no better taste or judgement than so to conduct themselves, but we do suggest that one means of abating the nuisance, for that is what it amounts to, would be for the interclass council to treat cases of disrespectful attention at assembly in the same way in which other cases of disrespect are treated. The chapel service where attention and respect are lacking is useless. Conversely, if attendance is to be compulsory, attention also should be demanded.

DELAYED ISSUE

The delay in preparing this issue of the Bucknellian, which is the first full sized issue of eight pages for the current school year, has been occasioned by obstacles almost impossible to overcome. The re-organizing of the staff, depleted by withdrawals of members from college, and the building up of an editorial schedule, are tasks that cannot be done over night. In addition, some of the necessary new equipment for the University Print Shop has been delayed in transit, adding to the difficulties of the staff. This note is offered in explanation of the delay, rather than in excuse for it.

The staff has worked hard and burned much midnight oil in its attempt to issue the paper on time; but the effort was not successful. We hope to have future issues printed promptly on schedule, and in your hands every Wednesday evening. This should be entirely possible as soon as our equipment is complete, and our new staff functioning properly.

But more than punctuality we shall value accuracy. It will be the endeavor of the college paper to report all the news and report it accurately. The student body can assist the editors effectively by informing them of any occurrence worth reporting, and especially by keeping the editors informed as to coming events.

It is the aim of the Bucknellian staff to make the paper mirror the life of the college. We can do that only with your cooperation. We do not ask you to do the work, but to tell us about things and we will do the work.

Each campus group, society, and organization, and every department of instruction, is originating news constantly. But the Bucknellian cannot always know of this news unless you tell us about it. Not all societies, nor all groups, nor all departments are necessarily represented on the Bucknellian staff. If you will "tip us off" about coming events, we will see that they are properly reported.

And these "tips" should concern not merely student activities and social affairs, but educational matters as well. We want to know what the different departments are doing. We want to know about new courses and new activities. We want to know what the various teachers are doing. Often we cannot know unless the teachers themselves tell us. We ask you to do that.

If we succeed in our effort to reflect the life of th college, the Bucknellian will become in effect thé University billboard. Those who are not adequately represented in our pages will be the losers. They will lose some of the importance and prestige that should be theirs if they were adequately represented in our pages.

The Bucknellian is going to be no press agent for any one, or for any group or society. But it is going to record, as faithfully and as impartially as possible, the doings of all. You, or your department, or your society, or your group will lose if you do not see to it that you are properly represented in the Bucknellian. This is your paper. We are issuing it for you. We ask your help that we may make it the best college paper in America.

DON'T NEGLECT STUDY

There will be a temptation, on the part of many, as the "open rushing season" comes on to neglect studies and other responsibilities for the sake of promising social engagements. This is to be avoided. College should develop a man that is at the same time intellectual and social and physical—in short the college man should be a "well-rounded" man. If this is to be true the rounding process must begin at the beginning and all phases of the development taken up at once. This will permit neither the grind nor the social hound. Both phases of activity should be parts of the life of the college man but neither should predominate over the other. Go ahead and have a good time. You have it coming to you. But remember that primarily you are in college to prepare for life—through study.

Freshman Offenders Disciplined By Our New Inter-class Council

The Inter-class Council effected its organization and functioned for the first time at its meeting last Monday night, held in Room 2, Main.

The officers of the council are to be a president and secretary, as set forth in the constitution of the Student Council. The vice-president of the senior class is the president of the council and the secretary is to be elected by the council. Rafford White is, therefore, the president of the council, and Clayton Hollinger was elected to the secretaryship at the opening meeting.

The first cases to be brought under the new rules were brought up after the business of organizing. Coleman, the freshman president, was tried on three counts and found guilty on all of them. The use of physical persuasion for the right was exercised in this instance as well as the psychological method. Coleman will wear a double sign at the Western Maryland game and at other public events during the week, one part of which will bear the words, "I broke three rules"; the other is to read "Don't follow your president's example; it hurts."

Simons, another freshman, was tried for standing on the campus with his hands in his pockets. He admitted the charge and claimed that he was dreaming. This will be the substance of the sign that will be his punishment.

Other freshmen who will be called before the council next Monday night are Applegate, Holstrum, and Simpsen.

RULES

The Freshman Class is very good,
So Senior Council thinks.
They speak politely on the Hill
And sweetly wear their dinks.
But, breaking rules became the thing
To do, with fiendish glee;
When, with his charming disregard,
Their president broke three.

S. A. E.s PENALIZED

Consequently the members of the council were loath to apply the penalty, but they had no other choice. The conduct of the fraternity in complying with the decision thus reached has added much to the spirit of fair play that is necessary to the application of the rushing regulations.

The view now taken by fraternity men throughout the college is that the incident has been an unfortunate occurrence in which blame is not to be attached to any group.

A young lady entered a crowded car with a pair of skates over her arm. An elderly gentleman arose to give her his seat.

"Thank you very much, sir," she said, "but I've been skating all afternoon and I'm tired of sitting down."

game here next Saturday, has gone forward rapidly during the past week. The first scrimmage of the season was held in the stadium last Saturday afternoon,the freshman team furnishing opposition for the varsity.

Coach Ingerton seemed well pleased with the work of the teams in this initial work-out, and said that he considered the showing remarkably good for the first scrimmage of the year.

A second scrimmage between freshmen and varsity elevens was held Tuesday afternoon after a regular drill on Monday. Ingerton was even better pleased with this event and made the statement that the freshman team had improved fully fifty per cent, since the previous mix-up.

Head Coach "Uncle" Charley Moran arrived in Lewisburg during the week and is now working with the team, and devising new plays for use in the inter games. It is expected that in the opening struggle of the season the team will use nothing but straight football and will not need to fall back on the bagful of tricks that may be untied later in the season.

FROSH WINS SCRAP

were, however, rather unwilling to add to the dampened condition of the suitors, and in order to continue the wetting process the line moved on to the Lambda Chi Alpha house. This particular passage was made more interesting by the attention of the townspeople who helped the good cause along with generous amounts of water.

After the visit to the Lambda Chis the parade headed for the goal of all parades, the fountain. Here the interest of the town and college was centered while man after man passed through the traditional ceremony.

This marked the climax of the evening and the parade soon broke up. That it was a complete success is doubted by no one, least of all, the freshmen.

UNIVERSITY CONTRACTS FOR VIEWS OF CAMPUS

The college, during the past summer, contracted with the Fairchild Aerial Camera Corporation to have several photographs of the University and the surrounding country made from the air. The photographers made their first views of the college several weeks ago and the proofs of their work have been received at the registrar's office. It is probable that they will take several pictures before the authorities decide which ones they desire to have finished for general publication. The airmen should arrive within the next week or two in order to do this work.

SOCIOLOGICAL SOCIETY TO MEET SEPT. 30th.

The Bucknell Sociological Society is to open its activities a week from tonight, September 30, with a joint social and business meeting in the lecture hall of the Biology building, beginning at eight-fifteen.

First on the program will be the election of officers to serve during the current year. Professor C. R. Johnson, who teaches sociology in the University, has a number of slides to exhibit, made from actual photos he took in Turkey while a professor at Robert College, Constantinople.

Classes in sociology will be given a cut as an inducement to attend this meeting. The Sociological Society was organized only last spring, and it its short life has enjoyed rapidly growing interest on the part of students, some of whom are not enrolled in sociology courses.

The feature of last year's activities was the lecture-visit of Thomas Mott Osborne, perhaps the world's best-known prison reformer. He commanded a great welcome from those who heard him, and negotiations are already under way to have him come here again this year.

A social hour will conclude the program of the evening.

Frosh: "That waiter made me mad this morning. He said to me "Do you konw how many waffles you've eaten already?"

"I said 'No' and he said, "That makes twenty-three!"

"It made me so mad that I got up and went to class without my breakfast."

JUNIORS AND SOPHS CHOOSE OFFICERS

Members of Interclass Council Elected At Same Meetings

The elections of the junior and sophomore classes were held on Friday afternoon at four-thirty; the first in the lecture room of the "Chem-Lab" and the second in Bucknell Hall. Both elections were closely contested in some parts while the treasurer of both classes were elected by unanimous vote.

In the junior election the meeting was presided over by Phil Martin, who through the withdrawal from college of the president and vice-president of the class became temporarily the head of the organization. When nominations were opened for the presidency however he was nominated and turned the conduct of the meeting over to Stanley McCaskey. Other nominations were Mathewson and Walker. The ballot gave Martin 137 votes while the other two candidates were each given 30. For the office of vice-president the contest was somewhat closer. Convery taking 76 votes to win over Anderson's 67. Hetler was chosen treasurer without opposition and Miss Sara Pentz was elected secretary with 75 votes to 50 for Miss Haslam and 37 for Miss Halderman. The wide discrepancy in the number of votes cast for the different officers is rather unusual for a Bucknell class election.

In electing members of the Interclass Council for the first time only the men were allowed to vote, for the women have their own governing body. In this election four men were chosen from the junior class, each person being allowed but one vote. Hollinger, Hufnagle, Lauderbaugh, Bradley, Gilmour, and Hulick were the nominees placed in the field and of these Hollinger, Hufnagle, Gilmour and Hulick were successful. The plan of allowing only one vote per person in order to keep one group from controlling all of the votes of the council proved to be very effective in this instance.

In the sophomore meeting the voting for the different officers was much closer. Johnson was elected president with only five votes to the good, the count being 90 to 85. Trimmer was his opponent. For the vice-presidency Shuttlesworth negotiated a three vote lead in an 86-83 race against Pierce. Marley was chosen for the money-grabber's post without any opposition. The secretary's job had the greatest number of candidates, four of the girls being nominated for the honor. Miss Trowbridge was victor with 55 votes, Miss Burns, Miss Higgins, Miss Cunningham, and Miss Hurst sharing the remaining votes of the class.

Albig, Hitchens, and Rasmussen were the successful contenders for the three council positions open to this class while Jordan was the only other candidate.

Myers Bros. To Open New Store

Myers Brothers, one of the leading clothing and furnishing stores of Williamsport, has taken over the store formerly occupied by H. H. Difenderfer, at 220 Market Street.

The new store will carry a complete line of men's and young men's clothing and furnishings and will cater to the trade of both the college and the town. The store room is to be repainted and remodelled, clothing racks are to be added to the equipment, and it is intimated that the new proprietors will have new show windows made next spring.

The whole stock of the store is being disposed of by the new owners preparatory to the alternations that are to be made in the store room, and many of the articles are being offered at less than half price.

The store is the third to be opened by the firm of Myers Brothers, the other two being located at Williamsport and at Jersey Shore. The firm was first organized in 1897 by Henry and Morris Myers, who opened a store in Jersey Shore. Later their brother Abe went into partnership with Henry to establish the store at Williamsport. L. Carol Myers, the son of Henry Myers, was taken into the firm in 1923 and will assist in the management of the local store.

Mr. Henry Kaplan, who has been with the firm at the Williamsport store for the past five years, will have charge of the store here.

Frosh: (at the Book Store) You say that if I buy this book it will save me half my studying?

Mr. Wolfe: Yes.

Frosh: Give me two.

Frosh: Excuse me, Reverend, but when people go to heaven do they become angels right away or do they have to attend some lectures and pass a lot of examinations?

Student Council Plans Elections

At the regular meeting of the Student Council held last Monday night several matters of importance were taken up and decided. Among these were the nomination and a date for the election of cheer leaders, the nomination and election for the officers of the athletic association, the time for the first freshman roll call and the decision of a question regarding the interfraternity rushing rules.

The elections for cheer leaders, and for officers of the athletic association will be held on Thursday morning, October 2, from 10 to 12:30. The nominees proposed at the meeting of the council are:

For cheer leaders: Elder, Sheppard, Bach, Diezz, and Slack. Those elected will decide the one who shall be head leader for themselves.

For president of the A. A., Bach and Fritzinger. For vice-president of the A. A., Eaton and Walker. For secretary-treasurer, Ken Murphy and H. W. Gardner.

The council approved of the holding of a freshman roll call to occur on Tuesday afternoon at 4:30.

One of the fraternities proposed that the fee posted at the beginning of the rushing season be returned to the fraternities after the common bid day so that the fraternities might not be handicapped by having their funds made useless to them. This proposition was approved and the fees will be returned two weeks after the common bid day.

Debaters Discuss Year's Work

The system of debating and the organization of the debating club for the year was the theme of the first debaters' meeting held in Bucknell Hall, Tuesday afternoon. The meeting was not widely advertised on account of the haste in calling the candidates together, but a score of men, including several veterans of former seasons was present.

The meeting was opened by the manager of debating, T. Burns Drum. As the different men arrived at the hall they were given cards on which to register and to indicate their experience in the work. These cards revealed that a large number of the new men have had experience in high school and community debating associations and this experienced material should make matters interesting for all men who expect to debate for Bucknell this year.

After the registration had been attended to, Drum took up the system to be followed in the preparation for debates. Professor Whyte will be unable to take full charge of the debating work on account of his position as head of the extension department of the University. Because of this fact the debating board, Professors Robbins, Hamblin, Howes, Coleman, and Dean Rivenburg, in conference with President Hunt, has decided to adopt the council system that has been so successfully tried out by Baker College and Furman University. The full charge of choosing, developing, and coaching the team, under this system, will be put in the hands of a council made up of four or five heads of departments interested in the question chosen. The council will be chosen by the debating board as soon as the question for debate is decided.

The selection of the question for debate that will be used during the year is made by a council that meets at Harrisburg, and is composed of the coaches and managers of debate of most of the colleges of the state of Pennsylvania. The meeting for the current year will be held on October 3. In order that the Bucknell delegates may be instructed as to what questions to advocate at this meeting, another meeting at which questions will be discussed is scheduled to meet in Buckrell Hall next Monday at 4:30.

An address by Professor Whyte setting forth the value of debating and the ideals of debating here at Bucknell brought the meeting to a close.

NATURE'S LIGHTS

The golden rays of setting sun
Spread o'er the sky;
And crimson streams of glory flow
From cloud to cloud,
A lake of lavender and rose
Begins to fade
And soon the shades of twilight hide
The sunset tints.
The evening star now clearer shines
Against the gray;
The golden glory of the sun
Had dimmed its light,
But now, as evening shadows fall
It shines supreme;
A light of purity and love,
A guiding star.
The moon beams with gentle light
Across the sky.
The silver beams of her fair face
Are calm and still.
The tired earth finds rest and peace
Beneath her light,
And dreams of happiness and joy,
Until the dawn.

Appearance counts. Look well. —Farley's.

NEW RULES FOR SEM; TO SING NEW GRACE

Dean Clark Tells Our Co-eds How They Do It At Smith

A short meeting of the girls at Woman's College was called by Dean Clark on Monday evening. Dean Clark has made many valuable suggestions to the girls, and some of these were discussed at this meeting. The habit of girls sleeping in each other's rooms was declared unhealthful, as the rooms were built for one occupant only. Also, in case girls had to be located in a hurry, a great deal of trouble to find them occurred. Now, except in very unusual cases, each girl will occupy her own room.

Dean Clark next asked that every girl register in the office before leaving the college for an over-night stay. So that she would not be thought unjustly severe in this request, Miss Clark read some similar regulations from the Mount Holyoke, Wilson, and Smith handbooks and it was obvious that the Bucknell women are under no stricter regulations in this respect than other college women.

A new system of saying grace before the meals at the "Sem" has been instituted, which includes singing grace before the evening meal. Dean Clark has suggested that a grace composed by one of the girls which would be peculiar to Bucknell would be much better to sing than any other, and accordingly a contest has been started, to end October 15, for a Woman's College grace. A prize of five dollars is to be awarded to the winner, who will be decided upon by Professor Stolz, Miss Armstrong, and Miss Jenkins.

Writes History Of Lewisburg

Harold W. Musser, '12, is writing a history of Lewisburg that will appear serially in the local paper, THE SATURDAY NEWS. The following is an announcement of the history, that was clipped from that paper under the date of September 12, 1925:

"At an early date we will begin the publication of the history of Lewisburg from the time the first white explorer paddled his canoe around Penny's rocks, on up along the then heavily timbered hills below town and landed around where the gas house now stands, on down to this time.

"This history was written by Prof. Harold W. Musser, a scholar and student who was born and reared here and is a descendent of one of the oldest and most honored Lewisburg families. The history has been copyrighted and will appear exclusively in the SATURDAY NEWS unless released by this paper.

"Prof. Musser has made minute research for his data, a vast amount of which will appear that has never before been in print. This research required more than a dozen years of work, but it is now completed and is thorough. The history will be published in installments and will run over some months. The public schools will doubtless use this history for a recitation period each week so that the coming generation may know all about the town in which they live."

W. S. G. A. MEETS

The first meeting of the 1925-26 Student Government Association for Woman's College, held in the parlors of the college Wednesday evening, September 16, was featured by an address by Miss Clark, acting dean of women.

Miss Clark outlined her policies of administration, pointing out the importance of the use of student government in the working out of her plans. She made the girls feel that she was depending on them for the support of the rules which they have made and for the proper conduct of affairs at the Woman's College.

Irene Bell, the president of the association, then introduced Miss Ruhl, who has been put in charge of the infirmary, and Mrs. Beatty who has been made house mother for the Brady and Doubler apartments.

It was announced that the parlors of Wolfe, Brady, and Doubler may be used to entertain callers. This action was taken in order to relieve congestion at the "Sem" parlors.

The new rushing rules were read to the students and the Y. W. C. A. handbooks for the year, containing many valuable notes such as the constitution of the Self-Government Association and the regulations of the college, were distributed.

The last thing Dean Clark spoke about was the tennis court for the use of the girls of Woman's College and their friends. The courts are to be put in good condition and through the kindness of Dean Rivenburg will have two new nets.

It's easy enough to make a noise in the world; the hard part is getting an encore.

Constitution Changes Cause A. A. Election Postponement

The constitution of the Bucknell University Athletic Council as it was adopted by the trustees of the University calls for several changes in the manner of electing the officers for the various teams, and in the rules of eligibility and of award. These rules have made necessary the postponement of the election of officers of the Athletic Association.

A digest of the material of the constitution will be published in the next issue of the Bucknellian together with a quotation of the rules affecting the student positions.

Student Volunteers Hold Meeting

The first meeting of the local group of the Student Volunteer Association was held on Sunday afternoon in the Chemistry building at two o'clock. President Margarida Reno opened the meeting by reading a selection from the scriptures. All present took part in a prayer circle. A few matters of business were transacted, after which Miss Reno asked the three graduates of the class of '24, Effie Ireland, John Lenox, and Merle Colvin, who spent the week-end at Bucknell, to say a few words to the group, of which they were members during their college course.

The group discussed the possibility of a meeting on October 3, for all students at Bucknell who are interested in religious work. This will include the Student Volunteers, home mission work, ministerials, and social service. If this meeting is successful in its interest and attendance, it will probably become a part of the regular monthly program on the campus.

Have you seen the Bucknell collection of birds and animals native to this region? Bucknell's collection of Indian relics contains thousands of arrow heads, stone hatchets, and other articles used by local Indians. These relics include the famous Gernerd collection, the most complete ever assembled in this region.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WELCOMES NEW COMERS

The Baptist Christian Endeavor held a unique meeting on Sunday evening at six-thirty in the Baptist church chapel room. The idea of the service was demonstrated by the Christian flag and the many Bucknell pennants and banners that decorated the room. Bucknell-Baptist was the theme of the program and was carried out by the songs of the college and the church hymns. "Lew" Kessler's performance at the piano, and Inez Robinson's solo added greatly to the musical program.

Albert Sheckells, Jr., president of the C. E., opened the meeting and introduced to the new students Barton Dakin, who led the music with vigor and skill. President Hunt was called upon to speak to the students and responded in his usual splendid manner. The officers of the society were introduced and asked to speak to the students. The chairman of the committees were more fortunate in that they were not required to speak but merely had to respond to their names by rising, that the new students might have the opportunity of knowing who would be responsible for the year's work. The meeting closed with the singing of the Alma Mater.

The church reception for the students who are Baptists or who have no church of their own denomination in town, will be held Friday evening at seven-thirty in the church. The young people's society will have charge of the program and the entertainment that is being prepared.

FRIEND

There was a cloud of gloom
Hanging o'er my life:
My castles
All were blackest night,—
Hope fled,
Sorrow alone remained;
Instead of sunshine,
Bitterness
Came with the dawn.
Suddenly,
Unrestrained, in the midst
Of darkness, came
A light.
All is Joy, for I've found
You—Friend!

UNIVERSITY IS PLACED IN FINE COMMANDING SPOT

NAME BUCKNELL "BISON" HAS HISTORIC ORIGIN. SOME LOCAL HISTORY.

Buffalo Valley, in which Lewisburg and Bucknell University are situated, is one of the most beautiful and prosperous valleys in Pennsylvania. Roughly triangular in shape, it is bounded by mountains on two sides, with the Susquehanna River on the third, forming the base of the triangle. The apex is far to the west, where the mountains come together. The valley itself is rolling, with soil of great fertility; and it is well watered by numerous attractive streams, the largest and most beautiful of which are the Buffalo Creek and Penn's Creek.

The recurrence of the word "Buffalo" suggests what is the fact, that bison once were numerous in these parts. So, quite properly we have Buffalo Valley, the Buffalo Creek, Little Buffalo Creek, the Buffalo Mountain, Buffalo Cross Roads, Buffalo Township, and so on. Lewisburg and the college are in Buffalo Township. Hence it is most appropriate that Bucknell athletes should be termed the Bisons, as they are.

Last autumn, Col. Henry W. Shoemaker, of the State Historical Commission, discovered that in 1809 a bison had been shot east of the Susquehanna by Frederick Stamm, of Northumberland. The skin of this bison had been in the possession of Stamm's descendants until last fall when it was sold at auction. Col. Shoemaker made an effort to secure the hide, but his letter arrived after the sale was over. He is now trying to find the purchaser, and if he succeeds, he says he will buy this bison skin, the very last one from this vicinity, and give it to Bucknell.

Today Buffalo Valley is the scene of great prosperity and the home of many successful farmers. The nine-mile ride from Lewisburg to Mifflinburg takes one through as beautiful and opulent a farming district as can be found anywhere. This highway, paved with concrete and running directly west to State College, Bellefont, and other towns to Altoona and points along the Juniata River, traverses the Buffalo Valley on a sort of dividing ridge or elevation, affording extensive views of the entire valley.

Mountain Parks Offer Rest

This highway leads, at a distance of about twenty miles, to magnificent mountains, timbered with state forests, and well cared for by the state forestry forces. The road itself penetrates the mountains through the Seven Mile Narrows. This strip of forest is beautiful and inviting. A sharp climb takes one to the summit, and just this side of the summit is located Hairy John's Park. This is a recreation ground, excellently equipped and maintained by the forestry forces, where picnickers by the thousands find rest and recreation. A magnificent spring, gushing from the rock at this elevation, provides pure, sparkling water. Tables, benches fireplaces, and other accommodations await the traveler.

At the foot of the ascent an alluring forest road leads off to the left to the Joyce Kilmer Park. This is a charming bit of forest dedicated to the memory of the poet Kilmer, who lost his life in the late war.

In addition to these two parks, there are many private camps, located in the state forest nearby, on plots leased from the state. Fairly good trails and paths lead to these camps. It is thus possible to step into a motor car in Lewisburg, and in a little while step out in the very heart of the forest. The various trails make it easy and pleasant to hike through the woods.

Here Was The Wilderness

But though the country has thus been tamed and made easy of access, it was not always so. In fact, this is the youngest part of Pennsylvania. The Atlantic seaboard had a civilization a century and a half old when this region was still a wilderness. The land that is now Pennsylvania was acquired by William Penn and his heirs from the Indians in a series of purchases. As fast as one tract filled up, and settlers became fairly numerous, the Penns took possession of more territory. Thus it happened that the region in which Lewisburg is situated was the very last portion of Pennsylvania to be acquired from the Indians. The Penns got it by the treaty of Fort Stanwix, in 1768. The land office was opened the following year. That was only six years before the War of the Revolution started. Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and the Atlantic seaboard generally were then well populated. This was the frontier in the Revolution.

If newcomers will bear that fact in mind, in getting acquainted with the region, it will add much to the interest and the meaning of what they learn. Every newcomer should read Linn's Annals of Buffalo Valley. It is rich in incident and tradition.

What Capt. Brady Did

Perhaps there is no more interesting story of those early days than that concerning Captain John Brady and the whiskey barrel. It has added interest because the incident occurred right here. Captain John Brady was the most celebrated Indian fighter in this region. He had been an officer in the French and Indian War, and was one of those officers to whom the colonial government decided land hereabouts in recognition of their services in that war. Brady occupied some land on the east side of the Susquehanna, a little distance below the college. The land itself can be seen from the observatory on the top of East College.

Ten miles down the river, this branch of the stream, the West Branch, unites with the North Branch, forming the main river Susquehanna. At this strategic point was located Fort Augusta, that was built in accordance with the plans of Benjamin Franklin. Here, on one occasion, the Indians had been invited for a conference, the object being to get them to sign a treaty. But the colonists were poor and had little or nothing to give the Indians, as was the custom at such meetings. So the Indians came away disgruntled, refusing to make a treaty.

Captain Brady was at that conference. Mounting his horse, he rode along the east bank, concealed by bushes, and watched the Indians as they made their way up this branch in their canoes. The Indians landed at what is now Lewisburg. Then it was Derr's mill. Brady saw the squaws paddling back to the east bank with the knives and hatchets of their husbands. Thinking this foretold trouble, he tied his horse to a tree, stepped to the beach and took a canoe from one of the squaws. Then he paddled over to Derr's.

Here he found the Indians ringed about a whiskey barrel, drinking the stuff by the cupful. They were also becoming excited. Brady believed that they would drink themselves into a state of frenzy and probably go on the warpath. Without hesitating he strode, single handed, through the rank of Indians, saying to the miller, "My God, Ludwig! What have you done? And without more ado he planted his foot against the barrel and overturned it, spilling the whiskey on the ground. Then he strode away, and not an Indian dared lay a finger on him, so great was their dread of him. But they threatened him, and later he was killed by Indians who shot him from ambush.

The place where this incident occurred is close to the house of Prof. Benjamin Griffith, on Brown Street. Here stands an apartment house that has been occupied by Bucknell women students as a dormitory. It is called The Brady. The reason for the name is evident. This particular apartment house was formerly an old mill. As a mill, it goes back some generations. But it was not the original mill of Ludwig Derr. That stood a little south and east of Professor Griffith's home, not more than 150 feet or so from the Brady. Incorporated in Professor Griffith's home are some old timbers that were undoubtedly a part of the original Derr house.

How Kelly Cut The Bridge

When the Revolution came on, it became very necessary to defend this frontier against the Indians. The frontiersmen were among the most devoted of the patriots. Most of the able-bodied men were with Washington. Only old men and women and children were left. Here considerable amounts of grain were being raised for the Continental army. And further eastward, in the longer settled regions, larger amounts of provender were growing. It was very necessary to protect all this. Yet Washington was unable to spare troops for the purpose. So he picked out three men to defend this far-flung frontier.

They were Colonel John Kelly, Captain Hawkins Boone, a cousin of Daniel Boone, and Captain Brady. The latter erected a fort just above Muney, a town twenty miles to the north of Lewisburg. Boone built a second fort at Muddy Run, just where Braun's mill now stands, a mile above Milton, which is four miles from Lewisburg. Braun's mill stands just to the east of the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks, where the Susquehanna Trail passes under them, above the Milton fair grounds. Colonel Kelly had settled in Buffalo Valley.

His home was just this side of Mazeppa, a small hamlet a few miles to the west of Lewisburg. His home is still standing, but in recent years it has been modernized. Nevertheless it is worth seeing as a relic of Revolutionary days.

Colonel Kelly was a large and powerful man. He was one of Washington's trusted leaders. When Washington was retreating across New Jersey, with the British hard at his heels, it was necessary to cut a bridge to check the pursuit of the British. Colonel Kelly was commanded to cut the bridge. He picked a handful of men and set to work. The British were already within gunshot, and the bridge choppers worked amid a hail of shot. The last man to leave was Kelly. He seized an axe, and standing on the last remaining log, chopped it in half. He dropped into the water with it. The time was winter, and the water was full of ice. Colonel Kelly fought his way ashore, but the British were at hand. A British soldier attempted to capture Kelly. Kelly grabbed him and disarmed him and led him a prisoner to the retreating American army before the Britisher's comrades could rescue him.

Colonel Kelly, also, shot the very last bison killed in Buffalo Valley. The spot where this deed occurred has ever since been known as Buffalo Cross Roads.

Both of these incidents are authenticated history. You will find the Assunpink Creek bridge story in the history of the Revolution. The bison story, long regarded as mere tradition, was authenticated by Dr. Justin R. Loomis, president of Bucknell from 1858 to 1879, and is recorded in his writings.

These little incidents are typical of many that are associated with the name Buffalo Valley. The newcomer will find many facts of interest relating to the early days of this region. The four years at Bucknell will be greatly enriched if those newly come will take the trouble to inform themselves of the history of the region. Sunbury, Williamsport, Milton, and other nearby places are replete with historic interest. In these days of easy transportation, it is easily possible to visit any and all points of interest hereabout. There are beauty spots without number that students visit during their college years at Bucknell. A knowledge of the history of these places adds much to the interest of a visit to the places. The librarian will be glad to help any one find the books needed in a study of the region. Buffalo Valley is worth knowing and seeing. Let's get acquainted with it.

CHARLIE BATHEIN DIES; WAS LATE WAR OFFICER

Charles Ba Thein who entered Bucknell in the fall of 1922 passed away at Dewitt's Camp on Monday, July 20, 1925. He was born at Rangoon Burma, where his father, a Burmese, is a professor in Judson College, in 1902. His education was pursued in Rangoon until he became old enough to enter the service of the British army during the war. He was taken to England to complete military training. After the war he came to America with a strong desire to complete a college course and to return to the work of Christian education in his country.

He completed his preparation for college in Suffield School, Suffield, Connecticut, and entered Bucknell from there. Here his mastery of the English language, his intellectual ability, his deep-seated refinement, and his Christian devotion won the highest regard for him. His withdrawal from college last fall, made necessary by the increasing hold that tuberculosis was gaining upon him, brought sorrow to the whole University.

His death came at a time when there were few of his friends here. President Hunt was able to be at his bedside when he made the last brave struggle for existence. A simple funeral service was held at the Baptist Church, conducted by Dr. West and Dr. Hunt after which the body was placed in the vault of the cemetery here. It was later removed to Suffield, Connectiut, where it was his wish to be buried.

Extension Course In Biology Offered By Prof. Stewart

Professor Norman H. Stewart will offer his teachers' course in biology in the extension work of this semester.

This announcement was made last Saturday by Professor J. P. Whyte, director of extension work. If enough people register for the course a class will be organized and will meet on alternate Saturdays, beginning October 3. The class will be from eight to twelve.

Final registration for all extension work should be made between nine and twelve A. M., Saturday, September 26, at the Education Office in East Wing.

Professor: Why does a hen always lay eggs in the day-time?

Frosh: Because at night she's a rooster.

Clif: Not a bad looking car, Henry, what's the most you've ever gotten out of it?

Higby: Six times in one night.

CONVOCATION HELD

Main, they stopped and formed in a double line at either edge of the way, facing inward. All other marchers in turn did likewise, clear to the end of the marching column so that freshmen, sophomores, juniors, seniors, and faculty in turn, lined the way. At the very rear of the procession marched the President. Now he swung forward between the double line of faces, and the faculty fell in behind him, two by two again, then the seniors, and so on until the procession was marching in an order exactly the reverse of its original formation.

Meantime the band had gone up to Commencement Hall, and the march through the corridors and up the stairs to that assembly room was again enlivened by stirring music. The faculty mounted to the platform and took stations in its centre, while the seniors filed to either end of the platform. The other classes marched to designated sections on the main floor. When all were assembled, the president gave a signal, and the convocation took seats.

Never in the history of the University had so many of its members been assembled at one time in Commencement Hall. The commencement exercises always crowd the auditorium to capacity, but mostly those attending are visitors. Besides the seniors few students are present at commencement time. But on Thursday the room was full and there were no visitors. A few students were unable to attend the convocation; but practically the entire body of the University was there. Certainly there were a thousand or more.

To the older classes it was like a family reunion. And even the freshmen must have felt more or less like an integral part of it all because of their experiences of freshman week. Certainly the spirit of harmony and unity was evident; and when the band struck up "Hey Bucknell," the assemblage, led by President Hunt, made the room ring with song.

The exercises proper were opened by the President's prayer. Miss Marion Campbell, instructor in the Bucknell Music School, sang a solo. Then President Hunt introduced Professor George B. Lawson, who gave the morning's address.

Professor Lawson referred his hearers to Francis Bacon's story of the New Atlantis, which is the tale of an imaginary society on a lonely isle in the Pacific, where culture and invention had reached the ultimate maximum possibilities, and life was perfection, and no traffic with contaminating outsiders was permitted. Indeed no trade at all existed, except that once in every few years certain emissaries were sent out to bear the message of life and light to the benighted outside world. The University, Dr. Lawson said, was like this new Atlantis. Here we have opportunity for the finest possible development, and it is our opportunity and our duty to carry out to the less fortunate of mankind the mental and moral and spiritual things we acquire in our student days.

The assemblage dispersed in the same order in which it had entered the hall, with the faculty passing out first, followed by the classes in their order. Nothing happened to mar the occasion. Even the weather man looked on with kindly eye, for he sandwiched in a perfect day in a string of stormy ones, so that the procession might not be spoiled. The convocation will long be remembered by all who were present. It marks another step forward in the history of our Alma Mater.

TWELVE FRATS HERE

Kappa Sigma followed in 1896 establishing the Alpha Phi chapter here twenty-seven years after the fraternity had been founded at the University of Virginia. This was the fifty-ninth chapter of the fraternity which has the greatest number of chapters of all the fraternities in the United States.

Delta Sigma, a local fraternity, having its origin in a debating society founded here in 1890 came next in the development of the modern Greek colony at Bucknell. On account of tradition connected with its origin this group is commonly spoken of as the Demosthenians or the "Demies."

Lambda Chi Alpha introduced its Delta chapter in 1913 after having been founded but two years. Boston University was the birthplace of the fraternity which now has more than fifty chapters.

Iota chapter of Kappa Delta Rho was established here in 1921, sixteen years after the formation of the original chapter at Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vermont. The chapter had existed locally as a club since 1910.

The organization of Theta Upsilon Omega arising out of the meeting of the Interfraternity Conference, held in New York in 1924, included a chapter at Bucknell. This chapter had existed as a local fraternity since 1920 and became the Zeta Alpha chapter of the new organization.

The twin fraternity to the local that entered Theta Upsilon Omega became Eta chapter of Beta Kappa in the spring of 1925. This fraternity was founded in 1901 at Hamline University, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Alpha Chi Mu was founded at Bucknell in 1921 an has had a steady and rapid growth.

Kappa Gamma, the infant of the fraternities at Bucknell, was founded in 1923.

In the realm of women's fraternities Pi Beta Phi is the oldest inhabitant having been established here in 1895. The fraternity was founded at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Illinois, in 1867. The chapter here is the Pennsylvania Beta, Alpha being located at Swarthmore.

The Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega was the next to be established, appearing in 1898 as a musical fraternity. This however was shortlived and the present chapter revived the charter, that had been allowed to lapse, in 1921. The fraternity was founded at DePauw University, Greencastle, Indiana, in 1885.

Delta Delta Delta was founded at Boston College in 1888. The local chapter, Tau, was installed in 1904.

Phi Tau chapter of Kappa Delta was established at Bucknell in 1915. The parent chapter of this fraternity was located at the Virginia State Normal School, Farmville, Virginia.

Phi Mu claims 1852 for its date of founding and the Wesleyan College, Macon, Georgia, as the original chapter. The fraternity took on its present form in 1904. Beta Kappa chapter was established from a local society here in 1922.

Zeta Gamma Tau holds the infant position among the women's fraternities of the college having been founded in 1924 as a local fraternity.

In addition to the Greek letter fraternities that exist here there are two social clubs that share many of the characteristics of fraternities. They are the Bucknell Commons Club, a member of the American Association of Commons Clubs, for men, and the Laterna Lactiline Club for women. The Commons Club organized in 1923 and became affiliated with the association in 1915. The women's club was formed in 1924.

JUDGE DEVISES TEST

not to have pleaded guilty,' replied Judge Dickinson. 'Do you want to take the witness stand and tell the whole truth?' Farentino said he did.

"Judge Dickinson cautioned him not to attempt to tell any lies, 'for if you do, I'll surely find you out. If you think it is best to leave well enough alone and say nothing, very good, but don't go on the witness stand and lie to me.'

"Farentino took the stand and told his story as the Judge observed closely the witness' Adam's apple and his eye. Farentino kept running his fingers up and down his throat, but at the conclusion of his recital the Court said: 'I think this man had better withdraw his plea of guilty, plead not guilty, and stand trial.'

"The two other men were sentenced to three years each in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta. They said they bought the counterfeits in Brooklyn and took them to Lancaster to pass on shopkeepers."

FRESHMAN RECEPTION

tain them in some way. His chanting of an "endless" lullaby, which he asserts his mother used on him and of which he never heard the last verse, proved indeed entertaining. He sang unaccompanied, for a reason quite apparent to his listeners.

The Girls' Glee Club appeared in force and accompanied "Mammy," in the person of Edna Watson, in the crooning of a lullaby. Last year this organization gave a number of concerts, in addition to participating in the joint concert with the Men's Club and the orchestra.

It was only a mock trial devised by the members of the Ministerial Association which condemned Professor "Scheidly" on the charge of successfully teaching something. We looked back toward the door during the farce and discovered that the poor modernist professor who was being flailed and cross-examined on the "stage" was only an imposter.

Bob Garrett's word in behalf of the athletic association took the form of an urgent call for assistant managers of football, and an explanation of the promotion system by which the manager is selected.

The amateur chemist represented the Engineering department. The firm had an order for a magic hammer designed to build a large building. After much manipulation of liquid air and other chemicals, much smoke and flurry and clamor, a hammer of mercury frozen by the liquid air was produced.

For the debating societies, T. Burns Drum explained the work and the achievement of the men's teams, and Mary Harrar and Mildred Fox staged an original skit to encourage candidates for the girls' teams.

Frill and Frown, the women's dramatic club, gave a pantomime, "The Doll Shop." Frill was there in person, and so was Frown.

The stunt furnished by the Y. W. C. A. was a pageant that emphasized the true spirit of the organization. The Bucknell group of the Student Volunteers depicted one of the world's great episodes in the Deaf and Dumb School production, "Jonah and the Whale." Comment from the gathering indicated that but very few of the people present had ever seen this wonderful drama enacted.

Did you know, boys, that Bucknell women play athletic games and learn gymnastic stunts? Something along this line must be doing at the "Sem", because the clog dancing done by Caryl Dutton and her "brack mammy" Edna Watson, was indeed an eye-opening hint of the kind of thing the Women's Athletic Associationis doing. It would seem the male half of the student body is unaware of what the better half has been up to.

The performers who scored the hit of the evening were Dr. Sawhones and his staff of doctors and nurses. You wouldn't think there is any student in school hard enough or generous enough to permit our college surgeon to work on him with a carpenter's saw and an ice pick. It was also a revelation to know the similarity in appearance between a vermiform appendix and a string of "superheated canines" (hot dogs).

The Student Executive Council also made a stage appearance, dressed as mice, the scene being in somebody's cellar. One of the mice had been seen "out on a date," with their worst enemy, Mr. Cat. The sentence given was "reampussed for two weeks."

The evening wound up with a night-cap of sweet cider and doughnuts in great plenty. A pleasant half-hour of conversation filled up the time between the program and the zero hour, ten-thirty.

How Yale Students Earn Money

Sixty-four different types of work were handled by the Employment Association at Yale, among which were artists' models, butlers, detectives, etc. There were 1359 men, more than 22 per cent. of total enrollment, employed, whose earnings amounted to more than $382,000.

partment of Woman's College than many others. Mr. and Mrs. Moone, the chef and his wife, came to Bucknell from Chicago, through the influence of a friend of the University, and consequently they have a personal interest in the school. They feel that a great deal depends upon the preparation of nourishing food to keep the girls in good health. While the conditions with regard to those employed in the kitchens are very good, the department is under one big handicap, 290 girls are being served every day although the equipment and other facilities were planned to handle only 200.

A little Ford chugged painfully up to the gate of the race track.

The gate-keeper, demanding the usual fee for automobiles, called, "A dollar for the car!"

The owner looked up with a smile of relief and said,

"Sold!"

Mary: You have no right to kiss me like that.

Henry: All right, I'll try it another way.

Advertising Suggestions

No. 1

Mr. Advertiser:

This is the first of a series of suggestions on the art of advertising. We offer them for what they are worth without trying to claim that they are the last word. We hope you'll be interested.

The purpose of all advertising is, ultimately, to create a demand. Whether any particular advertisement is good or bad, then, depends upon the extent to which it measures up in accomplishing this purpose.

The best advertising is that which creates both a present demand and a store of good will for future transactions.

Regulations Governing Bid Day Announced by Student Council

NEW STUDENTS TO RECEIVE FRATERNITY BIDS TUESDAY AFTERNOON, OCTOBER 13, IN COMMENCEMENT HALL

A definitive regulation regarding bidding of new students to Bucknell social fraternities was passed by Student Council at its regular meeting Monday night, held in Main 1. The bids will be issued in Commencement Hall by the fraternity presidents, Tuesday, October 13, from 4:00 to 7:00 P. M.

Every new male student will be expected to be present in Commencement Hall, Tuesday, October 13, at 4:00 P. M. Seated at a long table on the platform will be the presidents of all the fraternities. At each end of the table will be a member of the faculty, to assure fair play and to assist in the issuing of bids.

As each new student's name is called by a member of the faculty, the student mounts the platform and passes to one end of the table where another faculty member hands him an envelope on which is his name. The student then walks beside the table, pausing before each fraternity representative to receive either a bid from that fraternity or a blank. After he has received a bid or blank from each of the twelve fraternity presidents, another faculty member seals the envelope and the student immediately leaves Commencement Hall.

Having determined, from the bids he has received, the fraternity to which he desires to be pledged, the student then reports, as soon as possible, at the fraternity house. There he is pledged.

The student who has received more than one bid will be required to return the bids he had not accepted to the fraternities from which they were issued, within two days. To facilitate bidding, no one except new students and fraternity heads will be permitted in Commencement Hall at the time of bidding. From 3:30 to 7:00 P. M. no fraternity or non-fraternity man will be allowed to walk or talk with any new student who has not accepted his bid.

During the meeting of the Student Council, Frank Wagner, '26, was elected student representative to the Athletic Council. Kenneth Elder, '27, was elected temporary head cheer leader to take charge of candidates for cheer leader positions. These candidates will try out for positions during mass meetings and early-season games, and later will be elected either by the Student Council or the student body.

The wording of the regulations regarding bidding, as passed by the Student Council, follows:

"All new students shall assemble in Commencement Hall, Tuesday, October 13, at 4:00 o'clock to receive bids to fraternities. The roll of new students shall be read by a faculty member, each new student arising when his name is called. Said student shall then mount the platform and receive from a faculty member an envelope bearing his name. Each fraternity representative shall then place in the envelope either the bid of his fraternity or a blank slip. The bids and slips shall be alike in all respects and all shall be sealed in the envelope by a member of the faculty. The new student shall then leave Commencement Hall immediately and report at the fraternity of his choice. All bids not accepted must be returned to the issuing fraternities within two days.

"No one except new students, fraternity heads, and faculty members shall be present in Commencement Hall during bidding. From 3:30 to 7:00 P. M. no fraternity or non-fraternity man shall be allowed to walk or talk with any new student who has not accepted his bid.

SOCIOLOGICAL SOCIETY POSTPONES MEETING

It has been necessary to postpone the Sociological Society meeting which had been scheduled for Wednesday evening, September 30, to Thursday evening, October 8, at 7:45 P. M.

The slides which Professor C. R. Johnson had ordered for the meeting did not arrive in time, but will be here next week. He regrets having had to change the date of the meeting.

Thomas Mott Osborne, nationally known prison reformer, is coming here October 19. He spoke before the Bucknell student body and quite a number of Lewisburg people last May and was very much enjoyed. We look forward to his second visit with pleasure.

The seminar class in sociology meets at Professor Johnson's home on Fifth street for two hours each Tuesday afternoon. Eleven students comprise the group. Of this number three are graduate students and five are seniors. Half of the work of the course will be in the study of pure sociology, the other half in research work.

BUDGET TICKETS DISTRIBUTED

The budget tickets for the athletic season, 1925-26 were distributed at the Bucknellian office on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of last week. The office was turned over to the assistant managers of the football team between the hours of 3:30 and 5:30 each day and the students formed in long lines at the door awaiting their turns. Only the seniors and juniors were permitted to secure their tickets on the first day but the other students were added to the list on Thursday.

Those who have not as yet obtained their tickets may do so at the office of the Athletic Council 220½ Market Street.

NOTICE

Your special attention is called to the meeting of the debating squad to be held in Bucknell Hall, Monday, at 4:30 P. M.

This meeting will discuss and decide upon the question that the Bucknell University representatives will propose to the convention at Harrisburg.

Glee Club Training For Initial Tour

Must Be Ready for Concert Work Within Seven Weeks Time

Training for the first tour of the Glee Club began in dead earnest with the practice held last Monday night, and Director Hartz is now putting his pupils through their paces, finding and remedying the weak spots in the organization. The club must be ready for concert work within seven weeks and has a whole new program to produce in that time.

Director Hartz was well pleased with the work of the club and was especially impressed with the fine showing made by the new men. During the week, between practices of the entire club, he was able to get into personal touch with the new men and discover some of the possibilities for building up a strong concert organization. The results of his work showed in the learning of the new pieces, and attention to the details of harmony and shading pointed out in the course of the practice.

Intensive work will be the order for the next few weeks, with practices of the whole club to be held each Monday evening at 7:30 and each Thursday at 9:00. Separate practices of the men in the various sections is being held at Director Hartz's studio daily.

The one department of the club that may need bolstering this year will be the instrumentalists who take the feature portion of the program. There is also an opening for an assistant accompanist.

Notice To Belle Hop Contributors

All material for the first issue of the Belle Hop, the ROUNDUP number, should be turned in before Saturday morning of this week. Material should be left with Miss Yolanda Frank at the "Sem"; with H. W. Gardner at the Phi Gamma Delta house or at the University Print Shop. The first issue of the Belle Hop will be placed on sale October 16, 1925.

FACULTY MEMBERS MEET FRAT HEADS; DISCUSS DANCES

CONTROVERSIAL VIEWS PREVENTS ANY ACTION FOR THE PRESENT

New Committee Appointed

Disputes Over Irrelevant Facts Throw Shadow Over Problem Of Dance Regulation

President Hunt declared that not restriction of dances, but conference with the fraternity heads regarding the best means of securing proper chaperonage, reasonableness of dance hours, and fairness in cost to the student, was the purpose of the meeting of the fraternity heads last Friday evening. The results of the meeting between the heads of the social fraternities of the campus and the faculty committee appointed to take up the matter of the limitation of fraternity dances, amounted to practically nothing. The discussion of the situation brought out a lack of accord between the various persons, and, in order to facilitate deliberations, a special committee of the faculty was appointed to draw up recommendations to present to the Student Council.

President Hunt was in charge of the meeting held Friday night and the faculty members who were on the committee were Dean Rivenburg, Dean Clark, Professor James P. Whyte, F. G. Ballentine, B. W. Griffith, G. B. Lawson, L. L. Roelkwell, F. M. Simpson, J. W. Rice, and Registrar Holter. The presidents of all the men's social fraternities represented their chapters.

The greatest discussion occurred when President Hunt called attention to the inability of some students, in fraternities, to meet the expenses necessitated by the fraternity dance budgets. It was stated that the frequency and cost of dances often led to the withdrawal from college of students who could not finance their social obligations. This met the response that the social budget was made up only after the vote of the majority in each fraternity, and several of the representatives stated that their fraternities required a two thirds vote on the dates and cost of their dances. The claim was made that this still worked injustice on the remaining third who must help pay for the entertainment. However the fraternity heads could not be convinced of this and the matter was left in the air.

DEBATE QUESTIONS UNDER DISCUSSION

Final Selection of Subject Will Be Made For State At Convention, Oct. 10

The second preliminary meeting of the debating squad, held in Bucknell Hall, Monday afternoon at 4:30, for the purpose of suggesting questions for debate during the coming year, brought out a fair attendance of the debaters and a large variety of subjects for consideration.

The meeting was called by the manager of the debating teams, T. Burns Drum, who acted as chairman. The meeting was thrown open for the discussion of questions almost as soon as it was called to order and ideas came thick and fast.

One of the first questions to be proposed was the ever-popular League of Nations proposition calling for the immediate entrance of the United States into the League. Another was the question, "Resolved: that the United States government should have the right to prohibit strikes in public industries." A third called for the recall of the injunction in capital and labor controversies while others took up the city manager plan of municipal government and the questions of college life such as the abolition of fraternities.

Each of the subjects offered was suported as a question for debate by

LOCAL CHURCHES GIVE RECEPTIONS TO ALL STUDENTS

VERY LARGE ATTENDANCE OF GAY BUCKNELLIANS TAXES CAPCITY

Enjoyable Time For All

Music, Stunts, Games, Singing, And Refreshments Are the Elements of Good Fun

The Churches of Lewisburg continued their annual custom of holding receptions for the students of the University last Friday night. Each of the churches devised its own means of entertainment and all endeavored to make the "transient population" especially the new students feel the open spirit of fellowship in their organizations.

Lutheran Church

Bucknell students were welcomed by the members of the Lutheran Church at a special student reception last Friday night, about eighty Bucknellians being present to enjoy the fun.

The keynote of the spirit of the church people was sounded in a welcoming address given by the pastor, the Rev. R. B. McGiffen. Mrs. McGiffen contributed to the evening's entertainment by singing a solo. Miss Evans also sang. An hour of informal games and merry-making followed the more formal program of the evening and fostered the feeling of fellowship between students and other people of the church. Refreshments were served during the games and the reception came to an end at about ten-thirty.

Baptist Church

The annual reception for the Baptist students was held at the Baptist Church last Friday evening September 25.

President and Mrs. Hunt and Dean and Mrs. Rivenburg were among those who received the guests. The large reception hall was filled to capacity, approximately two hundred young people being present. After the crowd had assembled, each person being tagged in order to reveal his or her identity, and the guests had been allowed to mingle together informally for a while, singing college and popular songs, the chairs were closely and methodically arranged in order to accommodate the students and a most interesting and varied program was presented.

The program was under the direction of A. W. Sheckells, Jr. To start

OLD BISON SPIRIT SHOWN AT MEETING

President Hunt and Dr. Wood Talk to Bucknellians

The first mass meeting of the year, held in Commencement Hall on Friday evening, was instrumental in arousing the old Bucknell spirit among the entire student body. The principle features of the evening were the talks given by President Hunt and Dr. Joseph Wood. Fred Evans, the president of the senior class, was in charge of the meeting. After several snappy selections by the Bucknell University Band, Ralph Hartz led in the singing of "Come Bucknell Warriors" and "Hail Bucknell." The locomotive, whistle, and other yells were then rehearsed for Saturday's game.

President Hunt admonished the students to save their voices because they would need them for the game. "We want them to win and we expect them to win," President Hunt said, speaking of the players. "We hope for this because we want the people to think that our college comes up to the grade." He said that we couldn't urge the boys on the field to be up to grade if we ourselves are not up to grade.

The second speaker pointed out the necessity of getting a good running start. "We will meet one of the best teams tomorrow, and we need the good old Bucknell spirit all the way

Bucknell Team Gains Victory In Second Half of First Game

WESTERN MARYLAND, EXPECTING WIN, PLAYS HARD BUT LACKS PUNCH TO CROSS GOAL; BISONS SCORE 17 POINTS

The 1925 Bison football machine opened the season auspiciously last Saturday by defeating the strong Western Maryland eleven by a second half rally scoring seventeen points, the only scoring of the entire game. It is estimated that 4,000 people saw Bucknell maintain an uncrossed goal line in the first game of the season.

The loss of the Goodwin twins, who have been declared scholastically ineligible until they pass an English examination to remove a condition, was plainly shown by the lack of coordination and teamwork during the first half, but in the final periods, the Bison unleashed a smashing, and well timed offensive, scoring first on a drop kick by McCormick and later when Diehl crashed the center for the season's first touchdown and Tuck crossed the goal line after catching a pass from McCormick for the final tally. Bucknell played this game minus the services of head coach Moran who umpired the double header between the Pirates and New York Giants at Forbes field in Pittsburg.

Comparatively unheralded, McCormick, supposedly an understudy of Myrl Goodwin, proved the outstanding star of the game. It was from his educated toe that the first points of the current season were scored, when he booted a pretty drop kick from a considerable angle on the twenty-seven yard line. The kick was against the wind. Later in the third quarter, his end sweeps, first on one side of the line then on the other, placed the ball in position for Diehl to score. McCormick also figured in the play for the last touchdown when, after a fake drop kick he threw a perfect pass to Tuck who was waiting unguarded for the ball, just across the goal line. And finally the two after-touchdown points were counted by drop kicks directly across the center of the cross bars, kicked by this triple-threat back.

Sillin, the Western Maryland halfback, fleet as a deer, was always dangerous. His remarkable return of Diehl's lengthy punts and his fierce off tackle lunges, constituted the chief Maryland threat. It takes a good man to return one of Diehl's punts. Not only do they have distance, but their height enables the defense to bear down upon the receiver before he has a chance to catch the ball.

The longer training period through which the Western Maryland team had been drilled, was evident by the manner in which they repelled the Bucknell attack in the first half. Early in the half, Diehl's first punt, which was hurried, placed Maryland deep in Bucknell territory, but this danger was averted when Shortz crashed thru the line to block Sillin's attempted drop kick, and Trimmer recovered the ball in midfield. A kicking duel, with neither side able to register groundage by rushing tactics, kept the ball in midfield until late in the half when McMain misjudged Diehl's punt and Kostos, hurtling over McMain who attempted to block him so that the ball might roll over the goal line and be placed in play upon the twenty-yard line, stopped the hurtling oval as it bounded to the one yard mark. The returned punt gave Bucknell the ball on the Maryland twenty-five yard line, but the Maryland forwards held, and Diehl was forced to kick as the half ended.

In the second half the fireworks started. Trimmer kicked off over the goal line and the ball was put in play on the twenty yard mark. After a line buck, Friggi punted to Tuck who

Pres. Hunt Preaches Matriculation Sermon

Admonishes Students To Make Best Use of Their Lives

In accordance with the Matriculation Convocation and in counter-position to the Baccalaureate Sermon delivered each June by the president, was the Matriculation sermon preached in the First Baptist church, last Sunday, by President Hunt. This was the first Matriculation Sermon in the history of the University and its announcement drew a large number of people to the church for the services.

President Hunt chose for his theme, "The Plane of Living." His message was an admonition to the students to make the best possible use of their lives and capabilities. Claiming that a pig is under no higher obligation than to be a first class pig, he proceeded to the statement that a man is under an obligation to be a first class man. He referred to the statement in Genesis that God made man in His own image, and, reflecting on the reasons for God's especial favor to man, he discovered that being a first class man, living on the plane required by virtue of being a man, requires that man exercise his spiritual nature as well as his physical and mental traits.

The Rev. Dr. R. M. West had charge of the remainder of the services, and, in his announcements, welcomed the members of the University to the church, out of which, as he claims, the University received its birth. Dr. West also expressed the wish that the practice of holding a Matriculation Sermon be continued from year to year, and that a suitable building in which all the students could be accomodated might be built here at Bucknell.

Dr. John T. Judd, treasurer of the University, has also been serving as local treasurer for the drive to secure $10,000 for improvements to Devitt's

HISTORY BOOKS PLACED UPON RESERVE SHELVES

The opening of the present college year marked another advance by the Library in the handling of reserve books. All the histories used as reference books for the various courses in history have been transferred from the English and History room to the reserve room, and must be called for at the desk. This change has made the duties of the librarian and the assistants harder, but it is possible to give much better service under the new arrangement. The classes in history became too large, and the books too many in number, to handle under the old system any longer. Mimeographed lists of all the books on hand for the various courses will be given to members of the classes, so that there will be no trouble in deciding what books to call for. It is hoped that the students will cooperate with the library in making this system successful.

FRAT HEADS MEET MISS CLARK

The heads of the various social fraternities of the campus, along with the chairman of the social committee from each house, were invited to meet with Acting Dean Cark at the Woman's College on Tuesday afternoon at 4:30. Miss Clark called the meeting to order to discuss with the men the social relations between the men and the women of the University.

During the course of the meeting Miss Clark pointed out several ways in which the relations between the men and the women can be improved. Her first plea was for a more chivalrous attitude on the part of the men in the little matters of everyday form. She also mentioned the treatment that should be accorded chaperones at dances, the need for having cloak rooms at dances on different floors, and the possibility of changing the customary hours of holding "Sem" dances. Miss Clark urged the fraternity men to report to her the dates on which they desire to hold dances for the Woman's College this year so that she may prepare the schedule for the year.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Rushing began with a bang on Wednesday morning, September 23. The same evening, Alpha Chi Omega held open house in their beautiful suite in Wolfe house for the freshmen. Some of the girls went to the movies, some played bridge in the Annex rooms, and some stayed in the suite and danced, acting the part of hostesses to those who dropped in. Some time during the evening all the girls came to the suite for punch and cakes and a dance or two.

A real Poverty Party was held in the Annex rooms on Monday evening, September 28. Invitations sent out were written on wrapping paper, and the costumes of the girls were really pathetic in the poverty they displayed. Even the refreshments agreed with the general plan of the party, and consisted of half a dill pikle and a cracker for each girl!

A Japanese tea, showing a great deal of cleverness and taste, was given in the rooms of the girls living in Annex, on Tuesday afternoon. The rooms were decorated in beautiful, multi-colored Japanese lanterns and parasols. Tea and cakes were served.

Several matters of importance were discussed, especially upon ways and means of raising the necessary funds to send a delegate to the national convention, which is to be held next September in Berkley, Cal. It was decided to have two subscription dances, one before the Christmas holidays, and the other early in the second semester. This plan proved very successful last year.

To celebrate the date of founding of Pi Delta Epsilon, December 6th, an editorial contest will be conducted among the members of the freshman and sophomore classes, the writer of the best editorial to receive a cash prize. The winner of the prize will be announced December 6th.

Proposals for membership were also made, and the proposed men discussed as to ability and the service which they had rendered upon college publications. No vote was taken, however. To be eligible for Pi Delta Epsilon a man must have served two years in a major position (or its equivalent). Exceptions may be made to this rule in cases of unusual service or merit.

KEYSER ELECTED HEAD OF B. U. CHESS CLUB

The first meeting of the Bucknell Chess Club was held last Thursday evening in Main 1 for the purpose of reorganizing the club for the coming year. Keyser, the only survivor of the "Big Three,"—Robinson, Canto, and Keyser—acted as president pro tempore. Election of officers resulted in the re-election of Keyser as president and the choice of Laning for secretary.

Plans for the coming year were then outlined. Until more suitable arrangements for a permanent meeting place could be made, it was decided to meet every Thursday evening in the Y office.

With the passing of Robinson and Canto, two vacancies remain to be filled by the men showing the greatest ability. The club will be divided into two groups, the first group to be composed of the experienced players, and the second group of those having only a fair knowledge of the game. A tournament will then be run to determine the best players in each group. A chess set has been offered by the president of the club as a prize for the final winner of the tournament.

Thus, by intra-club competition the best payers will prove their ability to fill the vacancies on the team. Indications are a strong chess team will be developed within the next few weeks.

WEST COLLEGE FIRE DOES SMALL DAMAGE

A small fire was discovered on the third floor of West College last Sunday evening and was extinguished by the use of one of the chemical tanks that are distributed in the halls of all of the buildings.

One of the students noticed the smoke in the hallway and upon investigation found that a fire was burning in the hall. He immediately made use of one of the fire extinguishers and kept the fire from causing any further damage.

The origin of the fire is unknown but it is suspected that some student looking for excitement went just too far in his search. If this is the case the offender may expect harsh treatment if the offense is repeated and discovered.

A frosh was told that a calendar is used to tell the time of the year or the month or the week. He wanted to know where you had to wind it up.

No Wonder

Fire—What makes the yacht jump about so?

Scirc—I guess the poor thing in on a tack.

Sing, it will not hurt you
Half as much as if you frown;
It will start your heart a thrilling,
And your feet a-dancing too.
Sing, just let the whole world listen,
To a heart that's glad and gay,
And 'twill prove to be a blessing,
To the singer and the throng.

CHEMICAL ENGINEERS HOLD FIRST MEETING

The Chemical Engineering Society, which put on the "wizard" act at the Freshman Reception, held its first meeting of the year at the Chemistry Laboratory last Thursday to elect officers and to give the Freshmen the aims of the society.

Malcolm Jones, last year's vice-president, opened the meeting. Professor Brown, head of the department, then sketched the doings of the alumni organization, after which the meeting was opened for nominations. Unanimous assent gave Albert Conklin presidency and Gilbert Frith vice-presidency. For secretary John Weber received 21 votes and B. D. Goldenberg, 4; for treasurer, Willard Hetler received 14 and Henry Reismeyer, 11.

Professor Brown closed the meeting with a few words concerning the lectures that the club will hear at some of its future meetings.

GIRL DEBATER'S LIST SOON TO BE MADE UP

The list for the girls' debating squad will be made up this week. A notice has been posted in Woman's College for all girls who are interested that a debate will be held early in the year with Elmira College. Due to unfortunate circumstances it was necessary to cancel a debate with that college last semester. The team to make the trip, when the date is settled, will probably be composed of last year's girls, but the freshmen will have a chance to compete for any vacant places which may occur. All who are interested should sign up at once or see the manager, Mary Harar, personally.

ATHLETIC NOTES

The game between Bucknell and Holy Cross, to be played at Worcester, will be broadcasted from radio station WBZ, Boston.

Charles R. Freeble, ex-'20, has charge of one of the schoolboy elevens in the vicinity of Pittsburgh. Last year he was coach of the Midland High School team and this year he has taken on the training of the Ambridge players. Last Sunday's Pittsburgh Post gave considerable space to Charley's pupils.

Francis P. McDermott, '21, former gridiron star for the Bucknell team, and later coach of the teams of the Nanticoke High School, is now head coach of the Duquesne University squad at Pittsburgh. His first game for the season will be played against Bethany next Saturday.

Another Bucknell player who is occupying a coaching position on a college staff is Alvin F. "Doggy" Julian, '23, who has charge of the Schuylkill College team.

And the biggest one of the lot is "Bob" Waddell, '20, who is now head coach for the plaid of Carnegie Tech.

Max Reed and "Wally" Foster played in both of the games played by the Buffalo Bison last week. Foster threw the pass that scored against the Frankford "Yellowjackets" and then booted the extra point. Reed played the pivot position in both games.

Davis, '27, who supplied in several churches in North Jersey during the past summer, Dwight Bahr, '28, who acted as pastor at the First Baptist Church of Hoboken, New Jersey, during the absence of the regular pastor on a trip to Europe and the Holy Land, and Albert W. Sheckells, Jr., '27, who preached in the vicinity of Harrisburg.

The Rev. Mr. Myers, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Williamsport, and Dr. Adams, pastor for Baptist students at Pennsylvania State College were guests of Guy Payne's during the meetings of the Northumberland Baptist Association, held here last week.

MISS VAN GUNDY '85 WRITES ABOUT TRIP

In Company With Her Sister, Spends Summer Visiting Foreign Countries

Miss Annie E. Van Gunsly, Institute, '85, and her sister Sarah Van Gunsly, Institute, '84, cousins of Professor William Gunsly Owens, spent their summer sight-seeing abroad, visiting Egypt, Palestine, Italy, and other countries bordering the Mediterranean.

In a letter, written to Professor Owens late in August, Miss Sarah Van Gunsly tells about some of their experiences. In part, she wrote as follows:

"Our one day at Athens was a full one. It was joy enough to climb the Acropolis, to attend a brief service on Mars' Hill, to see the present beauty of shores, hills, and handsome city streets, and added to this a few of us had the honor of being invited to tea by one of the leading ladies of the city. In her age-old garden we met professors and archaeologists and had the sort of experience that doesn't come to tourists. Then to crown the day Annie and I were invited with perhaps twenty others to a dinner given by Near East workers in and near Athens. The Zappean orphanage we had visited earlier in the day, and had our first Near East thrill seeing the children file in to dinner and hearing them say grace. The most touching thing was leading the blind in to their places. A Mrs. Bassett, of California, is in charge at the Zappean, a splendid woman every way. She was really our hostess at the charming dinner. You perhaps know Mr. Jasquith, who has charge of the work here in Greece, a very charming person and they say an invaluable worker. Our dinner was served on the roof of the Zappean. At one time the electric light failed so we had the delight of the full moon over us, looking down upon the thousands upon thousands of Athenians sitting in the streets and squares below, listening to good music, cooling off after a temperature of 104 in the afternoon. Later we drove through the streets and took boats to our good ship as though in a dream.

"Again back to Near East!

"This time it was a day at the two orphanages near Sidon, which we visited from Beirut. The drive was a great delight to us as it was our first entrance into a country where Our Lord had been. It gave us our first sight of camel cravans, and in other ways was one of our most charming experiences. We went first to the "Hill Top," properly named, for we went up and up around "hairpin" turns, until we were on the very top of the world. Long before our cars reached the orphanages we came upon lonely boys and girls all holding flags and banners, all calling out Welcome Americans. They say it never rains there this time of year, but there was a very generous shower about our cars when we alighted. To tell you all about our visit would be impossible. I must content myself by saying that all Near East workers at home may speak with absolute assurance of the quality of work being done by the people in the field. If visitors haven't the sense to recognize in the leaders and workers, American men and women and native helpers, people of a rare combination of efficiency and affection, then they can turn to the children themselves to find proof of work of the highest quality. Orphanages they are not. Lovely Christian homes they are!"

Contributor:—"What's the matter with those jokes I sent you?"

Ed:—"Well, some of them I've seen before. The rest I haven't seen yet."

Alumni Notes

Bucknellians should feel a keen interest in Alaska, and especially in Alaskan education, because a Bucknell man, Charles E. Bunnell, '90, has a big share in directing it. When the Alaska Agricultural College and School of Mines was created, a few years ago, Bunnell was selected as its president. He had earlier been a school teacher in Alaska, then a successful lawyer, and finally was appointed to be U. S. district judge for Alaska. Last June Bucknell conferred upon him the degree doctor of laws.

As the first president of the first college in Alaska, Dr. Bunnell is in a position to exert a vast inbuence upon the development of the territory. Evidently he is proceeding along practical lines, for the Philadelphia Ledger of September 28, printed the following editorial about his institution.

The "FARTHEST NORTH" of the world's colleges, that at Fairbanks, Alaska, opens the new collegiate year with about fifty students. Last June it sent forth a graduating class of one person, a girl from Kansas who had studied first in New York and then in Honolulu. This sub-Arctic school of mines and agriculture gives practical courses that will fit its pupils to meet the problems of our vast territory whose solid development continues, though the "boom" days of mushroom settlement and frantic avarice are over. For farms, fish canneries, oil, copper, timber are only a few of the assets on which Alaska's prosperity in days to come will rest. The new railway to Fairbanks over which President Harding traveled is part of a growing transportation system which will keep the "unimagined empire" in touch with southern latitudes, and the airplane will have much to do with the flourishing growth of coming days. The college at Fairbanks was established in answer to a real need, and the first graduate is precursor of a procession longer than any ever seen upon the trails of the Klondike or the Yukon.

C. Dale Wolfe, ex-'23, who is now serving his second term as prothonotary of the Union County court, was nominated, at the recent primary, for a third term. He will run on the Republican ticket.

Robert W. Thompson, '04, was host to Governor Pinchot when the latter visited Lewisburg recently in the course of his inspection tour of state institutions. The Governor spent the night at the Thompson home, speaking in the evening at a meeting in the Union County court house. Mr. Thompson introduced the Governor to the audience.

On the following day Governor Pinchot motored to Laurelton, to inspect there the Pennsylvania Village for Women, the superintendent of which is Dr. Mary Wolfe, Institute, '91, College '96. Before her selection as head of the Laurelton institution, Dr. Wolfe was in charge of the women's division of the state asylum for insane at Norristown, Pa.

Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, of Lewisburg, is to be the principal speaker at a combined service of congregation and Sunday school of the St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Williamsport on October 4, at the annual Rally Day service. On account of the large audience which it is expected will be present, special arrangements are being made to double the seating capacity of the Sunday school room, by utilizing also a portion of the main auditorium.

Letters have been received from Dr. and Mrs. Lesher of Kityang, China, showing the conditions, which exist because of the activity of the Bolshevists there. The feeling against the British is so great that all of their missionaries have left the field. At a station north of Kityang, two British Presbyterian missionaries were severely beaten and barely escaped with their lives. They fled to Dr. Lesher, and he managed to hide them for several hours, until he could send them down the river to a launch, which carried them to the port. Later Dr. Lesher secured their goods, which he sent to them. This was a difficult project, as the Chinese have put a boycott on anything British, and will not touch it. The Leshers spent their summer in Shanghai with the Hylburts, Bucknell 1905. The Leshers both graduated from Bucknell in the class of 1901, and are both physicians.

Harold B. Musser, '14, who has been teaching in the public schools of Lewisburg and Milton since his graduation, has written a history of Lewisburg, which the Lewisburg Saturday News is to print serially. Mr. Musser has devoted his spare time for some years to a search for new material for his history.

Paul E. Sandel, '19, recently motored to Lewisburg with his family from Canajoharie, N. Y. to visit his own and his wife's parents here.

Dr. Perry A. Caris, '13, has just been made an assistant professor of mathematics at the University of Pennsylvania. Following his graduation from Bucknell, Dr. Caris taught mathematics in the University as an instructor. He left Bucknell to do graduate work at Harvard. So exceptionally brilliant a mathematician was he that, with another student, he headed a class of more than thirty men of unusual ability. Harvard thought highly of him. For some years Professor Caris has been teaching in the West Philadelphia High School for Boys. He has also been pursuing work for his doctor's degree at the University of Pennsylvania. The degree was awarded to him last June. At the same time; he was askel to become a member of the university faculty. Professor Caris married Miss Mayme Kramer, Bucknell Music School, class of 1914.

Alonzo Hull, class of '66, now residing at Seattle, Washington, gave the Rev. Mr. Thomas S. Fretz, '94, his check for a thousand dollars for the endowment fund.

Mr. Hull is suffering from a cataract which he hopes to have removed soon. He is looking forward to attending Commencement next June.

Mr. Fretz has secured several pledges of substantial amounts from alumni on the Pacific coast.

William W. Kelchner, '86, of New York City, who was recently elected to the Board of Trustees of the University, has just returned, with his family, from a three-months trip abroad, during which he visited Norway, and motored through Scotland, England, and Wales. Mr. Kelchner was one of the contributors who gave the funds to enlow the chair of mathematics at Bucknell. This professorship has been named in honor of James S. Swartz, president of the Board of Trustees, of which he has been a member forty-one years.

with, "Come Bucknell Warriors" was sung by the entire crowd. Then, the spirit of the undergraduates being aroused, the individual numbers of the program were introduced. The first of these was a reading by Gilbert McCune, whose characteristic humor brought forth the disagreeable features of "A Night Spent in a Railway Sleeping Car." Mac was forced to give a second selection which was quite as entertaining as the first. The next number was a solo, "The Clang of the Forge," sung by Robert E. Dilworth who also was obliged to return. The whole crowd then joined in producing a little close harmony, "Sweet Adaline" being the song selected. Miss Mildred Fox was next on the program, singing "Rose In the Bud," and, as an encore, "Where Dreams Are Made."

The following number, a sort of impromptu skit by the "Dietz and Elder team" was one of the most heartily enjoyed features of the evening. Dietz's acting, single-handed, of a particularly sensational romantic melodrama involving six characters was especially calculated to bring down the house. Elder's contribution was a most entertaining rendition of a somewhat ancient farcical song namely, "You You Tell 'Em." This number concluded the program.

After refreshments were served, there was another short period of getting together, and the crowd departed by ones and twos.

Presbyterian Church

More than 120 young people gathered at the Presbyterian Church for the annual church reception to the new students. A large number of the church members came to welcome the students.

The young people, as they arrived, were presented to the town people, and then gathered around the piano to sing popular songs. As soon as a large enough crowd had gathered, the evening's program was begun with a peanut race for the older people and faculty members, under the able direction of the chairman of the entertainment committee. The peanut race was followed by a grand march for everyone who cared to enter, at the end of which the young ladies were lined up opposite the gentlemen, and a great deal of wit was expended by the fair damsels in an effort to make their partners smile.

After the gentlemen had finally smiled and paid a forfeit, each one was presented with a long piece of string with a marshmallow in the middle of it. Each possessor of a marshmallow and Milton since his graduation, has written a history of Lewisburg, which the Lewisburg Saturday News is to print serially. After the gentlemen had finally smiled and paid a forfeit, each one was presented with a long piece of string with a marshmallow in the middle of it. Each possessor of a marshmallow then sought a fair partner and they proceeded to see which one could chew up the string and get to the marshmallow first. This contest occasioned a great deal of hilarity in certain circles. When the strings had all been successfully chewed, a number of gentlemen received slips of paper with questions printed on them, and the girls were given slips with answers. These two parties lined up opposite each other and the more or less embarrassing questions put by the masculine contingent were answered by the young ladies with quite unexpected results.

"Mr. Wilkie Doodle" was sung in an original manner by several of the girls, after which a "freak orchestra" gave a very entertaining performance. Following this the fortunate audience was delighted with several selections played by Donald Everitt on his musical saw. Next a humorous reading from "Happy Hawkins" was given by Becky Milliken, and then—the great event of the evening—ice-cream and heaps and heaps of homemade cake! The Rev. Mr. Everitt announced that Dean Clark had very kindly extended the time for those of the number who live at the "Sem" to 10:30, so there was plenty of time to enjoy the delicious refreshments.

The evening ended as it had begun, with singing around the piano, after which there was a regular bargain-day rush for upperclassmen to act as "chaps" for those gentlemen who wished to escort their fair friends to their respective domiciles, but were prevented from doing so by their so-called "low station" in life. Enough seniors and juniors were finally secured, and 10:35 found the church deserted.

Evangelical Church

The Evangelical reception for Bucknell students was attended by a large number of students and other members of the church.

The entertainment was opened by the Lewisburg Orphanage Band, under the leadership of Director Albert This, was followed by a "mixing" scheme in which each member of the party was given a letter of the alphabet and assigned the task of finding others with whom he could join to form a motto.

Other numbers on the program were a violin solo by Mr. Johnson, a reading by Clarence Cameron, a selection sung by a quartet of girls, a song by the Angstadt twins, a talk on the success of the band by its director and a selection by the band. Refreshments were served cafeteria style.

Reformed Church

The reception of the Reformed denomination attracted a goodly number of students and townspeople who enjoyed a fine program of music and readings. The program was opened with a selection by the orchestra. Mrs. Kate Brown and Edwin C. Dolbey, '28, played two piano duets after which Mrs. U. R. Swengle sang and Miss Hazel Wagner entertained with several readings. Miss Grace Percell played two piano selections. Assistant Professor Gold welcomed the students and asked them to return often. The orchestra played several pieces before the closing talk was given by the Rev. Mr. H. H. Rupp. A light lunch was served by the members of the Young People's Guild.

Methodist Church

About one hundred and fifty people assembled at the Methodist reception which was held in the Sunday School room.

The room was strikingy decorated in the college colors and class numerals. The committee which planned and carried out the elaborate decorations was taken from the Epworth League and the Queen Esther Society.

The program had been carefully planned to take up most of the evening, and kept everyone interested from the very start. The Sunday School orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Steely, played at intervals throughout the evening. Professor Drum, Mr. H. M. Showalter, the Rev. Mr. H. F. Babcock, and Ray Daggs made short speeches to the students. Carpenter sang two solos, "I Hear You Calling Me," and "Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride"; Edith Evans, one of the freshmen, sang, "Happy Song," and "Poor Finish"; and Ray Daggs proved himself an artist on the trombone when he played, "My Song of Songs," and "Sleep in the Deep." After plenty of delicious refreshments and a closing number by the orchestra, the reception came to a close.

"He was very romantic," said the friend. "He proposed to her in the automobile and she accepted him in the hospital."

COOPERATION

The situation that has arisen here during the past two weeks, coming out of the discussion of the regulations governing the holding of fraternity social affairs, has reached a stage that is dangerous in that it threatens to cause a breach and serious unpleasantness between some members of the faculty and social groups of students, to revive the old-time suspicion that the pupil held for his teacher, and consequently to bring about a lack of cooperation in the general matters of administration in the College.

The whole situation arises out of the rules passed by the faculty, at its first meeting for the present year. These rules were passed too hastily, evidently without any consideration of the probable effect they would have upon the student body, just as the student council passed the rushing rules without due consideration.

It may be stated here that the rules were passed in pursuance of the will of the Board of Trustees, and that they were absolutely necessary for the administration of the college. This is true in one sense, that the Board of Trustees asked that action be taken concerning certain reports that came to them. The board did not specify the manner of regulation or the type of action that was to be taken. The faculty had the widest possible field from which to choose in selecting means of overcoming the abuses that had been reported.

This, however, does not relieve the Board of Trustees from all responsibility of the present situation. They, too, acted too hastily. Apparently they accepted all reports that came to their attention, concerning the conduct of dances at fraternity houses, at their face value and demanded action accordingly, without going to the trouble to find out whether or not the reports are justified. This is contrary to the rule of justice that obtains in all English speaking countries, "innocence is assumed until guilt is proved." By demanding action on the part of the faculty, the Board of Trustees accepted, as fact, every statement condemning the conduct of such affairs. Where they should have asked for investigation and adjustment, they asked for action, and action is exactly what they received.

But the demand of the Board of Trustees was merely a demand for some action. The demand was not for restriction or for abolition, or anything of the kind. The object was to improve conditions as they had been reported, to regulate rather than to eliminate.

From the standpoint of making its actions effective, the faculty had two courses open to follow. The first was to consider the matter thoroughly to find out the facts as nearly as possible, and, from these as a starting point, to draw up and set hard and fast rules, without consulting the student body at all. This, at least, would have given no opportunity for the discussion of the purpose of the new rules. It is entirely probable that there would have been some dissension concerning the application of the rules for they would have been looked upon as creating a precedent for further restrictions, but even so there would not have arisen the distrust and jealousy that the action taken has occasioned.

The other course, which would have been the more successful, was to go to all of the social groups and place the matter squarely before them so that the seriousness of the situation might be realized, then to have the different groups get together and draw up their own rule. This plan, the plan of honest cooperation, is the one which Miss Clark is using at the Woman's College.

But, in trying to take immediate steps for the satisfaction of the demands of the Board of Trustees, and at the same time, attempting to give the students some say in the formation of their own rules, the faculty acted too hastily. The rules prohibiting house-parties, out-of-town dances, and dances without chaperones from the members of the teaching staff, prepared the students to look for still further restrictions at the meeting to decide the numbers and length of the dances. The meeting, when it was held, went into a discussion of the motives back of the whole movement, and as the students were prepared to look for "a catch" in anything that was presented to them, they were unwilling to believe in the frankness of the faculty members. This led quickly to an attitude of self-righteousness on both sides and the sane discussion of policies became impossible.

The only way to get back to an amicable relationship on the whole matter is to consider all of the facts fairly. The proposition must be looked upon as one for the good of Bucknell, one in which our fraternities and we ourselves have only a secondary interest. Fairness calls for the greatest openness and frankness, and for it to be successful these qualities must be equally shared by both sides. Assertion and compromise have no part in such a consideration. Reason, applied to a full, frank statement of facts, will determine the right and in matters of right and wrong, compromise is wrong.

The competitive social system here does cause a great deal of trouble to the poor boys who are trying their best to get an education and a living at the same time. It does cause the staging of big parties and the expenditure of vast sums of money. "Petting parties" probably do occur, especially at dances that are not properly chaperoned, and in general the dances do run until the wee hours of the morning. We believe, however, that many of the facts of the situation were overstated, and, whether or not this be true, the charges should have been investigated before any action was taken.

There should be no objection to a reasonable regulation of social affairs and we believe that there will be none if the student body can be brought to see that the regulations proposed are reasonable and just.

The present situation is one that has aroused too great a store of distrust. It can not be settled by any iron hand measures by either side, if the sides are to remain. As a student paper, believing in the integrity of students and faculty alike, trying to play the game with "a square deal for everybody", we call upon the different factions that have developed during this unpleasantness, to lay their cards on the table, discuss matters freely and openly, and then to make regulations according to the high standard of right, remembering always that the right and Bucknell come far ahead of our prejudices and our fraternities. Let us CO-OPERATE in doing what is right for Bucknell.

MUST BUILD FIRM SOCIAL STRUCTURE SAYS MISS CLARK

ACTING DEAN OF WOMEN CONTRIBUTES VIEWS ON RIGHT LIVING

Be Architects of Life

There was a time when if I had been a man, I think I should have hoped to become an architect. The idea of being able to make a plan materialize in visible, tangible, usuable, and possibly beautiful form appealed to me tremendously. Then, one day, during my college course, when I met the Latin poet, Horace, and heard him say, "I have builded a monument more lasting than bronze," I caught a new point of view on building. I never aspired to leave a literary masterpiece as a monument to myself, but I did come to realize the very real sense in which the makers of the literature we read do supply the material we build into our mental structure; and I have been very careful ever since in my choice of that material.

Then it fell to my happy lot to teach college students, and the old urge to build took on broader significance. I believe that the administrative staff, faculty, and student body of an institution like Bucknell make up an organization that is in many respects like a cooperative building and loan association. We are an association of individuals who have cast our lot together in the hope of gain. We have come to invest what we have, to use what others have to offer, and to profit mutually; in proportion to our investment we may have access to the wherewithal to build. And how we build!

I watch the process of construction with keen delight; sometimes with poignant sorrow. We have here almost unlimited resources, but we must place a substantial investment in order to enjoy the returns.

I am eager that the structure of our personal integrity should be of sufficient strength to endure, and of sufficient beauty to satisfy; I am eager that we should build a "lordly pleasure house" for intellectual use and enjoyment, but just now I am concerned more intimately with the structure which is our social life. May there be no flaws in this edifice! May its foundations be a sense of fairness that sacrifices privilege to responsibility; its corner stone loyalty to the worth-while; the key stone of the arch over its doorway, genuiness; and its four walls, wholesome companionship. Let's not forget the windows of vision, nor the spires of idealism; within this structure the hearthstone can be but one thing, Honor; a hearthstone to be jealously guarded—guarded in the spirit of King Arthur's Knights whose vow was "to live pure, speak true, right wrong, and follow the King, else wherefore born?" Let's build CO-OPERATIVELY!

"SEM" GIRLS, ATTENTION!

Because they considered Miss Katherine Guthery, of the Ohio Wesleyan University, "a perfect girl," Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Stuyvesant, according to a newspaper dispatch, gave her college $1,000,000. Miss Guthery was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan last June. The Etuyvesants reasoned, according to the story, that if Ohio Wesleyan could turn out girls as perfect as this one, it was an institution worth helping.

DEBATERS COMING

English College Team Will Pay Annual Visit to Swarthmore

Word has been received at Swarthmore College that the debating team of Oxford University, England, will make another visit to the college this year to meet the forensic stars of that institution. This will be the fourth annual visit of the Britons to Swarthmore.

The English team, composed of H. J. S. Wedderburn, of Balliol College; H. V. Lloyd-Jones, Jesus College, and R. H. Bernays, of Worcester College, landed at New York last Friday and began a tour of twenty American colleges. They will be at the University of Pennsylvania on October 26, and at Swarthmore the next day.

its sponsor and the new men displayed no little ability in arguing for the adoption of their pet points of controversy.

The debaters will not choose their own question for debate, however, as that is set for the colleges of Pennsylvania by a convention of coaches and managers that meets in Harrisburg each year. This year's convention is scheduled for October 10 and will be attended by Professor Whyte and Manager Drum. The discussion held Monday was for the purpose of offering suggestions to them concerning the type of question that will be most suitable to the local debaters.

Another meeting will be held in Bucknell Hall next Monday afternoon to decide definitely on the question that they will be instructed to put before the convention. In the meantime the debaters are expected to consider seriously the questions that have been offered and any others that may suggest themselves. Drum and Professor Whyte are especially anxious that all persons interested in debating at the University attend the meeting next Monday afternoon so as to obtain the best possible representation in the choice of the subject.

At the close of the formal meeting the debaters broke up into little groups discussing the merits of the questions presented. Interest in some of the problems seemed to be intense and this early season interest speaks well for the debating prospects of the year.

PROF. L. E. THEISS' LETTER TO SHENANDOAH MAN, FOUND AT WRECK

Professor Lewis E. Theiss received from the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J. the other day, a letter which he had written to one of the men killed in the collapse of the Shenandoah, and which was picked up in Ohio at the scene of the disaster.

The letter had been written to the chief radio operator, George C. Schnitzer, who evidently had it with him or in the radio shack of the Shenandoah when the ship broke in pieces. The radio shack fell with the control car when the ship collapsed.

Admiral William A. Moffet, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, of the Navy Department, gave Professor Theiss permission to visit the air station and make a thorough inspection of it, and also to make a flight in the Shenandoah, to secure material for his next book. The time set for the flight was the first week in August, and Professor Theiss was asked to go to Lakehurst the first of the month. There were endless delays in getting the Shenandoah ready. After waiting three weeks, Professor Theiss had to come home without taking the flight. The Shenandoah finally did get off, but it was her last successful flight before she was destroyed. Within ten days, the ship lay a broken wreck in the fields of Ohio.

It was to secure some additional data about flying that Professor Theiss wrote to the wireless man. The latter evidently carried the letter with him, to guide him in assembling the facts desired, and the letter was found near the broken airship.

New Teachers Warmly Welcomed At Annual Autumn Reception

The president's house, ample though it is, almost bulged outward from the pressure of its multitude of guests when President and Mrs. Hunt entertained the faculty in their usual welcoming reception to the new faculty members last Thursday night. Practically the entire teaching staff, with the faculty ladies and local trustees and their wives, were present.

In the receiving line, headed by President and Mrs. Hunt and Acting Dean Amelia E. Clark, were not only the new members of the faculty and the newly married members, but some who were not at Bucknell last year in time to attend the 1924 faculty reception. The college teaching staff was represented by Professor and Mrs. Clarence E. Johnson, Professor and Mrs. Charles M. Bond, Assistant Professor and Mrs. Robert L. Matz, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Welles N. Lowry, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. C. Willard Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Faint, Miss Helen K. Bartol, and Mr. Roye M. McLane. The Music School was represented by Professor Isaac E. Norris and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph F. Hartz. Representing the administrative forces were Registrar and Mrs. Henry W. Holter. The coaching staff was represented by Mr. and Mrs. George Chinn, Jr.

The older members of the faculty were gratified to see a familiar face that has been missing in functions of this sort in recent years, that of Mrs. Thomas A. Edwards, widow of the first dean of the Woman's College. Mrs. Edwards was very seriously injured at the Homecoming Day game with Lehigh several years ago, when the temporary stand on Loomis Field collapsed, and she was in the Geisinger Hospital for many months following that disaster. She presided at the refreshment table, with Mrs. Frank E. Burpee, Another welcome guest was Mrs. William E. Martin, widow of our former Librarian.

The occasion was a pleasant one for all present. The new comers labored valiantly to remember new names and faces, and old acquaintances embraced the opportunity to swap stories about their summer experiences. Probably President Hunt, with his story of the five-pound trout he caught, had the most thrilling yarn; but Professor Lindemann was perhaps a good second, with some reminiscences of his 4000-mile auto tour through the land of Evangeline. Professor Coleman was another summer motorist, and he also visited Canada. Altogether a very pleasant evening was passed, and the guests were reluctant to say good night when ten-thirty o'clock arrived.

DR. FOSS LECTURES TO LEWISBURG CLUB

Member Of Geisinger Hospital Talks To Lions Club On Surgery

A lecture by Dr. Foss, of the Geisinger Hospital, at Danville, on the subject "Mechanics of Surgery", was the chief feature of a dinner given by the Lewisburg Lions Club in the dining room of the College Inn last Monday evening. The Lions had as their guests, President Hunt and Registrar Holter, the members of the Lewisburg Rotary Club, the Union County Medical Association, and several physicians from Milton. The students in the biology department of the University were also invited to attend the lecture that followed the dinner.

Following the dinner, at which the club and its guests were entertained by "Doug" MacKenzie, Bucknell's California tenor, and the general singing usual to the meetings of the service clubs, the group adjourned to the auditorium of the Engineering Building where the lecture was given.

The speaker was introduced by Professor Lindemann of the Lions Club. One of his first statements was that the surgeon lives a single-track existence, finding it necessary to put every consideration aside when he is called to serve in his professional capacity.

Dr. Foss then glanced briefly at the history of surgery, commenting on the beginning of the use of anasthesia in 1886. The first case in which an anesthetic was used was in the removal of a tumor by Dr. Warren, in Boston, Mass. Previous to the discovery of its use any major operation was an exceedingly painful ordeal.

The most modern anesthetic used is nitrous oxide, discovered by Joseph Priestly, who formerly lived in Northumberland. The use of the gas as an anesthetic however was not discovered until very recently.

The speaker especially pointed out the benefits of the use of anesthesia in cases where an operation is performed on the abdomen. The great majority of cases, from 70 to 80 per cent., of those in which an operation on the abdomen was performed without anesthesia, resulted fatally. Now that anesthesia allows the surgeon to work with a body that is relaxed the region has become a play-ground for the surgeon and one seldom hears of a death resulting from an abdominal operation.

Various surgical instruments were passed to the members of the audience and their uses explained by Dr. Foss. He also showed slides illustrating fractures and the methods of treating them, including the use of bone grafts.

The last phase of the lecture dealt with the completion of the operation, the closing of the wound. Dr. Foss demonstrated the use of the instruments and materials used in suturing and explained the differences in the materials used for different purposes in this work.

The final thrill of the evening came when Dr. Foss passed fifty milligrams of radium, worth about $6000 around the room so that the audience might inspect it.

PSYCHOLOGY TEST IS GIVEN TO B. U. FROSH

The freshman psychological test required of all students entering Bucknell University was offered for the second time Saturday morning at 10:30. The test was given in Commencement Hall under the supervision of Professor F. G. Davis in order that the students who did not receive it during Freshman Week might make up this requirement.

The test that is being used this year requires approximately an hour and forty minutes for completion, in this respect being somewhat shorter than the one given last year when the use of the tests was first introduced here. The results of the tests are to be used in connection with the work of the students in the regular curriculum to determine the amount of work that may be expected of the classes in the various departments. Scores, median scores, averages, and other data concerning the results of the tests will also be sent to Washington for comparison with the scores made in other colleges using the same test.

Two hundred seventy-six of the freshmen have taken the test so far, 194 having been in the first division during Freshman Week and 82 in the group tested Saturday. The test was proctored by students from the education department, of which Professor Davis is the head.

Dead men tell no tales, but the Man on the Street says sometimes their tombstones are awful liars.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

While sitting in the Stadium, Saturday, looking toward the University buildings, we noticed the bare aspect that the flag-staff above Old Main presents. In keeping with the decoration of the Stadium we would suggest that an American flag and a Bucknell pennant be flown from that staff on such occasions.

Observers of the game on Saturday seemed to be of the opinion that the play was exceedingly rough on account of the various injuries that were noted. As we look at it, however, the game was an exceptionally hard one for a season-opener, and the men on both teams were not as yet hardened to withstand the unusual strain. The scarcity of penalties and the spirtsmenship of the members of the teams go to show that the game was cleanly played.

President Hunt's matriculation sermon in the Baptist church last Sunday morning called to the minds of some of the men who have been connected with the University for some time, memories of the days when the president of the University was always the pastor of the local church. The Rev. Dr. West's wish that the University might have an assembling place of its own in which to have such services as this marks a far cry from those former times.

We might sugest to the president of the freshman class that the day of the debonair, dare-devil college student never was except in fiction and the reflective imaginings of older men who looked back longingly on the comparatively care-free days of their college life. The freshman leader can do much more for the morale of his classmates, the preservation of worthwhile customs, and the furtherance of friendly relations between the freshmen and members of the other classes, as well as for his own peace and convenience, by studiously observing the rules instead of studiously breaking them.

The introduction of more efficient methods of checking the attendance at the games meets our approval. Carelessness begets lawlessness, and it is the opportunity to get away with small things, like sneaking into a football game, that leads one to look for opportunities (temptations, rather) to get away with big things such as we read about every day in the metropolitan papers.

The church receptions Friday night were well attended and, our reporters tell us, "enjoyed by all present." These receptions are intended to acquaint the new students wi the people of the various churches and assure them of a welcome at future church functions including regular services.

The opening of the rushing season last Wednesday changed the complexion of fraternity and freshman affairs considerably. The atmosphere of cold restraint gave place to one of warm, free cordiality that is much more healthful.

FACULTY MEMBERS MEET FRAT HEADS

Another point where controversy arose was on the lateness of the dances. President Hunt claimed that the lateness of the dances is detrimental to study, good grades, and physical ability to attend classes the following day. This immediately met the statement that late dances are not held during the session but only before vacations or holidays, and that the time spent at dances constitutes only a small part of the time spent in recreation by the students.

As it seemed impossible for the large committees to accomplish anything while the fraternity representatives and faculty members were in a controversial state of mind, the meeting was dismissed after a sub-committee to make recommendations to the Student Council had been apointed. The chairman of this committee is Professor Whyte; the other members, Professor Ballentine and Professor Griffith.

What the Colleges Are Doing

Flunking Blamed On Outside Work

Seventy per cent. of the University of Pennsylvania students who flunk, fail in their studies because of carrying too many outside activities, according to Isadore Merzbacher, dean of private tutors on the Penn campus, and scholar extraordinary.

"The other 30 per cent. fail in their university work because they cannot get along with the instructors or professors who have been assigned to teach them," says Mr. Merzbacher. "I think the old system of allowing the student to select his own professor was the better way."

Mr. Merzbacher is thoroughly conversant with seven languages, and tutors students in any branch of mathematics from simple arithmetic to integral calculus; in chemistry, physics, and in ancient, medieval, or modern history.

Mr. Merzbacher uses common sense in his teaching. He assembles perhaps eight or a dozen students in his classroom, each of whom may be reviewing a different subject. He goes from one to the other, pointing out the salient facts, explaining a problem in geometry one moment and translating a passage of Greek the next. He seldom uses a text-book except where one is absolutely required, for he is a firm believer in the lecture method.

Temple University Tug-o-War

The annual class scrap of Temple University takes the form of a tug of war in which the members of the under classes take opposite sides of the street and ends of a cable and try to draw each other into the stream of water that firemen play on the middle of the rope. The victors are permitted to wear dinner clothes at the freshman banquet the following evening. This year's event will take place Friday afternoon.

PENN FROSH HAVE FEED

Two thousand freshmen of the University of Pennsylvania were the guests of the Christian Association of the university at a luncheon and "rap" meeting before the game with Ursinus last Saturday. Following the disposition of the "eats" the whole group snake-danced to Franklin Field and took its place in the stands.

C. C. N. Y. Offers New Courses

Several new courses are to be added to the night curriculum of the College of the City of New York. These include a course in Sanskirt, one in Russian literature, a course in oriental literature including the work of the great philosopher, Omar Khayyam, and a course in the literature of northern Europe. A course entitled "The Human Significance of Mathematics" is also being offered for the first time.

Princeton Opens For 179th Year

The opening exercises of Princeton University were held yesterday afternoon in Alexander Hall when President Hibben delivered his address of welcome. One hundred seventy-eight graduate students were received into the graduate school and approximately 2200 men were enrolled in the undergraduate courses. The freshman registration was restricted to six hundred men. Classes began today under a new schedule that calls for daily chapel at 8:15 and classes from 8:30 A. M. to 4:30 P. M.

Drexel Institute Imposes Rules

The ban is placed on powder, paint, lip-stick, and rolled stockings for freshmen girls at Drexel Institute, Philadelphia. In addition to this the girls must have upperclass chaperones for movie dates or other entertainments when accompanied by men. Freshmen must wait on their sophomore and upperclass sisters to the extent of running their errands and even making their beds while they are always subject to the capricious fancies of the older girls in the minor matters of hazing. Yea, verily the lot of a freshman is hard!

Pittsburgh To Broadcast Lectures

The University of Pittsburgh will open its radio lectures for the year, next Monday evening, October 5, with an address by the chancellor, Dr. John D. Bowman. The radio lectures this year will be expanded to five nights a ween, coming on the air every night except Saturday and Sunday at 7:45. The lectures will be sent out from the KDKA station.

Penn State Y. M. C. A:

Builds Mountain "Hut"

With the reopening of College, work on the Y. M. C. A. cabin in Shingletown gap is being resumed. Several masons have been hired and will soon start laying the foundations, which have already been dug. Students under the supervision of W. C. Calhoun, acting freshman secretary, will assist in so far as is possible.

The site of the cabin is located about three hundred yards to the right of the Shingletown reservoir on a trail cut by students last spring. The cabin will be built of stone collected from the mountainside by volunteers from the student body, and will face State College. Views of the Nittany valley and Penn's valley may be had from the clearing in which the building will be located.

Specifications which are being drawn up by the architect this week, call for two main rooms on the first floor, each to be thirty feet long and twenty feet wide, and each to contain a fireplace of generous proportions. In addition there will be a porch thirty feet long and ten feet wide to accomodate hikers in case of rain. The fireplace in one of the large rooms, to be known as the lounging room, will be double-faced, having a of the cabin. This arrangement was hearth both on the inside and outside planned for the benefit of transients who do not have a key to the building but who find it convenient to use a sheltered and safe fireplace.

Two rooms with close sleeping quarters for thirty people will comprise the upstairs of the hut. As yet no definite type of roofing has been decided upon. Enough stones to construct the foundations have been collected so far, and everything is in readiness for the masons to begin work.

When the cabin is completed, the keys to it will probably be placed in the hands of a committee which will lend them to any responsible college organization upon request and reasonable notice.

Widow Prefers College Study To Anything Else In World

Though a woman of mature years, Mrs. Ida Hedges, widow of Job E. Hedges, noted wit and lawyer, and Republican candidate for Governor of New York in 1912, has enrolled for her second year in the extension department of Columbia University.

"The majority of young girls are as much interested in dances and parties as in college, which is as it should be," says Mrs. Hedges. "The older woman's angle is different. It is more wonderful than I had anticipated. The hours of study do not in the least interfere with home life and suit the convenience of the most conscientious housewives. Once a woman of mature mind becomes interested in studying, it is more fascinating as time goes on. Now I prefer it to anything else in the world."

U. of P. Students Not To Compete In Beaux Arts Prizes

Students in the University of Pennsylvania have been requested by the Fine Arts School of the University not to compete for the prizes offered by the Beaux Arts Institute of Design, New York.

Professor Paul Cret, who made the announcement, added that the school would endeavor to obtain locally endowed prizes and competitions to take the place of the Beaux Arts competitions. "It is our policy," said Dr. Cret, "that education must be carried on according to fixed and well-defined methods. This cannot be the case with Beaux Arts judgments."

In Beaux Arts competitions, the large number of problems to be judged, the number of judges, sometimes as many as two dozen, and the consequent hurried judgments of the problem solutions, were among the reasons ascribed by the Pennsylvania instructors for the ban.

'Evolution And The Bible' Subject For Penn Forum

A sunday night forum for the discussion of current events, and problems of religion and ethics, will be a new feature for students at the University of Pennsylvania. Although primarily for students the meetings will be open to the public.

Professor Arthur Holmes, of the psychology department of the University; William Romaine Newbold, professor of philosophy; George William McClelland, professor of English and director of admissions; George A Raiguel, well-known authority on international relationships; and Theodore J. Grayson, director of the University Evening and Extension Schools, are some of the men who have been scheduled to address the forum.

Scopes Enrolls At Chicago

John T. Scopes, the young teacher who was the cause of making Dayton, Tennessee, notorious during the recent 'evolution trial" has enrolled at the University of Chicago as a graduate student in geology. He hopes, some day, to return to Tennessee and to be permitted to teach the "truth."

Why doth the little busy bee

I guess to give him some excuse
For that orful looking pose.

SONGS OF THE SEM FAVORED BY CO-EDS

Prize Song Of Last Year Is "Bisons Before You"

During the past few years a number of songs have been popularized in Woman's College for the use of the girls in their "noisy hour" revels, their Friday evening sings at dinner, and the many informal social events that occur during the year. There are also some more serious songs which are loved by all the girls, but especially by those who have had the great opportunity of attending a Y. W. conference at Eagles' Mere.

The prize song for 1925 should be mentioned first, of course. It was written by "Patty" Milliken of the class of '26.

"BISONS BEFORE YOU"

Bisons before you,
Don't let them score you;
Come, boys, hold that line,
Run the end or rush the center,
Touchdown every time,
(rah, rah, rah, rah,)
You're doing well,
So fight on for Bucknell,
Hold aloft her fame;
Fight, Fellows, fight,
And you will win that game!

Then, a Y. W. song takes next place because of the sincerity with which the girls sing it. The last verse is the part particularly adapted to our girls.

I WANT TO BE A COLLEGE GIRL

I want to be a College girl,
Um, and a little bit more.
I want to be a Bucknell girl,
Um, and a little bit more.
I want to be a Y. W. girl
And then I'll ask no more,
For I'll have all that's coming to me,
Um, and a little bit, Um and a little bit,
Um, and a little bit more.

One of the songs that came to us from the girls of the Y. W. at Eagles Mere bids fair to become a popular song for many occasions. The tune is that of "Dunderbeck."

Jimmy had a high school girl,
He loved with all his heart,
He swore that nothing in the world would ever make them part;
He said you'll go to Penn State or P. C. W.
Said Mary, "That's the very thing I don't intend to do.
He said you'll go to Carnegie
Perhaps you'll go to Hood;
Or maybe go to Gettysburg,
I really think you should,
You may go down to Wilson,
To Theil or Grove City,
Said Mary, Those are not the schools
That sound so good to me.
I'm going to go to Bucknell,
So don't you dare get gay,
Although I love you truly
In this case you're not to say,
I'll never go to Temple
Or any of the rest,
For I'm going to go to Bucknell
The school I love the best.

When "Shorty" Parmley leads the music on singing nights in the "Sem" dining room, one of the songs that is sure to be given is "Evolu." Regardless of the controversy that rages and probably always will rage between the minds of men of affairs etc, the girls give great credit to the force of evolution. At least, they do when they sing—

"EVOLUTION"

Oh, Evolu! Oh, Evolu!
Is there anything that she can't do?
She said to the monkey,
"I'll make a man of you."
And she did too! Oh, Boy!
But the very best thing that she's done yet
Is to put us here in this Bucknell set,
Oh, Evolu! Oh, Evolu!
Oh, E-vi-vo- of Evolution!

One of the most patriotic songs—to the college of course,—is the one we call "We Love You." Harmony reigns supreme in this one when the girls take parts and really do justice to the song.

WE LOVE YOU

B-U-C-K-N-E-L-L-,
Bucknell, Orange and Blue,
We love you!
B-U-C-K-N-E-L-L,
Bucknell, Orange and Blue,
We love you!
Oh we love you in the morning,
And we love you in the night,
We love you in the evening
When the moon is shining bright,
Oh, B-U-C-K-N-E-L-L,
Bucknell, Orange and Blue,
We love you!

Another song which came back with the Y. W. delegates was set to the old tune—Solomn Levi.

If ever you want to join a set
That's jolly and full of fun,
Made up of the maddest, merriest girls,
That ever lived under the sun;
Just come to B. U., we'll introduce you
To all the girls so gay,
And before we're through
We'll guarantee you,
You'll surely want to stay.

CHORUS

All Bucknellians,
Bucknell, tra-la-la-la.
All Bucknellians,
Bucknell, tra-la-la-la.

There are many more songs of the Sem. However, the best way to know them is to hear them, learn them, and sing them. The freshmen girls will soon find that college life is made up of much music and laughter, even tho they are here for serious work in the education of their minds. The gift of song has been added to greatly in the past years and will receive many more additions in the years to come. New songs are written for every class and event. The old songs may, or may not be best,—but the "Semites" prefer to sing on, and on, and on. So, learn the songs of the "Sem", and take the advice of the Mummy Song—

THE MUMMY SONG

(Tune: Long, Long Trail)
It's a short ,short time we live here,
And let us sing while we may,
With a song for every moment
Of the whole bright day.
What's the use of looking gloomy,
And what's the use of our fears?
For we know a mummy's had no fun,
For mor'n three thousand years.

Charles Yuan, a grandson of Yuan Shih-Kai, first president of the Chinese republic, is enrolled as a freshman in the mining engineering course at Lafayette College. He is being sent to Lafayette by his father who is prominent in the mining industry in China as well as in public affairs. Yuan Shih-Kai was one of the leaders instrumental in founding the Chinese republic following the death of the late empress.

The value of higher education is evidenced in the present edition of Who's Who, which shows that 61.2 per cent. of the 24,278 names listed are those of college graduates. This figure includes graduates of the United States naval and military colleges.

Among the many athletes who have entered the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy is M. I. Lily Chang, formerly of Chi Sue School, China. Chang is a clever basketball player.

Harvard Building New Freshman Dormitory

Harvard's new freshman dormitory, given to the University by Mr. and Mrs. George A. McKinlock, of Chicago, in memory of their son, George Alexander McKinlock, Jr., of the Harvard class of 1916, who was killed in action in the World War, is now being built and will be completed by next August 15th.

The dormitory, to be known as McKinlock Hall, will have a main building at the north and two wings at the south, forming a court 100 by 121 feet. Accommodations for 150 students will be provided, with suites ranging from a single bedroom, bath, and study, to six bedrooms, bath, and study. The average suite will accommodate two students.

Bucknell Freshmen vs, Lewisburg High School

The Bison yearlings had quite a treat last week, when Coach Chinn turned them loose on the Lewisburg High School eleven in a practice scrimmage. We wonder whether the high school boys knew what they were getting into, or whether Neil Blaisdell, who is coaching them, had all the say. Anyway, Stoughton's remark, "When I left the scene the freshmen had made their ninth touchdown" tells the whole story of the drubbing the town boys received.

The Lewisburg High team lost to Sunbury High School by a score of 42-0 last Saturday.

Lafayette Enrollment Large

Final registration figures at Lafayette college, given out by Registrar William M. Smith, show an undergraduate enrolment of 1,010, which exceeds any previous enrolment by twenty. This is slightly in excess of the 1,000 limit set some time ago by the board of trustees. The distribution shows 188 seniors, 203 juniors, 277 sophomores, and 342 freshmen. The registration in the freshman class shows a greater proportion of students interested in the general arts and science courses than last year, and a smaller proportion enroled in the engineering courses. More than fifty applicants for admission to the freshman class had to be refused ad-

Miriam—"Oh, isn't she the horrid thing, I told her not to tell you that I told her."

Marian—"Well, I told her I wouldn't tell you if she told me, so don't tell her I told you."

Willie—"All the stores closed on the day my uncle died."

Tommy—"That's nothing. All the banks closed for three weeks after my pa left town."

Tennis Tournament Begins This Week

All Interested Students Asked To Hand Names In Not Later Than Thursday

In an attempt to get a line on the tennis material for the coming year, Coach Ballentine is laying plans for a fall tennis tournament, which is scheduled to begin the latter part of this week. More than twenty candidates have already turned in their names, and as many more are expected to enter.

New men in school who are entered in the tournament include Fred Ruddsill, who comes to Bucknell from Annapolis, and has already shown up well in practice; George Ballentine, last year's captain of the Lewisburg High School team; and Edward Colestock, also of the Lewisburg team. These men should give McCaskey, Zortman, Horter, and Gardiner, of last year's team, plenty of trouble.

Although the construction of the new courts near the Sigma Chi house is well under way they are not yet completed, and the matches will have to be played on the faculty, Phi Gam, Kappa Sig, and Demie courts. Professor Burpee expects to have some of the new courts finished later in the fall, and several more will be built in the spring, so that the facilities for next year will be of the best.

Men who are interested and have not yet signed up should hand their names to Professor Ballentine not later than Thursday. An interesting feature of the tournament is that members of the faculty will participate on even terms with the students.

PROF. T. H. BRIGGS TO ADDRESS STUDENT

Other Speakers Are Scheduled For Talks To Students

On Friday, October 2, Thomas H. Briggs, professor of secondary education in Teachers' College, Columbia University, will speak before the Bucknell student body. Thursday's assembly is to be postponed to Friday at 10:00; the place is Commencement Hall.

Immediately following his talk in the assembly service, Dr. Briggs will speak at the same place to the students in education. Professor Davis hopes that all these students may be able to arrange to attend this lecture.

Dr. Briggs is one of the leaders in the secondary education field in this country. His book on the junior high school was one of the pioneer publications on this subject. He is the author of several textbooks and is a widely sought lecturer on educational subjects, being known also as an excellent public speaker.

Well-known as an expert in curriculum adjustment, Dr. Briggs has been employed by a number of cities and states as a consulting educator to reorganize their school curriculums.

This is only the first of a number of notable events being arranged by the Education department for this semester. Among those who will appear soon is Dr. Howard C. Hill, of the School of Education of the University of Chicago. He has been booked to speak here on October 12, at 4:30, to any students interested as well as to students in education. He will discuss methods used in the famous high school conducted by the University of Chicago as a laboratory for its school of education.

Dr. Hill is the author of several textbooks, and has made a notable contribution to high school teaching through his work in correlating English with social science.

Other important offerings of the education students will be announced from time to time. The students in the department have very generously contributed to the support of an extensive program.

Have You Ever Heard?

That the Hon. James Buchanan, who became president of the United States, was a member of the original Board of Curators of the University, and as such sat on the platform of Commencement Hall at the very first Bucknell Commencement, and made the motion to confer the degrees upon the graduates.

That the Hon. Simon Cameron, who was also a member of that original Board of Curators, became secretary of war in President Lincoln's cabinet, and was later minister to Russia.

That the second secretary of the Board of Trustees, the Hon. George F. Miller, of Lewisburg, represented this district in the U. S. House of Representatives. He was a grandfather of the late George P. Miller, '84, of University Avenue.

That the Hon. John I. Mitchell, ex-'69, was United States senator from Pennsylvania.

That Dr. David Jayne Hill, '74, formerly president of Bucknell, became minister to Switzerland and the Netherlands, ambassador to Germany, and first assistant secretary of state for the United States.

That when Prince Henry, brother of Emperor William, of Germany, visited this country early in this century, Dr. Hill accompanied him as the representative of the President of the United States.

That William Henry Buckus, '53, became U. S. consul at Hamburg, Germany. Dr. Buckus lived in the house at Third and St. George Streets now occupied by Mr. Leroy T. Butler, class of '97. When James Buchanan visited Lewisburg, he was entertained in this house by the widowed mother of Dr. Buckus, and he thought so highly of young Buckus that in after years he appointed him to the consulship.

That Frank W. Jackson, '95, became U. S. Consul at Patras, Greece.

That John T. Hyatt, '91, became vice-consul at Santiago, Cuba.

That Cyrus B. Follmer, '16, is vice-consul at Nice, France, and has recently taken the examinations for a consulship.

That Simon P. Wolverton, '60, served several terms in the national House of Representatives.

That W. S. Shallenberger, '92, was another U. S. Congressman, and that he became Third Assistant Postmaster General for the United States.

That the late J. Thompson Baker, ex-'69, who for many years lived in Lewisburg, and who was one of the founders of Wildwood, the new Jersey seashore resort, was a member of Congress from New Jersey. Mr. Baker was also instrumental in securing for Lewisburg its excellent water supply, that replaced the old Susquehanna River supply.

That Benjamin K. Focht, editor of the Lewisburg Saturday News, and a former Bucknell Academy student, represented this district in Congress for several terms.

That Milton W. Shreve, '84, and Adam M. Wyant, ex-'94, are both members of the present House of Representatives at Washington.

DR. MILTON G. EVANS, '82, IS NOTED B. U. GRADUATE

Among the distinguished speakers who address the student body at the Pennsylvania State College chapel from time to time, is President Milton G. Evans, of Crozer Theological Seminary, who talked to the students there last Sunday. Dr. Evans is a Bucknell alumnus, class of '82—and a member of the Bucknell Board of Trustees.

After his graduation from Bucknell, he taught for some years at Keystone Academy, under Dr. John Howard Harris, who later became president of Bucknell. Graduating from Crozer in 1890, Dr. Evans was asked to join the teaching forces of that institution. For five years he was instructor in Hebrew. He was then made professor of Biblical theology, retaining that professorship from 1895 to 1907. In this latter year he became professor of Christian theology, which post he held for two years. He then became president of the institution, and during his presidency has also served as professor of comparative theology.

President Evans has, in addition to his A. B. from Bucknell, the degrees D. D. and LL. D. He is the author of a book on New Testament theology, and another volume entitled "What Jesus Taught."

As a public speaker President Evans ranks high. He is a deep thinker and speaks in a clean, forceful manner. Bucknell audiences have listened to him with keenest attention. The last time he spoke at Lewisburg was upon the occasion of President Harris' funeral last year. His description of Dr. Harris' teaching was typical of his forceful, striking way of putting things. "Dr. Harris taught us," he said, "To trust our thinking, even though it led us beyond the stars."

OLD BUCKNELL A. A. REPLACED BY NEW ATHLETIC COUNCIL

FIFTEEN MEMBERS TAKEN FROM FOUR SOURCES. CONTROL ATHLETICS

Includes Two Students

The Bucknell Athletic Association, a somewhat mythical organization that elected officers but held no meetings and for which no constitution could ever be found by athletic authorities, is definitely replaced by the formation, under a constitution approved last June by the Board of Trustees, of the Bucknell University Athletic Council. This constitution and the by-laws which were adopted at the same time make full provision for the election of team officers, control of games and schedules, financial regulation of the athletic events, and eligibility of players—in short, every phase of the work connected with the athletic control of the University.

The membership of the council is drawn from four sources: the president of the University, three faculty members appointed by the president, two students, one of whom shall be elected by the Student Council, the other to be the captain of the football team, and nine members not officially connected with the University, at least six of whom shall be alumni.

The duties of the various officers of the council are outlined in the constitution. These are specifically stated and provide, for the secretary and the treasurer, definite methods of attending to their work.

Two committees are provided for by the constitution; the one, executive, the other, on finance. The executive committee consists of the members of the council who reside in Lewisburg, and in general has delegated to it the powers of the council to act in matters of schedule arrangement, interpretation of rules governing eligibility, insignia awards, election of team officers, etc. This committee can also remove from office any captain, manager, assistant manager, or salaried employe except the graduate manager of athletics and the head coach. The finance committee prepares a budget for the expenses and receipts for the year and administers the funds of the council. Its members are the president of the University, the treasurer of the council, and the officers of the executive council.

The council must meet twice each year, at Homecoming time and previous to the meeting of the Board of Trustees held during Commencement week. It employs the graduate manager, the coaches and assistant coaches, trainers, etc., and provides for the election of undergraduate managers and assistant managers. It forms the rules for eligibility and for the use of the athletic insignia. Its by-laws may be amended by two-thirds vote of the members, and the council is obliged to consider any petition for a change in the by-laws that is presented in writing and signed by at least fifty members of the student body of the University.

The by-laws, which were adopted immediately upon the approval of the constitution, extended the jurisdiction of the council to "intercollegiate, inter-class, intramural, and interscholastic sports of Bucknell University." They define major, minor, and freshman sports, provide for the employment and prescribe the duties of a graduate manager of athletics, govern the election of the team officers, their duties and removal, set the requirements for the award of major and minor "Bs" in the various sports, provide for the keeping of athletic records, and lay down the conditions of eligibility for membership in any of the University teams.

Team captains are to be elected by the members of a team who have been awarded the letter for the season. The executive committee determines who shall be eligible for election to any captaincy, has power to decide the election in case of a tie vote, and validates the election by ratification.

The sections on the election of student managers are as follows:

"Within two weeks immediately following the close of the intercollegiate season in each branch of sport, the student manager for the succeeding season shall be chosen by the following method:

"The student manager shall be elected from the retiring first assistant managers, by a committee consisting of the graduate manager, the retiring student manager, the retiring captain, the coach, and the president of the Student Council.

"The two defeated candidates in the election of the student manager shall be managers of the second varsity and freshman teams, respectively. If there be no second varsity team, but a freshman team, then one of the candidates should be elected its manager by the same committee as elects the student manager.

"The three first assistant managers shall be elected from the squad of second assistant managers by a committee consisting of the graduate manager, the retiring student manager, the president of the student council, and the three retiring first assistant managers.

"Any member of the student body in good scholastic standing may enter the competition for student managerships in any branch of sport governed and recognized by the Athletic Council. These competitors shall be known as second assistant student managers.

"Registration of second assistant student manager candidates shall be made with the graduate manager within two college calendar months following the close of the preceding season.

"Elimination of second assistant student managers may be made from time to time during the period of competition by the committee provided for the selection of the three first assistant managers."

The full rules on the eligibility of students for participation in varsity games is as follows:

"Any student of good and regular standing in the University shall be eligible to participate in intercollegiate major sports with the following exceptions:

"No student shall be eligible to participate in any major sports until he shall have satisfactorily completed the work of two full semesters at the University and shall have satisfied the faculty requirement for advancement.

"No student entering Bucknell University after the adoption of this instrument shall take part in varsity intercollegiate sports for more than three years.

"No student who has ever been enrolled in any other college or university shall be eligible until he has been registered at Bucknell University for two full semesters thereafter.

"No student who has, while enrolled in another college or university, taken part in competitive athletics as a member of his university, or college, or class team, shall be eligible to represent Bucknell University in any intercollegiate contest.

"No student holding a bachelor's degree shall be eligible.

"No student shall be eligible who, when called upon to do so, fails to establish his amateur standing to the satisfaction of the executive committee.

"No student who has ever played under the national agreement, commonly known as organized baseball, shall be eligible to participate in any branch of athletics.

"No 'special' student shall be eligible unless he has satisfied the entrance requirements equivalent to those required of freshmen; and unless he is taking a full schedule of work during his year of competition.

"No student shall be eligible unless he has complied with the faculty rules governing athletics.

"No student shall enter any contest until he has been declared eligible by the executive committee of the Athletic Council. At least ten days prior to each intercollegiate contest a list of the players who may participate must be filed by the graduate manager with the executive committee and a copy of same submitted to the dean of the University for his approval.

"No student shall be eligible to represent Bucknell University in an athletic contest, who (a) engages in contests as a representative of any athletic organization not connected with Bucknell University whether in term time or vacation—except by special permission of the executive committee, (b) takes part, except as a member of a Bucknell University team, in any game at which an admission fee is charged, except by special permission of the executive committee.

"No student shall be eligible to participate in any intercollegiate contest until he shall have been given a physical examination and shall have secured a certificate of his physical fitness.

"Only members of the freshman class shall be eligible to membership in a freshman team.

"No student shall be a member of a Bucknell University freshman team in two separate academic years.

"No student who has, while enrolled in another university or college, taken part in intercollegiate athletics as a member of his university, college, or class team, shall be eligible to membership in a Bucknell University freshman team.

"In all these rules governing eligibility the term "University or College" shall be interpreted according to the list accredited by the Federal Commissioner of Education.

"These eligibility rules shall be applicable to all students entering Bucknell University after their adoption by the Board of Trustees, as provided for, March 21, 1925."

The council will probably have booklets containing the full text of the constitution and by-laws of the Athletic Council printed and distributed among the students during the year. Until that time any person interested in the regulations may obtain information concerning them from the graduate manager at the Athletic Council office on Market Street.

through," Dr. Wood said. He gave three important reasons why the team must win tomorrow. "It must win in order to help build up our morale; it must win because one thousand football men that have graduated from Bucknell are looking at our team tomorrow; it must win because tomorrow is the anniversary of the battle of Argonne and three of our football men were killed in this battle."

The old hall echoed as all of the students stood and sang the Alma Mater.

Rhodes Scholarship Increased

At a dinner given in honor of the Rhodes scholars who sailed for Oxford University on Saturday, September 26, Philip Kerr, the new secretary of the Rhodes trust, announced, among other things, that the trustees had raised the yearly amount of the scholarships to 400 pounds, an increase of 50 pounds. Two years ago, on account of the increased cost of living, the amount was raised to 350 pounds, but even that did not prove sufficient to pay expenses, especially as the students are expected to spend their vacations traveling on the Continent.

There is no longer any doubt that Cecil J. Rhodes showed wisdom in establishing the scholarships which bear his name. It has been said that the Rhodes scholars have failed to distinguish themselves in after life, but it is an obvious and undeniable fact that their presence at Oxford has done a great deal to bring about a better understanding among the English-speaking peoples.

BUCKNELL TEAM GAINS VICTORY

made a sensational catch upon the thirty-five yard line. Diehl gained eight yards off tackle, and after a vain plunge by McCormick, shoved the ball across for a first down. On the next play Iverson broke thru and tackled McCormick for a seven yard loss. Diehl hit the center for three yards, and an eligible tackle pass to Shortz netted further yardage, but too much greensward stretched before the Bison and a second first down. McCormick dropped back and drop-kicked for the first three points.

Trimmer's kick-off twice rolled out of bounds and the ball was given to Western Maryland upon the forty yard line. An exchange of punts followed with two sensational runbacks by Blaisdell. The second of these placed the ball upon the thirty-six yard line. Preceded by machine-like interference McCormick skirted the ends for thirty-three yards in three successive plays, and Diehl, battering through the heap, scored the first touchdown. Just previously, Perry of Maryland was painfully injured, tearing a ligament in his leg in an attempt to stop Blaisdell. McCormick drop kicked for the point. Score, Bucknell 10, Western Maryland 0.

Western Maryland started to rally, and rushed the ball some fifteen yards after Trimmer's kickoff. Chambers fumbled, however, and Trimmer, who seems to be the ball hound of the present Bucknell eleven, recovered. Line rushes by Diehl, Blaisdell, and McCormick advanced the ball to the nine yard line. With third down and the goal to go, McCormick dropped back as though for a drop kick. The line formed in its semi-circular drop kick formation. All unguarded, Tuck dashed across the goal line, and McCormick's successful pass caught the Maryland eleven unawares. McCormick added the point. Score, Bucknell 17, Western Maryland 0.

Bucknell started its third offensive when Shortz recovered Sillin's fumble. Again Western Maryland was caught napping when Diehl, from an end run formation, unpreceded by interference, smashed through a gap at tackle for ten yards. Goodwin was thrown for an eight yard loss as the final whistle blew.

TIGERS-AMHERST

WJZ to Broadcast Opening Gridiron Struggle, October 3

The barrier goes up on the intercollegiate football season when station WJZ broadcasts the annual gridiron struggle between the tigers and Amherst College at Palmer Stadium, Princeton, N. J., starting at 2:30 Saturday afternoon, October 3.

The broadcasting will be in charge of William S. Langford, one of America's best-known football authorities and the chairman of the Rules Committee of the American Football Association, who will have as an associate, Innis Brown, the sports authority who reported several of the football contests of last season.

The Amherst-Princeton contest is the opening gun in a long football schedule which will include virtually all of the important games of the coming season.

LEVI IS COACHING HASKELL INDIANS

Late information concerning John Levi, the Indian outfielder of the Harrisburg NYP baseball team, indicates that he has joined the Haskell Institute Indian football squad as an assistant coach and is accompanying the team on the 17,000-mile journey it is making in playing twelve of the thirteen games on its grid schedule. Levi had gone to Boston with Eddie Tickey, Harrisburg catcher, early last week, but is understood to have been called to Lawrence, Kan., where the school is located, in order to join his former teammates. His athletic knowledge will be enhanced on this trip in his ability as a traveler, and should be a big aid to the other redmen. It is probable that Levi will be on the job when the Haskell players meet Bucknell at Lewisburg next month.

FORM EDUCATION CLUB

A club to be composed of the students of the Education department of the University will be formed at a meeting of all students interested in such work to be held on Thursday, October 8. The club will function to bring speakers on educational topics to Bucknell and to stimulate interest in educational problems.

Announcement has been made recently at Pennsylvania State College that work is to begin at once upon the construction of three concrete tennis courts, so arranged that in winter they can be flooded to make a skating rink. The construction of this rink, which will be almost 150 feet square, is one more step in the program for improving the athletic facilities at Penn State as outlined by Coach Hugo Bezdek when he first went to Penn State in 1918.

"This is not as our fathers did"

THE civilization of the Chinese is old—older than the oldest records that are musty and yellow with age. Yet China today enjoys very few of our modern improvements. The Chinese do not welcome change. They object to innovation, saying "This is not as our fathers did!"

Imagine an American today saying that he did not want electricity because his father was satisfied with candles!

Why have we progressed?

Advertising, more than anything else, has made of us a nation willing to judge something new on its merits, rather than on narrow, ancient traditions.

Advertising today is as necessary as electricity, sanitation, and rapid transit. It is more than the system by which we are kept informed of every new improvement that is to our advantage. It is the catalog wherein, every day, all manner of articles are listed for use with their individual advantages.

Read the newspaper advertisements. Be guided by them. They will help you in making your selections. They will save you money.

To buy the new is to progress—to learn of it first is to read advertising

CAPTAIN I. O'HAY, SOLDIER-HUMORIST, TO GIVE LECTURE

TWO OTHER ATTRACTIONS HAVE BEEN PLANNED FOR THE YEAR

A Man of Wide Experience

Will Appear At Mass Meeting Night Before Homecoming Large Crowd Expected

A life story that is stranger than fiction will be unfolded to Bucknellians on Friday, October 16 at 7:30 P. M., when Captain Irving O'Hay speaks in Commencement Hall under the auspices of the University Dramatic and Literary Board.

The occasion is the night before Homecoming and it has been decided to substitute for the usual nerve-shattering mass meeting an opportunity for the faculty, students, and returned alumni to hear the man of whom it has been said, "He has the humor of Mark Twain, the philosophy of Mr. Dooley, and the wit of George Ade." "Uncle" Charlie Moran has agreed that such an evening will put the team in a fitter frame of mind and make for better cheering next day than the prolonged and noisy demonstration that almost invariably precedes big games. However band selections, interspersed with a few songs and cheers, will provide an outlet for all pent-up energy and introduce the address of Captain O'Hay—soldier of fortune, humorist, traveler, thinker.

Irvin S. Cobb, himself a globetrotter of no mean experience, describes O'Hay as a "connoisseur of wars." Indeed, a record of his military service

COUNCIL INFLICTS NOVEL PUNISHMENT

Huester Bears Sign, Wears Mask, For Faking His Name

Eight freshmen and two sophomores were privileged to appear before the Interclass Council to answer charges brought against them during the week, at the meeting held Monday evening, September 28. Numerous signs and variations in ordinary costume resulted from the answers made to the charges brought and these aided materially to the entertainment of the visitors at the football game last Saturday.

Perhaps the most striking example of the action of the council was the novel punishment meted out to one Huester, who, when called for not speaking, the previous week, gave his name as Applegate. Applegate was called before the council, was found to be another person than the one who had been reported and Huester was finally found. The result was

"Y. M." INTRODUCES FRESHMAN SINGS FOR THE TUESDAY EVENING MEETINGS

PLANS WORK OF THE DISCUSSION GROUP

The various services of the Y. M. C. A. are gradually shaping up in the regular form as the students are settling down to routine work again.

One innovation, the freshman sings, has been introduced and promises to become the outstanding feature of the "Y" work for the year. The first sing was held last Tuesday evening in the Y. M. C. A. room while fraternity meetings were in progress. Charles Carpenter and Melvin Shuttlesworth were in charge. They have acquired from the Philadelphia Music League a number of song sheets. A piano has also been secured for the room through the kindness of Professor Stolz. "Lew" Kessler played during the meeting. Around him gathered a group of players including Rudisill on the saxophone, Cornely and Shipman with banjos, and Hoffman, a trumpeter.

Plans for the work of the discussion groups and their organizations are being made by Charles Farrow and others, with Professor Bond, of the department of religious education. Professor Bond seems to be well pleased with the progressive attitude taken by the college "Y" in contrast to the conservativeness of the city Associations.

The employment bureau, under the direction of R. H. Taylor, 52 East College, has undertaken its work and is busy looking for positions for the men and a few men for positions.

STUDENT COUNCIL DISCUSSES BIDDING

Also Completes All Arrangements Regarding Proceedings

Administration of the last phases of the rushing season occupied the attention of the Student Council at its last meeting, held in Main 1 on Monday evening.

One of the first matters of discussion was the time at which the week of silence was to begin. The opinion of the council was that the time set must be Wednesday morning at eight o'clock, in accordance with the time of the opening of college and the opening of the intensive rushing period.

Completion of the arrangements for the common bid day was then attended to. The securing of the slips and the envelopes and the list of all the new students was entrusted to a committee and the selection of faculty members to sponsor the bidding was brought under discussion.

Whether or not attendance at the meeting would be compulsory on all new students was brought in question at this time and as the statement in last week's Bucknellian, quoting the rule, made it appear to be so the council desired that it be made plain that students who do not desire to attend will not be forced to do so and that no penalty of any kind will be attached to their absence.

In discussing the issues brought up by the faculty committee on social functions of the college, it was moved that a committee of the council be appointed to draw up in definite form the points considered by the fraternity heads. The course of the discussion revealed that the council felt that it had no power to make regulations in any social matter but that the heads of the fraternities might make suggestions as to what they considered to be the proper course.

The issues that were defined by the faculty committee consisting of Professors Whyte, Griffith, and Ballentine were the giving of favors, the holding of dances that continued until late hours, the chaperonage of dances, and the general expense of social activities for the year. Discussion of these matters brought no definite conclusions.

Prof. T. F. Hamblin Addresses D. A. R.

Tells How Government Passed From States To Washington

"Our Changing Constitution" was the subject of an able address, delivered Monday evening, October 5, before the Shikellimo chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution by Professor Thos. F. Hamblin, of Bucknell University. Mrs. Albert Johnson was the hostess.

"To get at the beginning," said Dr. Hamblin, "we must go back 2000 years. In government there has been

Mathewson, Greatest Pitcher, Loses His Struggle With Death

WON WORLD-WIDE FAME BY PITCHING ABILITY, AND GAINED UNIVERSAL ADMIRATION BY FIDELITY TO HIS IDEALS

"Big Six" is dead. The man who revolutionized baseball has passed on. He died on Wednesday night at Saranac, New York, where he has been most of the time since last Easter, when he suffered a relapse, after apparently having won his fight against tuberculosis. With his passing, professional sport, and especially baseball, has lost a commanding figure. But though "Matty" has gone, his fame will remain as long as baseball endures. No other player ever won the affection of baseball lovers to as great a degree as Christy Mathewson did. He was the premier figure in the baseball world.

But it was not alone because of his skill as a pitcher, great though that was, that Matty was known and loved so widely. It was because of what he was, rather than because of what he did, that Christy Mathewson became the idol of the entire baseball world. It was because of his qualities of heart and mind, rather than his skill of arm and fingers, that he won the affection of Americans, young and old. It was because of his genuine sportsmanship, his integrity, his cleanness of life, his high ideals that baseball was made over, and raised to a cleaner, higher level.

(Courtesy, Saturday News.)
"BIG SIX"

In all history there is perhaps no more striking case of the force of a good example. When Mathewson entered baseball, the sport was somewhat drab in reputation. Disgraceful brawls and ungentlemanly conduct on the field were common enough. Mathewson was a new type of player. He was first of all a gentleman. He was a college man—something rare, indeed, in baseball. He never quarreled with other players. He did not dispute decisions by the umpires. He would not play ball on Sunday. Yet

TO UNITE CHRISTIAN WORKERS

A plan for the unification of all Christian workers on the Bucknell campus was proposed by Professor Bond, head of the department of religious education, at a special meeting of the local Student Volunteer group held on Thursday evening, October 1, at Professor Bond's home. The members of the organization discussed other plans for the coming year, as well as the things which have been accomplished during the past year. They tried to give Professor Bond an idea of what the Student Volunteer Organization here has undertaken. The attention of those present was not, however, confined strictly to business, for a great deal of attention had to be devoted to the delicious refreshments served by Mrs. Bond and Miss Pennypacker.

NEW STUDENTS

New students are requested to be present at Commencement Hall on Tuesday, October 13, at four o'clock, to receive the bids of the fraternities. However there will be no penalty for absence, and students who are not desirous of obtaining bids at this time need not appear. Any bids that are held for persons who do not attend the meeting will be delivered to them the same evening.

DR. HILL TO LECTURE

Another fine lecture on education, following close upon that of Professor Briggs, last week, will be that of Dr. Howard C. Hill, connected with the department of education at the University of Chicago. This talk will be given in the lecture room of the Biology Building on Monday night, at 7:30.

Dr. Hill has done a remarkable work as director of the demonstration school conducted by the University of Chicago. He is the author of several textbooks on education, and is a widely known lecturer in his field. He will speak on methods used in the university's high school.

On the same day Professor Hill is scheduled to speak before the institute of the Sunbury city schools. Superintendent Geasey of the Sunbury schools has extended a very cordial invitation to the students and teachers at Bucknell to attend this lecture, free of charge.

CHOIR IS FEATURE OF FROSH CHAPEL

A Chorus Of Twenty Freshmen Sings At Services

The newly-organized freshman choir of twenty voices is proving to be a very popular feature of the freshman chapel. In addition to leading the congregational singing, the choir sings some special music at each meeting.

Tuesday's chapel music was featured by the singing of "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me," with Miss A. L. Leslie singing the stanzas and the choir joining in the chorus. Professor Isaac E. Norris was at the piano. The Rev. H. F. Babcock, of the Methodist Church, gave a talk. On the preceding Thursday, at its first appearance, the choir sang "Beneath the Cross," by Benwald, and greatly pleased the audience.

This organization was created by Ralph F. Hartz, director of the glee club, at the suggestion of Professor Clarence R. Johnson, who, with Professor Charles M. Bond, is in charge of the freshman chapel. Twenty volunteers responded to his call for singers. The women members include Frances Sale, Elizabeth Seigfried, Mary Gertrude Dunkle, Edythe Evans, Pauline Brown, Elizabeth Dauman, Katharine Heldt, Irene Colbin, Elizabeth McHase, Dorothy Gresh, Josephine Roberts, and Miss Leslie. The men are Alton Roth, J. C. Jones, John Vail, C. A. Streeter, Irvin Hoch, C. Rivenburg, W. Goe, and Theodore Lavers.

The first appearance of this choir was Thursday, October first, and special music has been sung at each chapel since then. Director Hartz plans to make the choir music a very attractive feature, with special music at every assembly.

In order to secure greater volume, he would like to have a still larger choir. Additional volunteers would be welcome. Those wishing to try for the choir should hand their names to Mr. Hartz, who will be glad to see them at his room in the Music School.

The good spirit shown by those who have volunteered for this service is commendable. The work of this choir should go far toward making freshman chapel interesting and attractive.

Flynn, St. Bonaventure's Star, Prevents Bucknell Score By Remarkable Tackle

Bucknell found St. Bonaventure a doughty foe, winning only 13 to 0 over the New York team in the second game of the season, played in Memorial Stadium last Saturday. The individual brilliance of the Goodwin brothers aided much in bringing victory to the Orange and Blue. Sid Goodwin, with his forty-five-yard runback of an intercepted pass, and his seventy-yard end run, excelled for Bucknell.

But for sheer grit, determination, and defensive brilliancy, the laurels of the game must rest upon the brow of one, Flynn, the hundred and twenty-five pound safety man of St. Bonaventure. On three separate occasions Flynn averted a Bucknell score by his deadly tackling. Twice he pulled up from behind on the fleet Goodwin. Pursuing the hundred-and-eighty-pound Goodwin, he looked like a bleating lamb gamboling after its mother, but his tackling was true as the spring of a panther for the jugular.

Bucknell played loosely. The backfield was sluggish and the line phlegmatic. Diehl, the star of last Saturday's game, slowed up considerably. The interfering backs rarely left their

Bucknell Commons Club Acts To Become Greek Frat

The Bucknell Commons Club, a member of the American Association of Commons Clubs, has acted to accept the invitation of the Alpha Chapter of the Phi Lambda Theta fraternity, to become the Gamma Chapter of that organization. This action was approved by the faculty, upon the presentation of a petition through the faculty secretary, Professor Arthur Lindemann, in the regular faculty meeting on Wednesday afternoon.

In its brief history the Commons Club has made remarkable advances. In the spring of 1924 a movement was started on the campus for the purpose of forming a social organization to which men who were not then members of fraternities might be welcomed. The impracticability of in-

FIRST NUMBER OF THE ARTIST COURSE BRINGS MISS ELSIE BAKER, CONTRALTO

TO APPEAR AT BAPTIST CHURCH, OCT. 22

The Bucknell University Artist Course presents Elsie Baker as its first attraction, in the Baptist church on Thursday, October 22, 1925, at 8:15 o'clock.

Miss Baker is a contralto, a Victor artist, whose superb singing and radiant personality have thoroughly embedded themselves as an integral part of American life. Her versatility of musical expression is unexcelled and the happiness she is continually bringing to young people through the medium of her beautiful voice places her, unquestionably, in a most enviable position in the country's musical realm.

The artists of this course are brought to Bucknell for the express purpose of giving the young men and women of the University an opportunity to get acquainted with our nationally known artists. Nevertheless the programs given by these artists will not be "highbrow", but they will be within reach of the appreciation of every student at Bucknell.

The management of the course informs the Bucknellian that the sale of tickets among non-fraternity men has been excellent. Practically every member of the freshman class who has been approached has purchased a ticket for the five numbers. According to the manager's statement the success of the course depends now upon the backing of at least 60 per cent of all fraternity men. In his words, "Let's go, and score another cultural victory for Bucknell!"

What the Colleges Are Doing

GREEK STUDY BY RADIO

New York University Will Start New Course on Oct. 17.

Greek over the radio is planned as one of the courses to be given by the New York University Air College, starting Oct. 17. Part of the course will involve an elemetary knowledge of the ancient Greek language, according to Professor Ralph V. D. Magoffin, head of the department of classics at New York University, who probably will conduct the course.

The other part of the course will deal with the interpretation of the influence of Greek culture upon modern life. This will be the first time the radio will be brought into use to help provide an education in the home. The curriculum of the Air College this year also will include courses in the social sciences, including economics and history. It is planned to give special elementary courses in physical and natural sciences.

COLUMBIA LIBRARY ADDS 41,775 BOOKS

Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, has made public the annual report of Professor William H. Carpenter, acting librarian, showing that the university libraries now contain 1,024,423 volumes. During the year, according to the report, 41,775 volumes were added. The general library received 18,611 new volumes, the School of Law 12,869, Teachers' College 4,005, Barnard College 2,321, the Dental School 1,655, School of Medicine 1,321, School of Architecture 617, and College of Pharmacy 376.

"The most important addition to the resources of the library in a single direction was in foreign law," says Professor Carpenter. "The larger part consists of sets of books or publications in series, and includes legal periodicals containing articles on all the various phases of Continental law, sets of annual volumes containing the legislation passed by various European legislative bodies, and sets containing the decisions of the courts.

"More and different language dictionaries are in demand. An interesting illustration is the use of general encyclopedias in the reference reading room. Before 1915 a collection of the best encyclopedias in English, French, German, Italian, and Spanish proved adequate for most demands, but now the collection contains encyclopedias, in addition to those already mentioned, in Dutch, Danish, Norwegian, Swedish, Polish, Czech, and Russian, and most of these are frequently used."

Yale Appoints Psychiatrist

Yale University has announced the appointment of Dr. Arthur H. Ruggles as consultant in mental hygiene to the Department of University Health, and lecturer in psychiatry in the School of Medicine for a period of one year. The university has also nominated Dr. Ruggles to the Board of Directors of the New Haven Hospital as psychiatrist to the hospital and dispensary.

It is anticipated that Dr. Ruggles will establish an active connection with the Connecticut State Mental Hygiene Association, which maintains mental hygiene clinics throughout the State. The Department of University Health has charge of the physical welfare of the students.

President James R. Angell, in commenting upon the selection of Dr. Ruggles, said:

"With this appointment Yale begins the development of a highly important contribution to medical education, to the welfare of the student body, and to the hygiene interests of New Haven and neighboring communities."

Yale Corporation May Veto Plan To Abolish Chapel

Veto of the plans of Dean Frederick S. Jones, of Yale College, to do away with daily compulsory chapel for upperclassmen may be given by the Yale Corporation at its meeting this week. The corporation has heretofore opposed the movement to abolish daily chapel or to limit the number of students required to go to chapel. President James Rowland Angell, of the University, is understood to be inclined to the dean's plan.

It is understood that Dean Jones desires to initiate his plan because of the limited seating capacity of Battell Chapel. Under the new building code of the city, the balcony in the chapel has been declared unsafe, and to get the upperclassmen into the building the dean proposed to divide the 1500 upperclassmen into two groups, sending them into chapel on alternate days. The freshmen would go each day.

There has long been opposition to the ancient custom of compulsory chapel on the part of college faculty and undergraduates.

Princeton Students Came From Thirty Three States

Thirty-three states are represented in the newly admitted freshman class of Princeton University. Of the 635 enrolled, the greatest single percentage is that of New York State with 138. New Jersey is second with 133 and Pennsylvania third with 109.

There are two freshmen from China; one from Canada; one from the Canal Zone; one from Honolulu; and seven from the District of Columbia.

The Middle and Far West gained in numbers more than other sections of the country. Illinois gained ten more members; Massachusetts, eight; Kentucky, six; Indiana, five; and Colorado and Arkansas both four.

New Theatre Under Construction For Yale University

The most completely and adequately equipped laboratory in existence for play writing and play production is to be erected at Yale University.

Digging for the foundation of the theatre, made possible through a gift of Edward S. Harkness, '97, of New York, was begun last week. The gift also will provide for the establishment of a department of drama in the Yale School of Fine Arts.

The stage will be of professional proportions, sixty-six feet wide, forty feet deep and seventy-five feet to the top of the gridiron from which the scenery is suspended.

The building, of Gothic design, will have three distinct features, a complete theatre, a school of the drama, and accommodations for the Yale Dramatic Association.

HILLTOP BRIEFS

Paul Webster and Rolland Dutton sold Bibles last summer. Business prevented their return to college until after the term had opened.

Tom Lewis and Charles Farrow assisted the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to keep a goin' last summer. Tom sold tickets at Atlantic City, and Charles served as passenger brakeman from Philadelphia to Atlantic City.

George Walker spent his vacation in Oklahoma. He must have undertaken a variety of occupations for when asked what he did he said, "Name it and I did it."

We have a "hot" saxophone player in the person of Fred Rudisill, who comes to us from West Point. His ability as a tennis player causes regret for the one year ruling.

Two students in a Ford got in a mix-up with the community ambulance at the corner of Fourth and Market streets last week. The ambulance wasn't damaged to any great extent.

The impromptu concert in the "Y" room of West College that was so entertaining was really the first of the regular Frosh Sings which are to be held every Tuesday evening at the time of fraternity meetings.

Paul B. Cooley, '23,, was recently elected to a lieutenancy in the second headquarters squadron of the 103rd cavalry, P. N. G. He was presented with a handsome saber, saber knot, and spurs at the annual banquet of the organization, at the Forest House, last week.

Professor James P. Whyte was the principal speaker at the banquet of the West Branch League, the local exponents of organized baseball. The banquet was held in the rooms of the Lewisburg Club. Dayton L. Ranck, '16, comptroller of the University and president of the league, was also one of the speakers.

John Gittens spent quite an enjoyable summer. He toured the States with some of the "Home Town Folks." In the course of his pilgrimage he hit Wyoming, Oregon, Washington, California, Canada, and many points between. He is now considering opening an information bureau for the benefit of those intending to tour the United States.

There are smiles from Indiana,
There are smiles from Idaho;
There are smiles from Maine to California,
Ther are smiles from north to Mexico.
There are smiles all over this great nation,
in whatever state your footsteps fall,

Are the smiles that are best of all.

Reading Boosted By Librarian At Lafayette College

That books in a college library are there to be read and not to collect dust, is the theory of Dr. John R. Crawford, librarian at Lafayette College, as evidenced by the blotter now being distributed to students at the college. The blotter urges them to read.

"Making it a reading year" is the slogan set forth on the blotter, together with quotations from literature indicating the value of reading and the result of neglecting to read.

This bit of advertising is in keeping with the general policy of the reading room, so arranged as to attract the student and to interest him in reading. New books in various fields and books suggested by the various departments are made easily accessible to the students.

Loans granted to students on a character basis, and for purposes of study, are reported by the Harmon Foundation to be good pay. More than 40 per cent of the $26,385 loaned to students during the year 1922-23 has been paid, though according to agreement only 20 per cent was due on February 1, 1925. The foundation reports that not a single account is likely to default.

Gettysburg Opens Athletic Field

Gettysburg College dedicated a new athletic field that was built at a cost of approximately $30,000 at its game with Lehigh last Saturday. The event was the big feature of their alumni day. It was not the only momentous move however for in the morning ground was broken for two new buildings at the battlefield college. The new buildings planned are a science hall and a gymnasium.

Mr. Advertiser:

Last week we stated the purpose of advertising, to create demand, and stated that advertising should create both a present demand and a store of good will for future transactions.

The effort of our future suggestions shall be to offer guidance on ways and means of accomplishing this object.

The first step in creating a demand is the arousing of interest. This demands that advertising attract attention. Money spent for an advertisment that does not draw the eye is money wasted. Successful advertisers,therefore, make their messages unique and attractive.

Six of these men were ranking scholars for the entire year and fourteen received grades of over 90 per cent. for the second term.

The number of ranking scholars for the year in individual subjects was thirty-four in mathematics, twenty-seven in English, twenty-two in history, nineteen in Latin, fifteen in German, fourteen in French, thirteen in chemistry, thirteen in Spanish, twelve in drawing, six in Greek, one in social science, and one in biology.

Who's Who at B.U.

The Alumni-publicity office was unfortunate to mislay the "cut" of the senior class president, so that the Who's Who must go in unlecorated by the picture of the man who is responsible for much of the college life and many of the campus activities for this year. "Fred" Evans was elected last spring to the position of president of the senior class, which involves the additional place as head of Student Council. This gives him the opportunity of having quite a hand in the affairs of Bucknell.

"Fred" is a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity and has shown himself capable of being admired for his sociable disposition as well as his ability to put across whatever he starts to do. He is taking up the electrical engineering course and is a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

He is well known and well liked on the campus, and it is believed that he will maintain this position of respect on the part of students as he heads the work of Student Council this year. The present year promises to be a fine one for Bucknell and if it is, Fred will have a large share in the making of it. The entire University is back of him in his position and expects him to back the reputation of the University in the way he best can.

When Greek Meets Greek

"A King an Count once played a game,
They delta pack of cards—for shame!
A gamma poker, too;
Now when the King had lost a bit
He yawned and said, "We'd better quit,
What do iota you?"
"Six bones," the lucky Count replied,
The monarch heaved a psi and died
Or very nearly so.
"Omega is my pittance, Sir,
If not," he moaned, "with small demure
I'd pay right soon but Oh!
Micron is only worth the half
Of what you ask—but stay—you laugh?"
For Rho! what courtier rude
Declared, "That's something nu on me!
Oh! Phi upon your Majesty!
You talk as if you're stewed!"
"What!" roared that monarch brave and true,
"I'll sigma dog on you!"
To kappa climax fleet;
The Count, he lambed a mighty blow;
The King, he took the count but Oh!
The Count he took the monarch's dough
And beta swift retreat.

PROF. SPRAGUE WRITES OF TRAVELS; COULDN'T KISS THE BLARNEY STONE

VISITS SPAIN, FRANCE, ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, IRELAND. SEES HOMES OF MANY FAMOUS AUTHORS. LIKES SCOTCH LAKE COUNTRY

Although my primary object in going to Europe the past summer was to spend time in Spain to acquaint myself more with the people, language, and customs of that country, I spent some time travelling in the British Isles and France before arriving at Madrid.

I landed in the British Isles at a time when nature seemed to be at its best, and, contrary to my expectations, there was no rain while I was there. Everything was luxuriantly green and the great masses of golden yellow blossoms of the furz or bloom plant, the lavenier clusters of the rhododendren, and the white and pink hawthorne flowers were everywhere aiding their charm to the beauty of the rolling landscape.

Blarney Castle, now a vine-covered ruin capping a high hill, at the foot of which runs a sparkling brook, was a cool and restful place where I spent my first afternoon after disembarking at Queentown, Ireland. Due to the fact that the Irish Government has forbidden and indeed made it impossible to kiss the Blarney stone I was unable to follow tradition in that respect.

The emerald lakes of Killarney surrounded by wooded hills, estates of the lords, and the ruins of old castles seemed to me the most beautiful part of the Island. When I told a lace-vender at Killarney that I lived a short distance west of New York, she replied that I probably lived in San Francisco. From this vicinity, I travelled to Dublin where there were many evidences of civil strife; whole blocks of fine public buildings are in ruins due to riots and struggles and now many of the Irish themselves see how fruitless such devastation was. It was here that I first saw the familiar red front of the Woolworth store where things sold for three pence or six pence instead of the customary " 5 and 10."

Belfast is the most progressive and energetic city of Ireland and all its inhabitants pride themselves on this fact. One feels himself in a different atmosphere upon entering this city. In fact, all of northern Ireland, which is not in the Free State, seems to be more prosperous and happy than the southern part of Ireland.

After visiting the Giant's Causeway, a wonderful and fantastic formation of rocks projecting into the Atlantic ocean, on the north coast of the Island, I crossed to Scotland.

The mountains and hills of Scotland, the highest of which have patches of snow upon them and streams and waterfalls of various sizes tumbling down their rocky slopes, made a pleasing variation to the scenery.

The trip through the Caledonian Canal, a system of lakes and canals traversing the width of the country from Oban to Inverness, the capital of the Highlands, gives one a good impression of that section of the country. On passing through the Trossachs and the beautiful Locks, Kathryn and Lomond, past Ellen's Isle and Ben Vorlick, one is constantly reminded of Sir Walter Scott and his "Lady of the Lake."

Scott's home at Abbotsford is a refined, quiet place on the banks of the Tweed river. The fine old ruins, near Dryburgh and Melrose Abbeys, have a grandeur and mellowness of age about them which I cannot describe. There are many interesting spots in Edinburgh, but the most striking, perhaps, is Princes Street on which is a majestic monument to Sir Walter Scott towering high in the center of a parkway. I do not agree with the Scotch that this is "the most beautiful street in the world," although it has many charming features.

In this brief article I cannot do justice to the many interesting and historical places of England. The lake district, called the "Switzerland of England," well deserves the name. While not as grand as the Swiss lakes, Ullswater, Derwentwater, Grasmere, and Windemere cannot fail to remain an idelible picture in the mind of the tourist. In addition to their natural charm, they are surrounded by the reminders of Wordsworth and one may visit his home,now a museum of his works and properties, the church in which he worshiped and is buried, and his rustic seat at Rydalwater where he wrote some of his works, among them his well known poem, the "Daffodils."

Stratford-on-Avon is filled with evidences of England's love and appreciation of the great poet who lived there, and thousands of tourists visit the place every year. Warwick and Kenilworth castles, the Derbyshire Peak district, Oxford, with its great institution of learning, and the many abbeys are all places of interest. I had only five days to spend in London and felt that I had only gotten a glimpse of what was to be seen after visiting the British Museum, Westminster Abbey, the houses of Parliament, Picadilly Circus, the Royal buildings, and Trafalgar Square.

Flying between London and Paris is now very popular but, since the train and boat fare is about one-fifth of the flying fare, I chose the former. During my week in Paris, I visited as many historic and interesting places as possible, but the time was all too short. Paris is such a historical and artistic city that one would have to remain there a long time to exhaust its attractions for the stranger. One does not know France at large, however, by just seeing Paris, so I took enough time to spend two days in the Chateaux district of LaTouraine before leaving for Spain, with the expectation of seeing Southern France and more of Paris on my return later in the summer.

Editor's note—

Professor Sprague has consented to write three articles on his European trip, taken last summer. The second, concerning his stay in Spain, will appear next week.

KEEP ON CLIMBING

Please remember that there is plenty of room at the top without pushing anyone off. Such an authority as Judge Gary offers this information.

If you have started to climb the ladder of success, don't hesitate, stop, or back down: That's fatal.

Don't worry about not being able to gain a foothold should you finally reach the summit. The top is not overcrowded.

Although many successful men have gotten there before you, there still is room for more successes.

And the reason there is room is that so many men have become fainthearted enroute to the top, have lost courage, and given up—some of them when almost within sight of the goal.

The way is strewn with faint hearts. Courage is a fine thing to carry about with you wherever you go, and especially is it valuable in your business.

Many a man with bright prospects would have been a success if he had possessed the courage to go on.

But there's just the trouble. There are too many men lacking confidence in themselves, who hesitate and stop when their objective is almost within their grasp.

They don't know what is really in them until they finally pick up courage and begin to hustle. No one does.

Carry on, brother—carry on.

And don't ever worry about the lack of room at the top. The room is there, and waiting for you.

"Where can a man buy a cap for his knee?

Or a key to the lock of his hair?

Can his eyes be called an academy because there are pupils there?

If so, what did he do?

How does he sharpen his shoulder blades?

If so, why not grow corn on his ear?

MATTY, GREAT PITCHER, DIES AFTER STRUGGLE

he was no goody goody, and his ability was second to no man's.

Indeed, it was his remarkable skill that first made him the popular idol. It was his integrity and force of character that held his admirers year after year, until the baseball populace of America worshipped "the old master" as no other athlete has ever been worshipped before or since. He became the standard by which other players were judged—with the remarkable result that baseball was elevated unbelievably in tone.

Fame Was World Wide

Certainly no other baseball player ever achieved such wide popularity. His fame was world wide. Wherever baseball is played, the name of Mathewson is known and revered. When the New York Giants landed in Japan, during their tour of the world a dozen years ago, they found that almost every inhabitant of the Island Kingdom could speak three words of English. They were: "Where Mr. Masson?" (Mathewson)

In the light of this wide popularity, and the effect his life has had in helping young America toward clean living, it is interesting to know that his mother planned for him a career as a minister. His mother revealed that fact herself in an interview years ago with a representative of The Delineator.

"Yes, that is what I planned that Christy should be," she said. "But things are not always as we would have them. I suppose it was just not to be. Yet sometimes I find consolation in the thought that perhaps he IS a preacher. His work has brought him before the multitude in a kindly manner; his example is a clean one. He reaches the masses in his own way and he must give them something through his character."

His Secret Was Character

Character was the secret of all Mathewson's success—character backed by headwork. Those of us who were in college with him will never forget how he spent hours and hours alone on Loomis Field, kicking a football, until Walter Camp rated him as the greatest drop-kicker in America—as he probably was. And during his summer vacations he carried a football with him and kicked it in season and out, developing a skill with a football that was quite the equal of his remarkable ability with a baseball. It was strength of character that held him to the task, hour after hour, day after day.

Through all his later career, character was evident in all he did. Had he chosen to take all the money that came his way, he could undoubtedly have acquired great wealth. But just as he would not play baseball on Sunday for money, so he would not take money that he might have gotten in ways of which he disapproved. His mother told the Delineator representative about one of the opportunities that he refused.

Money Didn't Turn His Head

"I am going to tell you something that makes me feel that I haven't failed with my boy," she said. "Last year Christy came to me and told me that an offer had been made to him to lend his name to a big Broadway amusement place—a drinking and dancing place—just to let it be called the Christy Mathewson and to appear there for five or ten minutes once or twice a week. Great pressure was put on him. The temptation was thousands of dollars a year. 'Well?' I said, although I was sure of him. 'Mother' said he, 'if I had to make money that way I wouldn't want any.'

"Money can cost too much. A play was written for Christy. It was very successful. When he had finished his contract he was offered another and a better one—that is, more money. Jane, Christy's wife, said that all the money in the world would not pay her for having her husband away from his home all the time. That is the spirit that makes for a home and home life." Christy did not appear in the play.

Even as a child Mathewson possessed unusual force of character. Perhaps the world will never have a better illustration than his life affords of the fact that accomplishment is merely character plus skill. It was youthful strength of mind that enabled Mathewson to acquire his remarkable skill. He never lost his head and he had the courage to work at a thing until he mastered it—which is the fundamental rule of success. His mother told a story that illustrates well his unusual calmness of mind.

"Let's Talk It Over"

"One day, when Christy was not more than three years old, we were visiting at grandfather's, and he and his little Aunt Jessie paid a visit alone to the stable where Dandy, grandfather's pet carriage horse, was tied in his stall. A fine place to pitch stones, the children thought. Finally they chose Dandy's sleek sides for targets, and Dandy resented this treatment by stamping and prancing. Hearing the noise, grandfather ran to the stable, and discovering the cause, seized a horsewhip. He spoke to the now frightened children in no gentle tones. Jessie made a bee line for the house, but Christy stood stock-still. As grandfather came within reaching distance of him he said: 'Wait a minute grandpa, and let's talk it over first.' Needless to say, after they talked it over, grandfather did not use the whip."

Another story by his mother shows this same characteristic of "headiness." "One year the Factoryville nine was going to play the Honesdale nine. There was a lot of practicing, so much that when the day came for the game, Christy's potato patch had not been picked. I had told him that he could not go to Honesdale unless the patch had been taken care of. On the morning of the game he tried to beg off. All of his playmates came to me and tried to beg him off. Without Christy, they said, Factoryville would be beaten. I answered that Factoryville would have to be beaten, then.' Like Mark Twain's youthful hero, Christy put his friends to work. They cleaned up the field before noon. "And," said Christy's mother, "I paid them with a good meal, and Factoryville won the game."

Practiced With Ball Early

It was in this same town of Factoryville that Christy was born. He began to practice with a baseball when he was ten years old. It was then that he learned to throw a curve. At the age of twelve he could throw both "ins" and "outs". He was allowed to play on a regular team of boys a little older than himself. Writing in the St. Nicholas magazine, Christy himself told something of those early days.

"When I was fourteen years old, the pitcher on the Factoryville team was taken ill one day, just before a game with a nine from a town a few miles away, and the contest was regarded as very important in both villages. Our second pitcher was away on a visit, and so Factoryville was 'up against it' for a twirler. You must remember that all the players on this team were grown men—several of them with whiskers on their faces—and I had always looked up to them as idols. When the team could find no pitcher, some one remarked to the captain, 'That Mathewson kid can pitch pretty well.' But the backers of the team and the other players were skeptical, and, like men who come from Missouri, 'wanted to be shown.' So they told me to come down on the Main street in Factoryville the next morning, which was Saturday, the day of the game, and take a 'try-out.' The captain was there. 'We want to see what you've got,' said he.

"Most of the baseball population of the town gathered to see me get my try-out, and I pitched for two hours, while the critics stood around and watched me closely, to discover what I could do. They sent their best batters up to face the curves I was throwing. I was putting everything I had on the ball. After a full hour's dress rehearsal, and when, at last, I 'fanned' out the captain of the team, he came up, slapped me on the back, and said, 'You'll do. We want you to pitch this afternoon.'"

The Proudest Day Of His Life

That day, said Matty, was the proudest day of his life. The team drove ten miles to the opponents' town, and all the other boys watched him leave with the men. "And you can imagine my pride," said Christy. "While I watched THEM, as they stood on one foot and then the other, nudging one another and saying, 'Husk' is going to play with the men.' They called me 'Husk' in those days."

"It was a big jump upward for me, and I would hardly look at the other youngsters as I climbed into the carriage with the captain. If the truth were told, however, I felt almost 'all in' after the hard session I had been through in the morning."

Happily Factoryville won the game. Christy tells about it, with characteristic modesty—for no man ever heard him boast. "Our team gained the victory by the count of 19-17, and largely by a bit of good luck that befell me. With my hands crossed on the bat, as usual, I just happened to swing where the ball was coming once, when the bases were full, and I knocked it over the left fielder's head. That hit won the game; and that was really my start in baseball." One cannot help feeling glad that the bat did meet the ball that once.

His First Contract

The next fall young Mathewson was sent to Keystone Academy. He played on the Academy nine and next year was captain of it. During the summer he continued to play with the town team, until it suddenly disbanded. About this time the captain of a team in a neighboring town asked Mathewson if the latter would pitch for this neighboring town. "We'll give you a dollar a game," he said in conclusion.

"What! How much?" cried Mathewson in amazement. For he loved the game so much that the idea of being paid to play ball seemed to him like finding money.

"A dollar a game," said the captain. "But you'll have to walk over or catch a ride on some wagon."

There was no trolley line connecting the two villages, but young Christy was so delighted with the idea of earning a dollar each week that he said he would surely be there. He was, every week. And often he had to walk both ways. But his weekly dollar was a sure antidote for foot-weariness.

Mathewson's next step upward in baseball was taken in Scranton, where he had gone to watch a game late in the summer following his graduation from Keystone Academy. The Y. M. C. A. team was to play. The regular pitcher was not on hand, and Mathewson was asked to act as substitute. The town boys made a good deal of fun of him, because of his misfit uniform, but after he struck out fifteen men and won the game, he was a hero. He was seventeen years old at the time, and was playing with men much older than he was. This success led to his first real engagement as a pitcher. For some time that summer he played with Honesdale for a salary of twenty dollars a month and board.

It was at Honesdale that Matty learned to throw the curve that had so much to do with his success, his famous "fadeway," a curve that perhaps no other pitcher ever mastered. In Honesdale there was a left-handed pitcher named Williams, who could throw an out-curve to a right-handed batter. The natural curve for a left-handed pitcher is the in-curve to a right-handed batter. Williams exhibited this delivery in practice simply as a "freak" ball. He had no control over it. He showed the ball to Christy and told him how he threw it."

With characteristic foresight Christy saw that if such a curve could be mastered, its possessor would be almost unbeatable. He reasoned that a right-handed pitcher could throw this ball as well as a left-handed one, thus getting an in-curve to a right-handed batter on a slow ball, which was something then absolutely unknown. Williams pitched the ball with the same motion he used in throwing his other curves. But he could never tell where it was going to "break" and therefore it was of no use to him in games.

Mathewson began to practice this curve. He also started to pitch a drop ball while in Honesdale, and he mixed these with his fast one and his old roundhouse curve." He used the drop only when the situation was serious, as that was his best curve and was a surprise to all batters. Few pitchers in that set had a drop ball.

He had attracted the attention of minor league managers, and was offered a contract to play ball with the Taunton team, of the New England League, at $90 a month. He went to Taunton, but all the money he ever received barely paid for his food and lodgings. So the end of the summer found him little better off financially.

That fall he entered Bucknell. He was a strapping big lad, standing almost six feet in his stockings and weighing not far from 190 pounds. He was all bone and muscle, at that. No one would have guessed that he was but 18 years old. He played football, basketball, and baseball, and was good at all of them. But he did not as yet show the skill that made him so notable later.

One thing he did was characteristic of his method throughout. Just as he began to practice the freak curve, when he saw its possibilities, so now, seeing the possibilities in drop-kicking, he began to practice that kick. There were then few good drop-kickers in America, and the drop-kick score five points. So in season and out, Mathewson could be seen down on Loomis Field, booting a football over the bars. When the opportunity came, he was ready for it.

The first big chance was in a game with U. P. in the fall of 1899, when Christy dropped two goals, scoring ten points for Bucknell to Pennsylvania's 20. That was a big achievement for Mathewson. At a still later reads like a roll-call of all the wars since 1897, for he has seen action in virtually every clash of arms from that time to the close of the World War, except when two insurrections or revolutions were in progress at the same time. During that period, all manner of adventures, thrilling exploits, and narrow escapes have been his. He has been wounded several times and many times decorated. He has known princes and presidents and has raised his sword in salute of a dozen flags. Gold lace and tattered rags have clothed him in palaces and in pup-tents. His military career has carried him into widely separated lands—South Africa, Cuba, Serbia, Honduras, Mexico—names that are synonymous with political intrigue, romantic adventure, and comic-opera revolutions where the generals are sham but the bloodshed is genuine. His detailed service record is an imposing one.

CAPT. I, O'HAY, SOLDIER, TO GIVE LECTURE HERE

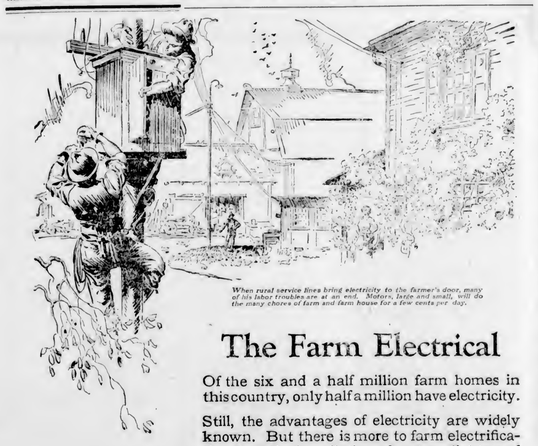
Popular audiences as well as the most profoundly intellectual assemblies have succumbed to the spell of Captain O'Hay's personality, for he comes to Bucknell with enthusiastic endorsements by associations, societies, clubs, chambers of commerce, and similar organizations all over this country.

Two other attractions, dramatic in nature, are planned by the Dramatic and Literary Board for the year. President Henry T. Southwick, who was so well received in his reading of "Julius Caesar" last year, will be heard this winter, probably in March, in another dramatic recital. Efforts are being made to secure one of the Devereaux Players, who appeared in two plays in Commencement Hall two years ago, to give an evening of dramatic impersonations in February. Tickets admitting to both these last entertainments will be sold to students at a nominal price.

If nations went to war no faster than they pay the war debts there would be a fine prospect for unbroken peace.



When rural service lines bring electricity to the farmer's door, many of his labor troubles are at an end. Motors, large and small, will do the many chores of farm and farm house for a few cents per day.

The Farm Electrical

Of the six and a half million farm homes in this country, only half a million have electricity.

Still, the advantages of electricity are widely known. But there is more to farm electrification than the installation of motors, lights and heaters. Current must be brought to the farm, and that means many miles of transmission line, supporting poles, transformers, and adequate generating equipment.

Slowly but surely the electrification of American farms is taking place. As farmers learn how to use electricity, rural service lines reach out farther and farther into open country.

Six million farms to be electrified! Here is a vast and virgin field for the application of electricity, with countless opportunities for college-trained men in the technical and commercial phases of this undertaking. And for the agricultural college student and others planning a future life in rural sections, it means a better, bigger, happier life-time now in the making.

Since its inception the General Electric Company has pioneered in the various fields of applied electricity. Today G-E engineers are co-operating with various State agricultural committees in the study of farm and rural electrification. These committees include members of the agricultural college faculties.

A new series of G-E advertisements showing what electricity is doing in many fields will be sent on request. Ask for Booklet GEK-1.

foot to take out tacklers. Four men had chances to box Flynn on Sid Goodwin's sensational run, but none were able to bring him to earth. Long runs were made solely thru sheer individual brilliance on the part of the backs, not because of coordinated teamwork.

Bucknell's first score came as a total surprise. On the first play of the second quarter, McCormick, heaving the pigskin, made Tuck strain every fibre to grasp it on the fly. Shaking off two tacklers, Tuck raced across the goal line. McCormick booted the goal.

It seems almost a coincidence that the second score should have been made upon the last play of the third quarter. Myrl Goodwin, straight-arming as he dodged, wove thru an open field to the three-yard mark and then crashed tackle for the score. In this effort for the extra point, McCormick missed the crossbars.

On two occasions the Bonaventure line stiffened. This happened when the ball had been rushed twice to the thirty-yard line, and Bucknell was forced to resort to drop kicking, which failed, due to the distance and angle. A third time, when Sid Goodwin's brilliant run had placed the ball upon Bonaventure's three yard line, poor field generalship robbed Bucknell of a third touchdown. Once when the ball was carried over the last line, an offside penalty by both sides cancelled the play. On two plays, nothing was gained thru the guard position. The Bonaventure secondary defense massed close to the right side of the Bucknell line. Their left end played in, where he could have been easily put out of the play. For some reason this was not done, however, and an additional score was forfeited.

During the first quarter, neither team was able to gain consistently, although Bonaventure was gradually forced back on the exchange of punts. Trimmer's sensational tackling in back of the scrimmage line enlivened the period.

By opening the second quarter with a touchdown upon McCormick's pass to Tuck, Bucknell seemed to be lowering the stubborn resistance of the visitors. Diehl, Goodwin, and McCormick carried the ball to the twenty-seven-yard line, but the visitor's defense stiffened and McCormick's first drop was wide. Sid Goodwin, who had just been substituted, startled the stands by catching a long pass on the fifty-yard line, and speeding back to the seven-yard mark before Flynn downed him. The half gong prevented a score.

Bucknell advanced the ball to striking distance early in the third quarter. The Bonaventure line proved too much and McCormick was called upon to do his drop-kicking act from the forty-yard mark. The kick fell short and McAndrews punted in turn. Again the Bucknell offensive failed, and again McCormick's drop fell before the goal post. McCormick returned McAndrews' punt to the thirty-yard line. Then M. Goodwin, after running laterally the width of the gridiron and finding no gap in the Bonaventure pursuit, reversed his field, sliding under two men and straight-arming another, threading through to the five-yard mark. On the next play he scored.

Sid Goodwin's long run featured the last quarter. Blaisdell, forced to warm the bench due to his injuries sustained in the Western Maryland game, ran in for the last few plays, but Bucknell was unable to count another tally.

that he wore a double sign, the front one declaring that his name was Hueter, while the one in the rear was equally strong in its advertisement of Applegate. A false face worn on the back of the head added to the deception. Another "striking" feature of his punishment was a paddling administered by the council. Another freshman and a sophomore who jokingly sent a freshman to the meeting without cause also shared this forceful mode of punishment.

A sophomore who had worn a sweater to class was compelled to wear the garment backwards for the remainder of the week and two freshmen who had committed minor offenses were allowed to go with only a warning and admonition.

Objection To Spanish Speech Causes Tragedy

PHI LAMBDA THETA WILL BE NEW FRAT

cluding all the non-fraternity men in such an organization soon became apparent, and, in its original constitution, the club made provision for the selection of its members by vote. Morality and scholarship were the stated aims of the organization.

The constitution was adopted in March, and at the opening of college the following September, the club occupied its present house on Market street, and had a membership of thirty-five men. However, desiring to have a larger field of activity than is possible in a local organization, the Bucknell Commons Club petitioned for, and in May, 1925, was granted a charter of the American Association of Commons Clubs, a fraternal organization. This action occurred within eleven school months after the organization was formed.

The chapter had been affiliated with the national organization less than six months when the present action was taken. The action of the faculty was the final step in making the action of the chapter in accepting the invitation valid, and it is expected that the installation will occur within the next two weeks.

The nearest sister chapter to the one that will be established, in fact the mother chapter of the fraternity, is located at State College. The fraternity has existed there for some years as a local and has recently started to expand, already having added two or three other chapters, one of which is located at the University of Kansas.

During its life as a commons club the local chapter has been very fortunate in having a number of interested and helpful honorary members. Among these were President Emory W. Hunt, Professors Paul G. Stolz, Frank E. Burpee, James P. Whyte, and Roy F. Howes; Instructors William T. Johnson and George M. Kunkel; Benjamin F. Thomas, former registrar, and Curtis C. Lesher, district attorney.

The active members of the organization are: Penrose C. Wallace, Paul B. Garrett, Walter L. Ranck, Carl F. Krause, Joseph C. Laucks, Stewart F. Brewer, John D. Budd, David D. Malick, Walter L. Wirstanley, H. Leonard Allen, Ralph E. Dorman, Clyde W. Ellzey, Wilson A. Glutting, Louis S. Goldstein, Herbert R. Grundy, Lewis G. Hausser, Francis C. Hopkins, Walter L. Hufnagle, Earl L. Moyer, Lorenzo Scatfi, Samuel P. Bernhaut, Daniel J. Calvert, Ernest H. Englehart, Edward T. Hill, Harry E. Knudson, Phillip M. Reilly, Guy F. Roush, Raymond G. Yelch, and Albert Tabak.

a continual struggle between a single monarch and an aristocracy in ruling nations. Only under a benevolent ruler does a monarchy bring happiness to the governed. And those who are governed become dependent, like children. Some would have made Washington a monarch, but our fathers chose the safe plan of slow-growing efficiency, developed in a democracy."

Dr. Hamblin showed how for a hundred years congress had no powers except such as were specifically granted by the constitution. The powers of congress were under the head of commerce between states or foreign powers.

"All power, then, not granted to congress, or to the president, the constitution gave to the several states."

In a rapid survey Dr. Hamblin cited instances to show that the president sometimes does what is unconstitutional, that congress passes acts which are outside its constitutional powers, and that the state, too, sometimes exceeds its privileges.

"The present tendency is toward centralization," continued Dr. Hamblin. "Since McKinley, every president has taken an increasing hand in legislation. Congress has continually encroached upon the state, largely because commerce has become so extensive. In short, congress has assumed police powers which belong to the state, and so the state has lost power." Dr. Hamblin held that if a new constitution was needed, we should provide one; but that we should always keep within the bounds of the constitution we had.

"When Chief Justice Marshall's decision affected President Madison, he was criticised. But that very criticism clarified ideas. Today the tendency is to hold the supreme court as beyond criticism. There is a growing tendency to centralize the powers of government in Washington. The socialists say we can modify this drift, but cannot check it. We must arouse public intelligence." That is Dr. Hamblin's judgement of the only effective check.

Alumni Notes

ALUMNI ON EYE SIGHT CONSERVATION COUNCIL

Three men who have been connected with Bucknell as students or teachers, and who are influential in educational circles in this part of the state, are aiding the work of the Eye Sight Conservation Council of America in its effort to promote eye sight conservation in the public schools of America.

These men are: Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, '98, superintendent of schools for Williamsport, Carl L. Millward, '06, who is in charge of the Milton schools, and Dr. Nelson P. Benson, Lock Haven's superintendent of schools.

The two first named attended Bucknell as students. Dr. Benson has been teaching in the Bucknell summer school the past few summers. These educators have arranged for lectures in the schools of their cities by Charles F. Southard, field secretary of the council.

"Eye Sight Conservation Day," it is planned, will become a fixed feature of the school system. Already observance of this day with attendant examinations, has been declared by schools in many towns and cities, particularly in the East and the middle West. Eye inspection is an important factor in the Health Day program of New York City, where the eyes of more than 1,000,000 pupils were examined. The work in Pennsylvania is calculated to force upon the attention of pupils, parents, and teachers the handicaps which eye neglect imposes upon the young throughout life.

Close cooperation of parents and teachers will be sought so that continuing observation both at home and in the class room will be encouraged. In this way, it is explained, unsuspected defects will be exposed and remedial measures can be applied, for a great preponderance of these defects are capable of speedy correction. With such a system of observation and control, school authorities will be materially aided and the progress of the young quickened in normal paths.

Defective eyesight, it has been found, is seriously menacing the health of America's 24,000,000 public school children, and hence is indirectly undermining the physical well being of future generations.

Levi J. Ulmer, '02, who has been teaching science for a number of years in the Lock Haven Normal School, recently gave an interesting talk on "Teaching Geography in Rural Schools," at the second fall meeting of the Lycoming County Teachers' Exchange, in the court house at Williamsport.

As reported in the Williamsport Sun, he outlined methods of teaching the "home geography" which the state now requires. He suggested that this type of study follow the study of world geography, and that the lessons be applied by showing what part local geography bears in relation to that of the state, nation, and world. A study of relationship between man and his environment is possible with the home township as the basis of instruction.

"What does the home township produce?" he suggested. "On my way from Lock Haven to this city today I passed fields of tobacco until I reached Jersey Shore. After that I saw none. Why? Is it a question of markets or soil? Study market and acil, study topography."

He suggested studying forestry situations in Lycoming county, pointing out that the county was once covered with virgin timber, and that it would be interesting to the pupils to find out if any is left, where young trees have been planted, how much land the state owns.

Manufacturing, transportation, etc., were mentioned as avenues of research open in the study of local geography.

Camp Devitt, a sanatarium for the treatment of tuberculosis, named for and in charge of Dr. William Devitt, a graduate of the Bucknell Academy, has just completed a campaign for $10,000 in the district along the Susquehanna River between Lewisburg and Lock Haven. The amount was oversubscribed by about $2,000. The American Legion Posts of the sixteenth district presented the sanatarium with a motion picture projection apparatus some time ago. Lawrence A. Henderson, ex-'12, is district president of this organization and made the presentation.

Professor H. S. Everett, '12, Dayton L. Ranck, '16, and Guy Payne, '09, were among the group of members of the Lewisburg Lions Club that attended a luncheon given by the Harrisburg Lions Club in the Penn Harris Hotel, last week. Lions from all parts of the state attended the meeting which was held to discuss plans of a campaign for the systematic advertising of Pennsylvania.

Judge Johnson warned the women against a pessimistic attitude toward public officials, stating that only a few of the great number of public officials are dishonest, just as there are dishonest men in every business. He urged them to have faith in their representatives in office and to help to secure able successors for them.

Other speakers included Mrs. Pinchot, Mrs. Pepper, and Mrs. Durham.

Dr. Mary Wolfe, '96, superintendent of the Laurelton State Village, an institution for feeble-minded girls, recently entertained the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women. Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the governor, was one of the guests at the dinner and inspection that were parts of the entertainment.

E. E. Kerstetter, ex-'98, who is one of the postal delivery clerks at the local post office was recently elected and installed vice regent of the state grand council of the Royal Arcanum. He has been closely identified with the work of that organization for many years and has previously held other high offices.

Dr. Ezra Lehman, '99, principal of the Cumberland Valley State Normal School at Shippensburg, and Lindley H. Dennis, ex-'93, deputy state Superintendent of education, will be instructors in the Cumberland County Teachers' Institute which is to meet at Dickinson College, October 12 to 18.

Albert W. Johnson, '96, federal judge for the middle district of Pennsylvania, was one of the principal speakers at a meeting of the Republican women at the Susquehanna Country Club last week.

CHILDREN OF GRADS ARE MANY AT B.U.

All Classes Have Descendants Of Bucknell Stock

The years roll by, and with them life moves on. Every year sees more Bucknellians who have gone far enough along the pathway of life to have sons and daughters entering their Alma Mater. The other day a senior happened to meet a freshman from Vermont. "What the Deuce made you come way down here!", exclaimed the senior. "Bucknell was my father's Alma Mater," replied the Frosh. "That explains it sure," said the senior.

It is not uncommon to meet the offspring of the "Old Grads" on the campus. Did you know that Charlotte Evans Bosler and Alice Vivian Davis of the class of 1925 were daughters of Bucknellians? In the class of 1926, Ralph Walter, Rolland Dutton, Vera Eister, Richard Horter, Stewart Rankin, Boyd R. Sheddan, Kenneth Slifer, and Anna O. Stephens, are descendants from Bucknell stock. The class of 1927 claims John S. Cregar, Mary Konkle, William Devitt, Jr., Caryl R. Dutton, Willard Laning, Jr., Albert Lauderbaugh, Christopher Matthewson, Jr., and Margarida Reno, as children of former graduates. In the class of 1928, we find Elizabeth Burrowes, Gertrude Downs, Sara Heysham, Mary Laning, Mary Roigers, Theodore Roigers, and Martha Thomas, who are children of Bucknellians.

The above by no means completes the list, but lists a few picked at random. The freshman class, no doubt, has its quota of Bucknell children, but not all these have been discovered.

NEW COURSES STARTED AT TEMPLE UNIVERSITY

New courses at Temple University this year include classes in vocational psychology and in interstate commerce and traffic management.

The psychology course opened Tuesday night, under the School of Commerce of the university, and is planned to teach students the judging of character, personality, emotional traits, and other things employers of labor should know for efficient choosing of help. The transportation course places the teaching of the theoretical and practical phases of the railroad busines upon a scientific basis.

New Host and Hostess Named For Foreign Students at Penn

Parental care for foreign students at the University of Pennsylvania has been provided by the Christian Association of the university with the appointment of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer T. Thompson, of New York, as "host" and "hostess."

The new "dad" and "mother" will succeed the Rev. A. Waldo Stevenson as head of the International Students' House, 3905 Spruce street.

TO SEE HIS ALMA MATER AGAIN, OLDEST LIVING GRADUATE'S DESIRE

Dr. M. Shaw Loo, '64, Missionary To Burma, Grateful To His Bucknell Brothers For Remembering Him

Bucknell's oldest living alumnus, M. Shaw Loo, of Burma, graduated from the University 62 years ago. Three years later he received the degree M. D. from the Cleveland Medical College. He returned at once to Burma, where, for more than a half century he has labored among his countrymen as a medical missionary. But he has not forgotten Bucknell, and when Miss Helen Hunt, daughter of President Hunt, returned to Burma last June to resume her post as dean of women at Judson College, she carried with her for Dr. Shaw Loo a Phi Kappa Psi pin, the gift of the Bucknell chapter, to which he belonged. The receipt of the pin touched Dr. Shaw Loo deeply, and Miss Hunt has written a letter to Professor Owens, telling about it.

DR. M. SHAW LOO (Today)

"I have no idea whether or not Dr. Shaw Loo has ever written you folks," wrote Miss Hunt, "to thank you and the fraternity boys. But I know that he greatly appreciated the things.

"I sent them over to Moulmein with a lot of other things for one of the college girls there, and she took his to him and read him your letter, for his eyes are growing dim. She said he was so happy to hear from you and to receive the things that he just wept for a long time. His memory and all his mental faculties seem to be still quite alert. But he is very deaf, and his eyes are too poor for much reading, in spite of spectacles. He attends church regularly, however. He is a good old man and all respect him.

"He has two grandsons, one of whom was one of Judson College's first graduates, who hold responsible positions and are splendid men. One little granddaughter is a leper, and he and his wife have her in their own home to care for so that she won't endanger the other children.

"I am sure your thought of him meant more to him than you can ever know. He is tremendously interested in the boys, too, and in all the changes at Bucknell since his day. He is a very loyal alumnus."

Though he lives on the other side of the world, and has never been back at Bucknell since his graduation, Dr. Shaw Loo is exactly what Miss Hunt calls him, "a loyal alumnus." Three years ago last February he wrote to Stuart A. Epler, '21, a fellow member of Phi Psi. The letter was in answer to one from the Phi Psi chapter.

"I have received many of your letters," wrote Dr. Shaw Loo, "for which many thanks. You have kept me in touch with Bucknell University, and I thank you greatly for sending me the views of the university, which brought back dear memories of my younger days spent there.....

"It was my birthday on the second instant. I have completed my eighty-third year. On the third I had my photograph taken and I herewith enclose a copy for yourself and am sending an extra one for the Alumni Monthly.....

"I remember Professor Bliss' son, Major General Bliss in the U. S. Army. When I was at Lewisburg he was quite a little boy. He used to call out to me every morning and evening when I passed his house to go into town for my meals. I am proud to know that he has become a great man and served in the great European War. Two of my grandsons also served in the war and one was killed in action at Mespot, and the other has returned. In fact, three, as the last one was too young and was only in training at Madras, India.

"I am still able to practice my profession by the grace of God, and often go about the districts to preach the gospel to the heathen and also preach to my patients at the dispensary when they come to be treated.....

"My health is usually good, by the grace of God. I have a good appetite and I sleep well. My one great desire is to visit America and I hope God will help me to do so. My wife unites with me in sending our kindest regards to self and friends in America.

"Your brother in Christ,
"M. Shaw Loo, M. D., '64."

As Dr. Shaw Loo is now more than eighty-six years of age, it is probable that he will never make the desired visit to America. But he will continue to the end a loyal alumnus of Bucknell. The photograph which he sent to the Alumni Monthly, and which was printed in that periodical, together with his letter to Mr. Epler, is reproduced here. Bucknell may well be proud of an alumnus like Dr.

DR. M SHAW LOO (As a Student)

Shaw Loo. Like Shakespeare's little candle, which throws its beams afar, the name and fame of the University, through the agency of just such loyal alumni, spread to every quarter of the globe.

PENN FRESHIES HAD BETTER WATCH OUT!

Members of the sophomore vigilance committee of the University of Pennsylvania have started an active campaign against freshmen violators of regulations. Many of the class of 1929 have openly defied the committee and are appearing on the campus minus the required black skull caps, black ties, and black socks, and lacking matches for the use of upper classmen.

Much laxity has been tolerated, as the time of the vigilants has been taken up with the distributing of field welcome buttons to those freshmen who did not attend the field welcome the night before the opening of school.

TO OPEN NEW BRIDGE FOR HOMECOMING GAME

The new reenforced concrete bridge on Seventh street near the corner of Seventh and Walker, half of which Bucknell University pays for, will be opened for traffic on Homecoming Day, October 17.

Professor F. E. Burpee, superintendent of the job, N. J. Null, general foreman, Guy Yoder, and a dozen or more workmen have been working on the job for three weeks and they are confident that the structure will be ready for the heavy traffic of the occasion. The direct charge of the work rests in the hands of Mr. Yoder who recently completed the construction of the Williamsport High School grandstand.

The new bridge is fifty feet in length, a great improvement over the old thirty-three-foot wooden one that previously existed. The corner at Seventh and Walker streets is a rather dangerous turn and a longer bridge was needed for emergencies.

In addition to paying for half of the bridge, the University has also agreed to build a cinder path and the necessary curbing from the bridge to the cemetery. Before a permanent walk is laid it will be necessary to widen the street, a movement which the borough is now contemplating. This will necessitate the removal of the trees from the bridge to the cemetery, to make room for the fifty foot road, including the five feet on each side for sidewalks, that will supercede the present narrow, thirty-three-foot street.

Change Made In Vassar Chapel Attendance Requirements

Important changes in Vassar College's chapel system have been approved by a joint committee of faculty and students and will be submitted to the student body for action this week.

The new plan includes abolition of the Saturday evening chapel service, a regulation that students must attend three of the remaining six services a week, and the elimination of the religious element from the Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evening chapel hours. The changes were suggested by Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of the college.

Japan's Students To Drill

Japanese military authorities have drafted a plan to extend compulsory military drill to Japanese students in the schools of Korea.

By the plan, which awaits approval of the Diet, all Japanese in Korean schools will be required to take drill, under the same system employed in Japan proper, with regular army officers in charge. Korean students, however, will be exempted, although they will be permitted to take drill if they choose.

SYSTEM IS DEVISED FOR RATING TEAMS

Claims To Show Team Standing; Bucknell Rated Tenth

Frank G. Dickinson, an instructor in economics at the University of Illinois has devised a comparative system of team ratings for football that he claims is more scientific than the percentage system that is used in determining baseball superiority. In this claim he is supported by such well known football mentors as Gil Dobie, Jack Wilce, Zupke, and others, so that the matter can not all be a matter of statistical sihstering. A booklet on the compilation of the ratings has been prepared by the deviser of the system and will probably be put on sale at many of the football games throughout the country durng the latter part of the football season.

As the system affects Bucknell it would appear to be advantageous when applied to the season of 1924. According to the percentage rating as applied to the teams of the eastern section last year Bucknell was one of the six teams that had a claim to tenth place. The Dickinson system advances that score to one of the three tied for the eighth position. The percentage system puts us on a par with W & J., Brown, Penn State, Dickinson, and Lehigh; the Dickinson system, with Princeton and Lehigh only.

The positions which each of the systems give to the various teams can be seen in the following table in which the Dickinson rating is given first, the percentage rating second.

ARE YOU OCTOBER'S CHILD?

If you are—your "luckies" are—color, scarlet; day, Tuesday; stone, topaz, number fifteen. You are also destined to be a promoter for the good of others, public and private. However, there will be some aristocratic traits in your nature, even while you are noble and kindhearted. You are dignified, and firm, with a generous amount of self-esteem.

The Golden Rule is usually observed by the October people, but they expect it in return. They are ambitious and self-sacrificing, but are apt to become wealthy in spite of their careless ways with money. They are very ambitious and work hard for their hopes and aspirations. They aim at big things and are not likely to became discouraged. Their idea of work is to do the best under the circumstances, no matter how humble an occupation. Health is usually their portion, and they are usually inclined to follow the sports, in personal efforts or in financial ways. They are enthusiastic, but not always cheerful.

The October women are not as high-tempered as the men, and are very magnetic. They are good friends and can be trusted greatly. They know their faults as well as their virtues. Their greatest pride is in what they accomplish and do for others. They are apt to be steadfast friends, but should avoid making enemies.

If you are an October person, keep near your friends, and try to become friends with your enemies, for that is your safest policy. Don't be ruled by your stubborn tendencies, and cultivate your good points of magnetic friendship.

Esperanto College

A summer university in psychology, languages, and international law, with Esperanto as the language of instruction, was conducted this summer in Geneva in connection with the Seventeenth Universal Esperanto Congress meeting there—the first time in history that an artificial angunge has been used in that way.

Esperantists from many parts of the world attended the congress, the culmination of various national congresses previously held in the most important European countries, in America and Japan. Almost every civilized country now issues a publication in Esperanto and the national language, and about eighteen magazines are published in Esperanto only.

COLLEGIANS PAINT—BUT SO DO SCHOOL PUPILS

College students are not the only students, apparently, who make free with chalk and whitewash. Pupils of the Williamsport High School, of which Alvin M. Wearer, '05, is principal, have drawn upon themselves the wrath of the city officials, through their too generous use of paint on sidewalks and elsewhere.

The spacious sidewalk on the Third street side of the Williamsport Sun was generously painted with inscriptions not only telling of the game at high school, but lauding the coaches of the team. Some of the lettering was all of twelve feet high and a foot wide.

Chief of Police Husted stated that he had not given permission to anyone to paint the walks in the manner in which he found them, but that he had allowed a parade of students. He also gave permission to attach streamers of crepe paper to the light standards, but these are to be removed after the game.

Chief Husted also informed the principal of the high school that if the privileges granted the boys of the school were abused as they had been when the sidewalks, curbing, and street pavements were whitewashed, the parades and decoration of the light standards with streamers would be prohibited.

Reports which came to police headquarters were to the effect that two police officers had watched the young men use the whitewash in the central part of the city and had not molested them.

Columbia Mining Students Takes Course With A Pick

In the search for practical experience the modern student of mining goes underground. At the end of the day it is difficult to distinguish between the college student returning from his lesson and the regular miner coming from his day's shift. Both wear much the same clothes, carry mine lamps and tools, and are equally begrimed by mud and coal dust. At two mines near New York camps with bunk houses, mess halls, and other equipment are maintained for college classes taking field courses.

Columbia University established one such camp near Litchfield, Conn. A second camp is at Mine Hill, looking out over the Succasunna Plains and Lake Hopatcong, three miles west of Dover, N. J. The latter is maintained by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and is open to students in mining from other colleges. During the season—now closing—classes of fifty or more have been continuously at work at both of these camps.

Mining experience supplements the theoretical work of the class rooms and laboratory and the regular courses in mining for the degrees of B. A. or of Engineer of Mining cover from five to seven years. Besides the actual experience underground, the students visit the leading mines of the country for observation. These trips often carry them to the mining regions of Colorado, Alabama, the Great Lakes, Missouri, Utah, and Arizona.

Penn Has Optional Chapel: Causes Attendance Increase

The attendance at the chapel exercises at the University of Pennsylvania, which dwindled from the time it was made no longer compulsory until last year, when there were only two students who attended regularly, is on the increase.

Attendance during the first few days of school indicates a greater interest, according to authorities of the University Christian Association, who conduct the meetings.

Prior to 1917 attendance was compulsory, and the chapel roll was taken by the professor of the first-hour class. Many students declared they had attended when they had not, according to the Rev. John R. Hart, rector of the Chapel of the Transfiguration, who was a student at that time and now conducts the exercises.

"As soon as attendance was made voluntary the number of students began to dwindle," Mr. Hart said. "Last year was our worst year."

"But I would rather have two students come voluntarily than have a roomful of students come only because they have to. Values in religion are caught rather than compelled. The spirit of compulsion is against the spirit of Christ."

"Everything comes to him who waits," cheerfully declared the optimist. For once, the pessimist agreed. He had just come from a fashionable restaurant.

PROFESSOR BRIGGS TALKS IN CHAPEL

Says Education Must Teach How To Do Better The Desirable Things

"Educated by gum." These were the opening words of Professor Thomas Henry Briggs, in his lecture given to the students in education in Commencement Hall on Friday morning at ten-thirty.

"What sort of an education is going to help us answer the questions that the people ask of us, the supposedly educated people? The graduate may stand on the steps of the auditorium with his diploma in his hand and say, 'educated by gum,' but what part of his education will help him answer the questions that will be fired at him?" This was the theme of Professor Briggs' lecture, and he suggested two little dynamos that would keep our store of knowledge going.

He remarked that few ages ago teachers wore whiskers to keep their faces straight when asked certain questions. Because of the changes occuring constantly, truth is a variable thing in education. He gave the biblical story of how Moses staged a show when he wanted to prove that God had given him the tables of the law, and also to prove that a supreme being exists. But no such powers are available today to prove that our answers are correct.

Professor Briggs suggested as guide posts to remember, first, that the business of the school is to teach people to do better the desirable things that they are likely to do anyway, and secondly, that another duty is to reveal the higher activities and to make them desirable." When you are in doubt you should ask yourself the question, 'What are these people most likely to do?' There is a good, a better, and a best way to do everything," said Professor Briggs.

"Education is to reveal and to make you want more of this higher activity. He said that the reason we play cards so much and go to the movies so often is that we haven't a sufficient repertoire."

Professor Briggs is professor of education in the Teachers College, Columbia University, New York City. He is a southerner by birth, having been born in Raleigh, N. C. He received his earlier education in Wake Forest College, N. C. and later studied in the University of Chicago and Columbia University. He taught in a number of public schools and academies and was a professor of English in John B. Stetson University, Deland, Florida and also in Eastern Illinois State Normal School. He has been with the Teachers College at Columbia since 1912. He is author of many books in education and is a frequent contributor to educational journals.

Professor Briggs also talked to the students of Education, who remained in chapel, following his main address during chapel period.

"What sort of life-work is an intelligent man looking for?" was his theme, and he answered his question by saying that above all "a man wants to do work he can enjoy; work that will make him happy and contented. Every man follows his own tastes in choosing a life-work as far as circumstances will permit. Man's tastes vary. Some are butchers; some bakers; and some candle-stick makers. Each of these enjoys his work, else he would not remain at it very long.

"Every intelligent man seeks a kind of work in which he can grow. Some men's lives have been circumferences that have gradually narrowed until nothing remained but a bigoted old age, hedged about by a veritable sea of prejudices and self-interests. Man cannot stand still. He either grows or retrogresses. To grow one needs a stimulus. When choosing a life-work, choose something in which there is an ever-present stimulus to do bigger things. Education offers us a stimulus to grow.

"Every man desires a work where things can be produced, for his own status in life will depend largely on what he produces and gives to the world, not on what the world gives to him. Social contact with human beings offers him an inexhaustible field in which to work.

"Then too, every intelligent and far-seeing man wants to do a work that will give him a decent living. He does not want a vocation that is a vacation; but work in which the financial returns are large enough to satisfy his needs."

The Inter-parliamentary Union, consisting of four hundred members of the old world parliaments, visited Swarthmore College during its visit to this country. The sessions of the union are held in a different country each year. This meeting is to be held in the halls of Congress at Washington, the first body, except Congress, to use the halls for meeting purposes.

date he scored on West Point by kicking a perfect drop-kick, at a difficult angle, from the 48 yard line. It was then that Walter Camp called him the best drop-kicker in America.

The score against the University of Pennsylvania did more for Christy than merely to give him a reputation as a football player. It got him a job—at least, it got him mere money for a job. While the Bucknell team was waiting in the lobby of the hotel, before the Penn game, John Smith, known in minor baseball circles as "Phenom" Smith, came to see Mathewson. He had seen Christy pitch at Taunton.

"Mathewson," he said, "I'm going to Norfolk in the Virginia League, to manage the club next season, and I'll give you a steady job at eighty dollars a month. I know that your contract called for ninety dollars last season, but you will surely get this money, as the club has substantial backing."

Matty signed the contract then and there. The colleges were not so strict then about summer baseball as they are now. As Smith put the contract into his pocket, he said, "I'm going now to see you play this afternoon." When Matty got back to the hotel, after kicking his two goals, "Phenom" Smith was there. "You played a great game this afternoon," he said, and because I liked the way you kicked those two field-goals, I'm going to make your salary ninety instead of eighty dollars a month."

He took the contract, already signed, out of his pocket, and raised Christy's pay ten dollars a month before Matty had ever pitched a ball. That contract is framed and hanging on the wall of the ball club. At least it was for some years. There was good reason why it should be Mathewson reported to Norfolk the following season and won twenty-one of twenty-three games he pitched.

Matty Becomes A Giant

One day in 1900 "Phenom" Smith told Matty he had a chance to sell him to either the New York Nationals or the Philadelphia club. Matty said he would like to go to New York. In a short time he belonged to George Davis, then manager of the Giants.

Now came Matty's opportunity, the opportunity he had been getting ready for. Davis had him report for practice. Matty tells about it himself, in St. Nicholas.

"'I'm going to order all our fellows to go to bat,' said Davis, 'and I want you to throw everything you've got.'"

He started off himself. Matty threw him a fast one. "That's a pretty good fast ball you've got,' said Davis. 'Now let's have a good look at your curve.'

"I threw him the old 'roundhouse' curve, my pride and joy, which, as the newspapers had said 'had been standing them on their heads' in the minor league. He stepped into it, and drove the ball over the head of the man playing centre field and beyond the old ropes.

"'No,' he said, 'that old roundhouse curve ain't any good in this company. You can see that start to break all the way from the pitcher's box. A man with paralysis in both arms could get himself set in time to hit that one. Haven't you got a drop ball?'

"'Yes,' I answered, 'but I don't use it much.'

"'Well, let's have a look at it.'

"I threw him my drop ball, and he said that it was a pretty fair curve.

"'Now that's what we call a curve in the big league,' said Davis. 'As for that other big one you just threw me, forget it. Got anything else?'

He Fools His Manager

"'I've got a sort of a freak ball that I never use in a game,' I replied.

"'Well, let's see it.'

"Then I threw him my freak ball. He missed it by more than a foot (I was lucky enough to get it over the plate). I shall never forget how Davis' eyes bulged.

"'What's that ball?' he asked.

"That's one I picked up but never use," I answered. "It's a kind of freak ball.

"'Can you control it?'

"'Not very well.'

"'Try it again!' he ordered. I did, and got it over the plate once more. He missed the ball.

"That's a good one. That's all right!" he declared enthusiastically. 'It's a slow in-curve to a right-handed batter. A change of pace with a curve ball. A regular fallaway or fadeway. That's a good ball. I want you to practice on that fadeway and get so you can control it. It's going to be a valuable curve.'

And there, in morning practice, at the Polo Grounds in 1900, the "fadeaway", which helped to make Christy so famous, was born and christened by Davis.

The Big Opportunity Comes

The next spring, just before the opening game of the season, Davis came to Mathewson and said, "Matty, I want you to pitch to-morrow."

Matty was taken by surprise. He went home and went to bed at nine o'clock, so as to be fit for the morrow. The next day it rained. Again he went to bed early and again it rained. For three or four nights he continued, and so did the rain. But Christy outlasted the rain, pitched the opening game, and won it. What was more, he worked his regular turn and didn't lose a game until Memorial Day. By that time he had taken New York by storm. The whole town was wildly enthusiastic about him.

His Work With The Giants

Matty's work in the big league is still so fresh in memory that we need not review it in detail. Yet it is interesting to see what practiced sport writers thought of his ability. In 1912, after Mathewson had been defeated in the world series games, Bozeman Bulger, writing in the New York Evening World, declared that the pitching of Mathewson in that series was the most masterful pitching ever seen.

Matty As A Student

"In defeat this past master of the pitching art overshadows any of the twirlers who led their teams to victory," wrote Bulger. "Even the players of the Red Sox team declare that Mathewson is the greatest pitcher in the world. They also add that not withstanding their happiness over winning the big prize, the saddening feature of the hard struggle is that the work of a master went for naught through misplays that would not happen once in a hundred times. The people of Boston were so worked up in sympathy over the defeat of Mathewson that Mayor Fitzgerald delivered a speech in Faneuil Hall in which he declared Big Six the real hero of the series.

An Unexcelled Record

"Mathewson's record of thirteen seasons in the big league is one that probably will never be equalled. Aside from his work in helping to win four pennants for the Giants, Mathewson has taken part in three world series.....

"His most wonderful performance was against the Athletics in 1905, when he pitched three games in one week and did not allow the Philadelphia club a single run. No other pitcher has come even close to that. His next important work was against the Highlanders in 1910, when he pitched three games and won them all, as well as finishing up another game started by Drucke.

He Was Greatest In Defeat

"The most amazing feature of Mathewson's work is that his most remarkable exhibitions of pitching have resulted in defeat. The umpires who worked behind him in the recent series say that the baseball world has never seen anything like the pitching of Mathewson in the three games, though he did not win one. The National League officials had seen him work before, and so had Evans of the American League, but it was a revelation to 'Silk' O'Loughlin.

"'I stood there in amazement,' said O'Loughlin. 'I had heard that Matty was going back, but that is not true. I never saw anything like the kind of ball he pitched. I heard of it, but I could not realize it until I stood there and watched the break on the balls, as well as his perfect control. It is a pleasure for an umpire to work behind him, as there is never any question about strikes when Matty decides to put one over.'"

As a rule, fans do not appreciate the fine work of a pitcher if he loses. "This time," wrote Bulger, "his fine work was so apparent that it could not be overlooked. To-day Mathewson has the sympathy of the entire United States. He is as popular as though he had won the series. An evidence of this is the fact that a dozen theatrical managers have been after him to go into vaudeville at a higher figure than he received before. Matty has declined all such offers."

His Remarkable Versatility

No record of Mathewson's work would be complete without Grantland Rice's review of Big Six's career, published last year in Collier's. "Mathewson, like Young, had character," wrote Rice, "and with character he had a remarkable brain. He was a striking figure to look upon, and no one ever pitched who carried as much confidence on the part of his team. Matty in his earlier days had great speed, a wide assortment of curves, flawless control, and, above all, a keen pitching brain that knew every weakness in an opponent.

"'He knew,' said Johnny Evers, 'exactly what you couldn't hit, and that was all you had to hit at, since he could throw a ball into a tin cup at pitching range.'

"Matty, in one of his earlier seasons, while pitching for a weak and struggling ball team, beat the pennant-winning Pittsburgh Pirates eight successive games. That shows what he could do with one of the poorest teams in the leagues. By 1904, in his fourth real campaign, Matty had risen to a point where he won thirty-five games and lost but eight, for a record of .814. And that pitching, with the work contributed by the great arm of 'Iron man' McGinnity, swept the Giants from the rut to a pennant.

Matty Reached The Heights

"It was in the world series of 1905 that Christy Mathewson mounted to the ultimate heights. Here, facing Connie Mack's Athletics with such hard-hitting stars as Harry Davis, "Socks" Seybold, "Topsy" Hartsel, Danny Murphy, and others, Matty pitched three shut-out games within five days.

"After sixteen years of pitching greatness, Mathewson finally retired to manage the Cincinnati Reds. No other individual has held quite the same admiration and respect of the millions, who gave in addition an affection that still lasts. Christy Mathewson has remained more of an ideal than any other ball player known to the game."

Christy did not stay long with the Cincinnati Reds. Service abroad with the colors, as a captain in the Gas and Flame Division, interrupted his career in baseball. Then came that more serious interruption which sent this gallant soul to Saranac for a struggle more tense and desperate than any he had ever had on the athletic field. What appeared to be only a stubborn cold was suddenly discovered to be tuberculosis, and the case far advanced.

The Hardest Fight Of All

Mathewson went at once to Saranac, and there for months lay on his back, at the point of death, yet fighting with all the skill and determination of his nature. When he went there, he was given six months to live. It is likely he would never have lived even that brief span had it not been for Mrs. Mathewson, who was Jane Stoughton, of Lewisburg. She was with him day and night, looking after his every need, protecting and saving him in every way, cheering him up, and standing shoulder to shoulder with him in the long struggle. Together they fought it out. And together they apparently won. For the day came when the doctors said Mathewson might leave Saranac and go back to active life.

Hailed Upon His Return

Christy's return to the world of sport—for he shortly became president of the Boston Braves, was hailed with delight by the baseball public. Burton Whitman, writing about it in the Boston Herald, said, "Matty has come back. In the mind of every boy, young man, and old fan to-day there will be a little refrain of thankfulness that this most heroic, for a time most pathetic, figure in baseball, has recovered to such an extent that he can assume the presidency of a big league club.

"He stands for everything that is uplifting in baseball. His reputation has been flawless. He is named when fans talk of the greatest right-hand pitcher of all time."

The Literary Digest, in a symposium of sporting comments upon Mathewson's return to the game, printed this from the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. "'Big Six' does not owe his incomparable popularity altogether to the fact that during his career as a major league pitcher he won 372 games, nor to the fact that in 1908 he beat all previous records for endurance by pitching 425 innings. These, and like evidence of his prowess, might account for his celebrity, but not for his popularity. He was a universal favorite, and is to-day, because he had as perfect control of himself as of the "fadeways" he put over the plate to every batter's discomfiture. He was, to use a favorite phrase of Roosevelt, as clean as a pound's tooth. He had poise and pluck and speed and brains, but more than all these he had character."

Now he is gone. He suffered a sudden relapse last Easter and hurried back to Saranac. There he and Mrs. Mathewson have been waging the fight over again. But this time it was a losing fight. The world has lost one of its finest sportsmen, and Bucknell one of her most illustrious sons.

Warns Against Efficiency

Scientists and industrialists should avoid the tendency to make a fetish of scientific efficiency, Prof. Findlay, University of Aberdeen, Scotland, said in an address at Columbia University in closing the four-day interstate symposium of the American Chemical Society.

"Let us always bear in mind," he said, "that the gospel of efficiency, though it may bring salvation to our industries, will, if carried into action without regard to higher considerations, be productive of the loss of individual freedom, the suppression of the sense of individual responsibility, the destruction of the human values."

"BIG SIX" LEADER IN VARIED FIELDS

Was Class President, Athlete, Fraternity Man, Friend

Christy Mathewson was born at Factoryville, Pa., August 12, 1880. His early boyhood was passed there, and there he attended preparatory school, at Keystone Academy, after finishing at the Keystone public school. He was then 17 years old, and he became 18 only a month before entering Bucknell, in September, 1898. He was very large and powerful, and no one would have guessed that he was so young.

The class of 1902, with which Mathewson entered, was much the largest class that, up to this time, had entered the University. It numbered 75. Mathewson was probably one of the youngest members of the class. Yet from the outset he made himself felt, and as the years passed he climbed higher and higher in his class.

Perhaps some of his influence at the start came because, right from the beginning, he played fullback on the varsity football team. But there was far more than mere brawn to push him ahead; and from the start his interests seem to have been varied. In his freshman year he became a member of the band, playing a bass horn, and he was also elected historian of his class. The 1900 L'Agenda contains his history of his class.

By the following year Mathewson's interests had widened still more. Quite naturally he became one of the pitchers on the baseball team. Again he played at fullback on the football team. And by this time he was attracting wide attention by his drop-kicking. During this year he was a substitute centre on the varsity basket-ball team. The University had some remarkable teams in those days, and the regulars were of necessity good men if Mathewson rated only as a substitute. He still continued as a member of the band.

His junior year—which was his last in college—found Mathewson at the high tide of fortune. He was president of his class. He was fullback, and a star fullback. He was varsity centre in basket-ball. He was a member of the Glee Club. He was on the Junior Prom committee. By force of character and ability he had won his way to the top in college affairs.

Mathewson was a member of the Euepia literary society, one of the two big literary organizations then existing. He was initiated into Phi Gamma Delta at the end of his freshman year. As a sophomore he was chosen to Theta Delta Tau, which was then the sole interfraternity group, and only outstanding men were elected to membership.

By the end of his junior year, Mathewson had become a real ball-player and was a member of the New York Giants. He did not return to Bucknell to finish his course. But his record of three years was clean in every respect. He was a good student, a remarkable athlete, a favorite socially. Above all, he was clean morally.

Soon after leaving college, Mathewson married Jane Stoughton, a daughter of the late Frank Stoughton, of Market street, who was supervisor of the L. and T. Railway. By marriage he became uncle to our alumni secretary, Alfred G. Stoughton.

In addition to marrying a Lewisburg girl, Christy Mathewson joined the local Presbyterian Church. Thus in numerous ways he was bound to Lewisburg, where he will find his last resting place.

MATHEWSON'S BODY, TENDERLY BORNE, IS LAID TO REST

MANY FLORAL TRIBUTES, IN TOUCHING MEMORY, DECK HIS GRAVE

Simplicity Marks Burial

Fuchs, McGraw, Bancroft, Reilly, E. Sterling, and A. Powell Are Pall Bearers

Christopher Mathewson, for many years the outstanding figure in the baseball world and the most noted athlete ever produced by Bucknell University, was laid to rest here last Saturday.

The loss of so great a character as his has made itself felt almost instantly in the world in which he was accustomed to move. After apparently having won his long fight against tuberculosis, Christy suffered a relapse last Easter that forced him to return to the sanatorium at Saranac Lake, N. Y. Here, after a long brave fight, he died. His body was brought to Lewisburg, to the home of Mrs. Mathewson's mother, Mrs. Frank C. Stoughton, last Thursday night.

Leaders of the profession that claimed "Matty" as one of its greatest and most popular heroes united with the students of the University and the people of Lewisburg in honoring his memory. Those who could not be here in person sent messages and flowers in tribute to Christy's memory.

Banked around the casket that held his body were the floral tributes of his friends; men and clubs of the baseball world, men from every walk of life, and the tribute of the sons of his Alma Mater. Here scores came to view for the last time, the features of baseball's greatest hero, and here the simple funeral service was conducted.

Men high in the ranks of baseball gathered to attend the funeral. John A. Heydler, president of the National League; John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, who started "Matty" on the road to fame, Emil Fuchs, vice-president of the club of which "Big Six" was president, the Boston Braves; "Davey" Bancroft, manager, and Edward Reilly, secretary of the Braves; John K. Tener, former governor of Pennsylvania and former president of the National League; and Albert Powell, part owner of the Boston team, were among the number.

The floral tributes were reminiscent of Christy's triumphs of long ago. One was from his former battery mate, Roger Bresnahan. Another Homecoming brings with it the first issue of the Belle Hop.

In honor of the visitors and alumni who will be here, it will be called the "Round-up" number. Copies will be placed on sale at the University Book Store, Montgomery and Company, the College Inn, Baker's Drug Store, and Fegley's news stand.

Working under the difficulties that are necessarily attendant upon a comparatively new staff, the editors have concocted a first number that promises to be "a wow." Last year's outstanding artists, Hamilton Rodgers and Donald Streeter, have not returned to college. "Den" has done the front

MISS ELSIE BAKER, CONTRALTO, TO SING AT FIRST NUMBER OF ARTIST COURSE

TO APPEAR THURSDAY AT BAPTIST CHURCH

The first number of the Lewisburg Artist Course, Elsie Baker, Metropolitan Opera contralto, assisted by Grover Tilden Davis, composer pianist, will be held in the Baptist Church, Lewisburg, Pa., on Thursday evening, October 22, at 8:15 o'clock.

Miss Baker's versatility in music is unexcelled anywhere. This truly remarkable artist combines a voice of velvety smoothness, range and power, with a rare soul-satisfying interpretation of every song she sings, whether it is sad or gay; classical or semi-popular. Her successes have in no way spoiled Miss Baker and she stands as a splendid type of American womanhood, risen to musical heights by her sterling qualities of mind and character.

Grover Tilden Davis, the accompanist for Miss Baker is an unusually gifted musician. Mr. Davis is a composer of many beautiful songs and his piano playing is characterized by its sheer beauty.

The policy of presenting the best in the form of music is being adhered to by the management of the Lewisburg Artist Course. It is hoped that the students at Bucknell will express their appreciation of this and give it their stamp of approval by being present at the first number of the course.

The price of admission for the single concert is $1.75. Course tickets may be obtained for $4.00. They may be secured by calling Mr. Ralph F. Hartz, manager of the course.

DR. HOWARD C. HILL TALKS TO STUDENTS

Explains System of Instruction At University of Chicago

Dr. Howard C. Hill of the University of Chicago addressed the education students of the University last Monday afternoon at 4:30, explaining the system of instruction used in the high school of the University of Chicago. His talk was one of the series that is being given by prominent educational men under the direction of the education department of the University. He was introduced by Leo Weisenfluh, president of the newly organized Education Club, after a few preliminary remarks by Professor Frank G. Davis, head of the department.

In his address, Dr. Hill made plain the fact that he was not advocating the system that he came here to explain, refused to recommend it for general use, but stated that his object was to explain the reason for the system and the way in which it operates.

In the beginning of his address he brought up the question whether the purpose of the class period is to test or to teach and said that the period in which a pupil went away without having gained something in information of habits, or inspiration for work is not worth while. Claiming that the prevailing system gives a negative answer to any question of gain on the part of the pupil he proceeded to introduce the "Master Technique" system as applied at the University of Chicago High School.

The plan used there is that which, in principle, was worked out by Dr. Morrison, formerly head of the schools of New Hampshire and of Connecticut. The plan was devised because Dr. Morrison found that several faults

MECHANICALS MAKE TRIP TO ALTOONA

Inspect Famous Horseshoe Curve And Enjoy Instruction Tours

Twenty students of mechanical engineering at the University, along with eighty more students from Penn State, attended the district convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers held at Altoona on October 5, 6, 7. The Pennsylvania Railroad and the Central Section of the association acted as hosts.

Frank E. Burpee, professor of mechanical engineering at Bucknell was "in on everything" from the start, attending the meeting of the executive committee on the morning of October 5. This meeting was followed by the opening meeting of the convention which was held in the Penn-Alto Hotel. Here, the president of the S. M. E., William F. Durand, introduced Elisha Lee, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in charge of operation, who delivered the address of welcome to the convention. Honorary membership in the association was conferred upon W. W. Atterbury, president of the road, at this meeting.

The meeting held on the morning of October 6 was addressed by three speakers. Samuel Rea, retired president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, spoke on the subject "American Transportation", outlining the development and future of the transportation industry. Lawford H. Fry, metallurgical engineer with the Standard Steel Works Company of Burnham, Pa., read a paper on "The Locomotive Testing Plant and its Influence on Steam Locomotive Design," in which he described the two most complete testing plants in the world; those of Purdue University, and the Pennsyl-

NEWS FOR PUBLICATION

Beginning with the issue of October 21 no material will be accepted for publication in the news columns later than Tuesday afternoon at 4:30, unless solicited by the editor or under very exceptional circumstances.

FACULTY MEMBERS GIVEN PROMOTIONS

Hall, Warfel, Shaffer, and Irland, Become Assistant Professors

Four Bucknellians who have for some time been members of the teaching staff of the University have recently been promoted to assistant professorships. Voris B. Hall, '19, assistant professor of physics; Harry R. Warfel, '20, assistant professor of English; and Harold A. Shaffer, '12, and George A. Irland, '15, assistant professors of electrical engineering, are the men promoted.

Voris Blaine Hall received the bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering in 1919, and the master's degree in the same field in 1920. In 1925 he received his master of arts degree from Columbia. He majored in physics, specializing in mechanics and electronic physics.

He has finished sufficient residence work in Columbia to qualify for the degree of doctor of philosophy, with credit points to spare. The research work still remaining to be done he hopes to complete at some future date. After he had spent six summer sessions in this work he was granted a leave of absence from his teaching duties here at Bucknell, during the 1924-25 session, to continue his graduate studies.

He returns as assistant professor in physics.

Harry Reeley Warfel graduated from Bucknell in 1920, with the degree, bachelor of arts. Two years later the University granted him the degree of master of arts, and in 1921 he received the same degree from Columbia. He spent the 1924-5 session at the University of North Carolina, where he studied extensively under Edwin Greenlaw, now head of the English department at Johns Hop-

ELECT PRESIDENT OF BUCKNELL BAND

Sheckells Heads Organization. Georgetown Trip Planned

A business meeting of the University band in Theta Alpha Thursday night, October 8, resulted in the election of Albert W. Sheckells, Jr. to the presidency.

The meeting was to have been held at 7:30 but was somewhat delayed on account of the absence of Director Calhoun who was held up at Bloomfield by the breakdown of his car. Bob Jones took charge of the meeting however and the following men were elected to office: president, Albert W. Sheckells, Jr.; vice president, Paul Arow; secretary, M. D. Eizenfeller; treasurer, Douglas W. Anderson.

The manager of the band is Clyde G. Learn. An assistant will be elected in February and will become manager at the beginning of next year. Darwin M. Weishaupt is acting student leader.

Band men are looking forward to the Georgetown game at Washington, D. C., on October 24. Unfortunately passes will be used because expenses would be too heavy on the band exchequer to make the trip by train. The 12 hour jaunt to Philadelphia to the Rutgers game last November will long remain in the minds of those who made that tedious journey.

An overflow of material last week made it necessary to withhold several items from the paper. In order to make the record of the events of the University complete the material is being used in this issue.

Enrolment List Shows 1044 Bucknell Students

A. B. Course Has Largest Quota: Pre-medical Is Second

Students who are asked for the exact number of members of the college need no longer reply indefinitely, "about a thousand" but may now say positively that there are 1044 and that 347 of them are women. More than half of the students are taking the liberal arts courses while the biology department comes next highest in rank.

The following figures show the comparative strength of the various departments, the division acording to classes, and men and women students:

Y. W. Girls Report On Eagles Mere Trip

Twenty-five Freshmen Admitted To Membership In "Y"

A novel report was given at the meeting of the Y. W. C. A. held in the living room of the "Dem" Thursday evening, October 8. The Bucknell representatives to the Eagles Mere convention presented a clever sketch in gipsy costume as a means of presenting their report. Announcement was also made of the candle-light service to be held the following Sunday.

A tent and a campfire made a natural background for the gipsy stunt.

W. S. G. A. PROPOSES CHANGE IN RULES FOR "SEM" GIRLS

PENALTY FOR SKIPPING, A MAJOR OFFENSE IS EXPULSION

Freshmen To Have Dates?

Chaperonage, Swimming, Dances, Calling Hours, Parlor Dates and Canoeing Discussed

New rules and regulations for the "Sem" for women were proposed at a Women's Student Government meeting held on Monday evening, October 12. These proposed amendments to the constitution of the association are merely tentative as the new rules are to be submitted by Dean Clark to a faculty committee, after which they will again be submitted to the women students.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Irene Bell, who first of all presented the Scholarship Cup to the fraternity group making the highest average during the past year, Delta Delta Delta. Then the girls were reminded that for a major offense in "skipping" there was only one penalty,—expulsion from school. After these preliminaries came the opening bout in the real question at hand.

Since the girls are not allowed to change the constitution without the aproval and sanction of the dean of women, all the new ideas had to be put in the form of "recommendations" that amendments be made. The first recommendations concerned swimming and canoeing. The rules now read that "for swimming the girls must be chaperoned by the women's physical director," and that only "senior girls may go canoeing." It was suggested that any girl be permitted to go canoeing who could pass a given swimming test and who had written permission from her home direct to the Dean of women to do so, (provided, of course, she could secure a canoe). The second proposal was to the effect that any girl may go swimming if she secures permission from the Dean.

The next recommendations concerned chaperonage. The rule that chaperonage is required "for dinner at hotel or when men and girl are going out of town with men," was considered out of place. That chaperonage should not be required but that permissions for these two be asked from the Dean, was the recommendation agreed upon.

Opinion ran quite high when the subject of calling hours was raised. It was finally suggested that calling

BISHOP McDOWELL

Bishop McDowell of the Methodist Episcopal Church will give an address in the Memorial Church on November 8. In a recent poll taken by the ministers of the United States, Bishop McDowell was rated as the sixth best preacher in America today. An opportunity to hear him should be a rare treat to the student body.

FROSH GIRLS GO UNDER RULES OCT. 19; WILL CARRY STICKS WITH NAME-SIGNS

MAY NOT SPEAK TO MEN WHEN ALONE

Monday, October 19, is the date set by the sophomore girls for the opening of the stunt period for the women of the freshman class. The rules for this period were drawn up by a committee of the sophomores appointed on October 6, and were approved by Dean Clark. They will be published Thursday.

Rather drastic, and certainly amusing are some of the rules that have been made. Identification for the girls, which has in the past been furnished by means of cards on green bibs or by names attached to green bibs will be secured this year by means of large placards to be carried on sticks three feet long. When walking anywhere on the campus of the Women's College the freshmen will be required to "go into reverse."

The freshmen must speak to all the girls and when addressing an upper classman or faculty member they will be expected to use a more dignified form of speech than the ordinary "Hello." On the other hand they may not talk to men at all except when in the company of a sophomore girl.

The rules will be effective from October 19 to October 31, except on Sunday and at dances.

The sophomore committee responsible for the rules that have been formed was appointed at a meeting in charge of the sophomore girls' president, Pauline Belles. The committee: Barbara Reifsnyder, chairman; Cornelia Trowbridge, Eleanor Miller, Ethel Mathews, Catherine Hughes, Virginia Frantz, Sarah Heysham, Lorinne Martin, and Evelyn Fauling.

The sorority entertained the freshmen with two parties during rushing season. The first, was given Saturday evening, September 26, in the Milton Country Club. The second, on Monday evening, October 5, was given in the sorority suite.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

There certainly was quite a commotion in certain parts of the "Sem" Thursday evening, Oct. 1, but one who told any puzzled outsider that Alpha Chi Omega was having a formal dinner-dance that evening at the Cameron House. The sophomores and upperclassmen, who acted as escorts to their freshman friends, finally succeeded in finding the proper freshman for each, and the jolly company proceeded in groups to the Cameron House, where they were cordially greeted by the receiving line, which included the honor guests of the evening, Mrs. Rivenburg and Miss Jenkins.

As soon as everyone had arrived, the party was conducted to the small banquet room, which was beautifully decorated in orchid and pink in honor of the occasion. There was a far from solemn procession around the table as the freshmen and their escorts hunted their places. Each girl was delighted to find at her place a lovely pink rose bearing her name, and a clever handmade favor. The intervals between courses were filled by enthusiastic singing of college and fraternity songs.

Long before the banquet was over, strains of music were heard issuing from the hotel parlor. Investigation being duly made, it was reported that the music was caused by a very excellent peppy orchestra under the direction of Lew Kesler, and after the banquet was over, the rest of the evening was spent in dancing.

Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega held initiation of its pledges in the parlors of Women's College at five o'clock on Saturday, October 3. Those initiated into active membership are Ruth Bray, Betty Davis, Ethel Hurst, Mary Laning, Catharine Marshall, and Eleanor Miller. Clara Casner, '21, came down from Williamsport to be present at the initiation.

A "Bacon Bat" for the rushees, which was to have been a hike to Red Rock, was forced to be given in some of the girls' rooms on account of the rain the afternoon of Oct. 6. Some of the girls built a very beautiful, realistic "bonfire" in the middle of the floor, and the hot dogs, cooked in the "Sem" kitchen, were brought in and served in fine style with strips of lean bacon to add savor.

The chapter is very much pleased to announce that Mrs. Bond and Mrs. Parnell, residents of Lewisburg, and Mrs. Holter, wife of the Registrar, have consented to become patronesses of the fraternity.

PHI MU

Rushing season was successfully opened by the Phi Mu chapter with a banquet at the Cameron House, Thursday evening, September 24. Dancing and a short program during intermission furnished the evening's entertainment.

A corn roast at Red Rock, and a "doggy" roast a few days later, were other rushing parties.

Wanda Nicol, '25, of Archibald, spent the week-end of September 27 with her sisters; and "Margie" Morgan, '23, of Scranton, visited the chapter the week-end of October 4.

PI MU EPSILON

Homecoming Day will be the occasion of a reunion of the alumni and active members of Pi Mu Epsilon, national honorary mathematics fraternity, when they gather in Eupsia on Saturday morning at 11:00 A. M. for their first meeting of the year.

After the transaction of business that may be brought before the meeting, the group is to adjourn to the Observatory, where J. C. Hoshauer, '26, will give a lecture illustrated with slides on "Some Uses of Mathematics."

This meeting has been designedly scheduled for Saturday forenoon in order that alumni of the fraternity, who may be here for the game, will find it convenient to attend.

ALPHA CHI MU

George Walker was called to his home in Oklahoma, Sunday, October 4, on account of the serious illness of his father.

Ralph Stine, '25, is now working in Greensburg, Pa., for the Elliot Company, manufacturers of steam turbines. He expects to visit Lewisburg on Homecoming Day.

"What's the matter with the prisoner. Why doesn't he answer?"
"He's deaf, your Honor."
"Dismissed, I can't convict a man without a hearing."

Dopey—"What?"
Mopey—"Where all bad people go."

BAPTIST SOPHS GIVE PARTY TO FRESHMEN

Each One Chooses A Partner By Matched Paper Slips

About eighty young people attended the reception held for the freshmen of the Baptist Sunday School by the sophomores at the Baptist Church, Friday evening, October 9. The reception committee included Mrs. Wood, teacher of the sophomore Sunday School class, Professor Stewart, teacher of the freshman class, Mrs. Stewart, Jean Wood, and Dwight Bahr, president of the sophomore Sunday School class.

The first part of the evening was spent in getting acquainted, and then everyone was assigned a partner by means of matched slips of paper, and each couple had to act a scene representing the characters named on its slip. A great deal of enjoyment was occasioned by some of the old games everybody knows how to play, such as "Three Deep" and "Going to Jerusalem," after which the guests were regaled with doughnuts and punch. Mrs. Wood gave a short talk to the students, and the evening ended with college songs and yells.

MRS. BEATTY'S CLASS—

Mrs. Beatty's college girls' class of the Presbyterian Sunday School held its first business meeting of the year in the parlor at Brady House, Friday evening, October 9. A large number of girls attended.

Plans were discussed for the work of the class during the coming year; especially a plan to take over the direction of the next Young People's Student-at-Home Tea, and to have the whole program given by the members of the class. This was the main business of the meeting, and after the plan was definitely discussed, the meeting was adjourned and a social time enjoyed. A delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Beatty, and, although the silence rules made things a little awkward at first, the girls didn't let that keep them from enjoying the affair thoroughly.

University Of Breslau Has An Unusual Library

The University of Breslau has one of the most unusual collections of books in Germany, a "Theologieal American Library," comprising 2000 volumes for the study of religion, theology, and church activities of North America. This library was founded in 1913 by Professor Karl Bornhausen, who was a student in the United States.

In view of the increasing cultural and intellectural interchange between Germany and the United States, this library is expected to be of the greatest benefit to students in the future. Professor Bornhausen intends soon to publish a series of monographs on theological problems in the United States which he will call "Christian Activities in North America in the Present Era."

Swarthmore President Travels

PROF. SPRAGUE VISITS SUNNY SPAIN; IMPRESSED BY BEAUTY OF COUNTRY

SANGUINARY BULL-FIGHT DISGUSTS HIM

It has usually been considered that Spain is not as attractive to the average tourist as are some of the other European countries such as France, Italy, and Switzerland, for example. That mistaken idea is fast being replaced, however, by the growing conviction that Spain has much to offer of art, public and historical buildings and monuments, and vacation resorts in the Sierra Nevada and Guadarrama mountains. This past summer the large number of foreigners in Spain bore concrete witness to the fact that each year the number of tourists grows larger.

The summer is commonly not the most ideal time for a visit to Spain, but I was very agreeably surprised at the temperature while I was there during July and August. The only oppressive heat we had to endure was in Southern Spain at Seville and Cordoba, and even then it was no warmer than the hot spells we had here in the United States this summer. The springtime in Spain is beautiful when everything is green and fresh and thousands of acres of orange and other fruit trees are in bloom.

Spain has not learned to advertise and commercialize every point of historic, artistic, and literary beauty in the country as so many of the other European countries do, and indeed, does not seem to worry because the country is not over-run with tourists. Notwithstanding, the Spaniard treats the stranger with that chivalry and courtesy that are traditional in the country and is proud to show him whatever he can of interest in his locality.

Many have the idea that the Spaniard is lazy, but I cannot concede that that is true except in individual cases, and we even have similar cases of indolence here in Bucknell. When one sees the struggle the Spaniard has to face in agriculture, for example, against adverse circumstances and then looks at the result obtained, one sees clearly that an indolent people could not secure such a result. The largest proportion of Spain is traversed by mountains; not very high, to be sure, some of them, but yet too high and barren to cultivate. The lack of rainfall in the summer is another drawback, yet wonderful gardens and orchards of orange, fig, pomegranate, apricot, lemon, and peach trees covering hundreds of acres are made to flourish and yield large returns by means of irrigation.

Some of the works of Blasco Ibanez give a good picture of this territory. In the great cities like Madrid, Seville, and Barcelona the parks and shrubs and flowers are kept beautiful by constant care and effort. Thousands of acres of olive orchards which do not require irrigation, are terraced upon the mountain slopes and these make Spain stand high in the production of this fruit and its oil.

Many cities of Spain have outstanding points of interest for the traveler. Vestiges of the Roman civilization are still extant in the Roman walls at Tarragona on the eastern coast and in the wonderfully preserved aqueduct at Segovia. These two are the largest remnants although there are other isolated bits here and there that reveal Roman occupation. If one is interested in the Moorish influence let him go principally to Granada, the last stronghold of the Moors after almost 800 years of occupation, where the Alhambra palace is a wonderful example of Moorish art and architecture preserved by the Spanish government. One can scarcely picture the magnificence of the place during the time of the Arabic rulers when everything was in its prime and the buildings contained the rich hangings, rugs, incense burners etc. of the time. The rooms where Washington Irving lived and wrote are appropriately marked but kept closed to the visitor.

At Cordoba is the mosque, begun in 756 and enlarged various times until it was the largest Moslem place of worship outside of Mecca. The true Moorish atmosphere of the structure has ben marred by the erection of a Catholic church in its very center. King Charles V was right when he said, "You have built here what you could just as well have built elsewhere and thereby have spoiled what was unique in the world." The third most outstanding piece of Moorish art is at Seville, namely La Giralda, a former minaret so constructed that Moorish soldiers could ride mounted four abreast to the top for prayer. It is now the tower of a more modern cathedral and contains 25 bells. According to the story, the Cid, the epic hero of Spain, took his wife and daughter to the top of this tower to show them the extent of his conquests.

Madrid, Bilbao, and Barcelona are types of modern cosmopolitan cities. Bilbao is the greatest industrial center and seaport of Northern Spain, and Barcelona holds an even greater significance along that line on the eastern coast. Barcelona, and in fact, the whole province in which it is located Cataluna, hopes to see a change in the existing form of government. This section has for some time been opposed to the king and his government and now the thinking educated people of the entire Peninsula hope that some way may be found to rid their government of its evils and, if necessary, change its form. They hope it can be done without open revolution and bloodshed, but I doubt whether any other means will break down the strong hold of the clergy and the military forces.

I should not fail to mention, in discussing Spain, the subject of the bull-fight. This sport is generally considered to be a national game loved by all Spaniards, but a large percentage of the people not only do not attend the bull-fights, but use their influence against them. The promoters and "fans" of bull-fighting argue that our prize fights are just as bad as their bull-fights and in both countries there are plenty of people who do not support either sport. Most Americans are satisfied with one attendance. I felt, after seeing eight bulls and seven horses killed, that I should not want to witness such a spectacle often. The pageantry at the beginning of the fight, the grace, skill, and adroitness of the fighters is what attracts the Spaniard and not the bloodshed. If the bull himself does not show spirit in defending himself against his various opponents he is hissed just as much as an unskillful torero would be and sometimes taken out of the ring.

SEVEN MEMBERS OF PENN LEAGUE TO STAGE PLAYS AT PENN STATE

As the initial undertaking of the Intercollegiate Dramatic Association of Pennsylvania, a tournament among seven of the association members will be staged in the Schwab Auditorium at State College, December third and fourth.

Last year the leaders of the players at Penn State invited all the college dramatic organizations of the state to a meeting there to organize a union of dramatic clubs. This resulted in an organization having eight charter-member societies, representing Penn State, Franklin and Marshall, Gettysburg, Drexel, Haverford, Grove City, Waynesburg, and Bucknell. Six other societies have since sought admission to the league.

In the coming contest four comedies will be staged each evening but there will be no duplication of plays by any two clubs. Two judges, prominent critics from New York City, have been selected. A third will be chosen soon. First and second prize cups will be awarded the two leading organizations.

The Penn State Players, being the entertaining club, will not compete. Cap and Dagger, Bucknell's dramatic club, has the distinction of being the oldest of the clubs that formed the league.

C. C. N. Y. President Uses Letter To Welcome Entrants

The entering class of the College of the City of New York was welcomed in a public letter from the president of the college, Dr. Sidney Edward Mezes. "The American schoolhouse is the challenge to the despair characteristic of the present age," President Mezes asserted in his letter, which follows in part:

"A recent writer, John Palmer Gavit, in his book, 'College,' reports the results of his questioning of parents and students on the subject, 'What should a student expect of college?' Of the many answers which he received, I would commend this one to your attention:

" 'The preparation, in an atmosphere of intellectual freedom, for effective participation as a responsible adult in the world in which he lives, in all ways as an intelligent, active member in his community, his nation, and the fellowship of nations; for going on with the task of self-understanding, self-government, and self-development in the life that now is, and for life that is to come.'

"The world still bleeds from the wounds of the war. Everywhere about us are prophets of despair, and everywhere is a deep questioning of the worth and purpose of life. The American schoolhouse is the hopeful challenge to the despairing cry of the age."

Community Song Leaders Course Offered At U. of P.

A two weeks' free course to train community song leaders started recently at the University of Pennsylvania, under the direction of Robert Lawrence, director of the Community Music Association of Washington.

"Singing," says Mr. Lawrence, "dispels all dissension. All sorts of organizations, realizing this, have fixed their convention programs so that every once in a while they could stop and sing a song or two. It makes people happier and gets rid of ill-feeling." Folk songs are the best for community work because many of the older people do not know the latest jazz music, he pointed out.

"Strange as it may seem, many of the rural communities are not conversant with many of the songs of last year which people in Philadelphia, New York and Chicago consider ancient."

Wisconsin Univ. Alumni Object To Action Of Regents

The alumni of the University of Wisconsin have objected to a recent action of the board of regents of that institution.

During the past summer the board of regents passed a ruling to the effect that no donations or subsidies from incorporated endowments should be accepted by the university. The alumni are asking that this action be reconsidered on the ground that it places a new burden on the legislature, will cause suffering to the taxpayers of the state, is out of accord with the actions of other state universities, will alienate the alumni, hinder the university teaching staff in its research work, affects the aid being given to Milwaukee industries, and runs counter to the traditions of the institution.

Penn Gazette Changes Hands

The Pennsylvania Gazette, a weekly newspaper founded by Benjamin Frank in 1729, and now published by the University of Pennsylvania, has been placed under the auspices of the General Alumni Society and will be published as the official organ of that organization.

"The Alumni Register," formerly the society's publication, will continue to be published, but under the name of the "General Magazine and Historical Chronicle." This paper, too, was founded by Franklin and had its inception in 1741. It will be a literary and scientific quarterly.

Sixty Lafayette Students Trying To Make Glee Club

Sixty Lafayette College students think they can sing well enough to belong to the college Glee Club. Tryouts for these men were held last week by Professor Harry Spengler, director of Lafayette's musical clubs, and Fritz Lehr, of Easton, leader of the glee club.

Ability to sing in harmony, rather than individual singing prowess was the basis for judgement of the voices trying out. The candidates were grouped in quartets and judged on their ability to perform singing in this manner.

The senior class at Lafayette College is attempting to negotiate a bet with the seniors of Washington and Jefferson College on the outcome of the game between the two institutions on October 24.

Eleventh Year, 'Commons Work' Opens At Princeton

The eleventh year of the student waiter system in the Princeton University dining halls opened last week with 145 undergraduates employed. "Commons work" is the backbone of the student employment system and has been an unqualified success since its beginning under Controller G. C. Wintringer, in 1914.

The number includes a student manager and assistant, twelve captains and 125 waiters, of whom fifty-five are freshmen. There is also an orchestra of six members.

HOW'S THIS "UNK?"

This clipping was swiped from the Hillsdale Collegian. It would seem to make it appear that the football team there is slightly pampered. My Dear!

"Kappa Chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma was hostess to the football squad at their house, Sunday evening from five until eight. The time was spent very informally with group singing, several feature selections by the coaches, Harwood and Guchert, and chorus and piano selections by James McCracken. An open fire lent coziness to the house and a genial hospitality to the group. Chop Suey was served to about fifty people."

BE HONEST

As a means of keeping a clear conscience and, at the same time, in order to keep others from suffering inconveniences, articles that are found on the campus should be returned to some place where students who have lost them may make their claims. Gold pencils, pens, spectacles, books, practically everything that can be lost is lost here on the campus. The signs on the bulletin boards are not the proper way in which to effect the return of the lost property. The finder may not be in his room when the loser calls. Again the loser may never see the sign.

The service office has volunteered to take care of found articles and to try to locate the owners. Students can help each other and relieve themselves of responsibility by returning anything that they find to that office. Persons who have lost articles should seek them there.

"Honesty is the best policy." Where there is a stated method for the return of missing articles, avoidance of that method is essentially dishonest. Be honest.

of waste were to be found in the method of instruction generally in use. Among these he enumerated waste in the use of the question, waste in not meeting individual needs, waste in the formation of study-habits, waste in the failure to develop intellectual taste, and waste in the manner of learning, for the marking system leads to the practice of "half-learning."

The subject of teaching, according to Dr. Hill, may be approached from two angles; first, that of subject matter; second, the angle of classroom technique. In Morrison's classification all subject material may be divided into four types; the appreciative type, including literature and the fine arts; the manual type, inculcating manual skill; the language arts, involving a certain intellectual skill; and the science type, including natural, social, and mathematical sciences. Each of these types has its own particular technique.

Taking the teaching of history as an example of the science type of subject he pointed out the differences between the telescopic method of material selecting and the unitary or selective plan, indicating that the latter is the plan followed by his institution.

Personalizing his lecture, Dr. Hill assumed that the audience was a class in history, just ready to undertake one of the teaching units set by the authorities of the school. Here he stated that the work of the teacher breaks into five divisions. The first of these is exploration, finding out just how much the pupils know in advance about the subject about to be attacked. The second step is the presentation of the subject in such a way as to create a broad conception of the matter in hand and to create interest in the work. This is followed by the presentation test which must be repeated until it has been passed.

Then begins the work of assimilation, the work of accumulating material about the subject at hand. This is done under the guidance of the teacher who advises the pupils individually and tests frequently in order to form some impression of the work being accomplished as a whole. When the teacher considers that a mastery of the subject has been attained the work of organization, reconstruction of the idea of the section without reference to books or notes, is begun.

The final step in the consideration of the unit is the recitation which consists in each student appearing before the class and giving in a sequential way, his understanding of the matter in hand. The pupil must feel himself prepared to talk on any phase of the subject assigned to him, or to talk on the whole question if called upon.

In closing his address Dr. Hill drew an analogy between the plan of work suggested by the Morrison "Master Technique" system of study and the normal way in which the student attacks a problem and compared each step in the system to a similar step in the preparation of an independent theme or article.

LAFAYETTE STUDENT COUNCIL THANKS DICKINSON FRESHMEN

"The Student Council of Lafayette College extends thanks to the freshman class of Dickinson College for its recent favors to Lafayette students."

This rather unusual message went forward to the "lowly" yearlings of Dickinson College from the Student Self-Government Council of Lafayette. The yearlings earned it by hospitality displayed to Lafayette students who were "humming" or driving their way to Pittsburgh to witness the Lafayette-Pitt game, Oct. 3. These tourists were greeted on the outskirts of Carlisle, Pa., the home city of Dickinson, by a sign asking them to spend the night at Dickinson as the guests of the freshmen. Several students availed themselves of the opporunity.

The idea taken up by the Maroon Key Club at Lafayette, and a similar welcome and offer of accomodations greeted Penn State students who were on their way to the Penn State-Georgia Tech game at New York City, last Friday.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

A bridge is a mighty symbolic structure in some ways. There has been for some time a sense of a division between the people of Lewisburg and the people of the college, a feeling that made relations between students and townspeople unpleasant and embarrassing in some cases. Both sides, we believe, sought to avoid further unpleasantness realizing that the interests of the college and the town are inextricably interwoven.

The action of the University officials and the borough officers, in cooperating in the building of the bridge on Seventh street may be an indication of the bridging of that gap.

During the football game last Saturday we were somewhat annoyed, and noticed that other people were similarly affected, by the people who evidently went to the game to throw peanuts at the people nearer the bottom of the stadium. This not only takes attention away from the game but marks the person who persists in practicing his marksmanship as one who cares more for his own personal enjoyment than he does for that of any other person, more than for the success of his team, and it marks him as one who has yet to learn the first rule of courtesy, consideration for others.

The introduction of a freshman choir raises an interesting question. Why shouldn't there be a University Choir? This would not only help with the conducting of the assembly but would also furnish an opportunity for the members of the glee clubs to keep in practice, both for their combined concerts and for their work as separate organizations. If the music of the University is to be built up, a choir at the assembly would be an excellent place to begin.

cover and a double page spread, however, that there might be some of the oldtime punch mixed with the smirks of the budding artists of this year. Altogether there are eleven student artists and five "outsiders," here in spirit, contributing to the art department of the comic.

In the business department of the paper a hot contest resulted in the choice of Douglas Anderson to be advertising manager, with Stearns Warner as his assistant. Underclassmen who wish positions on the staff should begin to work now so that they may be prepared to fill the positions vacated by graduaton in a competent way.

The circulation department, under Richard Peden, has begun a canvas of the dormitories and fraternity houses. Any persons whom they have not been able to sign up may procure subscriptions from Peden at the Phi Kappa Psi house or from Cober Drancher at the Phi Gamma Delta house.

The following rules will be a keyshapel charm in recognition of meritorious service. Awards are governed by the following rules:

1. Contributors must have material accepted for three consecutive issues, or for five of the seven issues of the year before they become eligible.

2. Contestants for positions on the business or advertising staff must show sufficient interest and do whatever work is required.

3. Three different keys will be given: a bronze key the first year that a contestant is successful; a silver key, the second year; and a gold key the third year.

4. Keys will be awarded at the end of each college year.

5. All awards must be made by the vote of the staff members.

6. In special cases silver or gold keys may be awarded before the contestant has received a bronze key, but only by a three-fourths vote of the staff.

vania Railroad plant at Altoona. The last address, "The Transportation Industry and the Engineer," was given by Samuel P. Bush, president of the Buckeye Steel Castings Company.

That afternoon was spent in the inspection of the Old Portage and the Horseshoe Curve. The Old Portage required five inclined planes on each side of the mountain to convey the traffic over a thirty-six mile route. The original rails consisted of oak and pine stringers with strap iron wearing strips, laid on stone blocks two feet square and a foot thick, spaced five feet apart. The contrast between this and the present route of the main line of the "Pennsy" around the Horseshoe Bend was very interesting to the engineers.

As Mr. Durand was called to Washington as a member of the President's Air Inquiry Board, Mr. Roy V. Wright was presiding officer at the meeting held on Wednesday morning. Mr. A. J. County, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, outlined the progress of transportation in this state, beginning with the early canal days and tracing the transportation industry's growth to the present time, in his address, "The Growth of a Great Transportation." Rustproofing of Materials" was the subject of another very interesting address by Dr. M. E. McDonnell, chief chemist for the railroad. His lecture was illustrated with lantern slides and he presented in a graphic manner the deterioration of the metal in cars and the consequent loss of great sums of money. The final address was given by Robert S. Binkerd, vice-chairman of the committee on public reations of the Eastern Railroads. In his talk, "The Railway as an Economic Force," Mr. Binkerd askel the delegates to carry to the general public that in considering the rail questions of today, they should get at the real facts of the situation instead of accepting any presentation that comes along.

Following a luncheon at the Altoona Cricket Club as the guests of the city of Altoona, the delegates were taken to the shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Here, in the locomotive test plant, a large locomotive was under test. Hydraulic pressure was used to slow up the main drive wheels and from the pressure used and the speed maintained by the wheels the tester figured out the relative power and speed of the locomotive.

The tour of the shops included visits to the brass foundry, smith shop, boiler shop, passenger car paint shop, bolt shop, erecting rooms, and machine shop. Superintendent William Elmer of the Middle Division aided considerably in explaining to the visitors the many details of the operations.

The last function of the convention was a dinner-dance at the Penn-Alto Hotel.

LEAGUE QUESTION IS DEBATE TOPIC

Manager Drum Discusses Work Of Harrisburg Convention

The weekly debating meeting on Monday of this week was held in Biology 24 at 7:15 P. M. The chief topic under discussion was the report of the manager for the year. T. Burns Drum who attended the meeting of the coaches and managers at Harrisburg last Saturday reported that the question, "Resolved, that the United States should enter the League of Nations" had been selected by the association as its first choice. The system of coaching and study of the subject that is to be used was also under discussion for a short time.

In his report Drum mentioned that the question of the League had been proposed in the meeting by the delegate of the Pennsylvania State College, Professor T. J. Gates. Bucknell seconded the proposition and Dickinson also voiced its approval of the selection of this question. The matter of choosing a question was finally referred to a committee for consideration and the sixty-odd propositions that had been raised were reduced to three: the League, abolition of strikes and lockouts, and professionalism in college athletics. When finally voted on by the convention these subjects found popularity in the order named.

Manager Drum announced that there will be a meeting of the debating board within the week to determine the method of coaching and work that will be followed in preparation for the debates. He also outlined a tentative plan that has been suggested. This plan calls for two meetings a week; one of the debaters only for general discussion of the question, the other a lecture meeting in which a member of the debating board will take up some phase of the work that is to be covered in the debate or in its presentation. He stressed the importance of faithful, diligent work in preparation for the debates, and plead for open-minded consideration of the question.

Cornelia Trowbridge read palms, and in the hands of the "Y" girls she found that another convention is to be held at Eagles Mere next year; one in which Bucknell girls will take honors. According to her forecast "Patty" Milliken will be the one who will write the prize song for the convention.

Frances Davis, Grace Pheifer, Marian Hendrickson, Hannah Metcalf, Martha Morrow, Florence Parmley, Anna Stevens, and Polly Ware spoke about the convention and recounted various incidents and stories told them by Dr. Arbuckle who was the leading speaker of the convention.

The idea for the campfire scene was taken from a somewhat similar stunt given at the convention.

The drive for membership that was conducted on October 7, 8, and 9 has called to mind many of the activties of the "Y" since the beginning of college. Even before college opened Florence Utt and Florence Parmley were corresponding with the new girls and welcoming them to Bucknell. At the stations the girls were met by Y. W. representatives. The association helped greatly with the affairs of the first few days, and, now is conducting an employment bureau for the women students. This is in charge of Anna Stevens.

About twenty-five freshmen girls were admitted to membership in the Y. W. C. A. during an impressive candlelight service held in the living room of the Women's College on Sunday evening, October 11. Anna VanDine, president of the Y. W. C. A., opened the meeting with a scripture reading, which was followed by a vocal duet by Grace Pheifer and Inez Robinson. After a declaration of the purpose of the Y. M. C. A. by Anna VanDine and Frances Harris, the freshmen girls, all dressed in white, came to the front of the room. Here each one lit her small candle from the larger one held by Miss VanDine, symbolizing the light and the help that is drawn from membership in Y. W.

"The Principle of Lubriction" was the subject of a picture shown by Professor Frank E. Burpee in the Engineering Building on September 29. An interesting feature of the picture was the view of the Bradford oil fields and the pipe line connecting with New York City.

kins. He studied there American literature and the literature of the French Revolution.

In 1920-21, Assistant Professor Warfel was a master at St. John's School, Manlius, N. Y. During the next four years, in fact up to the present time, he has been connected with Bucknell University as an instructor in English. In the spring of 1923 he was made secretary of the summer session, and , with Dr. G. C. L. Riemer, principal of Bloomsburg State Normal School and formerly a professor at Bucknell, organized the first Bucknell summer session since the World War. During 1923-24 he held the position of alumni secretary, succeeding Professor Rockwell.

Harold Augustus Shaffer prepared for college in Bucknell Academy graduating in 1912, and in 1913 received the degree of bachelor of arts from the University. In 1914 he was granted the degree of bachelor of science in electrical engineering, and last year he received the degree of master of science in electrical engineering.

From 1914 to 1916, Mr. Shaffer was enrolled in the graduate apprenticeship course of the Westinghouse Electric Company, in the East Pittsburgh plant. The second year he took extra work in the switchboard department. During 1916 and 1917 he was engaged as a draftsman in the mechanical engineering department of the Milton Manufacturing Co. and from 1917 to 1921 he held a similar position in the Milton plant of the American Car and Foundry Company.

Since then he has been associated with Bucknell as an instructor in drawing until his promotion to assistant professorship in the department of electrical engineering.

Mr. Shaffer also spent the summer of 1912 with the Westinghouse people; and in the summer of 1913 he was employed in the testing department of the hydro-electric plant of the Pennsylvania Water and Power Co. at Holtwood, Pa. During the summers of 1923 and 1924 he took graduate work at the University of Michigan.

George Allison Irland is a Bucknell graduate of the class of 1915, holding the degree of bachelor of science in electrical engineering. After his graduation he spent the first six months with the New York Central railroad; two pre-war years with the Bethlehem Steel Co., as a maintenance man in their electrical department at Sparrow's Point, Md.; and about a year in the signal corps at Camp Alfred Vail, N. J. He was transferred to Camp Meade, where he was commissioned a second lieutenant almost on the day of the armistice. After his discharge from the army he went back to the Bethlehem Steel Works, where he remained for one and a half years.

The fall of 1920 saw him again enrolled as a student here. He registered for a course in mechanical drawing and electrical engineering laboratory work. The next year he attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the following summer he continued his studies there. The summer of 1924 found him enrolled at Columbia, where he specialized in radio and physics.

Irland received the degree of electrical engineer from Bucknell in 1922. The next two years he was one of the teaching staff of the University. Granted a leave of absence from his duties in the session 1924-5, he secured the degree of master of electrical engineering from Johns Hopkins University. He is now assistant professor of electrical engineering.

STUDENTS FORMING AN EDUCATION CLUB

Dr. Geasey, Supt. Of Schools Points Out Benefits

Students of education at Bucknell are organizing an education club. At a meeting in Commencement Hall at 7:30 last Thursday night, October 8, 83 students heard a talk by Dr. Geasey, superintendent of the Sunbury city schools, and after preliminary discussion, chose L. A. Weisenfluh, '26, chairman pro tem.

Frank G. Davis, professor of education, took charge of the meeting. He presented the speaker of the evening, Dr. Geasey, who spoke first on the classroom teacher and then directed his remarks to a delineation of the benefits to be derived from an education society. He pointed out that such an organization here will prove very helpful in developing further cooperation between the students and the teacher placement service newly introduced by Professor Davis on the one hand, and other educational societies, state and local school officials, and the teaching profession generally, on the other. It will also serve as an agency to bring to Bucknell speakers of nation-wide reputation in the field of education.

On the motion of Professor Davis the roup present proceeded to elect a temporary chairman. Mr. Weisenfluh received the majority of votes cast. He appointed Miss Hannah Metcalf to act as secretary pro tem. Professor Davis proposed that the chairman appoint a committee on constitution, which would proceed with its task at once.

Members of this committee are: L. A. Weisenfluh, chairman; Miss Olive Douglas, Miss Ethel Nowler, Miss Ruth Propert, Miss Grace Cooley, Penrose Wallace, and Robert Sminky. Professor Davis and Miss Margaret M. Lawson were chosen faculty advisors.

The next meeting of the club will be featured by the formal election of officers, and will probably be held some time next week. The eighty-three people present at Thursday night's meeting compose the tentative charter membership of the organization. The students showed much enthusiasm for the plan, and discussion was spontaneous and plentiful.

BAPTIST CHOIR GIVES CONCERT, PICTURE ROCKS

The choir of the local Baptist church, of which several Bucknell men and women are members, filled a concert engagement in Picture Rocks last Friday evening, October 9.

The group left Lewisburg in four cars at 4:30 in the afternoon. As the guests of the choir of the Picture Rocks Baptist congregation they were given a dinner by the ladies of the church, in the church basement.

The first selections offered by Professor Stolz's singers were sacred music; the latter part of the program was secular in nature. Gilbert McCune filled in the intermissions with humorous readings, the kind that have always made a hit with Bucknell and glee club audiences.

A rainy evening made a full house out of the question, but those who were there attested their appreciation with a free-will offering of forty dollars.

Miss Marion Campbell, instructor in voice in the Bucknell School of Music, was the outstanding artist of the concert. She sang four solo numbers, and the solo part in two or three of the anthems. She also sang with Mrs. Stolz in a duet. The pleasant excursion ended with the party's return to town at 11:30.

PRESBYTERIANS HOLD STUDENT-AT-HOME-TEA

The Presbyterian Young People's Society held the first Student-at-Home Tea of the year on Sunday evening, October 4, from 5 to 7:15 in the church parlors. Old friends in goodly numbers were back, and quite a few new ones. Dean Clark made a very interesting though short, address, and the Rev. F. B. Everitt made a few remarks on the subject of religious faith in college life.

The refreshments were prepared in the afternoon at the home of Mrs. McCracken, by a committee of the young people consisting of Mary Foust, Betty Davis, Betty McCracken, Mary Laning, J. L. Cornely, W. A. Laning, and John Bridegum.

The Student-at-Home Tea, which was first tried as an experiment last year, proved very popular with the young people of both the college and the town, and very soon became an institution with the Presbyterian Young People's Society, which is planning several more for this year.

WHEEL OF DISCIPLINE WIELDS PADDLES; COUNCIL PUNISHES SIX WAYWARD FROSH

"I'M WISE NOW" SAYS FAUL, BEARING SIGN

The ruling wheel of discipline, whose revolving power is realized in the newly organized Interclass Council, is wielding a marked impression on the freshmen about the campus. The paddles of the great wheel swing regularly each Monday night, often encountering in their path the momentary resistance offered by wayward students.

Among the victims on October 5, was David Faul, who dashed up the fire escape to escape a senior to whom he had forgotten to speak. However, the senior displayed his ability as a "Frosh catcher" by getting him before he could dash into his room. He admitted the charge and was made to carry a sign which read on the one side "I was a fresh Frosh," and on the other side "I'm wise now." In addition, he also carried a bell.

Deem, '28, was reported as being responsible for general disturbances on his floor, and was also placed in the path of the wheel.

After Rivenburg stepped out of the same environment he decided that without a sanctioned excuse he would report for work the next time his name appeared on the list.

Blizzard could see no harm in dancing in "The Inn" and was duly given the opportunity to get next to a feminine attire by being requested to wear a dress for the remainder of the week.

Eschenhauer and Lessig forgot that sophomores and upperclassmen were sometimes in need of matches. As a reminder, Eschenhauer carried a tray of them with the sign "Help Yourself" attached to it, while Lessig had a large green bucket filled with matches which he was required to offer generously to all students.

WORK ON L'AGENDA STARTED BY STAFF

White Studio Of New York City Will Take All Photos

The first meeting of the 1927 L'Agenda board was held in order to organize and start the work on the year book, Wednesday evening, September 30, in the "Sem."

Editor-in-chief C. I. Carpenter, after calling the meeting to order, spoke briefly to the staff members, impressing upon them the fact that the success or failure of the class book depends directly upon whether or not they work together toward the common end, and urging that they cooperate in the effort to produce a L'Agenda of which the class might be proud.

Business Manager Charles J. Kushell followed Carpenter's talk by explaining the manner in which the photographic work will be handled. This part of the book will undoubtedly surpass that of any previous L'Agenda as it will be uniform throughout, and of the very best quality. The White Studio of New York City has been awarded the contract to do all the photographic work for the book, campus scenes, individual and group cuts. In connection with this matter, Mr. Kushell pointed out that not only will L'Agenda be improved as a result of the new policy, but organizations having group pictures taken will be saved considerable expense, as well.

This year, instead of charging an organization $15 for two pages and requiring it to pay the cost of photography, usually eight dollars, L'Agenda will charge $20 for two pages, but arranges and pays for the taking of the picture. This new plan saves an organization three dollars on two pages or one dollar and a half on one page.

Individuals will be able to procure prints of the photographs they desire, as formerly, and at very reasonable rates. Sample prints of the campus scenes made by the White Studio were passed around at the staff meeting and were unanimously declared to be the finest and most distinctive ever seen by those present.

It was decided to enlarge materially the section given to scenes of the campus, and in order to make this increase in the number of scenes possible, the comic calendar section will probably be discontinued.

The matter of selecting the person to whom L'Agenda shall be dedicated was brought up and discussed, but while several names were suggested, no definite action will be taken concerning this until a later date.

Before closing the meeting, Mr. Carpenter reiterated his plea for cooperation and for feeling of responsibility among all staff members.

PENN STATE INTRODUCES INSTRUCTION BY RADIO

by the Pennsylvania State College as

Radio instruction is being taken up well as by many other schools throughout the country. Station KD KA, Pittsburgh, will broadcast for the Nittany institution a series of sixteen ten-minute talks on poultry husbandry.

The talks are to be given each Thursday evening between eight and eight-thirty beginning October 15. Each talk will conclude with a series of questions. Credit will be given at the completion of the course if these questions are answered through the department of Correspondence Courses.

Other courses in agriculture and possibly in home economics will be undertaken later in the year.

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Holds Founders' Day

Prof. Norris Sketches History Of The Organization

The meeting of Phi Mu Alpha, Sinfonia, held on October fifth in the studio of Professor I. E. Norris, was a red-letter day in the history of the local chapter. It was the occasion of the first Sinfonia program ever presented at Bucknell University, the celebration of the founders' day of the fraternity, and an occasion for the advancement of music in the University.

Professor Norris, who became a member of the fraternity in the Zeta chapter at the University of Missouri, read a message concerning the founding and growth of the organization that made clear, in the minds of many of the members, the field and purpose of the fraternity. He started with the formation of a club, which occurred in the New England Conservatory in 1898, and traced the history of the fraternity through its early years of struggle, during which Ossian E. Mills was its guiding light. Continuing, he spoke of the present condition of the fraternity, an international organization, which comprises thirty-six chapters, and stands for the advancement of music in America through the medium of the college men interested and engaged in music.

In applying the principles of the organization to the local, Alpha Pi, chapter, which was installed last June, Professor Norris urged the utilization of all of the talent at hand to the best possible advantage. He pointed out the possibilities for solo, duet, quartet, and ensemble work arising out of the fact that the local chapter is made up of both vocalists and instrumentalists, and suggested the production of programs in conjunction with the women's musical fraternity, Mu Phi Epsion.

He also suggested that the members of the chapter undertake the writing of songs for the fraternity and for the University.

In closing his remarks, he emphasized the value of singing in keeping an organization together, citing the days of his own student membership in Sinfonia and the great extent to which organizations such as the Rotary, Kiwanis, and Lions clubs use songs to keep up internal harmony.

The complete program for the evening follows:

Reading, "Our Founders" Professor I. E. Norris
"Founders' Song" The Chapter
Tenor Solo Lawrence Scotti
(a) The Rosary Ethelbert Nevin
(b) Absent John W. Metcalf
"Hail, All Hail, Sinfonia" The Chapter
Violin Solo Robert Smith
Flower Song Gustav Lange
Tenor Solo John Gilmour
(a) The Sunlight of Your Smile Lilian Ray
(b) Mother of Mine Burley
"Sing Ho for Phi Mu Alpha" The Chapter
Duet Lawrence Scotti Robert Dilworth
Under the Desert Star Gordon Temple
"Sinfonia Parting Song" The Chapter

The song books, which had just arrived, were distributed at this meeting as were also the pictures of the installation group.

At the end of the program a light lunch was served by Professor Stolz and Professor Norris who had prepared the schedule for the evening.

SWARTHMORE HAS CLUB FOR FACULTY AND SENIORS

A room at Swarthmore College has been set aside especially for faculty and senior class members. The following clipping from the Swarthmore Phoenix reflects something of the attitude that the donation of the room is meant to foster;

"Songs and speeches marked the opening of the newly-furnished room in the basement of Section D, Wharton Hall, which Comptroller Pittenger has donated for the use of the men of the senior class and the faculty. Sincerity and informality were the keynotes of the evening's entertainment as seniors and professors mixed in jovial companionship.

"A pleasant surprise greeted the guests as they descended the steps into what used to be a vacant basement in Section D of Wharton Hall. At one end of the long, tastily furnished room, with plenty of easy chair and reading lamps, burned a huge fire in the reconstructed open fireplace. A divan in front of the fire was quickly filled with men of the senior class and two or three professors, as were other similar lounges and easy chairs. On the many small tables are found current magazines and volumes of standard authors placed within easy reach of a comfortable chair.

"Throughout the evening the entertainment followed informal lines with good fellowship flowing freely. To open the ceremonies Comptroller Pittenger made a short, witty speech in which he donated the room for the use of seniors and faculty. He gave, in a few words, his purpose for creating a place where guests of the college might be suitably entertained and where cap and gown men might meet in an informal way with their professors. In closing he said he hoped that this room might be a center for jovial fellowship where by the firelight men might sing and talk at their ease. Maxwell Shuster, president of the senior class, accepted Mr. Pittenger's gift on behalf of the class."

PHI GAMMA DELTA HOLDS SECTIONAL CONVENTION

The fall convention of Section Four of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity was held Friday and Saturday, October 2 and 3, with the Bucknell chapter as host. George F. Snyder, international secretary of the fraternity, and the Rev. A. Edwin Clattenburg, chief of Section Four, were in attendance. Delegates were here from the University of Pennsylvania, Lehigh, Gettysburg, Lafayette, and Johns Hopkins.

Several business sessions were held, at which the delegates discussed matters of interest common to every campus, such as scholarship, finance, social activities, and like topics.

The banquet on Friday evening was attended by the entire body of delegates and the local chapter, with a number of Lewisburg alumni. Among these were the Rev. Dr. R. M. West, Dean R. H. Rivenburg, Professor F. G. Ballentine, Professor L. E. Theiss, and Harry E. McCormick, graduate manager of athletics. George Schuyler, secretary of the Williamsport chamber of commerce, and John Davis, of Nanticoke, were also present.

The game with St. Bonaventure and a dance in the evening occupied the remainder of the convention's time.

RICHARD BARTHLEMESS IN "CLASSMATES"

Have You Ever Heard?

That Mong Shaw Loo, who was born Feb. 11, 1839, in Moulmein, Burma, is the oldest living graduate of Bucknell?

That he came to Lewisburg in 1858, seven years after the first class had graduated from the University at Lewisburg.

That Burma, before its occupation by the British, consisted of two kingdoms: the Burmese kingdom in the North, and the Talaing or Mon kingdom in the South: That the Mon kingdom was subdivided into smaller realms, the Tegu kingdom, with Pegu as its capital, and the Myawaddi kingdom on the Burmo-Siam frontier, the Tegu kingdom being ruled by the elder, and the Myawaddi by the younger brother.

That one of the sons of the Myawaddi king was Sumana, the great grandfather of Mong Shaw Loo. That after the occupation of Lower Burma and the settlement in Moulmein of the British, the grandparents and parents of Shaw Loo left their home in Rangoon to reside in Moulmein.

That in Moulmein Shaw Loo's grandparents came to know Dr. Adoniram Judson, the first American Baptist missionary in Burma, and they were among his first converts to Christianity.

That Shaw Loo in his childhood lived with his grandparents and became greatly interested in the stories of the Scriptures related by his grandfather. That under their influence he went over to Rangoon, where he heard the preaching of Mr. I. Ingalls, then missionary to the Burmans, and of the Burman pastor, Ko That E., who baptized him in 1856 at the Royal Lakes in Rangoon.

That Shaw Loo was eager to proceed to England or America to study.

That he worked his way from India to England on a sailing vessel as a cabin boy, and that his passage from England to America was paid by Judge Wylie.

That after he reached New York he was sent to the University at Lewisburg, and while being educated there was supported by the Rev. Dr. Thos. F. Curtis, professor of theology, (who lived in the house now owned by Dr. Wm. C. Bartol), and by Mr. Smith, a New York merchant, and brother-in-law of Dr. Curtis.

That he graduated from the University at Lewisburg A. B. in 1864; received his A. M. in 1867; and his M. D. from Cleveland Medical College in 1867.

That he returned to Burma, arriving in Moulmein in March, 1868. That in July, 1868, he went up to Mandalay, the Burmese capital, to present to King Kingdon an autograph letter, sent through him by President Andrew Johnson.

That from the king he received a cordial reception, and was requested to live in the Royal City, given living quarters in the North Royal Gardens, and his meals were sent him daily from the palace. But after a month or two he returned to Moulmein, as his missionary friends advised him the king's generosity was a fragile reed on which to lean.

That he then took up teaching, and for ten years had charge of the American Baptist Missionary Boys' School in Moulmein. Then for one year he was Assistant Science Master in the Government High School at Rangoon. That later he returned to Moulmein where for ten years he assisted Dr. Ellson Mitchell in medical work.

That he then opened a dispensary of his own, but in attending to the bedily ailments of those who had come to seek some physical remedy, he has not forgotten to treat their souls with the Everlasting Water of Life.

"Y" NOT TO ASK MEMBERSHIP FEES; STUDENTS RANK AS ASSOCIATE MEMBERS

MAY PRESENT LINCOLN COLORED QUARTET

A new basis for membership in the Y. M. C. A. has been formulated by this year's cabinet. The cabinet members reasoned that, since all the students support the "Y" thru the student budget, all students are nominally associate members of the association. But to put on such a program as they have planned, and to make improvements to the "Y" room, require funds.

An "active membership" drive was held for the freshmen the week ending October 1 and the following week saw the enrolment to active membership of a large percentage of the sophomores and upperclassmen.

This active membership requires no fee from the student but merely his support of the "Y" programs, among which the discussion groups, deputation teams, lectures, and socials are outstanding items. The "Y" expects to have the colored quartet of Lincoln University here for one of its attractions. The Freshman Sings, under the direction of Carpenter and Shuttlesworth, and scheduled for every Tuesday evening from 7 to 8, have been well supported.

To meet the expenses incurred by such an extensive program the cabinet will put on a financial campaign later in the semester which will seek voluntary donation on the part of the student to the depleted but deserving treasury.

Proteus Takes Shot At Gentlemen's Grade

Lafayette Contributor In Arms Against Mediocrity

A contribution to The Lafayette, student weekly at Lafayette College, strikes a point that might equally well be taken up here at Bucknell. The matter has not yet been discussed here as it evidently has been at the Easton college, but sooner or later the tendency that is being felt here toward such expression will be felt. Here it is:

PROTEUS SAYS:

"I may be dumb but what is this here new thing which they call 'a gentleman's grade.'

"The faculty, on the one hand talks about a large number of students who are satisfied with 'a gentleman's grade.' A number of the boys have talked about that 'ideal', the 'gentleman's grade.'

"Observation hereabouts would lead one to think that a 'gentleman's grade' is a class average just good enough to pass, which in this generation means good enough to rate the 2.5 necessary for graduation.

"My idea of a gentleman has never been that of a man who is satisfied with simply 'getting by.' A true gentleman is the true aristocrat. He is one who can pass well in any company, be it the company of society, the company of business, or the company of the intellect. This does not mean that he must be the acme of social perfection, the genius of business, or the superior mind. It does mean that he can mix in any one of these companies without fear, and with appreciation of each.

"The true gentleman is not the type of man who is satisfied with that classroom mark that hereabouts is referred to as 'a gentleman's grade.' If that is the type Lafayette is palming off on the public as a gentleman, Lafayette is missing the purpose of its origin and its continuance."

And the editor of The Lafayette tells us who Proteus is in the following note:

"There's a peculiar character here on the campus who always has something else on his chest besides a cold. He is in a position where he can look at campus life, sometimes from the inside, and sometimes from without. Occasionally he sides with the faculty, occasionally with the students, and often he is at outs with both. His name is Proteus."

Penn Registration Figures Show Large Increase

The total registration of full-time students on the University of Pennsylvania campus is 7695, as compared with 7283 at this time a year ago, according to figures compiled by Dr. George W. McClelland, director of admissions. At the same time Dr. McClelland announced that approximately 2200 students have been turned away because of lack of adequate facilities.

Last year at the close of the full college year, 8385 full-time students were listed. Allowing for the fluctuation in enrollment figures caused by late registration, the normal percentage of withdrawals and other factors influencing total enrollment, present indications point to an increase of less than 500 full-time students, as compared with 1924-25.

Full-time registration in all the schools recorded thus far this year is: College, 1577; Towne Scientific School, 162; Moore School of Electrical Engineering, 102; Fine Arts, 402; Wharton School, 2687; School of Education, 1280; School of Medicine, 458; Law, 311; Dental 516; and Veterinary, 52.

Baptist Young People Discuss Coeducation

"So This Is College" Is Theme Of Interesting Meeting

"So This Is College", was the subject under consideration at an especially interesting meeting of the Baptist Christian Endeavor, held on Sunday night Oct. 4, in the chapel room of the church. The subject was divided into three main divisions which dealt with the phases: what a college ought to be, what our college is, ways in which we make our college what it ought to be.

The leader discussed the first point and then seven students gave three minute talks on the different parts of our college life. These topics covered the ideas and opinions of the students about the following topics: courses in leadership, whether we get it by drag, politics, or actual ability; scholarship, all we can get or all we can get out of, high or low standards of scholarship which obtains here.

Coeducation was discussed and it was decided that it was more beneficial than otherwise. The social life of the campus received the verdict that it was not as it has been painted by outside—the-campus-writers, but that it was reasonably refreshing rather than devastating. Fraternities were conceded to be a help rather than a hindrance to our college when they were firm in their ideals and upheld the traditions upon which they were founded. The subject of athletics, commercialized or true sport, might well have been given as a subject for the entire evening. The possibilities of the subject were barely touched upon in the few minutes which were allowed for the discussion. The last topic of the series was in regard to the religious attitude of the students. This was a question of the sincerity and naturalness of the religious life of students as over against the conventional habit of so many people. This closed the second section of the program.

The third section of the discussion was short, as the leader read a few verses of the New Testament as a solution to the problems that had come up in the discussion of the evening. This closed the service.

Several new features have been added to the program of C. E. activity followed last year. An orchestra has been organized and the music has thereby improved over last year's record. The glee club quartette from Woman's College furnished special music for this service, which added a great deal to the appreciation of the evening's program.

SCHOOLMEN'S WEEK MEETING ATTENDED BY B. U. PROFESSORS

The Schoolmen's Week held at Lock Haven Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, October 1-3, was well attended by teachers from the central part of the state, and of considerable interest to those who were present. Professors Lawson, Whyte, Everett, F. G. Davis, and Dean Rivenburg attended some of the sessions.

Dr. John W. Withers, of New York University, addressed the convention three times on Thursday, speaking on "The Problems of Education." Dr. Haas, state superintendent of public instruction, gave the evening address before the meeting on Thursday.

On Wednesday afternoon and evening the meeting heard Dr. Thomas H. Briggs, of Columbia, who went to Lock Haven directly after his address at Bucknell. Miss Jessie Gray, president of the Pennsylvania Education Association, also spoke Friday evening.

The meeting resolved itself into a branch of the Pennsylvania Education Association and will convene in Lock Haven again next year. The sessions were held in the buildings of the Central State Normal School at that place.

"LEDGER" COMMENTS ON SUMATRA EXPEDITION

An expedition to Sumatra, to view the eclipse of the sun that will be visible there for three minutes on January 14, 1926 will be headed by Professor John A. Miller of Swarthmore. Dr. Miller had charge of the observations conducted at Yale University during the eclipse of last March, and the fact that he lectured here on the results of those observations creates interest in his work.

The Evening Public Ledger for September 30, in an editorial on the expedition, points out that the difficult and expensive preparations that are being made for the eclipse have more sense and reason than are apparent to the novice.

Quoting from the Ledger: "There is a lot of light around the sun that has never been analyzed to see just what materials are in it. Helium was found by the spectrograph and has been celebrated as a great discovery, but what is helium? Science wants ao know whether there is motion in the solar corona, but what good will it do to know? Nevertheless give the scientist time and he will justify his strange zeal. Photographing the sun is far more than an adventure in curiosity. It is not astronomy that has been the chief gainer by all this spying on our central orb, but chemistry; and the relation of solar to planetary chemistry is more like a fairy tale than a tedious scientific treatise."

MUSIC NOT EFFEMINATE DECLARES PROF. STOLZ

Professor Paul G. Stolz, director of the Bucknell University School of Music, has prepared a short statement concerning men in music. We quote Professor Stolz.

"Are you one of those people who consider Music effeminate?

"If so, do you know that:—

1. "All the great composers were men?

2. "The great Symphony orchestras of the world are composed mostly of men players and are conducted by men? The personnel of a modern symphony orchestra consists of 80 or 90 men.

3. "Many' churches in the larger cities have their music supplied by men and boys under a male organist and director?

4. "The men who are playing and singing on the concert stage and in grand opera have to be and are men of splendid physique and considerable intellectual attainment? They are the physical equals of the best football and baseball players.

5. "'The Musical Quarterly' contains an article entitled, 'The American College Man in Music?'"

6. "Music is accepted as an entrance subject in many American Colleges?"

A GROAN FROM THE SENIORS

(A Ballad of Long Ago)

Would we were back in the good old days
—Or that they were here with us—
When custom was strong, and tradition the craze,
And the old-time class spirit encouraged to blaze;
No one thought of making a fuss.

When a class took a couple of hours off,
And left the profs in the lurch,
One day in the Fall, and again in the Spring,—
Got out on the pike and into the swing
Of a hike among briars and birch.

At the end of the journey, the campfire lit
—We'd reliable chaps along—
We toasted marshmallows, chewed wieners and grit,
Ate till we couldn't and laughed till we split,—
And got back at the tower bell gong.

Next day, brains settled, once more circumspect,
Even lessons were more like fun.
Class hiking does have that peculiar effect!
But such education is too indirect—
Now they say it cannot be done!

Old custom discarded, tradition ignored,
This hiking is all out of style,
Class spirit is childish; we cannot afford
To miss two or three classes, the profs would be bored
—Oh, shucks! let's go study awhile!

PROF. RICE SCORES PATENT MEDICINES

Many Still Contain Much Alcohol In Spite Of The Law

Professor John W. Rice scored the patent medicine industry heavily at the Pre-med meeting in the biological laboratory Thursday afternoon, Oct. 1.

Professor Rice characterized the flood of patent medicines as a serious evil which must be combatted. The nation has abolished the legalized sale of alcoholic beverages, but patent medicine companies still continue to sell products containing large quantities of alcohol. So firmly entrenched is this manufacturing ring that the government cannot effectively curb this insidious industry.

This address concluded a very interesting meeting, which was marked by reports from the treasurer and from various committees.

Kenneth Gardner, chairman of the first aid committee, told of plans in which a large first aid cabinet is to be placed in the Biological Building and small chests are to be distributed so that every laboratory on the Hill will be thoroughly equipped with first aid apparatus.

Another interesting fact brought out in the meeting was the file which is to be made of the complete college record of every Bucknell Pre-med. This file will have complete data on every man who is or was a Pre-med at the University. Incidentally, information about every student, after he leaves Bucknell, is to be gathered so that every student's record will be known from the time he enters as a freshman until he begins practice as a physician or surgeon.

An attempt is being made to have Doctor H. V. Pike, of the State Hospital at Danville, and other prominent physicians, address the Pre-med society. Dr. Harold N. Cole, of Western Reserve, will be in Lewisburg on Homecoming day, and it is hoped that an opportunity will come so that students may hear him.

A membership drive has started and is in charge of J. L. Cornely. The fee is one dollar, and all Pre-meds, and Arts students majoring in biology, are eligible to join. Several social functions are planned for the coming year, and the Pre-med society is looking for a banner crowd of new members.

WHY I BELIEVE IN FOOTBALL

I believe in football because it fixes in every student the spirit of a fight and the will to win. It is all a mistake to say that the men on the beachers get no benefit. They receive incalculable benefit in the spirit that surges through them in the support of the team—the spirit of determination and irresistible attack. I believe in football because it fuses the college into a unity. Before the first big home game each year, the college is only a mass of individuals, but with the long yell that greets the team for its first big fight a new and living unity comes into being. In the game the soul of the college is awakened anew, and he is no man at all into whose heart the thrills of devotion and loyalty will not flow till his heart no longer beats.

For all these reasons I believe in football—especially football led by big-hearted men, hard, clean, strictly by rules, and with every ounce in the fight to the last whistle—John M. Thomas.

Perhaps widows and widowers so often re-marry because marriage is like any other gamble; if you lose, you want to try your luck again—and if you win, you want to win again.

If some folks couldn't worry they'd probably worry because they couldn't.

GEO. WASHINGTON LOSES TO BUCKNELL

Bisons Score 21 to 0 Victory. Two 55-yard Kicks Made

George Washington's eleven succumbed to the stronger and heavier Bucknell Bisons, Saturday, October 10, in Memorial Stadium, when the Orange and Blue tore through its line, emerging with a 21 to 0 victory.

Bucknell scored in every manner, using a drop-kick, a placement, two touchdowns and points after touchdown, and a safety. Two 55-yard kicks from the Bucknell territory, the first a placement by Trimmer, the second a drop-kick by McCormick, sailed over George Washington's goal posts. These two spectacular kicks brought the Bison rooters to their feet with a storm of cheers and yells.

The first touchdown resulted when Stevens fell on Blaisdell's fumble on George Washington's goal-line. The last touchdown came when Diehl forwarded the ball to M. Goodwin for 20 yards, the latter running 30 yards for a touchdown.

In remembrance and respect to Christy Mathewson's memory, whose funeral was held just before the game started, there was no cheering during the first quarter, until the students and players, in fitting tribute to one of baseball's greatest pitchers, bowed their heads in a minute's silent grace while taps was blown by members of the band.

A bitterly cold wind, blowing across the open end of the stadium, though making almost ideal football weather, caused many spectators to leave before the game ended.

THREE B. U. PROFS. HAVE PART IN TEACHERS' INSTITUTE MEET

Three Bucknell professors will have part in the program of the seventieth teachers' institute of Union county according to the announcement recently made by Emory O. Bickle, county superintendent of schools. The men are Dean Rivenburg, Professor Whyte, and Professor Stolz. The sessions of the institute will be held in the auditorium of the Mifflinburg High School, October 24 to 30.

Dean Rivenburg and Professor Whyte have been engaged as instructors for the institute while Professor Stolz will have charge of the musical programs.

Two evening sessions have been arranged for in the course of the week. Dr. O. T. Corson of Oxford, Ohio, will speak on Tuesday evening, October 27, on the subject, "Lincoln's Humility." Dr. Corson has made a special study of the life and character of the great American martyr-president. On Thursday evening, October 29, Dr. Francis B. Haas, state superintendent of public instruction, will make an address to the teachers and people interested in the public schools.

WOMEN DEBATERS PLAN CONTEST WITH ELMIRA

The girls' debating group held a special meeting on the evening of Oct. 3, in the Women's College to discuss a few matters of the coming debating season. It was voted at this meeting not to arrange a debate with Juniata College, but to attempt to put a newer list of college teams on the schedule. One of the first teams to be met will probably be from Elmira College since it was impossible to hold the debate scheduled with that team last season. A fair number of girls turned out for the work for the year, and it is expected that more will become interested before the try-outs have been arranged. Trips from the college to the other colleges on the schedule will not be confined to the one team, but will be divided between the teams as equally as possible.

CELEBRATE COLLEGE NIGHT

All College Night was celebrated at Beaver Memorial Methodist Church last Sunday evening with a program sponsored by Bucknell Methodist students. A fifteen minute song service led by C. I. Carpenter, '27, preceded an interesting entertainment.

The program:

HILLTOP BRIEFS

Gordon Goodyear, '27, spent the summer doing commercial survey work for the New York Telephone Co. The work was a house to house proposition, learning the values of the homes in various districts of the cities in which he worked, learning the nature and value of the various business, etc. The New York Telephone Co. is now making plans for a period of development and expansion, which will cover twenty years in fulfilling. This is the reason for evaluating the properties and businesses in the cities. Goodyear worked in only three cities, Binghamton, Johnson City, and Endicott, all in New York State. In those three cities ,however, Goodyear claims that he did enough practical observing of living conditions to get credit for a course in sociology. His work called him into the best homes of the cities, wher luxury reclined, and also into the slums, where hunger and poverty stalked.

The stirring strains of music and the sound of gayety rising from the music rooms when the local chapter of Phi Mu Alpha met to celebrate founders day on Monday evening, October 5, roused the girls on the first floor of New Building, Women's College, and they sallied forth to investigate the situation. The gallant youths, not wishing to see the ladies starve, sent up some of their refreshments. The next day a meeting of all New Building girls was called, at which the Dean advised that probably it would be best for the girls to refrain from communication with the musicians on all subsequent meetings.

"Cliff" Wester, '26, "Les" George, '27, Earl Bach, '26, Bob Swayne, '27, Sammy Tench, '27, and Carl Kivler, '25, all went to summer school, and "slung hash" at the "Sem". For "green waiters" the rate of accidents was quite low, numbering two. These were one dish of cherries spilled, and one glass of ice-water poured down the back of one unsuspecting girl, when she happened to raise her head as the waiter was going by. George was the prize waiter, both in dress and service. He wore cream colored balloon trousers, and always served his ice cream on "Pie."

A paper by Harry R. Warfel, Assistant Professor in English, is now appearing in the Western Pennsylvania Historical Magazine. The paper has for its title, "David Bruce, Federalist Poet of Western Pennsylvania."

"Mose" Quinn who was injured in the game with George Washington University team last Saturday will be out of the line-up for the rest of the season. The injury turned out to be a torn ligament in the left shoulder. Tough luck, Mose!

George Spratt, '27, helped his father build areoplanes, all summer. His father is the father of a new invention that, if successful, will be a great aid to the aircraft industry. The invention is now being tried out.

Ralph F. Hartz, director of the glee club, and Lewis K. Davis, student manager of the organization, spent several days last week travelling through northern New Jersey arranging the details of the tour to be taken at Thanksgiving time.

During the summer Bruce Miller, '27, carried the Gospel to the good people of Guilford, N. Y. He had a regular charge there for the summer.

The annual glee club concert at Camp Devitt will be held this year on November 12, a week before starting out on the first big tour.

Harold Jordan, '28, spent most of his summer doing the same sort of work. However, he spent some time visiting at Bridgeton, N. J.

The Homecoming season brought one relief to the students in that it caused the classes for Saturday morning to be excused.

President Hunt attended the inauguration of John M. Thomas, president of Rutgers University, at New Brunswick, New Jersey, today.

One of the amusing incidents of the George Washington game was Joe Spencett trying to share a blanket.

The final trials for the Cap and Dagger, dramatic club will be held next Wednesday evening, October 21.

Professor Johnson who was ill for several days last week returned to his classes Monday.

President Hunt has recently purchased a Junior Eight Locomobile.

There's to be little change in men's pockets this Fall.

B. U. ALUMNAE CLUB HOLDS PENNA. NIGHT

Talk On Pennsylvania Scenery Given By Mrs. Simpson

Tuesday evening was Pennsylvania night for some sixty members of the Bucknell Alumnae Club of Lewisburg, at the October meeting, held in the living-room of the Women's College.

Mrs. Frank M. Simpson (Mary Wilson, Inst., '95,) gave an interesting illustrated talk on Pennsylvania scenery, Professor Nelson F. Davis showed the lantern slides, two of which proved to be negatives of his own. The hundred pictures shown were selected from a collection assembled for the state department of education several years ago by Alicia Zierden (Mrs. F. J. Drynan, '00,) at that time an assistant in the State Library at Harrisburg. A number of slides showed the shining Susquehanna and the country about Eaglesmere.

Mrs. Eugene F. Marsh (Anne Kaler, Inst., '87,) now of Scranton, reported the proceedings of the convention of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Women's Clubs, held in Wilkes-Barre last week. Five hundred and sixteen delegates represented the 68,000 women belonging to federated clubs in Pennsylvania. The delegates voted to levy a fifty-cent per capita tax for state, general, district and country work, thus providing universal membership in the National Federation.

The topics discussed ranged, Mrs. Marsh said, from "How A State Federation Can Best Conduct a Legislative Campaign," and "How A Newspaper Is Conducted," to "The Most Profitable Expenditure of $50 for A School Library." Everywhere, Mrs. Marsh said, the spirit of service was evident.

Mrs. Harry S. Everett (Nellie Follmer, ex-'21,) read Whittier's Pennsylvania Pilgrim, and Miss Jessie Pangburn, (Music, '02,) sang. Mrs. Wm. C. Gretzinger (Mary Stoner, Inst., '87,) the president elect, presided.

MATHEWSON'S BODY IS LAID TO REST

was from Judge Landis, high commissioner of baseball. On the casket was a blanket of orchids and red roses which bore the inscription, "Your boys of the braves will keep the faith."

The funeral service was marked by the simplicity that characterized Mathewsons life. There was a prayer by President Hunt, a gospel reading and short message from the Rev. Frank B. Everitt, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of which Christy was a member; and a hymn. The Rev. Mr. Everitt closed by telling of the tribute paid to the memory of Mathewson at the opening of the world series game between Washington and Pittsburgh, that day. Before the first ball was thrown in the Pittsburgh ball park, taps was sounded for "Matty" and the spectators sang, "Nearer, My God, To Thee."

At the close of the service the body was borne through the streets, when flags were flown at half mast, to the cemetery, and there was laid to rest in a grave overlooking the University where much of Mathewsons early training was acquired. The pall bearers were Judge Fuchs, McGraw, Bancroft, Reilly, Ernest Sterling, and Albert Powell.

As the body was lowered into the grave, the crowd gathered to witness the George Washington-Bucknell foot ball game stood silent for a minute play was ceased, and a group o trumpeters from the University ban sounded taps.

FROSH CHAPEL MUSICAL

The freshman chapel service for Thursday, October 8, was featured by a musical program under the direction of Professor Paul G. Stolz. The high points of the service were a banjo duet by Vincent Loper and Henry Coleman, and a vocal solo by Lorenz Scotti. Scotti was forced to respond to an encore.

During the chapel of Tuesday, October 13, Alton Roth played a beautiful violin solo. The selection given was "Meditation" from the opera "Thais". Professor I. E. Norris played the accompaniment for Roth.

Professor Johnson, director of the freshman chapel services gave the freshmen timely advice on the method of bidding used by the fraternities as applied to the acceptance of bids by the freshmen. This was followed by an address by Professor Coleman.

Professor Bond of the department of religious education is planning to give a three day intensive course on December 2, 3 and 4, for the students of the University who do summer work in the churches. Those interested in the work that will be taken up should get in touch with Professor Bond.

With last minute glances and primping,
And callers and ringing of bells
The semites and Hittites are meeting
To rush to the music that tells
Them to whirl off together in dancing
With laughter, as fun reigns supreme
And rhythm and music are mingling,
Till the dance hour becomes a gay dream.

hours be from 7:00 o'clock to 9:30 on Friday and Saturday evenings, and from 2:00 to 5:00 on Sunday, that the town limits be changed so as to include the stadium, and that informal dances, instead of being only until 10:30, be allowed to continue until 11:30 and formal dances until 12:45 if not on Saturday night.

Special class privileges were next considered, and the following senior recommendations were made:

"Seniors may go to church morning and evening with men; are allowed down town with men any night in the week until 9:30 to walk, or go to movies; may have parlor dates any week night from 7:00 to 9:30; may go out of town for the evening or all night provided the Dean is notified."

The juniors may be down town with men until 9:30 on Friday and Saturday evenings and one other evening each week, and may go to church morning and evening with men. Sophomores may be down town with men until 9:30 on Friday and Saturday evenings, and may go walking from 2:00 to 5:00 on Sunday afternoon. Freshmen may have dates in the parlors on Friday and Saturday evenings from 7:00 to 9:30, may go walking on Sunday afternoon, but may not have dates with men on week days before 2:00 o'clock." Quite a stir was caused when a freshman girl suggested that on either Friday or Saturday evening the freshmen be allowed to be down town. The suggestion was not carried.

These recommendations are to be submitted to a faculty committee, and the resulting new rules will be published for the benefit of the men, for it seems necessary that they, too, should know just exactly what restrictions the women of the college must observe.

B. U. ORCHESTRA REHEARSES

The Bucknell Symphony Orchestra held its first rehearsal for the year in the studio of Miss Pines, October 8. The rehearsal was in charge of the director, Miss Charlotte G. Armstrong. Several new compositions were tried by the members and enthusiastically received.

The proportion of wind instruments to be used in the orchestra this year will be less than that of former years and the organization will take on more of the character of a stringed orchestra. Only a few wind instruments are to be used.

The orchestra will make its first appearance on Friday evening, October 16, in a concert of the Mu Phi Epsilon musical society. Preparations are also being made for the regular orchestra concert which will probably be given before the Christmas holidays.

HASKELL INDIANS FIGHT THE BISONS TO SCORELESS TIE

DESPITE SOGGY FIELD BISONS AND INDIANS PLAY TIGHT BALL

ROEBUCK STAR TACKLE

Blaisdell Creates Sensation By Sixty-Five Yard Dash Thru Strong Indian Tackle

The Bison and the Indian battled to a scoreless tie in a Homecoming Day game that was replete with thrills, before a crowd estimated at 8,000, Saturday, October 24.

Despite the soggy condition of the gridiron, both teams played tight football. The warriors of both Bucknell and Haskell rose to their best in extremity and heightened the interest in this colorful game by playing super-football when scores seemed imminent.

Down in the muck and mire three players carved names for themselves that will not soon be forgotten by those who saw the game. Like a gorilla breaking through the bars of a wooden cage, Roebuck, the giant Indian tackle, swept opposition aside and lumbered into the Bucknell backfield, knocking down forwards, blocking kicks, stopping Bison runners before they had left their positions. The other two defensive luminaries were Bucknell men with names that sound alike, Bihl and Diehl. Especially after the loss of Gus Shorts on the line did the work of these two stand out. When the Indian started a line drive, these Bisons hit it with a head-on charge, piling up the interference and stopping the runner. Nearly half of the tackles of the day were made by one or the other of these two men.

Offensively, two men stood head and shoulders above the rest, Blaisdell and McClain. Always at his best in a quagmire, Blaisdell tore off a sensational run reminiscent of the runs by which he starred four in the ranks of Rutgers and Navy supporters, last year. One man, diving from the rear as Blaisdell was changing his stride to dodge the last Indian between himself and the goal line, averted a Haskell score by clutching the winded runner and dragging him down on the twenty yard line after he had returned a kick for sixty-five yards.

McClain was the big offensive threat for the Indians. In midfield he punctured the line time after time for gains of from two to eight yards. Almost invariably he penetrated to the secondary defense. Captain Levi, playing in his first game since the opener with Fairmont, seemed considerably slowed up by his injuries.

Bucknell's alertness in gathering in loose balls, her superior punting, and the superb work of Blaisdell in running back punts, kept the Orange and Blue in the running. Haskell outrushed Bucknell almost two yards for one. The aerial game gained almost the same yardage for both teams. Nevertheless Bucknell held the ball for three quarters of the game in the enemy territory.

It was in the first half of the game that Bucknell missed her big chance to score. An aerial attack featuring Diehl and the Goodwin brothers, swept the Indians off their feet and brought

CAP AND DAGGER PLANS TO COMPETE IN UNION

Two plays are under consideration by the men's dramatic club, Cap and Dagger, for its presentation at the contest of the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Dramatic Union on December 3 and 4.

The plays that are being considered are "The Wonder Hat" by Ben Hecht, and "The Mayor and the Manicure," by George Ade.

This will be the first contest of the Union, and the different colleges are showing great interest in developments. Franklin and Marshall has announced its play to be Barrie's "Twelve Pound Look." Penn State will not compete on account of being the host for the contest. The other colleges of the Union are Gettysburg, Drexel, Haverford Waynesburg, and Grove City.

Glee Club to Leave On New Jersey Trip

Will Visit Eight Cities And Give 18 Concerts

The Bucknell University Glee Club, under the direction of Director R. F. Hartz, will make an interesting and enjoyable trip during the Thanksgiving recess. Student Manager L. K. Davis announces that the itinerary for northern New Jersey is now complete. On this trip the club will visit eight cities and give about eighteen concerts, singing both afternoons and evenings.

On Friday evening, November 20, the club will make its first appearance in Perth Amboy, where two of the members of the organization live: A. J. Roth, '29, and Alex. Horoschack, '27. The next night the club will appear in the South Baptist Church, Newark, where the Rev. Finley Keech is pastor. Mr. Keech is a graduate of Bucknell in the class of '22. He was cartoonist for the glee club during his college days at Bucknell.

The following morning the club will give a series of concerts in churches in and near Newark. Radio station W. O. R. of Newark also expects to broadcast a special program of the

Two Orchestras Play At Assembly Dance

Alumni And Students Attend Successful Yearly Affair

The Alumni Assembly and Dance at the Armory on Saturday evening, October 17, terminating the activities of Home-coming Day, was distinctly a success. The crowd broke up unwillingly at 11:45, only after repeatedly unsuccessful attempts to urge the orchestras to further effort.

The dance floor was crowded to capacity, making it impossible for the dancers to break loose in the Charleston. Yet every one was "stepping lively" under the influence of the peppy music furnished alternately by Noble's Orchestra of Bucknell and Shaw's Orchestra of Harrisburg.

Everybody joined in making the evening a happy homecoming event, but no loud disturbance, or rowdyism was shown. It was easy to see that the gathering was one almost entirely of Bucknellians, past or present.

Guy Payne, the popular owner of the College Inn, served punch and ginger ale for the thirsty dancers.

The bright attire of the co-eds, the men in their "collegiate cut" clothes, and the bright faces of the whole group, made the event appear on the surface as well as in its deeper significance, to be a happy reunion of the sons and daughters of Bucknell.

BALDWIN SPEAKS ON BUSINESS

Mr. H. C. Baldwin of the Babson Institute, Massachusetts, spoke to the class in Economics 301, Thursday, October 15, on the subject of business research and forecasting. Mr. Baldwin gave some very interesting facts and figures on the method and research necessary in investigating the future of stocks, commodities, markets, etc.,and aroused some interesting discussions in the period given to the asking of questions. He stopped here on his way to State College and addressed the class at the request of Professor Heim, head of the department. Two Bucknell men are connected with the Babson Institute, Roy C. Hanna and W. C. Willman.

MORAN HOST TO SUNBURY BOYS

"Uncle Charley" Moran played host to the coach and members of the team of the Sunbury High School at the Haskell game, Saturday, October 17. The high school boys were to have played a game with the Milton High School team but this game was cancelled at the last minute. Informed of the situation, "Unk" played grad-daddy to the bunch and brought the squad to the game. Sunbury High is making a great name for itself in scholastic football this year and a few more years may see some of the neighboring-town boys wearing the Orange and Blue of the Bisons.

CAPT. O'HAY TELLS STORY OF HIS LIFE

Witty Irish Soldier of Fortune Has Had Vicarious Career.

The eve of Homecoming Day was marked by a spirited mass meeting at which Captain Patrick Irving O'Hay, soldier of fortune, traveler and humorist, gave a delightful talk to students, alumni, faculty, and friends of the University. He talked quite frankly about himself, for, to put it in his own words, "I am the most interesting person that I have ever met." Nevertheless, his talk contained a great deal more than a recount of the adventures of a life that has been stranger than fiction, for it was a rough and ready presentation of a broad philosophy of life.

The meeting was presided over by Fred Evans, president of the Student Council, and opened with the singing of Bucknell songs and cheering. A very large crowd attended the meeting in spite of the weather and the large number of social functions that were being held that night.

Professor James P. Whyte introduced the speaker, bringing a little play on the man's nationality by saying that in order for an Irishman to do his best he must be led by a Scotchman.

Audience Is Spellbound

O'Hay, from the time he mounted the platform until he spoke his last words, standing on the steps of the rostrum, held the attention of his hearers. His wit, his experiences, his analysis of the conditions that exist today, held his audience spellbound. His story was that of a man who has seen life, conquered his disappointments, lived, loved, fought, and laughed through the world. And in all of his experiences he has come to the conclusion that "it doesn't pay to take things too seriously. Don't become discouraged over disappointments," said O'Hay, "for in the end you will always find that everything is about even."

Urging first that people should not take themselves too seriously, that they should forget their self-consciousness, and forget their social

Second Number of the Artist Course Brings Estelle G. Lhevinne, Violinist

JAMES GRAY TO ACCOMPANY HER ON PIANO

The second number of the Bucknell University Artist Course will bring Estella Gray Lhevinne, violinist, who will appear, accompanied by James Gray, pianist, Monday evening, November 2.

Estelle Gray Lhevinne's is an outstanding personality in the world of violinists. Through her originality she has evolved a unique kind of program which makes a direct appeal to the hearts of all hearers. Her playing is charming; she does great things in an intimate, lovable way.

But her charm is not only in the perfection of her virtuosity, nor in the fact that she chases the novel in arranging her interesting programs, but is greatly due to the informal atmosphere she creates by telling her audience interesting bits about what she is going to play.

Madame Lhevinne has toured Europe several times, and has appeared with such artists as Mischa Elman, Schumann-Heink, Werrenath, and many others renowned in the musical world.

James Gray, who accompanies Madame Lhevinne on the piano, is a pianist of distinction and is a fitting companion for the virtuoso in helping to interpret her musical themes. Several solos by Mr. Gray have been arranged.

The price for a single admission to the concert is $1.75. Tickets may be secured at the door.

In the business session that followed plans were made for the pledging and initiation of new members of the fraternity, and it was voted unanimously to extend honorary membership in the chapter to Ray Miller and to Edwin Swain. It is probable that Mr. Swain will be initiated when he appears in concert, December 21.

The fraternity voiced its support of

JAILED BY REQUEST, HE STUDIES PRISONS

Osborne, Former Auburn Warden Tells His Experience

Thomas Mott Osborne, the foremost prison reformer of the United States and an authority on conditions in prisons and other penal institutions throughout the world, spoke before several audiences at the University, Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 12 and 13.

Mr. Osborne's first address was to the class of freshmen in Orientation under the instruction of Professor C. R. Johnson. Several sophomores and upperclassmen who were interested in the work of prison reform were also permitted to attend the class for this lecture.

In his talk, Mr. Osborne related some of the practices that have been prevalent in prisons everywhere and that make the prisons and reformatories breeders of crime instead of institutions from which men return to their rightful places in society. He claimed the prison system that has been used has made prisoners desire to "get even" when they leave their enforced stay and that is the reason there are so many "repeaters," or men who are serving second or third or more sentences.

Before he became warden of the New York State prison at Auburn, Mr. Osborne had himself imprisoned in order to study prison conditions and to learn the attitude of the men behind the bars. After he became the warden of the prison, he made use of the information that he had gained in this way in his organization of the Prison Mutual Welfare League, an organization for the self-government of the prison community that is based on the idea that the only way to teach a man to be a citizen is to give him the duties and responsibilities of citizenship.

In trying to meet the problems of the government of their fellow-prisoners, the men came to realize that they had been a problem for their fellowmen outside of prison and the analysis of their problems prepared them to re-enter society at the close of their terms in prison.

Debaters Plan to Hold First Tryouts Monday

Squad Will Be Reduced To Eight Another Tryout Soon

That the initial debating tryouts will be held Monday, October 26, was announced at a meeting of the squad in Bucknell Hall last Monday. The plan for selection has been slightly altered from that proposed last week, and it is now agreed that the squad shall be reduced to eight men, for coaching purposes. Another opportunity for the men who do not qualify at the first attempt will be given after the first few debates have been held.

The meeting was called by Manager Drum, who outlined the plan and gave the reasons for its adoption, stating that it is impossible for any one member of the faculty to give his entire time to the work, and that it is equally inconvenient for several men to divide their attention among a large group. Thus to get the most practical results the debating board has determined to use the varsity squad system.

The contest for positions on the squad will be held on Monday evening, in Bucknell Hall, at 7:15. The manner of selection will be by the

FINANCIAL DRIVE FOR STUDENT "Y" TO START OCT. 27

"Y" BUDGET SHOWS NEED DURING COLLEGE YEAR OF $1,000 FUND

TO CANVASS CAMPUS

All Fraternities And Dormitories Soon Will Be Visited By Canvassers

The financial drive for the Y. M. C. A. will be opened Tuesday morning, October 27. The campaign will canvass the dormitories and the fraternity houses in the effort to raise a thousand dollars for the needs of the association during the current year. A committee of approximately forty men will have charge of the canvassing.

The new basis for membership in the Y. M. C. A., assuming that all men students become associate members on the payment of the student budget fee, has made it necessary to find some means of securing additional funds to carry on the work of the association. The cabinet, after due consideration, arrived at the conclusion that a direct appeal for contributions from the students would be the most effective means.

The campaign committee will meet Monday night to discuss plans for the drive. Experience with the pledge cards of the student friendship fund, which is to be taken over by the "Y", has shown the method of pledging to be unsatisfactory. It is hoped that the entire amount can be secured in cash. The committee will probably make nightly rounds of the dormitories and fraternity houses in its efforts to solicit the necessary subscriptions.

The budget system is a new departure in the administration of the "Y" affairs and appears to have some advantages over the plan formerly followed. It does away with the prescribed dues for membership in the organization, enables the association to widen the scope of its work, and puts the whole proposition on a thoroughly businesslike basis.

The budget prepared for this year is as follows:

Expenditures,
Silver Bay conference	$400.00
Speakers	50.00
Freshman Week expenses	150.00
Delegates to conventions	85.00
Student fellowship fund	200.00
National and state fees	100.00
Pins	50.00
"Y" Hut fixtures	60.00
Books and magazines	50.00
Printing	40.00
L'Agenda fee	15.00
Total Expenditures	$1450.00
Receipts,
Campaign	1000.00
Student budget	$ 450.00
Total receipts	$1450.00

WAITRESSES BANQUET; TALK OF UNIONIZING

At the semi-annual banquet for the waitresses in the Seminary dining room on Wednesday evening, October 21, a proposal was made to form a local waitresses' union, with its object to secure shorter hours, more pay, etc. At least one strike a year is contemplated, as befitting a union of this kind. Among other aims of the organization are these: freshmen and everyone else possible are to be prohibited from attending breakfast; all girls are to leave the table immediately after they are done eating; breakfast is to be served to waitresses in bed on their mornings off; waitresses are to be allowed to take sugar and other provisions from the kitchen for the purpose of making fudge, etc; and no faculty at the heads of tables.

Let Them Know That You Saw Their "Ad" in The Bucknellian

Legal Aid Bureau, Under Hassrick, '06, Complimented By American Bar Association

FORMER BUCKNELLIAN DOES NOTABLE WORK

(By Prof. L. E. Theiss)

Bucknellians should be greatly pleased to learn that the American Bar Association has recently issued an unsolicited statement to the effect that the Philadelphia Bureau of Legal Aid, which is headed by Romain C. Hassrick, '06, leads all other legal aid bureaus in the United States in usefulness. To quote from this report of the Bar Association's committee, this bureau "serves annually a larger percentage of the population of the city than does any other similar bureau in any of the large cities."

As the Philadelphia LEDGER remarks editorially, "This report is a deserved tribute to the able management of the bureau, and its work is becoming of increasing importance in preventing useless litigation and in bringing the machinery of the law within the reach of many to whom the costs and delays have hitherto been an insuperable obstacle to its employment."

After Mr. Hassrick's graduation in 1906, he became a member of the editorial staff of the Philadelphia NORTH AMERICAN. The wide experience and the many friendships gained in his work as a reporter, are of inealulable use to Mr. Hassrick now in his work with the Legal Aid Bureau. He studied law while still reporting for the newspaper. His work as a young lawyer won favorable comment. When the Bureau of Legal Aid was created in 1920, Ernest L. Tustin, '84, who was then at the head of Philadelphia's municipal charities organization, appointed Hassrick as chief of the Bureau. The latter organized the Bureau and has continued to direct the work with increasing success.

Mr. Hassrick's work is not only extensive, in that it touches so many individuals, but it is significant, in that it is far more than the mere doling out of charity, in one form or another. The Bureau has been a very real factor in the work of Americinanization that the recent war has shown is so necessary.

In a thousand ways Mr. Hassrick's forces have been able to show foreigners within our gates the real spirit and meaning of America, and to make them into good Americans so that they become units of strength rather than remain elements of discord and weakness.

One of the striking features of this work of the Philadelphia Legal Aid Bureau is the effort it has to put forth to secure justice to foreigners and citizens of foreign birth. In its very first year, 1920, this Bureau handled 13,432 cases, which entailed the interviewing of 31,201 persons. And as each person interviewed drew friends or relatives into touch with the Bureau, it is estimated that fully 50,000 persons came into contact with the Bureau that first year. The number is much larger now.

These persons, practically all of whom had suffered injustice here, thus gained a new conception of American justice, when they found the arm of the law reached out, not to oppress them, but to help them. In Europe they had known only oppression. The help they received here has made them, in most cases, Americans heart and soul. And thus an element of strength has been injected into our population.

For instance, the following letter was one day received by the Bureau. It was from a Russian, and was written in his native language.

"Dear Sirs:

I am a Russian lawyer by education and profession. About two and a half months ago I came to America and worked for two months elsewhere and then came to Philadelphia and started to work for the Atlantic Refining Company as a laborer. As I was wounded in the war and am not strong, and not used to hard physical work, I get so tired that I cannot learn the English language in order that I may be able to do the work which a lawyer does, and it will only be when I have a position that will give me enough time to study. As I have no friends and cannot find the right kind of employment, I thought I would ask your advice as to how I can obtain a position as I have stated. I have no right to put you to all that trouble but if you can come across anything, kindly have me in mind and answer me at this address..... I am forty-one years old. I have finished law in 1907 and until 1929 served in Russia as a judge in a court."

At once the Bureau sent for the writer of the letter and assured him that he had a perfect right to call upon the Bureau for aid, that that was what America stood for—help for the helpless, protection to the weak. His case was fully investigated, a ... job was found for him which would not tire him so, and he was put in touch with the evening extension work of the schools, where he could learn to speak and write English. Thus America will secure the services of a man of ability, whose influence for good among those of his own nationality may be of vast future importance to all of us. The Bureau of Legal Aid made him a friend of America instead of an enemy.

From its very inception, the Bureau has handled more than one thousand cases a month, and its work is growing in volume constantly. Yet all this work is done by a staff of twenty-four persons, of whom eleven are attorneys. Through its interpreters twenty-one languages are spoken. Only twice has the Bureau been unable to talk with complainants. Once an Egyptian, and once a Turk speaking a peculiar Ottoman dialect, could not at first be understood. But in the end the Bureau found the one man in Philadelphia capable of talking with these men and carried their cases through.

Beginning with 1922 a record was kept concerning the nationality, citizenship, etc., of all applicants for aid. That year it was found that 997 unnaturalized persons applied to the bureau for assistance. A survey by the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce showed that there were 48,389 persons of voting age in Philadelphia, as large a population as that of Williamsport and its environs, who were unnaturalized. The Legal Aid Bureau, therefore, established direct contact with approximately one out of every forty-eight of these persons during that single year. And through these individuals undoubtedly double or triple that number came to know, at second hand, of the Bureau, and see the effects of its ministrations. In every case the Bureau first served the applicant and then endeavored by persuasive methods to establish contact between these foreigners and the Naturalization Bureau, so that these persons might become, in due course, real Americans.

Not only did the Bureau make a special effort to serve these foreigners, but it also endeavored to place the applicants in contact with educational facilities, by interesting them in the extension work of the schools. Thus the door was opened to them for legal relief from oppression, to citizenship, and to educational opportunity.

No wonder that the committee of the American Bar Association, after a survey of the work of the legal aid bureaus in all the big cities, gave the palm to Philadelphia. Its work is of the utmost significance. Bucknell should feel proud that one of her sons is the creative mind behind all this.

Cornell Scientist Talks to Campus Club

Tells Of Her Visit Last Winter To The Hawaiian Islands

Mrs. Anna Botsford Comstock, professor emeritus at Cornell University and well-known writer on nature subjects, was the speaker Tuesday evening at the opening meeting of the Campus Club, held in Bucknell Hall More than two hundred members and guests heard Dr. Comstock tell of her visit last winter to the Hawaiian islands. Mrs. Comstock's talk was well illustrated by beautiful lantern slides in color. Professor Norman H. Stewart was in charge of the lantern. Mrs. Frank G. Davis, first vice-president of the club, presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. Emory W. Hunt.

Mrs. Comstock spoke in some detail of the work in the islands done by women for women. She told of the power of the Y. W. C. A.; of the work to improve diet and health; of the school gardens, of the planting of shade trees, and of the propagation in nurseries of plants and trees used to beautify parks in the various islands of the archipelago.

Mrs. Comstock described the Hawiian islands as being two thousand miles from anywhere. She spoke of the people as being very fond of music and of flowers. The slides of flowers which she displayed were admirable. From some two hundred and fifty varities of flowering plants existing in the islands, have been developed more than one thousand varities. Among these is the hibiscus, so frequently used in beiges, the golden shower, magenta-and-orange-red varities of bougainvillaea, and night-blooming cereus, which latter, Mrs. Comstock said, clambered over miles of stone walls in the islands. In conclusion Mrs. Comstock characterized this far-flung archipelago which extends over a distance of more than sixteen hundred miles as the crossroads of the world.

SUSQUEHANNA U.

Susquehanna University at Selinsgrove, Pa., in a recent issue of the college paper announced that its president, Dr. Charles T. Aiken, has completed twenty years of service at the University.

Dr. Aiken during his long term as president has done much to build up our nearest collegiate neighbor, both in point of size and in standards. His work is indeed worthy of commendation and we wish him well in his efforts for the future of Susquehanna.

WE APPROVE.

Editorials are so liable to attack that we are glad to have a real opportunity to voice approval.

The subject of our approval is the change in the action of the Dramatic and Literary Board. In the past it has been the practice for this board to appropriate the portion of the budget allotted to it and then seek to supplement this by charging admission to entertainments given under the auspices of the board. Allowance was made for more than the amount paid in the budget giving the students special prices on the tickets; nevertheless the system was unjust. In effect the students were forced to pay the first installment on a series of entertainments, but if they wanted to attend any one of these they were compelled to make further expenditures. If they did not wish to attend they were paying under compulsion for a commodity not received.

This plan may have enabled the board to secure high class entertainers but it surely did not encourage the students to attend.

When the student gives up his or his father's money he has a right to expect something in return without having to make an additional expenditure to get the worth of the first. Since all of the students help to pay for the speakers who are brought here they should be men who will appeal to as many as possible of the members of the student body.

The presentation of Captain Irving O'Hay, without extra charge, before the whole student body, was a close approach to the ideal. We hope the Dramatic and Literary Board will continue its "open door" policy.

"KEEP ALUMNI EDUCATED" IS SLOGAN AT LAFAYETTE

With a slogan, "Keep the Alumni Educated," the faculty and the alumni association of Lafayette College will operate this year in the production of an alumni reading list to be distributed to all of Lafayette's graduates and former students.

Under the proposed plan, occasional leaflets will be issued containing lists of new books recommended by various departments, together with a brief description and review of each book. TThese leaflets will bring to the alumni opinions on new books from members of the faculty under whom many of the writers had courses while they were in college.

RADIO AMATEURS ORGANIZE

The radio amateurs of Bucknell University held their second meeting of the year in Main 2 on Thursday evening, October 15. The purpose of this and the previous meeting was to establish a club and maintain a station.

The membership will be restricted to those holding, or to those having held, an operator's license. Anyone interested can become a member by obtaining a license within three months after admittance to the club. The meetings are open to all those interested in radio.

The station will be operated with 50 watts at 80 meters, and will handle messages and amateur traffic. The next meeting will be announced on the bulleting board.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

This week has been filled with a great number of "Big" events. In the various affairs that were staged within the days before, during, and immediately after Homecoming Day were to befound many of the elements without which an education fails of being liberal.

Pat Irving O'Hay may have been a little profane at times but he was human in his talk. In our opinion he is doing far more to further the ends of religion and of humanity through that human touch than can ever be attained by the smug minister who tries to live up to the forms of what he thinks to be right.

During the football game on Saturday there were many occasions where students had the opportunity to exercise the sterling quality of self-restraint. Men must learn to take the consequences of their actions; to accept the impartial judgement of duly constituted authorities, and to be courteous even when infringement of their rights is real. The hissing and shouting at the Referree during the game, when penalties were imposed on the Bucknell team, only goes to show that some of our students have not yet learned to act like men.

The game was a hard one not to win but it would have been a harder one to lose. The Indians showed a hard, clean sportsmanship such as has seldom been seen in Bucknell contests.

"Gus" Shorts says that it was the hardest game that he ever played in and he has taken part in some pretty difficult tangles during his three years of varsity football here.

Incidentally its the first time that Shorts has been forced to leave the field on account of injuries.

Thomas Mott Osborne brought a message that may have seemed out of place to some of the people of the college. Still Osborne's idea is that a prison should be an educational institution, building toward better citizenship for its students. If more of the colleges of the land would do the same thing there might not be so much need for prisons.

The fact that The Bucknellian isn't meeting its issue date by several days seems to be causing a great deal of displeasure among some of the students of the college. The editor has his worries on the matter, too, and is just as anxious to turn the paper out on time as the others are to receive it on time. Anyone who is sufficiently interested in having the paper keep its dates to help get it out on time some week will be welcomed upon his putting in an appearance.

Have You Ever Heard?

That the bell in the Baptist church belfry was paid for by Bucknell students.

That it was purchased to replace a bell that was broken by Bucknell students.

That in the days of President Loomis, college sessions lasted well into the summer, and that the bell was broken during a Fourth of July celebration.

That the bell had been lowered from the belfry of the original church, to be taken to the new edifice—the present one—and the students got possession of it.

That they hammered on it all night long with an axe, so that when morning came the bell was a sad wreck, having cracked and lost its voice under such harsh treatment.

That the boy students were so fearful of the wrath to come, President Loomis being a man of remarkable strength of character, that they voluntarily took up a collection to buy a new bell.

That every cent of the necessary money, amounting to several hundred dollars, was in hand before morning came.

That President Loomis, upon learning what had happened and receiving the cash, remarked, "Well, we needed a new bell, and the Lord in his merciful providence has brought this to pass."

Some men grow up to a big job, and some just swell above the neck.

glee club's on Saturday night after the regular concert in the South Church. On Sunday night a complete program will be given in the Rev. Mr. Kesch's church.

The Sunday song service by the glee club has found great favor in past years, and pastors of churches in towns an cities on the Bucknell schedule are usually eager to secure the services of the organization.

On the other days of the week, the club will appear successively in Elizabeth, Hillside, Westfield, East Orange, Belleville, Manager Davis' home.

The work of the club this year should be of an unusually high character as there are seventy-five candidates for positions. Among these are a number of men with exceptional veices. As the personnel of the club will be necessarily much smaller than this number, limited to about thirty, Director Hartz will be forced to drop some of the candidates. As finally selected, his singers should average unusually high in quality and musical ability.

Freshmen Girls' Rules Issued by Soph Co-eds

Must Wear Green Head-bands And Carry Placards

With the closing of the rushing season and the consequent lifting of the silence ban between freshmen and sophomores came the long awaited announcement of freshmen rules for the girls at a meeting of the freshmen and sophomore classes, held in the living room at the Women's College on Thursday evening, October 15. The sophomore committee on rules seem to have done its work well. The rules follow:

2. There must be no cutting of the campus by freshmen.

3. All freshmen must allow faculty, upperclassmen, and sophomores to enter rooms and buildings ahead of them.

4. Freshmen must speak to all girls at all times.

(a.) Freshmen must use a more respectful salutation than "Hello" when speaking to upperclassmen and sophomores.

(b.) When speaking to a sophomore, freshmen must raise the placard, mentioned below, the full length of the arm.

5. Each freshman must carry on a stick a yard in length, a placard, 10x12, bearing her full name.

6. Freshmen must wear black cotton stockings at all times.

7. Freshmen must wear a green band, four inches wide, tied in a bow at the top of the head.

9. Freshmen must walk backward anywhere on Women's College campus.

10. Freshmen may talk to men only in the company of a sophomore girl.

11. Freshmen may not curl their hair nor use cosmetics.

Y. W. GRACE CONTEST

Ruth Welch, '29, is Announced As Winner of Grace Song.

Ruth Welch, '29, was announced as the winner of the Bucknell Grace contest at dinner on Saturday evening, October 17. A special chorus led the singing of the new grace.

About twenty-five good compositions were handed in and Acting Dean Clark said that the judges, Professor Stolz, Miss Jenkins and Miss Armstrong, had difficulty in selecting the winner. Murle Adams and Caryl Dutton were given honorable mention for their contributions. Dean Clark suggested that Miss Dutton's song might make a very good vesper hymn for the women's evening services.

Ruth Welch's grace is written to the tune of "Abide with Me."—

"Father above,
Thy pardon we now ask,
For our misdeeds
Today and in the past.
May this food, Father,
Strength to us impart,
And from Thy precepts
Let us ne'er depart."

GYM TO BE REPAIRED

Varsity basketball will again be brought out of the rather obscure position it has held during the past two years under the plans that are now being undertaken by the Athletic Council.

Two years ago, when the inspectors of the state department of public safety condemned the Tusting Gymnasium for contest purposes on account of the fire risk, nearly all of the games for the season were cancelled. Two of the home games were played in the gymnasium of the Milton High School and several of the out-of-town games were played, but lacking the experience of the home games, the team was not very successful in these. Last year the schedule was restricted to a half dozen contests, two of which were played in Milton.

The present plan is to repair the Tustin Gymnasium to meet with the requirements of the law and to continue the holding of varsity contests here. Work has already been begun on cutting fire doors and in strengthening the construction of the building.

Captain O'Hay Tells the Story of His Life

position, he urged finally that the things that should be taken seriously are the things that have influenced man through all time: his church, his country, and his family.

Knew London, Davis, O'Henry

In the course of his talk, Captain O'Hay related his experiences and acquaintance with many prominent men from the various walks of life. He has known kings and presidents, military men and writers. Among the writers are Jack London, Richard Harding Davis, and O. Henry. Speaking of these O'Hay said, "The biggest man I ever knew was O. Henry. He was sentenced to twenty years in prison because he wouldn't 'squeal" on a pal. Later, when he was found innocent, we asked him why he had refused to testify when he was being tried. His answer was, 'he had a wife and five kids and I thought I'd better take the stretch.' The self-sacrifice shown by O. Henry is the spirit we need in America and less of this efficiency. We take our dignity so seriously that we are afraid to give vent to our mirth or our tears. Anything that is on the square is dignified."

Commenting on the Great War he said that the American army was not the greatest army in the field and that it was not the army that won the war. O'Hay claims that the last war was sixty per cent. luck and thirty per cent. military science, that 25,000 of our boys were killed unnecessarily on account of the pacifist movement, and that the civilan soldier, depending on the same fighting instinct that makes him "punch the neighbor's boy in the eye on the way home from Sunday School," was the man who saved the country's honor in the last struggle. He favors the encouragement of the fighting instincts in boys through the teaching of boxing and many sports, favors universal military training as the only Christian way of dealing with mankind in a world that must have war, but puts the blame for war on misunderstanding and race prejudice and claims that peace will not come while racial prejudice endures.

Born In Ireland

O'Hay was born in Ireland, but his family was driven out, before he was two years old, for political reasons, and he was brought up in Virginia. His life of adventure began thirty-one years ago, after the prettiest girl in the village, where he had been brought up, had refused to marry him. He set out for the Klondike to make his fortune and got as far as Seattle, Washington. There while sitting on a dock, he met Early, who induced him to go with the crew of an illicit sealer, "The Mary McLaren." In this first voyage he learned much of the lore and wanderlust of the sea. He also became acquainted with Jack London who wrote the experiences of "The Mary McLaren" into his novel, "The Sea Wolf."

After eleven months with "The Mary McLaren," Early and O'Hay returned to New York and there the young Irishman met Richard Harding Davis. The three of them, Davis, Early and O'Hay, next sailed on a filibuster to Cuba, carrying arms to the insurrectos. They were arrested, released, and spent six months in finding the island. Then, after nine months, in which Davis secured enough material for a book, they returned to New York, leaving Early in Cuba.

He Knew Colonel Roosevelt

O'Hay says that he faced starvation in the streets of New York that winter. Then the Spanish American war broke out and he joined the rough riders under Colonel Roosevelt, of Roosevelt he said: He had his faults and he made mistakes, but above all he was human. And let me tell you that when we Americans stop making mistakes, when we become all virtue and no vice, we will be a fine race of cream puffs."

During the war he caught yellow fever and returned to his home in Virginia. When he had recovered he wanted to go to Europe and finally was able to go "as a chaperone for a party of tourists, the tourists being a consignment of long-horned Texas steers." In Ireland he looked up one of his cousins—who was so afraid that the family name might be ruined by the appearance of the newcomer, that he offered him fifty pounds to leave the country.

Runs Into Boer War

With the fifty pounds he sailed for South London, Africa, where he ran into the Boer war. A flip of the coin determined on which side of the struggle the crew of his ship would take part, and fate favored the English. According to Captain O'Hay, "That was a delightful war." After it was over he returned to England where he was mustered out of the service a comparatively rich man.

Then he shipped for Portland, Maine, "as a chambermaid to 1500 sheep." Back in America he caught the theatrical bug but a war broke out in the Balkans and he went over again "as a valet to a bunch of mules."

At the end of the war he returned once more to the States and found an uncle, that he "had been neglecting," in the shoe business. The uncle tried to make a shoe salesman of him but after his initial failure he accepted the offer of Tim Hurst, a baseball umpire. Tim said that if O'Hay would quit going to war he would find him a steady job. The job was umpiring and, as O'Hay put it, he was "out of the frying pan right into the fire." "See that nose?" he said. "I had an argument."

General Without An Army

After one of the games, however, he met Early and Christmas who induced him to go with them to join an insurrection in Central Mexico. He was furnished there with a fine army, but the revolution lasted for only twenty minutes and he found himself a general without an army. "We lost another revolution in Nicaragua that summer too," he said.

Then, again, he went in for dramatics and gained a place in the movies as an Indian chief on account of his nose which had been deformed in one of his "arguments" as a baseball umpire. In 1914 he was with the Ziegfeld Follies and determined to stay, but the temptation to go to war was too great, and he enlisted with the "Princess Pats," the crack regiment of Canada.

In The World War

This regiment saw some of the most severe fighting of the war and when 1917 came, of the entire regiment there were only six Americans surviving. These were dismissed when the United States entered the war and O'Hay immediately enlisted in the infantry of the United States. He was discharged with the rank of Captain at the close of the war.

O'Hay now declares that he is through with war and says that he has become such a confirmed after-dinner speaker that he starts to talk "whenever the dishes rattle." His appeal however was to take seriously the flag, the church, and the family; to forget self-consciousness and race prejudice, and to stop taking ourselves too seriously.

Chef Moone Feeds 290 Co-eds--Faculty

But Accommodations Are For 125 How Do They Do It?

It has been brought to the notice of many people who take their meals in the Women's College dining rooms that 290 persons are now being cared for where the usual comfortable capacity has been about 125. The startling question is, how is it done?

At the present time Mrs. Sale, the capable and efficient dietitian, has employed Chef Moone and his wife and four regular helpers in the kitchen. There are four people who help prepare the food, take care of the dishes, and assist the twenty-two waitresses in the dining room while a meal is being serve.

If the 290 people, (including the members of the faculty and the kitchen force), who eat at the Women's College can be said to have bird-like appetites, those birds must be ostriches. Considering the amounts consumed, would you believe that 290 persons, supposedly delicate specimens of the weaker sex, could eat 33 gallons of ice cream, 290 loaves of bread, 150 pounds of butter, 1000 pounds of meat, two barrels of gravy, gallons of milk, 40 bushels of potatoes, and 250 heads of lettuce a week? And Chef Moone reports that 3200 pounds of ice are required each week.

If soup is served it takes 120 quarts each meal; if pancakes, it would take 126 gallons of batter to serve breakfasts for one week. Eight or nine hundred slices of bacon serve a single lunch. Twenty-four large packages of cereal will serve a breakfast, and a bushel and a half of apples are required for a single meal.

Startling, isn't it? Yet this is not in case of fiction, or facts exaggerated. Mrs. Sale reports that each day 1179 pieces of silver and 2203 dishes are washed morning, noon, and night, and every piece of silver is cleaned once each week. More than 700 table napkins are used, washed, and ironed every week.

It is the dietitian's belief, and she lives up to it, that "the very best is the cheapest in the end," and so the best food that this section can supply, is bought. Variety in menu's, quality and quantity of food, and the splendid service in the dining room all combine to make it possible to say, "Those who eat at the Women's College are well fed."

Jailed By Request, He Studies Prisons

According to Mr. Osborne's statement, most of the prisoners are victims of circumstances, men who have never had a chance. Perhaps "sent up" for a short term for some minor offence in their early manhood, they have suffered from the stigma of conviction and have been forced to live a life of crime.

In the evening Mr. Osborne addressed a meeting of the Bucknell Sociological Society in Bucknell Hall. Members of the society were permitted to bring guests to this meeting and the hall was very well filled. Many of the students had heard Mr. Osborne when he appeared here last year and were interested in his message.

Commenting on the difficulty of appearing twice in the same place after a long absence, Mr. Osborne told his audience that he would try to avoid telling the same experiences again by reading to them a play that he has written on the prison reform theme. The play is one of the type that the men of the English department would call a "morality play," one in which the characters take the parts of abstract moral qualities such as "Black Ignorance," "Cruelty," "Good Intent," "Common Sense," etc.

The various scenes in the play portrayed the ways in which different sociological theorists would treat the prisoner. The first shows "The State" looking for a way in which to treat the men who have violated the rules of society. "Ignorance" and "Cruelty" make their appearance and demonstrate the methods that they would use; the methods of the whipping post, the head-cage, the straightjacket, and every device for the breaking of the soul.

"Good Intent" makes the next attempt to handle the situation by the use of the "honor system" using "stool-pigeons," etc., but his efforts are also seen to have no good effect on the prisoners.

In the final scene "The State" listens to "Humanity" and "Common Sense" in their appeal to treat the prisoners as men and to give them the training that will fit them to take their places as social beings upon their dismissal from the gray walls.

At the close of the reading of the play, Mr. Osborne spoke briefly of the principles that he has tried for many years to have inculcated into the prison systems of the various states. He recounted his experiences as warden at the Auburn prison, at Sing Sing, and at the Portsmouth Naval prison, and showed the results that his plan had accomplished where it was tried. The meeting was then thrown open for questions and a lively half hour of discussion followed during which the students cleared up in their minds some misconceptions that they have held concerning the prisons and prisoners of the country.

On Tuesday morning Mr. Osborne spoke in the chapel exercises before starting on his return to his home in Auburn, N. Y.

judgment of a faculty committee of five or six men, members of the debating board. Each man will be allowed five minutes in which to develop a single point on either side of the question to be debated, the League of Nations question. Choice of the eight will be made regardless of the side of the question taken in the preliminary work.

Professor Coleman outlined to the debaters the points that he considered essential to good debating and gave the men some idea of what is to be expected of them in the tryouts Monday evening.

Near the close of the meeting it was announced that the squad could be assured of having ten debates during the year. Nine of these have already been contracted for. They are the triangle with Franklin and Marshall College and Lafayette, another triangle involving Dickinson College and Penn State, a third open forum style triangle with Gettysburg and Swarthmore, and single debates with University of Richmond, Westminster College and Susquehanna University. It is also understood that the University of Pittsburgh desires to meet the Bucknell team and this hope may be realized. The three triangular debates scheduled have become annual events in the debating calendar and are always looked forward to by those interested in the forensic art. The first of these will be the Lafayette, Franklin and Marshall-Bucknell affair, to be held in the early part of December.

Dr. John R. Mott Looks to Youth To End All Wars

The rising generation has the spirit of adventure that will lead them into the next war, "a war against prejudice, misunderstanding, disease, and even war itself," Dr. John R. Mott, executive national secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and head of the World Christian Association, told a group of student welfare workers recently.

Dr. Mott, is visiting the University of Pennsylvania for the first time in seven years.

"When I consider the rising generation I have great faith in establishing better relations between men," declared Dr. Mott. Our schools and colleges are thronging with the finest young people I have known in the forty years of my experience.

"Generally speaking, I find the present-day youth dissatisfied with the past and dissatisfied with a great deal of the present," he continued. "In that they show real discernment. They are critical; moreover, they are the most alert and inquiring young people I have ever met. They are responsive to the note of reality.

"Their spirit of adventure is leading them into another war. I see a great deal more war in the next few years—not another world war, despite the fact that there are more men under arms and more military dictatorships than ever before—but a war against prejudice, misunderstanding, disease and even against war itself.

"Some people criticize them for going to extremes, but that I find encouraging. They will be breaking away from the old rules and building better standards for themselves."

First Jewish College Planning 50th Year Celebration

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Hebrew Union College of Cincinnati will be celebrated in that city on Oct. 23 and 24. Several thousand leaders in the religious and educational institutions of American Reform Jewry are expected to attend.

The Hebrew Union College was established in 1875 by the late Isaac M. Wise, the first protagonist and leader for half a century of Reform Judaism in America. It was the first seminary to train students for the Jewish ministry in this country, combining modern education and the spirit of America with the religious learning of the Jewish scholar.

Dr. Wise was the first president of the seminary, which began with a single department of primary grade, with thirteen pupils and two instructors. By 1879 a four-year collegiate department had been formed. The first class of graduates was ordained by Rabbi Wise on July 14, 1883. Dr. David Philipson, dean of the Reform Rabbinate of America, is the sole surviving member of the class. In the five decades of its history, the seminary has graduated 256 students, most of whom are now occupying pulpits in cities in every state of the Union.

CHICAGOAN TO OPEN AMERICANISM COURSE

Dr. Shailer Mathews, educator, author, and editor, will go to Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, in April as the first lecturer of the new department of Americanism. The department is to be instituted as the result of a gift of $100,000 by an anonymous eastern donor.

Dr. Mathews has been dean of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago since 1908. From 1912 to 1916 he was president of the Federal Council of Churches in America.

Medical Classes In Fight

One youth was sent to the hospital unconscious and a dozen others displayed black eyes and had teeth missing following a class battle when first and second year men clashed in the courtyard adjoining Hahnemann Medical College recently. The battle took place at the entrance to the accident ward of the hospital when one freshman was discovered without his skullcap. About fifty students took part.

A mounted policeman tried in vain to stop the fracas, the students telling him it was strictly a private fight.

Lancaster Sees "Pajama Parade"

Nearly 300 members of the freshman class of Franklin and Marshall College paraded the streets last Thursday night, clad in pajamas. The annual parade was held to arouse interest in the football game between Dickinson and the Lancaster college. Each freshman carried a candle which he was required to keep lighted. Each man also provided a paddle for an upper classman who applied it with vigor when the candle was not illuminated.

Ware, Alabama Convict Requests U. of P. Football Suits

If Allen Ware, 35 years old, the Alabama convict who says he was a football star at the University of Pennsylvania back in the days when the forward pass was only a fantasy, is furnished with the Red and Blue uniforms he has requested of Lou Young, the Penn coach, then the Camp Kilby "confinees" are going to envisage a mighty formidable eleven.

Ware was sent to Camp Kilby four years ago on a charge of forgery. Shortly after his imprisonment began his wife attempted his delivery by smuggling saws into his cell. The escape was prevented and Ware, to keep his wife from meeting a similar fate, pleaded guilty and was sentenced from ten to twenty years.

Ware declares he graduated from Penn in 1914. He starred on the prison baseball team during the season just closed. Not long ago he asked permission of Warden A. H. Harris to organize a football team. The correspondence with Lou Young followed and the background of Ware's collegiate activities was disclosed in consequence.

Young has said that he will forward the uniforms requested and Penn alumni are confident that the prison team, which knows all the intricacies of "grapevine" signaling, will go through the season undefeated.

Yale President Tells Freshmen College Tries Faith

President Angell of Yale, in his matriculation sermon delivered on Sunday, October 4, warned the freshmen that they might expect to have all their ideas and loyalties concerning society, religion, government, and other things in life called in question constantly during their college life. President Angell said that one of the principal functions of a college is to present new ideas, new lines of thought; that giving up deeply rooted convictions will no doubt be a distressing and painful experience; but that college is no place for the intellectually or morally spineless, and the faith which will result from the experience will be worth the trial.

President Angell is an enthusiastic supporter of extra-curricular activities as a great source of benefit to students.

Yale Law School Has Difficulty Limiting Enrolment

The Yale School of Law is finding it difficult to set a limit upon enrolment. In spite of increased tuition, the school at its opening reported a greater number of students enrolled than ever before. A faculty committee is at present working on the problem of limitation, which is not an easy one, for if the number of students enroled is allowed to become too large, it will make impossible the former intimacy between students and instructors; whereas, if the school is to continue to make its accustomed contribution to bench and bar, it must graduate a large enough group each year to produce a considerable number of leaders.

Swarthmore To Honor Founders

Founders' Day will be celebrated at Swarthmore College next Saturday, with a program that will include addresses, a reception by the faculty, a football game, and a comedy to be given by the Little Theatre Club of the institution. An address by J. St. Loe Strachey, editor of The Spectator, will feature the first part of the program, to be followed by the faculty's reception to alumni and guests. At the same time the Swarthmore College football team will engage in a gridiron battle with the team of Franklin and Marshall College on Swarthmore Field.

In the evening the thirtieth anniversary of the establishment of the Swarthmore Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa (Epsilon Chapter of Pennsylvania) will be celebrated by a meeting, at which Vernon Kellogg, secretary of the National Research Council, will speak on "What Science Doesn't Know."

The theatrical part of the general Founders' Day program will take place in the evening, when the comedy, "You and I," will be presented in Collection Hall by the college dramatic club.

Worth Pondering

The one thought and ambition of every college man should be to be a public official without vice, a private citizen without wrong, a neighbor without reproach, a Christian without hypocrisy, a man without guile, submission to law, obedient to authority, thoughful, kind and above all, loyal to country and self.—Attorney-General John G. Sargent in the Watchman-Examiner.

Urges Yearly Physical Exam. For Penn Students

Instruction of undergraduates in personal hygiene and insistence upon yearly physical examinations is urged by Dr. Seneca Egbert, professor of hygiene and director of the student health office at the University of Pennsylvania.

"The hardest task we have at the University of Pennsylvania is to educate the students to take proper care of themselves at all times and to visit the doctor when the first symptoms of a serious illness becomes apparent," he declared.

The health officer believes it is essential to educate the students to have a physical examination at least once a year, believing that such a practice if maintained in college, will be kept up by the men after their graduation.

At the University of Pennsylvania, student health officers keep in touch with the living conditions of all the students in the dormitories, fraternities, and rooming houses. A student may not live in a house which has not been approved by the University.

College Freshman, 76 Years Old, Is At Boston University

A 76-year-old freshman, Aberdeen R. King, Wellsville, N. Y., has enrolled as a first year student in the Boston University College of Business Administration, of which his son-in-law, Everett W. Lord, is dean. King's grandson, Sam Lord, 21, also is a student at the college, but they are not in the same class.

King, who now holds the title of the oldest student in an American college, had not attended school for fifty years until he entered upon his course. In his home town he was successful for many years in the hardware business, retiring five years ago.

Brumbaugh Gets A Big Laugh When Using "Ferhuttled"

Former Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh, speaking at the Lehigh County Teachers' Institute last week, enriched the dialect of the non-German-speaking members of his audience by telling them of a good, old-fashioned Pennsylvania-German word that is somewhat out of date.

The ex-Governor, now president of Juniata College, used "What Is Knowing?" as his theme, and said that "if I should say the Battle of Gettysburg was fought at Concord, you would say that I was "ferhuttled." "

"Ferhuttled" means "confused," and then some. The reference, very well understood by most of his auditors, created a big laugh.

Long Lost Books Returned To Milwaukee Public Library

A great many long lost books come home again as a result of "conscience days" proclaimed by the Milwaukee public library recently, when books were dropped in barrels set in front of the main library and its fourteen branches. Over the week-end, books were left in the barrels, no fines being charged the delinquents and no questions asked. Books were returned which had been kept by the borrowers for years, many of which had been lost track of at the library.

Someone asked us yesterday why the citizens of Santa Barbara don't call themselves Santa Barbarians instead of Santa Barbarans. The answer to this question can be made in the Oriental fashion by putting another question. Why don't the citizens of Baltimore call themselves Baltimorons instead of Baltimorians? Deep, isn't it?

Who's Who at B.U.

Irene Bell is president of the Women's Student Government Association for this year. Under her guidance it is needless to say that the work of the year will be a success. Gifted with one of the most delightful personalities of the "Sem", Irene has a great deal of executive ability; what she undertakes goes. Efficient without being officious, she does things quietly and well, radiating charm and helpfulness, making her work delightful for everybody.

Her ability has already been proved. During her junior year she was a member of the staff of L'Agenda of 1926. She was also girls' class secretary, went as a student government delegate to the convention, and acted as treasurer for the Women's Student Government Association.

Last summer, she served as assistant dean of women at the summer session of the Bloomsburg Normal School.

We feel confident that Women's College will become a better place with Miss Bell and the other girls working in cooperation with Miss Clark. Many changes have been made in the rules and relationships of the Women's College this year and it is no easy task to form an organization around a new system of rules and, at the same time, retain a happy, natural attitude toward them. Thus far the spirit has been one of fine mutual cooperation between the authorities and the college women, so that the year promises to be one of ideal relationships.

Much of this may be attributed to the work of Miss Bell, a girl whose willingness and ability to do things has made her a leader in the affairs of the college.

Haverford Students Pledge $3000 In Charity Drive

The 250 students of Haverford College have pledged $3000 to the United Charities drive under the auspices of the College Y. M. C. A., $500 more than last year's budget. Distribution of the funds will be about the same as last year, when the Welfare Federation of the city received $675; the American Friends' Service, $500; the Student Friendship Fund, $400, and the Red Cross, $250. A $100 yearly scholarship has been established at Hampton Institute in the South as part of the drive.

The College "Y" will take care of the overhead of the drive, and each man will be permitted to name the charity to which he wishes to contribute.

PROF. SPRAGUE VISITS SWITZERLAND; CHARMED BY BLUE OF MEDITERRANEAN

WISHES HIS STUDENTS COULD SEE TARASCON

When I left Spain at its northeastern border, I continued to follow the Mediterranean coast across France and into Italy as far as Genoa, as I had been doing from Alicante in Spain and the beauty of the sea and its blueness never grew monotonous to me. The traveler seems to be playing at hide-and-seek with the ocean as the trains pass around rocky cliffs or through tunnel after tunnel, revealing intermittten glimpses of the Mediterranean shimmering in the sunlight before him. On changing cars at Tarascon on the way to Marseilles, I thought of all the Bucknell students who had read "Tartarin de Tarascon" in French last year, and wished they might all be there to review the incidents of that pleasing story. It was rather late at night, so I saw neither Tartarin nor his camel.

Nice, the principality of Monaco, and Monte Carlo are more or less deserted in the summer months, but the lack of crowds there does not detract from the wonderful beauty and charm of the Riviera. I never saw such blue water as one sees at Nice, and the Grande Corniche drive, built by Napoleon, and bearing evidence of his greatness, gives opportunity to those who travel it to see the marvelous views and vistas of the whole vicinity. At times one is away up on the mountainside, looking down over villas and gardens to the sea; and other times one rides along the water's very edge. On this drive we stopped at the Casino at Monte Carlo, and the tables were full of players. How hard and haggard some of them looked, spending their time and money, losing and losing, but always hopeful of success next time!

The Italian Riveria is not so rugged and beautiful as the French, yet it has many charms and was more frequented than the latter when I was there. My Italian trip had to be confined to a hurried glimpse of the north of the country, since my time did not allow me to visit Rome, Naples, or the surrounding territory. I went to Florence by way of Genoa and Pisa, where I saw the famous Leaning Tower, and spent time enough to see only the outstanding paintings and art treasures, among them being those contained in the Uffizi Gallery, the Pitti Palace, the Cathedral, the Baptistry, and the Pantheon of the Medici family.

Venice, as it is built on 117 small islands formed by intersecting canals and connected by 378 bridges, presents a unique appearance. As the traveler leaves the station, a gondola, instead of a taxi, takes him and his luggage to the hotel. Saint Mark's Square, enclosed on three sides by imposing buildings, in which are shops tempting the tourist to spend his money, is the rendezvous where everyone congregates and is the center of activity of the city. Someone has called this square a "great open-air drawing-room," and it reminds one of just that. The cathedral, over whose main door stand the four bronze horses, which were returned to their original position after Napoleon, struck by their artistic worth, had appropriated them and carried them to France, is an elaborate place of worship rich in gold and mosaic work. The Ducal Palace, Bridge of Sighs, and Rialto Bridge are all places of great historic interest.

I stopped at Milan between trains long enough to see Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper" and the cathedral, a magnificent example of Gothic architecture. The painting is now badly faded and marred, but despite this fact shows clearly the great ability and skill of the painter.

From Lakes Lugano and Como, until one travels through Switzerland, there is a never-ending panorama of mountains, lakes, and valleys, the equal of whose majesty it would be hard to find. It was a very agreeable change after the hot and dirty coal-burning trains of Italy to travel on the Swiss Federal Railway, which is electrified; not a cinder nor a bit of smoke annoys one. These trains naturally follow the valleys which are dotted with little chalets, some of them seeming fairly to hang on the mountain-side, and the fields about them look almost like putting greens on a golf course, they are so closely mown by hand. The life of the peasants must be very simple indeed, their sustenance being chiefly from dairy products. The chief glories of this little republic in a scenic way are Lake Lucerne, with its associations of "Wilhelm Tell," Lake Geneva, surrounded by beautiful cities, towns, and villas encircled by mountains, and the trip from Interlaken to the majestic Jungfrau, which one may ascend by means of the highest mountain railroad in the world. One is almost overwhelmed by the power and greatness of the Creator as one stands amid these towering peaks, covered with blue ice and snow, which does not melt from one year to the next, and sees them turned to irridescent colors by the glories of the setting sun.

I was loath to leave such a charming spot, but my sailing date was drawing nearer, so I made my way back to Paris where I spent another week sight-seeing and attending the theater and the opera. On September 15, I went aboard the steamer Leviathan, glad indeed to be returning to my family and my work at Bucknell.

Many Colleges Taboo Smoking For Girls

But M. I. T. Grants Permission To Smoke At Social Functions

Smoking for women may be quite all right in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, but in Philadelphia institutions of higher education—well, it simply isn't done.

Recent dispatches from Boston announced that all collegiate precedents in New England had been broken by the granting of permission for girls to smoke at dances and other social functions held in the M. I. T. But at the University of Pennsylvania, at Bryn Mawr College, at Temple University, and at Drexel Institute, smoking by feminine students is taboo.

In prohibiting the use of cigarettes by the fair sex, Philadelphia institutions fall in line with Wellesley, Radcliffe, Boston University, and Goucher College, all of which have drastic rules. At Bryn Mawr and the University of Pennsylvania the regulations are made by the students themselves, who voluntarily condemn the practice of smoking by women.

At Bryn Mawr, where self-government is the rule, the students not only pledge themselves to refrain from smoking in the college buildings, but also in all public places. At the University of Pennsylvania, feminine smoking was taboo in former years by order of the authorities, but this year, with the institution of an honor code drawn up by a special committee and voted on by the entire feminine student body, it is formally eschewed by voluntary agreement, both on the campus and at all social affairs of the university.

Temple University makes no effort to enforce its rule in the matter beyond the confines of the institution, but in the college buildings, dormitories, and boarding houses, where girl students reside, smoking is forbidden.

While Drexel Institute makes no definite attempt to carry its regulation against smoking beyond the school walls, it subtly puts its students on their honor in a tactfully-worded statement included in the list of rules.

"Each student of Drexel Institute is responsible to this school," the statement reads "Whether in the institute student houses or absent by privilege or permission, it is a girl's responsibility to maintain at all times the highest ideals of honor and integrity in all matters of personal conduct and to co-operate actively in upholding all college regulations in the spirit of their origin."

HERE'S YOUR HAT

The College of Agriculture at Cornell in a bulletin lays stress on the proper way to wear a hat. In a past day of misdirected humor a farmer lad was satirized in comic weeklies, under some such name as Reuben Corntassel, for being a "hick" who did not know what headgear to buy or how to wear it. Where has the scarecrow of the cartoonist and lampoonist gone? The modern scion of the farm knows that an air of disinvolution is conferred—or a result of slatternly dowdiness achieved—by the poise and angle of the tile. One might as well chew toothpicks as wear the chapeau at the back of one's teapot dome with wisps protruding. A good hat, worn with a brisk, upstanding accent that stops short of the "smart Aleck," is an asset in business or society, a mark of breeding as much as polished shoes.

YALE VOTES TO ACCEPT CHAPEL PLAN

The Yale Corporation voted, October 10, to accept recommendations for dividing the undergraduates into two sections for attendance at chapel, allowing the first group to attend the first three days of the week and the second section to attend the second three days of the week. The plan was placed before the Prudential Committee of the corporation by Dean Frederick Jones three week ago.

The registration of 9,025 students in the Evening Session of the College of the City of New York has been announced by Dr. Frederick B. Robinson, director of the session. This represents an increase of more than 10 per cent. over last term and is a record figure.

Parachutes For Dirigibles Suggested By Theiss, '02

The OUTLOOK for October 14 prints an article by Professor Lewis E. Theiss, '02, entitled, "Why not Parachutes for Dirigibles?" The Shenandoah, which recently collapsed in Ohio with the loss of fourteen men, did not carry parachutes. It is the theory of the Navy Department that in case of disaster to a dirigible, it is better for the men to stick to the disabled ship and try to navigate it as a free balloon than to try to escape otherwise. Professor Theiss points out that, as happened in the case of the Shenandoah, there will come times in the operation of dirigibles when it will be impossible for all the crew to get to the ground safely by ballooning. In such cases, the only thing that will save an airman's life is a parachute. These ought to be part of the equipment of every dirigible.

Before publishing this article, the OUTLOOK secured the opinion of Col. Paegelow, head of the army school for airship navigation at Scott Field. Col. Paegelow agrees with the OUTLOOK article, and says that he would court-martial any army man who either went up himself or sent up another in an airship without a parachute.

Girls' Sophomore Class at U. of P. Prohibits Flapperism

"Flapperism" is taboo among the coeds of the University of Pennsylvania. The sophomore class has spoken and its ukase must be observed.

A set of "Ten Commandments," laid down by the second-year girls, sternly prohibits the use of cosmetics by freshmen, the wearing of any but black stockings, and appearance on the campus without hats. For any infringement of these and other rules any sophomore is entitled to demand from any freshman a fine of 5 cents to be applied to the treasury for the annual banquet given by the sophomore class on the night before the hazing period comes to an end.

Meanwhile, the first-year girls must meekly obey their elders or else find themselves placed on the dreaded "black list" of defiant ones whom the Sophomore Court properly subdues.

Denies Athletes Die Young

Belief that athletes "die young" is termed a "fallacy" by Daniel Chase, state supervisor of physical education of New York. "Frequent approach by athletes to their physical limit cannot be done without risk or injury, however," he said.

"The greatest danger from overdoing in competitive athletics lies in that it not only jeopardizes health," he said, "but also gives the athlete a perverted outlook on life and a complete failure to grow in wisdom as well as stature. The present tendency to win at any cost must continually be fought."

BELLEFONTE TEAM BEATS FROSH 50-0

Bucknell Youngsters Succumb to Strong Up-State Prep.

The freshman team was administered a severe spanking at Bellefonte Friday October 16, when the Academy team of that place rolled up fifty points on the youngsters.

The game was not as much of a track meet as the score might appear to indicate, nor is the defeat of the freshmen in any sense a disgrace. The academy team is known to be one of the strongest scholastic elevens in the East and the school has furnished star players for some of the leading college teams of the country during the past few seasons.

Gridgraph Will Show Holy Cross Contest

Three Events Are On Schedule For Afternoon of Oct. 31

A grid-graph showing of the Holy Cross-Bucknell game, a Soph-Frosh Interclass contest, and the clash between the Bucknell freshman team and the Waynesboro College eleven are the three events scheduled for Saturday afternoon, October 31, in Memorial Stadium.

The interclass game between the sophomores and the freshmen will start at 1:00 P. M. At 3:00 P. M. the regular freshman team meets Waynesboro College, and later in the contest, probably about 4:00 P. M., each play made during the Holy Cross-Bucknell game will be detailed on the grid-graph.

The grid-graph, which met with so much success last year in showing the Rutgers and Navy games, will be placed at the southern end of the stadium, in the curve. This year it will be run under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. and the Athletic Council.

Announcement has been made by the manager of the varsity, "Bob" Garrett, '26, that competition for first managerships on the Bison team will start October 28. All freshmen desiring to try out for the three positions that will be available at the end of their sophomore year are requested to notify Manager Garrett, who can be reached at the Phi Gamma Delta house.

In trying for managerships, at the end of their freshman year, five men will be chosen from the number who compete. Of these five, two will be eliminated at the end of their sophomore year, the three remaining becoming first assistants, serving in this capacity during their junior year. In their senior year, one is chosen varsity manager, a second is elected manager of the freshman team, and a third is eliminated.

The three assistants make at least one out-of-town trip with the varsity during the football season, and two trips to outside games with the regular freshman team. Because of the benefits accruing from participation in athletics as first assistant managers, it is expected that many freshmen will try for positions.

NOTICE

Those students who desire to become affiliated with the Bucknell Orchestra should see the Director, Miss Charlotte G. Armstrong, in her studio at the School of Music as soon as possible.

Practice for the numbers that will be given in the annual concert is well under way. It is believed however that many persons who play are not yet connected with musical organizations of the campus. This will offer them an opportunity to participate in musical activity.

This year the emphasis is being placed on the stringed instruments rather than on the wind instruments. Therefore the students who play stringed instruments are especially urged to see Miss Armstrong.

the ball to the four yard line with four chances to make the necessary yardage. A fifteen yard penalty, followed by a series of grounded passes spoiled this opportunity. Trimmer's attempt at a placement goal was blocked by Roebuck.

Again in the third quarter, after Blaisdell's history-making dash, Bucknell hammered through to the same four yard line and again had four chances to make the plunge that would have brought victory. Diehl and M. Goodwin crashed into the line but without success, stopping as they reached the line.

Some will remember the game fight that our team put up in the last quarter of the game with Navy, last year, in the effort to keep the goat from butting into a victory by tieing the score. Some remember the agony of the eternity which the humorists called the last quarter of the Rutgers game. Every one will remember the remarkable defense of the Bison in the last half of the Indian game.

Shortly after the first exchange of punts in the second half, the Indians, featuring McClain on line drives, reeled off two consecutive first downs and were on the way to another before the Bucknell line found itself and forced Norton to kick. The kick was from a difficult angle but with the wind. The ball went wide by five yards.

Sid Goodwin's fumble of a punt that he attempted to catch over his shoulder paved the way for the last Indian advance on the Bucknell goal line. McClain and Levi had rushed the ball to the Bucknell twenty yard line before they were forced to forfeit on downs. An exchange of punts allowed the Indians to again bear down on the Bucknell goal, and, in the waning minutes of the game Norton again essayed a drop-kick but failed by a scanty margin.

Then as the referee held the whistle in his mouth ready to end the game the Bison team started to march down the field. The last play of the game was a thrust off tackle by Diehl who passed the first three members of the redskin secondary defense and put the ball in midfield after an eighteen yard gain before he was downed.

Girl Debaters Meet; Drum Outlines Plan

Mary Harrar, Manager of Women Tells System of Tryouts

A meeting of all girls trying out for the debating team was held in Main 1, at 4:30, October 21. T. Burns Drum, manager of the men's debating team, and Mary J. Harrar, manager for the women, spoke to the prospective debaters.

Drum, who attended the meeting of debating officers at Harrisburg, reported the selection of the topic: "Resolved, that the United States should enter the League of Nations." He also discussed the working system for this year, stating that eight members, as usual, would form the teams, but that each debator should prepare both sides of the question, in order to become thoroughly familiar with all of its phases. Declaring that the women exceeded their financial allotment last year, Drum suggested that the alternate be dispensed with on the trips. Miss Harrar, however, objected to this, saying that the chaperone could be omitted more easily, since the two senior girls on the team could fill the position.

In her speech, Mary Harrar outlined the plan for tryouts. Each girl is to prepare a speech on the League of Nations, which is to be delivered before faculty members acting as judges. Juniata's challenge was declined, and after much discussion, it was agreed to debate with Elizabeth-etc., will be considered during the town. Challenges have been sent to George Washington, Elmira, and Swarthmore.

The topic for the women's debate is to be the same as the men's so that the teams can use each other's material. At the close of the meeting, Mildred Marshall was elected as assistant manager.

INTERCLASS COUNCIL PUNISHES FRESHMEN

Failure to report to work, was the charge brought against four of the six freshmen that faced the Interclass Council last Monday evening. All four men, Shipman, Blizzard, Blazejewski and Strutko admitted the charge and were required to enter the "blind victims' march" to the quadrangle.

Kulp was reported for having his hands in his pockets, and was made to carry a large sign stating on the one side, "My hands were cold," and on the other side, "It was dark, but I couldn't get away with it."

Report was received that personal matters were being interfered with in West College, which upon investigation was readily verified. Severe reprimanding and due punishment were administered, with a hope that there will be no repetition of the offense.

PROF. C. L. PENNY, '79, DIES

Professor Charles Lyndall Penny, '79, who taught for thirty-seven years at the University of Delaware, where he was head of the department of chemistry, died on October 20 at his home in Newark, Delaware, of uraemic poisining. He was 70 years old.

Professor Penny was born in Lewisburg and was educated in the local schools and the University. He was a specialist in agricultural chemistry. For a time he was at the Pennsylvania State College. Then he became connected with the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station. He was also state chemist for some years.

Nearly twenty years ago he was made professor of chemistry at Delaware, which position he has held ever since.

Professor Penny held three degrees. He got his A. B. in 1879. Later he was given the A. M. and in 1892 the University granted him the degree, Sc. D. In addition to his work at Bucknell, Professor Penny took graduate work at the University of Heidelberg, Germany.

KIRBY GIVES TALK TO STUDENT BODY ON VALUE OF ART

MAN HAS BEEN CREATING BEAUTIFUL PRODUCTS FOR MANY AGES

ART SATISFIES A NEED

Speaks On Art In Business And In Advertising

Bucknell students were privileged to hear in chapel Tuesday morning, October 27, Dr. C. Ballentine Kirby who is the director of Art, Department of Public instruction, Harrisburg. His subject was, "Art as a Constructive Force in Life."

"For many thousands of years man has been creating to satisfy personal needs. The constant effort to beautify these products has resulted in art. The finest examples of true art, or the result of honor and conscientious effort are the products of the medieval and renaissance period.

"Much real art is produced today by machines but it lacks the personal touch. However, machinery has brought many things to people which they could not obtain otherwise. In this respect, machinery has played a large part in the diffusion of a spirit of appreciation for art. The need of education today is to train children in the public schools to a finer appreciation for the beautiful. The school is the greatest force at work, and it is there that the greatest opportunity for this advancement is found. There are other forces at work along the same line. We have museums, many magazines, and books to aid us in this endeavor."

Dr. Kirby then used blackboard illustration to show how a better taste for beautiful objects can be developed The evolution of a common lump of practically worthless clay into a valuable work of art was illustrated. The value of art in common things was stressed by Dr. Kirby in his remarks.

With a few well chosen statements regarding the progress of art in our daily life, Dr. Kirby concluded his remarks.

Dr. Kirby also spoke to the Lions Club of Lewisburg on Monday evening, October 26, on the subject of art in business and in advertising.

He spoke then of the great cathedrals of business which have sprung up in America during the last few years. The fact that an appreciation for the beautiful is entering business was brought out by numerous examples. Many illustrations taken from the manufacturing field were also used in his fruitful effort to show the large place of art in business.

As for the value of art in advertising, Dr. Kirby said that many of the best artists of the present day were employed by advertising concerns. Advertising itself is thought by many to be America's only original art. This is true especially in the field of billboard advertising.

In conclusion, Dr. Kirby stated that art, instead of its former cold reception by men of practical minds, it was now looked on as a necessity in the business world.

Dr. Hunt Accepts Invitation To Serve Pinchot Committee

President Emory W. Hunt has accepted the invitation of Governor Pinchot to serve on a commission to study the election laws and advise upon a change in them.

The Governor has formed this commission after commenting upon the many scandals which have centered around recent elections. He invited sixty-five people of Pennsylvania, who are prominent in social and political affairs.

Among those to serve on the same commission with Dr. Hunt are ten others, whose names Governor Pinchot has made public last Friday. They are Robert C. Bair, York, manufacturer; B. B. Cannon, Milton, foundry owner; Floyd Chalfont, editor of the Record-Herald, Waynesboro; Mrs. John B. Hamme, York, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Mary Flynn Lawrence, Pittsburgh, daughter of the late Senator William Flynn; Major Charles C. Debaters Pick Eight For the Varsity Squad

Number Thirteen Proves Unlucky For Five Contestants

Thirteen contestants for the debating squad of Bucknell University matched their wits and their forensic ability in an elimination contest held in the Chemistry Laboratory last Monday night at 7:15 P. M. Eight of the men were chosen for the squad and began work immediately in preparation for the triangular struggle with Lafayette and Franklin and Marshall which will take place in December.

The plan of the debating board this year necessitated the elimination of some of the contestants from the squad for the coaches would have found it very difficult to deal with the larger number of men. Accordingly it was arranged that a squad of eight of the most promising speakers should be chosen to compose a varsity squad, elimination to be made through comparison of talent in the delivery of a five-minute speech on some phase of the subject for debate, the League of Nations.

The plans for the contest and the date were made known a week in advance so that the debaters might have an opportunity to prepare for the event. Professor Roy F. Howes, Professor Robert E. Matz, Professor W. H. Coleman, and Professor H. W. Robbins were the members of the debating board who judged the contestants and chose the squad.

The debaters chosen were T. Burns Drum, '26, Carl A. Hile, '26, Bruce J. Miller, '27, L. Francis Lybarger, '28, Dwight W. Bahr, '28, Willis G. Snow, '28, James G. Williams, '29, and R. Henry Coleman, '29. Others who were contestants for the squad were E. D. Carstater, '26, A. M. Cooley, '28, P. M. Humphreys, '28, A. B. Cieri, '29, and R. N. Dutton, '26.

The squad chosen has already begun its work on intensive preparation for the first debate although the teams have not been divided nor the speakers chosen as yet. They held their first discussion Tuesday evening and are planning to meet several times each week.

It is expected that another chance will be given those interested in debating to attain places on the squad after two or three of the debates of the year have been held.

Council Reapportions Several Budget Items

Changes Affect Men's Budget Y. M. Gets More Money

The apportionment of the student budget for the year was lately under discussion by the Student Council, and certain changes were recommended to the Committee on Student Activities. These changes affected the men's budget reserve, the Y. M. C. A. apportionment, and the debating fund. Five cents per semester has been added to the Y. M. C. A. apportionment, the debating fund has been increased, an apportionment made for the printing of the report and the supervision of accounts, and the reserve fund is practically eliminated. As this fund has been used in the past to support some of the minor activities it is likely that these, such as the chess club, will be forced to seek other means of support or be included specifically in the budget.

The apportionment of the budget for the current year is as follows:

An athletic fee of ten dollars is collected by the registrar and paid by him direct to the treasurer of the Athletic Council.

Other activities.
Bucknellian	$1.40
Glee Club	1.20
Band	1.00
Class Memorial Reserve	1.20
Class Dues	.50
Debating	.70
Dramatic and Literary Board	.30
General Fund	1.70
Total	$8.00

The general fund is divided differently for the women and for the men. The schedule for the division of these funds, as approved by President Hunt, is as follows:

Women's General Fund
Y. W. C. A.	$ .50
Student Government	.25
Printing report and supervision	.10

RIEMER, '95, TALKS TO EDUCATION CLUB

Urges Direct Teaching Method To Gain Pupils' Attention

Dr. G. C. L. Riemer, principal of the Bloomsburg Normal School, and former professor at Bucknell, delivered a helpful lecture to the students in education on Monday, Oct. 26. His subject was "Establishing the Learning Situation." The speaker was presented by Leo Weisenfluh, president of the newly-organized Education Club.

Professor Riemer urged more direct methods on the part of the teacher, to do away with the lack of attention so often found in the class rooms. "For" said he, "direct teaching on the part of the teacher does seem to count, and we should have more of it, instead of asking the pupil to listen to a recitation he has learned thoroughly. The expert teacher with a real message can make the members of a large group reach almost as well as he can make a small group reach."

The speaker also advocated putting less stress upon the daily task and more emphasis upon the final result. "We mark the daily performance rather than the result of the daily occurence. We are emphasizing the process and neglecting the product."

Professor Riemer stated that the purpose of the daily recitation should be to find out how to help the pupil become better in that particular field, and at the end of the semester give him an achievement test. If the daily performance is emphasized, the student does not gain all that he should in the field of education. Education should not be evaluated by time spent, or by ground covered.

"It is amazing to see how few of the pupils really pay attention", said Professor Riemer, as he laid particular stress upon the necessity for attention in the class rooms. "It is the duty of the teacher to gain the attention of the pupils. To do this the teacher must have something to offer. To be successful, he must be a good foreman.

"Group attention requires intelligent, forceful teaching on the part of the teacher, and willing application on the part of the pupil. If the teacher has a message the pupils are due to pay attention." By the use of

Holy Cross Contest Will Be Stiff One

Formidable New England Team Has Stonewall Defense

Jumping from the frying pan into the fire, the Bison football team will journey to Worcester, Mass., this week-end, for a grid clash with the Holy Cross college eleven. The set-to with Georgetown was hot enough to produce sweat on the brow of the great throng of Bucknell followers, who were fearful over the outcome of the game with the southerners, but the entanglement booked with Holy Cross gives promise of working the eager Bison fans into the well-known "dish-rag" state. Lest the conflict be regarded with too great a dread however, it may be said that the Orange and Blue warriors are burning with the desire to get into action against their hosts of this Saturday. The argument with Georgetown only kindled anew their fighting spirit; and having sampled of north, west, and southern grid products the Bisons will be out for a taste of New England blood.

Regardless of hopes, fears, etc., about the game, the facts presented are sufficient to necessitate appreciation of the strength of Holy Cross. Some years ago the New England college had no reputation for producing anything but average grid machines. They were on the schedule of many of the larger colleges who considered them as early season conditioners or easy mid-season opposition. Later football years witnessed a change however, especially in this present grid season.

Now the Worcester eleven is held in the greatest of respect by her neighbors, and, in fact, in the entire grid world is the prowess of the Holy

BIG FOUR MAY BE NEW B. U. SOCIETY

Chemicals, Civils, Mechanicals, Electricals, Meet Jointly

The four engineering societies of the University held a joint meeting in the Engineering Building on Wednesday evening, October 28, to make plans for the formation of a permanent union of the societies. This union will probably adopt the name of The Big Four.

The aim of the engineering societies in taking this step, according to backers of the movement, is to bring the engineering societies in closer touch and better understanding with each other. In the past electricals, mechanicals, civils, and chemicals formed their own groups and sought intercourse with the other groups. Each society secured speakers for itself and although the other members of the college were always welcome at such occasions, the speakers often found their audiences to be pitifully small.

The tentative plan of the new organization is to have each society present a good speaker or lecturer in turn at the monthly meetings that have been proposed. The lecturers will present matters that are of general engineering interest but that are of special interest to the members of the society in charge of the particular program.

Another possible function of the Big Four may be to bring about the installation of a national honorary engineering fraternity on the campus.

Great interest is being shown in the combination of the interests of the engineering students. A general cabinet will form the governing body of the new organization. This cabinet will consist of two members and a faculty advisor from each of the four engineering departments. A constitution has not as yet been drawn up nor have the officers been elected, but the cabinet will be chosen and will begin the construction of a constitution during the current week. In this work the cabinet will be guided by a similar organization of the engineering societies in New York City in which joint meetings are held and matters of common interest discussed.

The meeting held Wednesday evening was in charge of Thomas D. Hann, Jr., '27, of the mechanical engineering department.

Students From Eastern Colleges Confer About Religion

Mary Harrar, '26, president of the Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey division of the Student Volunteer movement, attended the fall retreat held by that organization at the Westtown Friends' Farm, Westtown, Pennsylvania, from Friday, October 16 until Sunday, October 18, inclusive. Twenty delegates from ten schools attended the retreat, the schools represented being Bucknell, Dickinson, Elizabethtown, Gettysburg, Juniata, Lebanon Valley, Penn State, Princeton, Princeton Theological Seminary, and Wilson College. Mrs. Segsworth Kitchin, of New York City, represented the national Y. W. C. A., and "Shorty" Miller represented the Y. M. C. A. of Harrisburg.

The conference opened on Friday evening at 7:30. Devotions at the first meeting were led by George Leeder of Princeton Theological Seminary. After a few remarks by the president, Mary Harrar, of Bucknell, the Rev. Mr. Merrick Streeter of Burma, a recently returned foreign missionary, spoke on the subject, "Present Day Problems in the Mission Field." An informal discussion followed.

Annie Jessup, of Wilson College, and a member of the Junior Council of the Union, led the devotions on Saturday morning. There was a discussion, led by Mrs. Kitchin, of "The Student Volunteer Movement." Mrs. Kitchin was formerly traveling secretary for the movement. This discussion was followed by a talk by "Shorty" Miller on "The Y. M. C. A.

The Spirit Was There And the Band With It

B. U. Musicians Entertain Crowd As Bisons Gore Georgetown

'The spirit wasthere.' The Bucknell Band motto was again exemplified last Saturday when the band wallowed in a sea of mud at the Griffith Stadium in Washington to form a "B" and a "G" between the halves of the Bucknell-Georgetown game.

The band, 42 strong, along with two cheer-leaders "entrained" at midnight Friday in two Pierce-Arrow busses, and a very snappy journey to Washington began. Harrisburg was reached at 2:30, Gettysburg at 4 A. M., and Emmitsburg, Md., was left in the gloom at 4:30.

Soon one of the busses was running on its reserve gasoline, and a stop was made at a small gas station. One of the boys played reveille on the trumpet, and the garage man poked his sleepy head out of the window, grumbling at the interruption of his sleep, but this grumble soon changed to a smile when he found out that 50 gallons of gas were needed.

Washington was sighted at 7:30 and at 8:30, the men were in the luxuriant Raleigh Hotel, corner of 12th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue. Before the game an impromptu concert was given in the hotel lobby, and then the band was taken to the Griffith stadium in time for the kick-off.

At half time Director "Eddie" Calhoun led his boys onto the mud-soaked gridiron to the amazement of the crowd in the stadium. On a field covered with six inches of water and mud, it was a precarious undertaking to make formations, but the band with true Bucknell spirit swung into the "B" formation and then followed with a "G." The men, soaked to the skin, stood at attention in a driving rain while the Georgetown band in the covered grandstand played their Alma Mater.

Sunday dinner was finished just as the University of Chicago football team entered the grill. This team had suffered a 7-0 defeat at the hands of Penn the day before. Before leaving Washington, the busses went to Lincoln Memorial, and many interesting sites were visited.

The trip to Lewisburg was without incident, and the journey was completed in 7½ hours.

Elsie Baker Delights Large B. U. Audience

Was Accompanied by G. T. Davis; Generous With Encores

The first of the numbers of the annual Lewisburg Artist Course was featured by three things, the remarkable singing of Miss Elsie Baker, the soloist, the playing of her accompanist, Grover Tilden Davis, and the unusually large audience that came out to hear the concert. The concert was given in the Baptist Church on Thursday evening, October 22.

Miss Baker and her accompanist are both Victor Artists, a fact which in itself speaks well for their standing in the musical world. Mr. Davis, as was made known during the concert is a member of the Phi Mu Alpha fraternity, an honorary musical society having a chapter at the University.

In response to the fine reception of the audience both of the artists gave numerous encores, at the end of the concert being called back time after time. The encore numbers included many old favorites such as "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," "Stille Nacht" and others.

Musical critics at the College were unstinted in their praise of the concert, especially favoring Miss Baker for her range and beauty of tone. These qualities were shown in the opening number of the program. The management was also lavish in its remarks about the attendance and declared that it was the largest audience that has ever attended a concert by any artist in the courses offered each year. The auditorium of the church was completely filled.

The program of the concert was as follows:

ORANGE AND BLUE BEAT GEORGETOWN BY 27-YARD KICK

TRIMMER'S PLACE-KICK GIVES 1-POINT LEAD IN SECOND PERIOD

ABOUT 3,000 SEE GAME

Band Parades, Players Fight, In Ankle-deep Mud

Bucknell's goal line remained uncrossed when the Georgetown players had scraped the mud from their cleats after Saturday's game. As the Washington Post aptly phrased it, "Bucknell scored all five points, but she was wise in her selection, contributing but two to the Georgetown cause while keeping three for herself." A place-kick from the tweney-seven yard line, by Trimmer, in the second quarter, gave Bucknell three points while Georgetown gained two when Gormley tackled Blaisdell behind the goal line as he fell on a fumbled ball that oozed out of Myrl Goodwin's clutch.

Such is the story of the weirdest game of football, played under the worst conditions of weather and of ground, ending in the most peculiar score, that Bucknell has ever played.

About three thousand saw the contest in the Griffith Stadium, where only recently shivering crowds had thronged to see the world's baseball classic played under somewhat similar conditions.

At two-thirty, everything was in complete readiness for the regatta. The channels between the lakes in the lower portion of the gridiron, the outfield, had been dredged just deep enough to be navigable. The sandbar that stuck out of the brine toward the upper end of the field, where once had lain the paths of the baseball diamond, proved an admirable hazardous shoal from which the navigators shied. The usual enthusiastic yachting crowd attended while the Bucknell cheering section changed the conventional "Rah! Rah! Rah!" to "Row! Row! Row!"

Great credit should go to the Bucknell Band. It beat the Georgetown club with its opening number and played the Bucknell victory paean ending the matinee with the Alma Mater, not to mention the between-the-act heroics when it wailed through the ankle-deep mud and water to play while formed in perfect B. U. and G. U. formations.

Three of four factors stood out prominently in Bucknell's victory. First come the eleven ball-hounds who played for the Bison. Three-fourths of the fumble recoveries were made by Bucknell men. In this manner the Bisons gained more yardage than the combined total of both teams made by rushing tactics. Blaisdell saved a touchdown when he fell upon Goodwin's fumble, and almost made one when he grubbed Hagerty's muff on the swim.

Then take Trimmer's kick of the slippery, mud-plastered ball which floated accurately through the heart of the region between the goal posts, giving Bucknell the winning points.

And finally, Goodwin's remarkable distance and place punting proved the

Dr. West Will Repeat Sermon Asked To Discuss Evolution

The Rev. Dr. West, pastor of the Baptist church, has been requested by many members of his congregation to repeat the sermon which he gave last summer on the subject, "The Christianity of an Evolutionist." Among these were many of the students of the summer session. Dr. West will give the sermon again on Sunday morning. The sermon topic for the evening service is "The Kingdom of God Without God."

Know Of Any Rock Paintings? Tell The Forum About Them

That valuable and surprising information about the prehistoric inhabitants of America may be obtainable from the paintings and inscriptions known to exist on rocks in various parts of the country is the idea urged by Dr. E. E. Free, science editor of "The Forum." The public is asked to supply information of the locations of such examples of prehistoric American art, so that these examples may be photographed and studied scientifically before they disappear or are defaced.

Rock pictures and inscriptions are known to occur in many places in the United States. They have always been ascribed to the present-day Indians, which is, no doubt, quite correct for the majority of the examples. But possibly some of them are more ancient and more important. The paintings on the walls of gorges and caves in Spain and France were neglected for years. Now the scientists are reading much ancient history from them. Possibly we are neglecting a similar asset in the United States.

Many of the localities where rock paintings occur are record in the scientific reports but there must be hundreds of others. Dr. Free thinks, which have never been described scientifically and are known only to individuals. "The Forum" has undertaken to collect information of all such paintings which can be located. Scientists will then visit the more important ones and endeavor to decipher what they mean and who made them.

"The Forum" makes an appeal for information as to location and nature of any of these inscriptions or paintings. Anyone knowing of such should send his information to the Science Editor, "The Forum," 247 Park Avenue, New York City.

Why Johnny Goes Marching Home

One out of every three. Only thirty-five per cent. of those annually committed to college ever achieve the goal of a degree.

Outside circumstances interfere in many cases, but university officials say that one-third of all casualties are simply a matter of Johnnie's having flunked out. Extra-curricular activities, more than all other things, are blamed.

Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, says moving pictures, possession of automobiles, too great indulgence in outside activities, and over-generosity of parents are the outstanding causes contributing to the failure of undergraduates.

A Williamette University professor says ten per cent. of all freshmen are mentally unfit and should never enter the classroom. "Formerly," he says, "only bright-minded pupils came to college; now, forty per cent. of the high school graduates enter. Too many come, not to grasp knowledge, but because a college education is considered a social necessity."

"Too little sleep, too much play, not enough study, too much leisure, fast eating, and diversified thinking are factors that devitalize students and are responsible for the delinquent groups in every university," is the conclusion reached by Professor Howard of Northwestern University.

The Trinity Chronicle, while recognizing that lack of preparation and poor training are frequently responsible, points out that most failures result from a wrong conception and attitude on the part of entering freshmen. "The thought of hard work has been banished by what they have heard from college acquaintances who have returned home during holidays, primed to the gills with athletic news, and with tales of pranks, jokes and boasts of idleness. Hard work is never mentioned. The erroneous idea is formed that college is a place where one spends four years in ease and enjoyment, with athletics, social life and practical jokes as the major attractions."

Many failures occur because students have no adequate conception of how to study. One educator says the failure to guide and direct study is the weak point of our whole educational machine. Activities nowadays leave so little time for studious pursuits, that it is important for the student to learn to use to the greatest advantage whatever time he does save for this less-popular but necessary side of college life. Interesting in this connection is a recent book by William Allan Brooks on "How to Study" which has been issued by the American Student Publishers, New York.

"Y. W." IS PLANNING BAZAAR

Plans for the annual bazaar to be held sometime between the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays were discussed at the Y. W. C. A. cabinet meeting held on Wednesday evening, October 21, in the Y. W. C. A. room at the Women's College. The proceeds of this bazaar, which is held every year about this time, are used to pay the expenses of delegates to the annual Y. W. C. A. convention at Eagles Mere.

The cabinet also discussed the subject of the World Court, and plans were suggested for future discussions of this topic at the regular Thursday night meetings. It was proposed that a new banner be secured for the "Y" room, which the girls have recently refurnished.

The membership drive which has been going on for the last few days has not as yet been able to reach all the girls, but the drive is to be continued until girls have had a chance to join. As far as it has gone the drive has been very successful, the results in fees being $45 reported so far.

GHOSTS SEEN AT BRADY PARTY

With ghosts acting as ushers, the girls of the Brady Apartment were introduced into the living rooms of the Brady House last Friday night, to enjoy one of the early social season's most charming affairs.

Many of the girls were in masks and even the freshman girls were allowed to use paint as decorative aids.

Mrs. Beatty, the house mother, acted as hostess to the party. The evening was filled with games and entertainment. Stories were told and fortunes were read. Miss Mildred Peadings, as her part of the evening's fun, offered a reading.

At the proper time a dainty luncheon was served by Miss Patty Milliken and Miss Wilson.

Several of the girls coming in from dances acted as signs for breaking up, and with a glad riot the girls dispersed.

"Tom Sawyer" Bad For Boys

A 13-year-old Omaha boy, after reading "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," said he liked the book, "but yet I think it is one of the worst books for boys in their immature age."

He was one of 36,750 school children who helped to answer the old question of parent and teacher, "what shall the children read?" About 800 teachers in thirty-five cities collected the ballots cast by the youngsters.

A 14-year-old boy of Quincy, Mass., after reading "Evangeline," said "it doesn't seem possible that a girl would walk so many miles for her beau when new a girl wouldn't walk one mile to see him."

Who's Who at B.U.

Louise Matthews,

To conform to precedent one ought to begin, "Although she has but recently joined our ranks, Louise has already made a host of friends," etc., ad infinitum et ad nauseum. But we are going to differ. The young lady in question is, of course, Louise Matthews, and even though the above statement is perfectly true it smacks too strongly of the stereotyped phraseology commonly attributed to year books and "sich."

Louise admits that she is a resident of Pittsburgh, where she attended the Schenley High School and the Pittsburgh Teachers' Training School. In the latter institution she took up kindergarten work and learned to sit cross-legged on the floor while telling bed-time stories.

Since entering Bucknell as a junior in 1924, however, Louise has taken her place as a useful member of society (we don't mean to depreciate her former accomplishments; we mean college society) by singing in the girls' glee club and the special chorus. She was also a member of the Junior Prom committee.

This year as president of the Pan-Hellenic Society she has guided the sorority girls through a successful rushing season with a set of new rules to be enforced. This was a rather difficult and thankless undertaking, but Louise did her part well and willingly. We are confident that her guidance will continue to make "Pan-Hel" work fairly and efficiently.

Miss Matthews is a member of the Alpha Chi Omega fraternity.

Art Thou The Man?

A physically sound young man who is game-modish, but not too much so, who dresses carefully, who doesn't drink or go to church too much, is the beau ideal sought as a husband by middle-western college girls, according to a survey conducted by the Kansas State Agricultural College at Manhattan, Kansas.

Of the 1,000 co-eds who answered questionnaires, only one said she wouldn't marry a man "by gee, who had never kissed a girl." (She need have no worries about spinsterhood for breathes there a man with soul so dead?)

Salary was not so important to the fair ones but physical fitness was insisted upon. Thirty percent announced that they were going to limit their children. four percent wanted more, while three per cent preferred to be childless.

Only seven percent fancied the thick type of hero. Sixty-five percent chose refined cavemen.

Free love or trial marriage was approved by three percent.

The vote against liquor was heavy, while forty percent opposed smoking.

CHRISTY JR. SUCCEEDS FATHER

Christopher Mathewson Jr., '28, was elected a director of the Boston National League baseball club at the annual meeting held October 21.

The action was taken as a tribute to Christy senior, who, before his death, was president of the club. At the same time a resolution introduced by Mayor James M. Curley, a director of the club, was adopted. The resolution said that Mathewson, 'by his exceptional intellectual and physical attributes, indomitable perseverence, and clean sportsmanship, elevated the game to a higher standard than ever before attained, won the admiration and confidence of an exacting though generous public, and gained for himself an imperishable name in the annals of American sports." It eulogized "Big Six" as the "incomparable leader and exemplar of the national game."

Robert Smink, a graduate student, and the members of his boys' club received a drenching last Saturday, when they went for a hike in spite of the rain. The farther they walked the harder it rained, so that they were finally obliged to return home before they could reach their destination.

The library was aroused on Tuesday morning when a stray kitten hopped from table to table, over books, papers, lamps and heads. Mrs. Gretzinger proved herself a real heroine when she grasped the feline firmly by the nape of the neck and none too gently thrust it out of the building.

Whitey Barber, '28, drove into a U. S. mail box in Washington, D. C., Saturday and scattered the contents thereof. His Ford then caromed into another automobile, and caused some damage. Fortunately, the other driver was at fault, and "Whitey" is "out" only $22 for repairs on the Ford.

Albert Brenner, '28, and Philip Reilly, '28, were in a car that upset when hiking home from the Georgetown game on Saturday. With the exception of a few bruises, no one was seriously injured.

The Beta Kappas had a thrill Monday morning when their milk man backed his truck into the corner lamp post, and drove away with the evidence hanging on the rear of his vehicle.

Francis Haskett, '25, has seen fit to spend his two weeks vacation back on the campus of his Alma Mater. He is employed by the Trenton Trust Company.

Patterson, N. J. is the place for rapid growth and development. Herbert Grundy's fiveer grew a corpe body over it in three short summer months.

Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders journeyed to State College Friday where they played both Friday and Saturday evenings, at a local fraternity.

The vesper service at the "Sem" is quite popular. The girls are well pleased with the plan. Last Sunday evening, Edythe Rogers Evans sang a solo.

Here's a thought to comfort freshman girls! Miss MacCann, women's physical director, states that walking backward is excellent for reducing the hips.

Professor Stewart has installed a clock on the wall of the biology lecture room. Have his classes been disputing the trustworthiness of his watch?

Helen Falstick, '26, taught in the Daily Vacation Bible School at Clearfield, Pa., this summer.

For the first time since the addition of a Ford to the family, "Peg" Aumiller walked to classes to-day. When questioned, Peg said, "No, I don't mind walking. The constant riding does not permit enough exercise, and I do hate the thought of becoming stout through excessive inactivity."

H. Montgomery Marsh, '28, met with an accident Tuesday night on the Milton-Lewisburg road. The steering gear on his Ford coupe broke, causing the car to plunge through a fence into a field. Montgomery escaped with a few scratches altho his car was damaged considerably.

The largest hell-bender, (devil-dog) in the eastern United States died in Lewisburg Saturday, October 24th. This reptile was the property of Professor N. H. Stewart, who kept it in a pool in the backyard of his home on Brown Street.

Preserving The Small College

"Student Enrollment Breaks Record; Largest Student Body in History." What college paper did not blaze forth a headline of this nature this fall. Some students viewed with alarm—others applauded the advent of Gigantism!

In a small college there is opportunity of contact between professor and student, in seminars discussion is possible. In a large college there is the lecture system and mass production.

The Amherst Student is concerned that Amherst does not succumb to Gigantism, and lose that spirit of personal association in the adventure of learning, peculiar to the "small college." "Already the shy spirit of the Amherst trembles at the tread of too many feet where the infection of Gigantism has begun to spread in its quiet haunts. Unless we act quickly, it will be gone forever." Consequently the Student has taken a census on the subject. 435 of the voters were in favor of the idea of a small college, 15 were opposed. The consensus of opinion rested somewhere between the 600 and 700 mark, somewhere near the former.

Student interest in the question was chosen by the fact that nearly 400 voters gave some reason for their choice. The Student comments. "The feeling that Amherst must remain small in order to preserve the personal contact between instructors and students through the medius of classes limited in number was undoubtedly the most popular reason propounded by the winning majority....."

At Last The Twain Have Met; East And West Unite At B. U.

East may be East, and West may be West, but the twain shall meet, if they are both from the West.

Alfred Rawlinson, '29, and Theodore Lavers, '29, are both the sons of missionaries in Shanghai. They were classmates in the Shanghai American School. At the end of the third year, Rawlinson came to Atlantic City with his parents, who were then returning to the States on a furlough. He completed the fourth year of his high school education in the Atlantic City High School, while Lavers received his diploma from the school at Shanghai.

Each, unknown to the other, applied for admission to the class of 1929 at Bucknell. Both were accepted. During the summer, Rawlinson acted as personal care-taker for an invalid in Maine. Lavers was a counselor in a boys' camp. When college opened this fall, the two classmates from Shanghai American School discovered that they were roommates in college. Lavers knew nothing at all about it when he arrived. Rawlinson had a suspicion of it about the middle of the summer.

Alfred Rawlinson's father, Frank T. Rawlinson, was a Bucknell man, and graduated with the class of 1899. He field ever since, except for his regular went to China as a missionary in furloughs, which come about every 1902. He has been working in that five years. He is pastor of the Grace Baptist Church in Shanghai. He is also editor of the Chinese Record, and China Mission Year Book. For many years he was chairman of the Moral Welfare League in Shanghai.

Lavers' father is in charge of all the construction work in the Baptist field around Shanghai. All buildings are designed under his supervision. He also helps the missionaries of other denominations when they are in need.

WHAT IS OUR POLICY?

For some time now we have been observing the trend in the matter of editorial policies of our fellow editors in other colleges. We find that they generally divide themselves into two groups: those who always approve the actions of students, and faculty and trustees, and alumni of their own institutions, "the boosters"; and those who are eternally on the watch for some action of fellow-students, or instructor, or administrative officer, or janitor, or whatnot, that can be soundly and thoroughly attacked, "the knockers."

Each of these policies has its advantages. The boosters are almost certain to avoid trouble with faculty and administration. In praising their teams they may have the hearty support of their students. In apologizing for defeats or failures they may voice the sentiment of their alumni who can never reconcile defeat with the golden memories of college days that are universally the gift of college alumni.

On the other hand, the editor who determines to attack everything within sight is usually able to find plenty to do. Enough flaws have always existed in the arts of teaching and administration, as practiced in the colleges of the land, to give any person who wants to start numbering them a life's job. In fact some men have given up their lives to the work of finding and trying to remedy the faults in our educational system.

The present influx of students into the colleges has caused almost all of these faults to be brought more clearly to the surface. Thus the amateur education critics find many topics on which they may discourse in a high-flown style. And usually there are enough dissatisfied students in every college to voice a noisy approval of the editor who has "the daring to air his grudge against the faculty."

But there are also disadvantages. The booster will soon find that he has lost the respect of the majority of his readers, the students. Everybody grows tired of seeing the common-place magnified into the ideal. Man has a great passion for truth, and perseverance in the perversion of truth is in the end, certain to breed disgust. And the knocker.—he may continue to hold his student readers, but what good does he accomplish? For himself, for his paper, for his Alma Mater, none. He voices a sentiment that might better be left unvoiced. He expresses himself, but his self-expression is assinine.

In our opinion the editorial column wields a sacred power. We are not willing to defile our paper with fine formalities pointing to the superexcellence of every achievement of a Bucknell man. We don't care to run a publicity sheet; running a student newspaper is job enough for the present. Neither is it our policy to attack every questionable act that comes up in connection with University affairs. We want college spirit and college unity, and one certain way to cause trouble for any college and to lower the morale of any institution is to cause dissension among the essential factors.

The editorial column should build. It should both "boost" and "knock," constructively. When some problem is causing dissension, giving Bucknell a black eye, the editorial should condemn, AND make suggestions for remedying the evil. When Bucknell accomplishes a worthwhile feat the editorial should felicitate, AND urge to greater deeds. When progressive movements are under way the editorial should give encouragement and aid.

The policy of the Bucknellian is to be sanely, constructively, critical and reasonably, critically, constructive. We want to build a better Bucknell and interest in the reputation of the college is only of secondary interest. The institution that is properly founded and properly built need have no worries concerning its reputation. Therefore, when the Bucknellian can help a movement that will better Bucknell, when it can offer some suggestions and criticisms, it will do so. But editorials that are written to laud will find harbor in the wastebasket. The space can better be filled with facts.

WE WILL BUILD.

Expansion of Stone

It was once thought that stone expanded at a uniform rate when heated, but that is now declared, on good authority, to be incorrect. In tests of marble and limestone, small increases of temperature above normal gave only a slight expansion, but the rate increased rapidly with further temperature rises. The expansion of marble at a few degrees above normal was only a fractional part of that of steel; at 100 degrees C., the average expansion was about that of steel, while at 250 degrees this rate was approximately doubled.

Life's Realities

Life will always have some cross in it. New heights of worthier living keep appearing, new works of service beckon us to take hold. The upward way cannot be easy; it must be climbing to the end; but, as we climb, there comes more love of man, more love of God; a blessing of stronger, nobler, kindlier, happier life. And ever growing over all, a quiet, restful sense of something brighter, happier still, beyond—some crown of better life than aught we know of here, which the Lord hath, in the unfolding of the human years, for them that love Him.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

It is claimed that Professor Howes remarked last week that the students show no originality. If the men make the freshmen wear signs the women will do likewise. The next question then is where did the sign bearing idea originate anyway?

The freshmman class should really appoint a publicity agent at once. Most colleges begin to boast of their growth as soon as they can have two teams in the field on the same day. The class of 1929 will have two football teams on the field next Saturday. Not so bad freshmen!

The failure of the reports on which the grid-graph must depend for its operation disappointed quite a few of us Saturday. We hope that the managers of the enterprise will profit by this experience and make arrangements before the next game is to be reported. We're not "razzing." This is sincere.

Now that the debating season has gotten definitely under way it might be a very good thing for the students to show some real interest in the forensic art. Present indications are that the team will be entirely worthy of the University's complete support. Will the University prove itself worthy of representation by such a team?

The attendance at the concert by Miss Baker and Mr. Davis last Thursday evening seemed to indicate a fine tendency on the part of the students. If Bucknell can instill into students a love and appreciation for music, one of the fine arts, it is at least in some measure coming up to the requirements of a cultural institution. Estelle Gray Liebrinse, violinist, will appear here November 2. Will Bucknell give her a similar welcome?

Many people were heard to remark after the Georgetown game that the score sounded more like a baseball game than a football struggle. People who witnessed the event say that many of the plays were pulled along the second and third base lines. But the players will tell the world that the game was anything but the "pitcher's battle" that the score indicates. It was one of the hardest games of the season and many Bucknell supporters have said that now the team can play football. That's that.

HOLY CROSS CONTEST TO BE STIFF ONE

Cross team admitted. Instead of being soft marks for other major colleges, Holy Cross is considered by many eastern colleges as an opponent of importance. When picking elevens of high rating in the fall classic the Holy Cross bid for recognition must be granted.

Their 7-6 victory over Harvard is perhaps the most noteworthy of the accomplishments of the New Englanders. True, Harvard has anything but a marvelous football outfit this autumn, but the Crimson is always in a state of offering fight, and the triumph of Holy Cross merits commendation. Newspaper reports of the game indicates that the Worcester team possesses a stone wall defense and a fast elusive set of backs. The defense demonstrated against Harvard was the principle reason for the Crimson downfall. Hence it is evident that if "Uncle" Charlie's boys are to gain consistently against Holy Cross, they must do it in ways other than line bucks and off-tackle slices. Holy Cross may be weaker or stronger since her conflict with Harvard, but regardless of any kind of change the Bisons will have to demonstrate an impregnable defense and an irresistable attack to overcome their hosts.

Coach Moran has been fortunate in that none of his stars has been seriously injured in games or in practices this season, and it is realized that this good fortune will have to prevail if the unblemished slate of Orange and Blue is to remain clean. The maximmum strength of the squad will be needed if Holy Cross is to be repulsed.

Steeplejack Student Climbs Way To Success

If "Ted" Appel, 20 years old, of Lancaster, makes his mark in the world after graduation from Franklin and Marshall College, where he is now a senior, he will be able to say truly that he climbed to success.

He is a steeplejack and a structural steelworker, several hours each day. The rest of the time he is a senior at F. and M.

A practical turn of mind has convined him that the way to be a really good engineer is to know his job from the bottom up.

His ambitions to become an engineer include several years to be spent in a technical school after he has finished his course at the Lancaster college, when he will learn the theories that made his manual work of this year possible.

"Ted" looks just like any other "skywalker" on his way home from work whin he walks through the residential section of Lancaster, clad in overalls, begrimed and dust-covered, and carrying his dinner pail.

He is the son of Dr. T. B. Appel, a noted surgeon of Lancaster.

Pin Consumption

In these days of efficiency no one should ever pick up a pin. The ancient proverb which promised an entire day of good luck as a reward for picking up a pin has been outgrown.

The United States now uses more than 20,000,000,000 pins a year, about 200 per capita.

The pin is not only very ancient, but many of the so-called modern forms are actually copies of pins in common use thousands of years ago.—Thrift Magazine.

Pride in Work

Whatever be the conditions which surround you in your work, do it with high thought and noble purpose. Do not whine and complain because of your unhappy lot; but accept it, humble and obscure as it may be, knowing that it is possible to clean out a gutter with the self-respecting dignity of manhood or to blacken a shoe with the enthusiasm of religion.—

PERKINS, ENGINEER, TALKS ON PAVING

His Illustrated Slides Show Manufacture Of Bricks

William C. Perkins, the chief engineer of the Eastern Paving Brick Manufacturers Association, Philadelphia, Pa., gave an illustrated lecture on the manufacture of paving brick to the engineering students in the Engineering Building on Monday evening at 7:30.

Mr. Perkins was introduced by Mr. D. M. Griffith, assistant professor of civil engineering. Mr. Perkins opened his lecture with a few remarks upon good design of pavements, emphasizing the fact that the pavement must be designed according to the amount of traffic and according to the existing climatic conditions.

The discussion was then centered upon the manufacture of paving brick. Two kinds of materials are used, shale and fire clay. The former always produces a red or reddish caste brick, while the latter makes bricks of yellowish caste.

After this discussion, the process of manufacture was shown by illustrated slides depicting the shale and clay pits, crusher, dry pans, "pug mill," auger machine, cutter, drying tunnels, and kilns. Kilns are of three types—round, rectangular, and continuous. One slide showed a continuous kiln 3400 ft. long, made in the form of a horseshoe. The flames pass longtitudinally through this kiln.

Mr. Perkins enumerated the advantages and disadvantages of cement and asphalt grout after he had shown the slides. He closed his lecture by pointing out the advantages of a brick wearing surface. The advantages are durability, low maintenance cost, easy building, uniform size of units, service cuts can be readily relaid, pavement is sanitary, smooth but not slippery, noiseless and has low tractive resistance, adapted to all grades, non-absorbent, non-abrasive, not affected by elements or acids.

and its Relation to the Student Volunteers."

Devotions at the Saturday afternoon meeting were led by Helen Smith, traveling secretary of the S. V. M., and a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College. A report of the work accomplished by the Union during the past year was given by the president. A discussion of the Union was led by George Leeder and Mrs. Kitchin.

On Saturday evening the vesper services was led by the secretary of the Union, Priscilla Zimmerman, of Juniata College. A business session followed.

James Dickson, of Princeton Theological Seminary, led the morning watch service on Sunday morning. A discussion of local group problems and the election of council members for the coming year followed. The Rev. Mr. Streeter gave the retreat sermon.

On Sunday afternoon devotions were led by "Shorty" Miller. An address on "Missionary Education of Self, Campus and Churches" was given by Helen Smith, secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement. The closing talk of the retreat was an inspirational message by the Rev. Mr. E. A. Harrar, of Camden, N. J., the father of Mary Harrar.

Miss Harrar was elected president of this division of the Student Volunteer Movement at the conference held at Bucknell in February, 1925. Plans are already being made for the next conference, which is to be held at Dickinson College, Carlisle, from February 19 to 21, inclusive.

After the retreat, four of the delegates drove with the Rev. Harrar and his daughter to their home in Camden, where they conducted the evening service at the First Baptist Church.

Wellesley Increases Fees

An increase of $100 for each student in the charges for tuition and for board and room will become effective next fall at Wellesley College. This will raise the tuition fee to $400 a year and the board and room charges to $600, making the total higher than the cost in any other women's college in New England.

charts he illustrated the attention of groups and individuals during a certain period of time.

The meeting was well attended, and at the end of the lecture, Professor Riemer extended an invitation to visit Bloomsburg Normal School for purposes of observation in teaching methods. It was put to a vote of the students and the invitation was heartily accepted.

Dr. Riemer is a Bucknell graduate in the class of 1895. He returned to his Alma Mater as an instructor in Latin and German in 1895 and continued to teach here until 1899. He was then instructor in German at Harvard for two years and later spent some time travelling in Europe and studying at the Universities of Berlin and Leipzig. In 1903 he returned to Bucknell as professor of modern languages and in 1919 he left Bucknell to become the expert in modern language study for the State Department of Education. Two years ago he was chosen as principal of the Bloomsburg Normal School. That summer he was dean of the Bucknell summer session. Dr. Riemer has a son who entered Bucknell this fall as a sophomore.

One of the few Russian women students enrolled at the University of Pennsylvania is Miss Mary Marcuse, of Riga, Latvia. She speaks German, Russian, Lattish, and Latin, but no English, and is studying the latter in order to matriculate in the Medical School. She is enrolled in the course for teachers.

Miss Marcuse was educated in Riga and attended Latvijas University for two yars. For three years she assisted a prominent surgeon in her native city.

English Universities Claim Cars Are An Evil

Authorities of England's two leading universities are opposing possession of automobiles by undergraduates while in school.

Oxford already has forbidden first-year students to have motor cars, and Vice Chancellor Wells, in his annual Latin address, deprecated the number of students' cars and the speed at which they are driven.

Now Cambridge is considering the necessity of an absolute prohibition of students' automobiles, having followed Oxford's example regarding freshmen. Vice Chancellor Seward said:

"The motor habit, when it becomes an obsession, induces a state of mind out of harmony with the best traditions of Cambridge."

Browning, '04, Made Columbia Professor

Was An Active Undergraduate While A Bucknell Student

The Columbia School of mines has been fortunate in securing P. Dewees Browning, '168, as Associate in Mining to take up the courses of instruction heretofore given by Professor Robert Peele, '83, Mines. Professor Peele closed his thirty-three years of service at the end of the academic year 1924-25, and Browning takes up his work at the beginning of the academic year 1925-26.

Browning is a native of Pennsylvania and has been actively engaged in coal mining in Pennsylvania for the greater part of his experience. He was graduated from Bucknell with the degree of A. B. in 1904, having completed the three years of engineering courses, which had just then been established at Bucknell.

After graduation from Bucknell he was engaged as mining engineer for the Rockhill Iron & Coal Company, and for the East Broad Top Railroad & Coal Company, in Central Pennsylvania, holding these positions for six years. He then joined one of the largest operators of the state—The Consolidation Coal Company at Somerset, Pennsylvania, where for four years he was in the engineering and operating departments.

Browning felt the importance of having a good, broad engineering training and resigned his position as Assistant Superintendent of two of their mines to enter Columbia School unusual, but as a matter of fact coal the class of 1916, and showed his adaptability at that time as instructor, being chosen by Professor Judd as his assistant on the summer surveying trip for the mining engineers.

After graduation from Columbia, he was engaged as mining engineer by Weston, Dodson & Company, Inc., Bethlehem, Pa., active anthracite and bituminous operators. During the war he gave his services to the Bureau of Mines for two years, making investigations into the cause of mine accidents and their prevention, the best methods of mine ventilation, the elimination of gases, dust, etc.

During the past five years Browning has been with a well known concern of coal operators—the Berwind White Coal Company at Windber, Pennsylvania. He served two years as mining engineer and three years as general superintendent of their operations at that point, as well as being interested in their activities in Western Pennsylvania.

The choice of a coal mining engineer for Columbia's staff is somewhat unusual, but as a matter of fact coal mine engineers and managers have to deal with very important engineering operations of planning, selection of machinery and operations in which a great deal of detail and very close oversight has to be made for the financial success of such business. Metal engineer are perhaps as much interested in the geology and the metallurgy of mining operations as in the actual method of mining. The plant and machinery for such mines are frequently designed by the mechanical engineer or the machinery and steel construction companies. A man who has been associated with coal mining operations is more closely in touch with the subjects which Professor Peele's courses cover and Columbia believes it has done a wise thing in selecting a man from this field, one who has been interested in active and important concerns operating in this country.

Browning has always been in close touch with Columbia activities. He is a member of the Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, at the meetings of which he is usually present. Browning has the happy nature of being able to deal with men and young men successfully, and in this new undertaking both his experience and his ability add a strong man to Columbia and to the industry in which he has been engaged.

—Columbia Alumni News.

During his undergraduate days at Bucknell, Browning was active in a number of ways. He was a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, and belonged to Eucpia, one of the two great literary societies of the earlier days, that had so much to do with developing Bucknell men as debaters and public speakers and quick thinkers. He was also a member of the T Square Club, and served on the Junior Prom committee.

The Bucknellian, no less than the Columbia Alumni News, congratulates Columbia University upon its good fortune in securing this outstanding Bucknell man as Associate Professor of Mining. He is a most creditable addition to the list of professors whom Bucknell has given to Columbia.

Few men rise in the world simply from standing on their dignity.

Alumni Notes

The marriage of Stephen J. Wargo, '21, and Miss Lorretta Gertrude McNeilly of Washington, Pa., took place at the home of the bride on August 29th, 1925.

Frank L. Jones, '25, is now doing graduate work in Chemical Engineering at the University of Columbia. During the summer months he was connected with the sulphur color department of the DuPont Company. At the time he left, he had charge of one of the laboratories.

Harry E. Campbell, '14, recently presented the Chemical Engineering Society at Bucknell with a copy of the book, "The Making, Shaping, and Treating of Steel," written by Camp and Frances. Mr. Campbell is at present chief chemist in the largest plant of the Carnegie Steel Company, at Clairton Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. West, of Pennsgrove, N. J., are happy to announce the arrival of an addition to the family. A son, Earl Baxter West, was born August 28, 1925. Mr. and Mrs. West were in Lewisburg for Homecoming Day. They stopped off on their way to Ohio. Mr. West is at present in charge of the semi-works operations at the Dupont Company dye plant at Pennsgrove, N. J. He was graduated from Bucknell in 1917.

Miss Marjorie Farley, '22, resigned her position as teacher of biology in the Coudersport High School this fall in order that she might accept a similar position in the Tyrone High School. She seems to be a natural-born biologist, and reports indicate that she is doing very nicely in her new field of endeavor. Miss Farley returned to her Alma Mater last summer for the summer session, to get the latest slants on her subject.

An abstract of an article by Ellery Harvey, Bucknell '24, recently appeared in the Journal of the Society of Chemical Industries, which is a British publication. The work for this article was done by Harvey in the Bucknell chemical laboratory while he was a student here. Harvey has an enviable record of success in his field so far. In addition to his regular work, during his senior year he did enough extra work in the laboratory to secure material for the publication of four papers in four different journals on four different subjects. He is at present doing graduate work at the University of Wisconsin. The U. of W. looks upon him as a very promising man.

Tonic in Air Travel, According to Doctor

At a medical convention in New York one of the speakers heartily urged tired business men to ride in the air as a tonic to lethargic mental processes. He says the air is vitalized at street level in the city, and those who would think clearly and to the point should soar aloft, taking their problems, light or heavy, as fellow passengers, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

All that holds back many persons from using the plane as a means of locomotion is the fear of falling. The best way to cure that fear is to fly. The many who have tried it do not need to be reminded of their exhilarating sentiment of utter security. One who flies is bereft of the ordinary yardsticks of measurement and feels discouraged from compass bearings as from plummetings of the depth beneath. Space seems the same on every hand; height loses its meaning, except as it expands the horizon. It is attachment to the earth, not detachment from it, that brings dizziness.

The supremely inspiring sensation is to feel oneself borne up and up, without apparent effort or any limitation, as though supported by a great, strong, supernatural hand that could not fall. Those who travel in a closed cabin, impervious to anything but a book or a card game, will not derive from the experience the thrill of travel in an open plane. It is hard to imagine that in days to come the hardened commuter will sleep or frivol away his hours aloft, frankly bored by the panorama beneath him. One who flies will lose much of the benefit if, having all the pure air there is, he does not fill his lungs with it.

Another easy way to get along with the Yellow races is to treat them white.—Baltimore SUN.

There is nothing half-way about Henry Ford. While other manufacturers were fitting their cars with balloon tires, he was teaching his to fly.—LIFE.

Smiths Seeks To Coordinate Career With Marriage

An institute for the co-ordination of Women's Interests has been established at Smith College, to be financed for three years by the Laura Speiman Rockfeller Foundation. Dr. Ethel Puffer Howes, a Smith graduate, is director.

William Allan Neilson, president of the college, defines its purpose "to find a solution for the problem which confronts almost every educated woman today—how to reconcile a normal life of marriage and motherhood with a life of intellectual activity, professional or otherwise."

LEHIGH ACQUIRES ATHLETIC FIELD FROM STEEL CONCERN

Lehigh University has recently purchased the athletic field belonging to the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. The acquisition of this property by the university affords the best solution to one of its most perplexing problems. The new field is of ample size for two football gridirons; it is equipped for baseball; and has a brick, concrete and steel stand, the seating capacity of which is upwards of 4,000. A building has also been erected which contains a gymnasium floor for basketball and other indoor sports. There are also a number of splendid tennis courts.

Lafayette Generous To Hikers

There's a bed and a meal awaiting at Lafayette College for a student of any other college or university whose bumming trip to take in an away-from-home athletic contest brings him through Easton, say the signs erected at the main entrances to the town by the Maroon Key Club, the official "wel-coming club."

Owing to the location of Easton, many students from other Pennsylvania schools pass through on their way to New York to watch their teams in action, and there is north and south traffic when Cornell meets Penn. The "bed and meal" idea was adopted this fall after Lafayette students had met with a similar welcome from Dickinson College freshmen class when the Maroonites were trekking to Pittsburgh several weeks ago.

U. P. BUILDS NEW DORMITORIES

The erection of two new dormitory houses at the University of Pennsylvania has been planned and appointed by the board of trustees, according to announcement made yesterday by Dr. J. H. Penniman, provost. The houses will serve as memorials to three graduates.

Plands for the erection of one dormitory, were provided in the will of James R. Magee, as a memorial to his brothers, Frank Hamilton Magee, who was graduated in the class of 1876, and Horace Magee, a graduate of the college in 1865. Frank H. Magee died in 1904, and Horace in 1912.

The William Henry Ashhurst House will be the name of the second dormitory, in memory of William Henry Ashhurst, who was graduated in 1891. The money for the erection of this building was provided in Mr. Ashhurst's will.

Lafayette "Y" To File Exams.

The proverbial professor who gives the same final examination in his course year after year, if he still exists at Lafayette College, is going to be out of luck from now on, for his questions will be on file where students who are preparing for his examination may find them.

To aid students in studying their various courses and in outlining them to the best advantage, the Brainerd Society, the Lafayette College Y. M. C. A., has started a permanent file of examination questions in all courses. This file will be available to the students so that they can get an idea as to what constitutes the important points in each course, and can use this information in laying out their program of study.

Colleges and universities in the United States enroll at present approximately 602,000 students. This is 73 per cent. as many as have been graduated from American institutions of college rank in the last 300 years. American colleges and universities have graduated about 825,000 young men and women, and in addition have sent out 2,400,000 without degrees.

At the University of Colorado dances, no wax may be used on the floor, no refreshments served, and no smoking by the men. (And as the Vermont Cynic says, "Wonder if music is permitted?")

At Temple University all examinations have been abolished because the psychology department there believes them to be inaccurate, antiquated, and influenced by personalities.

TEMPLE TO CELEBRATE

Will Observe Homecoming Day in Connection With Football Game

Announcement has been made that Temple University will observe Homecoming Day on November 14, the day on which Temple's football team plays St. Joseph's The Owl Society, a Temple boosters' organization, will take charge of arrangements for the day.

Graduates and students will be invited to attend many events on that day. There will be departmental alumni association meetings in the morning, a parade starting at 1 o'clock from Broad street and Montgomery avenue to St. Joseph's Athletic Field, and in the evening a dance in the gymnasium of College Hall.

GLASGOW UNIVERSITY ELECTS WITH OLD EGGS

Some twenty thousand eggs of uncertain age were substituted for rhetoric in the final campaign in connection with the annual polling to elect the Lord Rector of Glasgow University, recently.

Austin Chamberlain, the foreign secretary, was the victor in the contest of ballots, being elected over G. K. Chesterton and Sidney Webb, former president of the board of trade, but the stately buildings of the ancient seat of learning suffered heavily in the battle of decayed missiles which accompanied the election.

The embryo party leaders during the preceeding night brought truck loads of eggs, flour and decadent herrings on to the campus. At 9 o'clock in the morning a pitched battle with malodorous missiles was opened and continued for three hours.

Princeton Gives Her Frosh War Memorial Scholarships

Announcement was made from the office of the secretary of Princeton University October 24, of the award of forty-nine scholarships to members of the freshman class. Thirty are War Memorial Scholarships founded by Princeton in memory of her sons who died in the service of their country or that of the Allies in the World War. The remainder are scholarships provided by alumni or friends of Princeton.

Twenty-five of the recipients are high school graduates and twenty-four studied at private schools. Eighteen states are represented, New York and New Jersey leading with seven scholarship holders each and Pennsylvania next with six.

Co-ed Athletes At Univ. Of Cal. Must Obey Strict Rules

Training rules for women students at the University of California who expect to take part in athletics are to be rigidly enforced by the Women's Athletic Association.

The rules are:

Eight hours of sleep five nights a week.

Three regular meals a day, with green vegetables on the menu at least once.

A pint of milk at least once a day.

No candy between meals and not more than one cup of coffee or tea a day.—Phila. Inquirer.

College Scraps Honor System

By a vote of the faculty the honor system at Union College has been "indefinitely suspended." It will be replaced by the proctor system. The action was taken after a consultation with the student government when it was decided that the honor system had failed to function.

Just before mid-year examinations an attempt was made to strengthen the system by adding amendments making the students honor-bound to report violations. The amendments were disregarded and so it was decided to abolish the system.

Speaking of the development of Swarthmore College in the last twenty-five years, at the Founders' Day exercises today, President Aydelotte announced that the endowment funds had, during that period, been increased more than ten-fold. In the same period, the curriculum of the college has been changed from a fixed series of classical and scientific courses, to a free elective system, and within the last few years, the college has taken the lead in the provision of special facilities for students of unusual ambition and ability by means of its newly established honor courses.

A unique club has been formed at the University of Oregon, the membership requirement of which is that candidates for admission must have been substitutes on the football team for a full season without once leaving the bench to participate in a game.

Meeting To Discuss Theatre Is Called By Carnegie Tech

Student dramatic organizations that give serious plays have been invited to participate prominently in the first national Conference on the American Theater to be held at the Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh on November 27 and 28 of this year.

Announcement of the conference is considered as a recognition of the changing conditions in the theater in this country, especially with regard to the growth of the community playhouse movement and the widespread interest in college theatricals.

Whether the movies and other forms of light entertainment have really "killed" the commercial theater, particularly the "road business," and whether the new movement in community playhouse activities and in colleges can elevate standards in American drama, are questions that will be carefully discussed at the conference. One of the chief purposes of the meeting is to study the potential influence of the community playhouse movement, and to ascertain, also, the nature and extent of the movement now going on in American colleges for the promotion of interest in the serious drama.

The invitation list, according to Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, and author of the plan of the conference, includes all of the American universities and colleges and the community playhouses. As far as it is possible, informal student organizations which give serious plays are being invited to send delegates. In addition, the list includes theatrical critics, and representatives of those theatrical groups that include producers, playwrights, actors and artists.

"The program," according to President Baker, "will be so arranged as to bring out not only the nature of the work done at the colleges, but also to show the significance of the community theaters. It is felt that the relation between the college theatricals and the community theaters is very close. The representatives of the colleges will be given an opportunity to tell what his institution is doing for the cultivation of the drama. Such questions as the purpose of the work, the financial support, college credits, etc, will be considered with the sessions."

Among those who have already accepted invitations to speak are Otto Kahn, New York banker, Brock Pemberton, prominent Broadway producer; Vincent Massey, Toronto business man, who built and endowed the theater at the University of Toronto, the outstanding little theater of Canada; and Professor George P. Baker, chairman of the newly organized department of drama at Yale University. Several prominent graduates of the department of drama at Carnegie Institute of Technology, which incidentally was the first institution in this country to organize a department of drama, are expected to lead some of the discussions.

As a sidelight to the conference details, it is planned also, by special permission of the author, to have a production of one of Galsworthy's plays presented by the students of the department of drama of Carnegie. B. Iden Payne, who gave up his work as a producer to become a full-time professor of drama at the Pittsburgh institution, will direct the production of the play.

Radcliffe Girls Have Club

The girls of Radcliffe College now have a country club all their own The Radcliffe Club of Boston and the Student Government Association have obtained a building on Sudbury Road between Concord and Lexington. They have rented the premises until January 15 and may renew the rent for the entire winter and spring if the project proves successful.

The clubhouse, intended as a recreation place in which the girls may spend week-ends, has sleeping quarters for eight, and large living rooms, open fireplaces, and a sleeping porch. The club privileges will be extended to members of any other Radcliffe club.

$40,000 FOR MUHLENBERG

Of an estate of upward of $110,000 disposed of by the will of Mrs. Florence Saeger, Muhlenberg College is to receive $40,000, besides a large collection of books, bookcases and other library furniture. Dr. Haas, president of the college, announced the money would be used to establish a professorship.

HUH! COLLEGE MEN!

College men, I know they are,
Look at their caps—and they drive a car;
Their faces show such knowledge great,
As if they're keepers of their fate.

They look at others with blase air!
Nothing matters, nor do they care
About things outside the college—
Politics and work are not of knowledge.

Greek letters—just frats indeed
Jeweled pins and a "Tux" they need;
Dances, rides and parties gay—
And what is college to them, but play?

They stand in groups about the halls,
And spineless lean against the walls.
They talk about the latest step
And pick to pieces every "rep."

The drug store seems the meeting place
Where each relates his latest case
A cigarette from lips suspended;
Upon a "coke" their lives depended.

The college man of all the males,
Thinks that woman before him pales;
Little he knows how she laughs at him
Even while praising his work with vim.

But don't believe that these are all
The kind of men that colleges call—
Think of the football heroes strong and fine
With what courage they smash the line!

And the fellows that go to U.
I can really say that just a few
Think of naught but fun and frolic
They're quick at retort as well as rollick.

They've minds that can be sharp and keen,
And underlying morals clean.
Look—! College men, I know they are
But still they are the best by far!

—Denver Parrot.

Frosh—"Big boy, was George Washington as honest as they say he was?
Soph—"Why, he was the most honest man that ever lived."
Frosh—"Then, why do they close the banks on his birthday."

Have You Ever Heard?

That Christy Mathewson, in addition to being a wonderful football and baseball player, was one of the best basketball centres Bucknell ever had.

That it was his intention to study forestry, which was a new line of work when he was a college student.

That although his success in professional baseball prevented him from realizing this ambition, it did not stop him from worth while achievement in a number of other lines.

That one of these achievements was in writing, and that he wrote five books for boys as well as a number of magazine articles.

That he was one of the most accomplished chess and checker players in this country.

That he made a deep study of both games, and that during his illness he made numberless analyses of checker and chess games that he and other noted players had played, writing these games down play by play in a book.

That another device of his to keep himself busy and his mind properly employed during his convalescence was the study of birds.

That still another interest was in flowers. That during his long walks in the region near Saranac Lake, he studied the flora and fauna intently, making records of all the flowers he found and preserving specimens of many of them.

That in his college days he was also interested in music, playing in the band, singing in the glee club, and also in the Phi Gamma Delta quartet.

That his first considerable earnings in baseball were spent to buy comforts and luxuries for his parents and their home.

That when his funds ran low, during his long and costly stay at Saranac Lake, a benefit game was played for him by National League teams in New York, which netted considerably more than $30,000 for him.

How Patrol Service Saves Ships From Ice

In 1914 the leading maritime nations of the world came to an agreement that a patrol service to keep a lookout for icebergs should be set up. This conference was the outcome of the sinking of the Titanic with great loss of life after striking an iceberg on the night of April 14, 1912. The United States government was asked to undertake the responsibility of the ice patrol in the North Atlantic.

For about four months each year, when the ice is breaking up into gigantic, treacherous masses, the patrol must be maintained. It begins usually in March, lasting until the end of June. The usual procedure is for the patrol cutters, upon sighting a berg, to allow themselves to drift with the white mass. For days they may have to keep this position, and the monotony is only relieved when the berg finally dissolves or is no longer dangerous. The patrol boats are each fitted with a 2,000-watt telephone and telegraph transmitter, and all the time they are with the icebergs they send out messages of warning at regular intervals.

Both the Taunus and the Modoc, the principal ships of the patrol, are driven by electricity and every every kind of measuring instrument, so that they can discover the exact size of each berg they encounter.

How Fast Light Travels

Light travels with a speed of about 186,300 miles a second. Scientists have known this fact for years. But Dr. A. A. Michelson, president of the National Academy of Science, who is one of the greatest practical physicists in the world, is not satisfied with this figure. He thinks it is about 20 miles short of absolute accuracy.

If Doctor Michelson's experiments are successful this error will be reduced to as low as one mile per second, a figure accurate enough for practically all scientific purposes. Although Doctor Michelson is confined to his bed in Pasadena, Cal., as the result of an operation several months ago, he is continuing his experiments with the aid of his assistant, Fred Pearson. A reflection mirror on Mt. Baldy, 22 miles from Mt. Wilson, is being used for the light experiments.—Exchange.

How Painted "Light" Helps

"Painting" buildings with light is an inexpensive and effective method invented by engineers in Pomo, Cal., says Popular Science Monthly. The walls are made of cream-tinted terra-cotta and pressed brick, and floodlighted with colors such as soft magenta, ruby or emerald.

The city kid was roaming about in the country when he came upon a dozen or so empty condensed milk cans. Greatly excited, he yelled to his companions: "Hey, fellers, come here quick! I've found a cow's nest!"

OBSERVATORY CONCERT GIVEN AS PUNISHMENT

George Frost, dressed in his pajamas, entertained the students with free concerts on his violin Wednesday and Friday from 10:00 to 10:30 A. M. on the platform of the Observatory building, the penalty inflicted by Interclass Council for being too noisy with it during study hours. In addition to this, during the week he carried his violin and a sign which read on one side, "Paul Whiteman is looking for me," and on the other side, "I appear at the Observatory Wednesday and Friday at 10:00 A. M."

Blizzard, up for the fourth time, was reported for standing on the campus while the freshman girls sang at the library last Wednesday. He was duly made to dress in an attire that conformed with that of the girls,—and not to use any powder, lip-stick or rouge.

On first sight one was prone to believe that Nowicki, outfitted with a gun, belt, sword, and knives, was about to go on a lone exploration into the wilds of the jungle, but on closer investigation his sign, "These are to keep the girls away", explained their significance.

Freshman Rules

The Freshmen think their heads will swell,
So they wear green head bands;
They seem to be quite handicapped
With yardsticks on their hands.
Their names on placards now they bear
To tell the world they're here,
And sweetly say to "28s,"
"Good-morning, sophomores, dear."
Their faces are quite guiltless now
Of rouge and powder, too,
They wear their "specs" upon their nose
Like Grandma used to do.
And with it all they're right good sports
When made to act like fools,
To give us all a grand good time,

BUCKNELL TO MEET GALLAUDET, NOV. 7

Scrappy Outfit Will Give Bisons A Good Game

Bucknell students and grid fans of this vicinity who are rooting for the Bison football team should reconcile themselves to one fact. The little tilt with Gallaudet, here Nov. 7, may not be the easiest sort of engagement for the Orange and Blue. It is the concensus, wherever the future prosthrow in his reserves for the Gallaudet cussed, that "Uncle" Charlie will throw in his reserves for the Gallaudet entanglement, thus saving his varsity men for the gruelling battle scheduled with the Middies at Annapolis the following Saturday.

Such a plan if it could be successfully carried out would be fine; the Orange and Blue regulars have taken part in several strenuous contests this fall and a breathing spell before the clash with the sailors would be exceedingly welcome. This is more than can be hoped for, however. True, Gallaudet has made a poor showing in most all of her games this season, but grid followers should think twice before underestimating her football capacity. Dickinson was thought to be easy picking last autumn and the surprise which the Carlisle athletes pulled should be a lesson to all who count Gallaudet as a velvet cushion on which the Bisons can rest before hopping off on their flight to Annapolis.

Gallaudet does not claim any array of stars such as other colleges may boast but does have a determined, scrappy outfit, one which always forces Bucknell teams to the limit to win. Previous Bison grid elevens have held the Gallaudet team in great respect and this year should be no exception.

Fewer Children Born To Parents Having College Education

After an exhaustive research, Dr. S. J. Holmes, professor of zoology of the University of California, has announced that fewer children, in the ratio of 1 to 4, are born to parents possessing a college education than to parents who have not attended an institution of higher learning.

The report of Dr. Homes was based on data gathered on more than 42,000 families.

He also found that a college educated wife has a smaller family than does a college educated husband; that college men tend to marry high school graduates rather than college graduates, and that the average number of brothers and sisters of the modern college youth is about 50 per cent. less than the number possessed by their parents.

Social Test Grades Frosh

The "social" test, to gauge the common sense faculties of a student in his practical contact with society, is the newest idea in the university cataloguing of entering students.

Some 1,200 freshmen of George Washington University have just been put through a test of their "social" intelligence as a guide in selecting the most useful course of studies. The test is designed to foretell the practical capacity of a student to get along in the world by being a "good mixer" and understanding his fellow man.

As a sample, one of the questions was whether the situation of a hypothetical "Harvard graduate holding a position as caretaker of a small playground" was more probably due to his being a "drunkard or drug addict," "unusually fond of children," "unwilling to take responsibility," or a "moron."

In another test the student was asked to name the emotions registered by motion picture actors.

—Pittsburgh Post.

STUDENTS GIVE TEAM SENDOFF

About 200 students showed their love for their Alma Mater, when they left their warm and comfortable quarters on Friday morning at 7 o'clock and assembled at the Pennsylvania station to give the Bisons a hearty send-off.

The crowd, which was composed mostly of freshmen, congregated rather slowly. Several of the students with pennants pinned on their backs, had assembled to give the boys a good send-off before starting on their hike to Washington.

When the football men had settled themselves in the car, Sheppard and Elder, two of Bucknell's cheer leaders, led the enthusiastic body in several yells. As the car was pulling out, they gave three loud yells for the team, encouraging them to fight! fight! fight!

Some girls put you in mind of a canoe. It takes so little to upset them.—Ilion REVIEW.

ORANGE AND BLUE BEAT GEORGETOWN BY KICK

deciding factor in the victory. Goodwin outdistanced Hagerty and was far more consistent in the placement of his punts. This, of course, forced Georgetown back. She was obliged to rush the ball in order to make ground lost on punt exchanges. The result was frequent Georgetown fumbling and Bucknell recovery. Bucknell could wait for the breaks, while Georgetown was forced to fight her way out. Had Hagerty been outpunting Goodwin, Blaisdell could not have used his heady naval tactics. Kostos' block of Hagerty's kick on the fifteen-yard line and the recovery by Magee also stood out.

For Georgetown the offensive work of "Tony" Plansky excelled. Several times on short end runs he tore off twenty-yard gains. Through the center of the line, however, Georgetown backs could gain not an inch. Insecure footing made it a relatively easy matter to block out the ends so that the greatest gains were made around the wings.

Running Account Of The Game

Bucknell lost the toss and was forced to defend the goal in front of which stretched the mucky base paths. Trimmer kicked off to the Georgetown twenty-five-yard line, and Hagerty ran to the forty before he was downed. Punts were exchanged and O'Neil scampered back to midfield. Bucknell held and Gormley kicked out of bounds, giving Bucknell the ball on the twenty-yard mark.

The two Goodwins made four yards in two downs and then Myrl punted. Hagerty and Metzger crashed through for first down. Georgetown punted. Myrl Goodwin was thrown for a two-yard loss but on the next play Sid broke through left tackle for thirteen yards and a first down.

M. Goodwin fumbled and Georgetown recovered on the Bucknell twenty-two yard line. This was the first threat of the game but, after two rushes it was Georgetown's turn to fumble and Trimmer recovered on his own thirteen-yard line. Goodwin, standing to the left of the goal posts for a kick, muffed the slippery ball. It caromed to the right and two Georgetown players recoiled from the goal posts as they dived for the elusive pigskin. Blaisdell jumped full length for the ball and grasped it as he was tackled, but again it slipped away like a piece of soap. His other arm shot out, circled around the oval and tucked it close to his side as a diving Georgetown player hit the mire in the place where the ball had been. The score was Georgetown 2, Bucknell 0.

Bihl threw Metzger for a two-yard loss as the period ended.

Second Period

O'Neil opened the second period with a twelve-yard end dash. Kostos threw him on the next play for a two-yard loss and Bucknell held. Blaisdell returned Georgetown's punt to the twenty-five-yard line where Goodwin fumbled again. Jawish recovered. The Blue shone with more luster than the Gold.

The line held and Goodwin made up for his fumble by recovering the punt after Gormley had touched it. Goodwin punted again and again Gormley fumbled. Blaisdell recovered on the Georgetown four-yard line but three yards were deducted for the distance slid when Bill was tackled after recovering the ball.

In this position Blaisdell was unable to gain. Goodwin made two feet and then Myrl pushed across the line but the referee declared that Stephens was off-side and the play was recalled and the team penalized. Trimmer dropped back and place-kicked the goal. Score, Bucknell 3, Georgetown 2.

Georgetown immediately started an offensive that brought the ball to the Bucknell twenty-three-yard line after a twenty-yard dash by Plansky. Then Plansky fumbled on a play that had been intended for an attempt for goal and Bucknell recovered just before the half ended.

Third Period

Gormley returned the kick-off to the thirty-five-yard line and Plansky added two gains of twenty and eight yards respectively. Karmilowicz was sent in for Bihl. Bucknell obtained the ball on a fumble and an exchange of punts followed by the recovery of a fumble by Blaisdell gave Bucknell the ball in mid-field. Another exchange of punts forced Georgetown back to her twelve-yard line. Then Magee recovered a fumble.

Tuck was substituted for Sid Goodwin after the latter had been thrown five yards back of the scrimmage line. Diehl crashed the line for three yards and Myrl Goodwin followed with two.

Then Trimmer dropped back for a placement kick but Blaisdell fumbled the pass for an instant and, as he was being tackled, shot the ball to Trimmer who in turn threw it to Goodwin. Goodwin started to circle the end, and in the scurry he was almost free but a Georgetown man stopped him.

After a line buck Georgetown attempted to kick but Kostos broke through and blocked the ball. Magee recovered on the twelve-yard line. Goodwin recovered a fumble for a three-yard loss and Diehl regained two through center. Trimmer's placement went wide.

Finally Georgetown resorted to the aerial game and rushed the ball to midfield before the close of the game. Penalties also figured in this march.

Two Pennsylvania Fraternities Celebrating 75th Year

Zeta Psi and Phi Kappa Sigma, national fraternities on the campus of the University of Pennsylvania, are this year celebrating their seventy-fifth anniversary of continuous existence on the Penn campus.

The Sigma chapter of Zeta Psi was established at Penn on September 4, 1850, and Phi Kappa Sigma's first chapter at the university began work on October 19 of the same year.

There are thirty-one national fraternities at the University of Pennsylvania which are members of the interfraternity council. In addition to these, there are approximately forty other fraternities, national and local, not members of the council.

Foreign College Women Abroad Eschew Cosmetics

Dr. Lillian Welch, professor emeritus of physiology and hygiene at Goucher College, in the course of an address to the student body recently said the use of cosmetics was not in evidence among university women of foreign countries. Rouge and lipsticks are being discarded even in Paris, according to Dr. Welch, who visited the French capital during her recent trip abroad.

University women are taking the lead everywhere in Europe, she asserted.

Sirry, Best Athlete Of Cairo Is Frosh At Penn State

The best athlete of Cairo, Egypt, Musa Ismael Sirry, is enrolled as a freshman at Penn State. He is a former student of the American University of Cairo, and for two years was captain of the Cairo Rugby football team. When Cairo officials forwarded Sirry's application for matriculation at Penn State, they stated he was the best athlete in Cairo.

Foreign students have previously made good in athletics at Penn State. Several years ago, Katsutoshi Naito, a Japanese, was captain of the wrestling team and held the intercollegiate 135-pound championship. This year, Ramon Gil, a Porto Rican student, is the soccer leader.

Sidelights From Sidelines

In the grand-stands a sprinkling of George Washington rooters were cheering as lustily for the Bison as any ardent Bucknell undergrad.

In the game it seemed as though the President must have blessed Trimmer's toe instead of grasping his hand for Trimmer and thirteen other Bisons trimmed 'er right.

Previous to the game the writer spent some time at Georgetown University and found the concensus to be that the Georgetown team was on a par with her 1916 team, the greatest she ever produced. That team defeated Bucknell 78 to 0. Abominable mathematics in our opinion!

Bucknell had two rooters at Washington of whom most of the followers of the Orange and Blue had little knowledge. All togged up in Bucknell jerseys, the son of "Dutch" Ruether, Washington's pitching ace, and the young brother of "Goose" Goslin, hard hitting outfielder, made a great hit with the boys on the team.

How's this for one from the coaching staff? When the burley Bellefonte backs were tearing through the yearling line last week, one of the spectators remarked to Coach Chinn, Frosh mentor, "Say, those backs are going through that line like a sieve."

"A sieve," drawled Chinn, in his Kentucky brogue. "Two sieves—one wouldn't let them through that fast."

While in Washington Saturday morning, before the Georgetown game, Johnny Howard of the Bucknell team secured an interview with the President, through Congressman McGregor. The Republicans made another invasion of the "solid South" when the Goodwin boys and Trimmer, who accompanied Johnny as a bodyguard, slipped "Cal" the grip.

At about twelve-thirty the writer and a friend stumbled into the Georgetown dormitories and were bunked in the fifth story, where the Georgetown students sleep to work off demerits. Lying half awake the next morning, we heard the students saying, "Did you hear those Bucknell men come in last night? Must have been fifty of them." We didn't realize that we were making so much noise that night but we do know that the voice of every Bucknellian in the stands that afternoon was as the voice of fifty.

Bucknell could have the best rooting in the country if each student would yell as vociferously in the Stadium as that little band of ardent supporters did in Washington.

Football Chatter

Bucknell students and all others who are interested in the Orange and Blue squad will find an interesting article on the team in the Sunday Public Ledger of October 25. The account was written by Stoney McLinn, well known Philadelphia sports writer, who made a trip to Lewisburg especially to interview Coach Moran and see the Bison gridders in drill.

Together with a two column write-up and several pictures of "Uncle" Charlie and individual players, statistics concerning each member of the squad are given. The last alone is well worth the price of the paper and tells everything worth knowing about the team. It is an article of value for future reference. If you have not read the article buy a copy of the Ledger and clip out the writeup. You won't regret the effort or the money.

Several interesting extracts from the article are: "Bill Blaisdell is one of those sprinting, pivoting backs of the Red Grange type";—Trimmer and McCormick are virtually sure-fire field goal kickers when the target is in their range";—"Sid Goodwin displayed skill and football instinct that made him a regular halfback."

Probably the most significant of his statements was—"Next year, with this season's freshmen on the varsity squad, watch those Bisons tear." We heartily agree with you Mr. McLinn, but we also respectfully request that you watch those Bisons tear this season.

Reports so far indicate that it will be especially hard to get the Navy's goat this year. The Middies have a revamped outfit and are causing all sorts of trouble for their ambitious opponents. Princeton succeeded in breaking even with the sailors a few weeks ago, however. A field goal by each side constituted the scoring for both elevens.

Detroit should cause no great worry in the Orange and Blue camp. The Michigan gridders were trimmed decisively 24 to 0 some time ago by Georgetown in the westerners own back yard. The 3-2 victory of the Bisons over Georgetown certainly is enough to insure at least a creditable showing against Detroit, whom we meet in the Turkey Day contest at Detroit.

Greek and Latin Study Increasing

"Reports from many colleges in the United States indicate that interest in the classics is increasing," says Dean Andrew F. West, of the Princeton graduate school, and president of the American Classical League.

Statistics compiled by the League indicate that in the colleges 50,000 students are taking Latin and 20,000 taking Greek courses.

Chinese Military Students Object To War Orders

Induced by Bolshevist leaders to undergo military training, students of Kwangtung University, Canton, China, are protesting against a proposal that they be drafted into the "red" army for active service.

Believing the military instruction they were receiving was merely a form of physical training, the students at first took keenly to the idea, but they now resent the suggestion that they go into active service in Southern Kwangtung against opposing military forces. Parents threaten to take their children from the university unless the scheme for sending them "to war" is abandoned.

HOLY CROSS BEATS BUCKNELL BISONS BY SCORE OF 23-7

Opponents Make Two Forty Yard Passes For Touch Downs During Game

Bisons Score In Third

Holy Cross, tamers of old "John Harvard," lowered the color of the Bison in the first defeat of the season by the score of 23 to 7 at Worcester last Saturday. The score however does not indicate the true nature of the struggle. Although the Holy Cross team of last Saturday was a more alert team, and a better team than the Bison placed upon the field, the Massachusetts' eleven knew they were in a struggle and would have been lucky to come off with a victory had the Bisons played the ball of which they are capable.

In the previous games Bucknell's defense rested in her hard-tackling backfield, the opposition of the line was questionable. Saturday however the tables were reversed, the backfield crumbled and the line throwing raw bone and sinew in their stand, formed an impassable barrier. Only once did a Holy Cross back break through for more than five yards, and that time Weis was able to pound out but seven. Two of the Holy Cross touchdowns were made on passes of forty yards, the other by a wide end run of twenty-five yards by Kitteride.

On the second play of the game M. Goodwin sustained a bump which made it impossible for him to turn his head. He played the remainder of the game with neck stiff and shoulders hunched, and in that condition outkicked Crowley on an average of five yards per punt. Blaisdell too played a good portion of the game with a gash over his eye. Defensively Kostos, Magee, Trimmer, and Diehl played well for Bucknell.

Alertness of the whole Holy Cross team defeated Bucknell. The team from Massachusetts attempted but three forward passes, two of which were successful and resulted in touchdowns gaining 45 and 48 yards respectively. Bucknell blocked four kicks but was able to recover only one while Holy Cross blocked only one and recovered it in position to score. Each team made three fumbles but Holy Cross recovered all three times when her own backs muffed the ball and twice when Bucknell let the pigskin slip. Both of these fumbles resulted directly in touchdowns for the Catholic school. Therein lies the tale of Bucknell's defeat. On straight statistics the Worcester team might be counted one touchdown better than Bucknell. Statistics, however, mean little to the official scorer.

Bucknell started off with an attack that made the Crusaders look as though they were participating in a track meet. Merle Goodwin, catching Crowley's kickoff on the ten-yard line, shook off the whole Worcester team with the exception of the safety man on the Holy Cross 40-yard mark. Diehl was coming from behind to take him out, but Goodwin could not see him. He paused to side step and was downed on the spot. Toward the end of the quarter Diehl fumbled on his 45-yard mark and Lynch recovered for Holy Cross. On the next play McMahon flung a pass far out to Wallis, who jumped up between three Buck-

FROSH WEARS BIRD CAGE FOR REFUSING TO SPEAK

Four freshmen, Bachman, Heckman, Cerine, and Rhone were discovered in the Inn on Monday evening after nine o'clock and were made to reort to the council for the offense. Rhone was also charged with not speaking, and has had his head installed in a bird cage through which he must speak to everybody.

Strahan, for fussing, must don a Tuxedo and dink, and must act as butler for the "Sem" girls by opening and closing the front door for them on Wednesday and Friday from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Faul was accused of making repeated excessive disturbances in the halls, and must tie a rope about his belt with seven tin cans trailing on the ground behind him, and wear a sign, "Canned for being noisy."

Dr. Foster To Stress Personal Evangelism

Prominent Student Worker Coming To Talk on Life Problems

Dr. Allen K. Foster, a prominent student worker who visited Bucknell in 1922 and 1925, will return next Monday to spend a week with the students of the University. He will discuss many of the problems vital to student life. Dr. Foster has been sent by the Baptist Educational Society of the Northern Baptist Convention to visit many colleges in America in order to establish closer contact with students. His sojourn at Bucknell is in charge of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.

Dr. Foster will arrive in Lewisburg Monday, and he expects to visit every fraternity on the campus, for he is the type of man who delights in informal talks through which he can leave some definite impressions. Various fraternities plan to have him at least one meal during the week.

Dr. Foster will address the junior-sophomore chapel on Tuesday and the freshman chapel on Thursday. It is planned to have short meetings each night in Bucknell Hall so that everybody will have an opportunity to hear and talk with him.

Dr. Foster will also address the religious education and sociology classes. Professors Bond and Groner have come in contact with Dr. Foster. Professor Bond said: "Of all the men who visited Ohio State during my stay there, I believe that Dr. Foster left the most lasting impression of any speaker of his type."

Dr. Foster plans to stress "personal evangelism" in his informal talks, and anyone who heard him when he visited Bucknell several years ago will welcome the opportunity to hear him again. Dr. Foster is a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Dr. Brown Attends Chemical Exposition

Sees Exhibit of Chemical Products Which Alumni Helped Make

On the night of Friday, October 2, Dr. Glenn V. Brown, the head of the chemical engineering department, was entertained at an informal meeting of sixteen chemical and two electrical graduate engineers at the Chemical Exposition held in New York City.

Dr. Brown went to the Exposition on October 1, and knowing that he was coming there, the chemical engineer alumni in the vicinity of New York City called this meeting.

One of the most notable features of the Exposition was the Chemical Hall of Achievement, in which were placed representative samples of the most outstanding products which had been produced by the chemical industries in the past two years. There were twenty-two such exhibits.

It was found that at least five of these products had had Bucknell chemical engineering alumni working on them in one or more stages of their development. The sixth and most important feature had been worked out entirely through the direct supervision of a Bucknell chemical engineer of the class of '13.

The exhibit next in importance on that floor and contiguous to the Chemical Hall of Fame was an exhibit of the Henry Ford Motor Co. The greater part of this exhibit was a large model in detail of the By-product Coke Works of Detroit. Another chemical engineer of the class of '13 was assistant superintendent of that plant.

This was a real get-together meeting and was thoroughly enjoyed by all of the men.

Among those present were: A. W. Keen, '13, research engineer with the U. S. Rubber Co.; Malcolm Buffington, '15, development chemical engineer with the Duratex Engineering Co., Newark, N. J.; Homer H. Smith, '15, the head of the analytical research

Story Telling Violinist, Mme Lhevinne, Pleases Large Audience at Concert

PLAYS ON OLD CREMONA VIOLIN MADE IN 1715 WHICH HAD BEEN OWNED BY DONIZETTI, MOZART, AND PAGANINI

A fuzzy-headed, six-year-old boy, far away in California, appeared vividly before a Lewisburg audience in the spirit of his mother's violin last Monday evening, at a concert given by Estelle Gray-Lhevinne in the Baptist church. This concert was the second number of the annual Lewisburg Artist Course.

Mme. Lhevinne, distinguished "story telling violinist," accompanied by her husband, James Gray, gave one of the most pleasing concerts ever presented at Lewisburg. Her program consisted of famous classics and her own compositions. "My Song of California" was one of the latter. It had been written on Thanksgiving morning in honor of her tiny son, and was filled with the spirit of mother-love. "Twilight" depicted a typical twilight seen across San Francisco bay from Mme. Lhevinne's home. "The Heart of My Opal," the third of the artist's compositions, was dedicated to the Red Cross, and had been played before Woodrow Wilson.

Mme. Lhevinne told her audience that she had practiced three mesures of Sarasate's "Spanish Fandango" for eight months to get a certain turn of the wrist. She went out into the woods with her pony and dogs, and there mastered the difficult movement.

Miss Lhevinne's instrument has a remarkable history. The violin was made in 1715, and has been owned and played upon by Donizetti, Mozart, and Paganini. It is smaller than the ordinary—an undersize made for a hand that cannot reach an octave on the piano.

The program of the concert was as follows:

Mme. Gray-Lhevinne Who Appeared in Concert

Story of the Old Cremona
Adagio Pathetique ..... Godard
Concerto Romantique, Opus 35, Godard
Les Petites Rieus ..... Mozart
Spanish Fandango ..... Sarasate
Zephyr ..... Ruboy
Danse Macabre ..... Saint-Saens
Songs With Original Poems
The Heart of My Opal..Gray-Lhevinne
My Song of California
Fantasio Appassionata ....Vieuxtemps

Among encores were a minuet by Hayden, and Irish lilt, composed in the fifteenth century, and a humorous French composition, The Cat and the Mice. The presence of a maltese cat was the inspiration for this last number.

Students "See" Spain At Sprague Travel-talk

Like the Alhambra, the Escoriado, And Segovia's Aqueduct

Professor F. A. Sprague, of the Department of Romance Languages, conducted a very interesting lantern-slide tour through Spain on Thursday evening, October 29, in Commencement Hall, before a group of approximately 150 persons.

The slides were excellent as to choice and quality, and Professor Sprague's explanation of them made them very real and familiar. The trip took the "tourists" from Bilbao on the north coast of Spain, down through Leon, Segovia, Madrid, Cordoba, Seville, to Cadiz and Gibraltar; then up the east side of the country through Granada and Valencia to Barcelona.

The first pictures illustrated the primitive farming methods used in northern Spain. In these pictures the women were doing the heavy labor, cutting the grain with their clumsy sickles, or binding it and loading it on the primitive ox-carts.

The main feature of Bilbao, visited first, is a "flying ferry," a transport across the river suspended from a large moving overhead crane. From Bilbao the road led southwest to Leon, the site of a magnificent cathedral, built by the early Spanish Christians.

Judging Champion Member Frosh Class

Penn State Grad Sends Snodgrass To B. U. Because We Develop "Many Capable Men."

The following letter, signed by the county agent of Hartford county, Maryland, tells its own story so well that we print it verbatim, without comment. It was received by Registrar H. W. Holter.

"To the Committee on Admissions:
Gentlemen::

In behalf of Hubert Snodgrass of Street, Maryland, whose application for admission you will receive on Monday, September 14, I would like to say that Hubert has been an Agricultural Club boy in Harford County, Maryland, of which I have been county agent for several years. In 1920, Hubert became interested in dairy cattle judging, making the county team in 1921, then going to the state contest in 1922, where he and his two team mates were successful in defeating 51 boys. This entitled him and his team mates to go to the National Dairy Show, where they were in competition with boys from 37 states, where they were successful in winning first place. In figuring back the totals, we feel that these three boys were successful in defeating approximately 18,000 boys in Dairy Cattle Judging.

"Sem" Girls May Hold Saturday Tea Dances

Dean Clark's Consent Announced At Special W. S. G. A. Meeting

A special Student Government meeting was held in the living room at the Women's College Monday evening, October 26, for the purpose of electing a delegate to represent the Women's Student Government Association of Bucknell at the convention to be held at Wellesley. A great many of the girls were unable to be present at the meeting, so the business was confined to nominations for the position of delegate, and the election postponed until the following Thursday evening. The nominees were Anne Outwater, Amy Haldeman, Fern MacNeal, Grace Millhous, and Kathryn Smith. At the meeting which took place on Thursday, October 29, Anne Outwater was elected by a large majority.

The president of the Women's Student Government Association, Irene Bell, announced that Dean Clark had consented to let the girls hold teadances or "Vic" dances in the living room on Saturday afternoon. Of course it would be manifestly impossible for all the inhabitants of the "Sem" and their gentlemen friends to dance in the living room at one and the same time, so Dean Clark recommended that the dances be held by groups of girls, perhaps by classes or by "sister classes". Needless to say, this announcement met with enthusiastic approval.

It was also decided that dues of $1.00 should be paid yearly by each girl, instead of having a committee try to collect ten cents or so from every one every time there was anything to be paid for. It is believed that this plan will be easier on the collecting committees, and also more fair to the girls who are always willing to pay their share.

B. U. Awarded Medal By Serbian Red Cross

Given To University For Caring For Two Serbian Students

The University was recently granted an unexpected honor when a certificate and medal were awarded by the Serbian Red Cross. The occasion of the award was a reception for President Hurt in the New York apartment of Dr. Rosalie S. Morton.

Miss Morton was active in Red Cross work on the Serbian front during the World War and since that time has been connected with the Serbian Red Cross. It was through her efforts that several years ago the University agreed to take care of Serbian students who were sent here. Two were sent. The first, a young woman, left after a few weeks on account of ill health. The second remained for two years.

On a recent visit to Serbia, Miss Morton expressed to the authorities there her appreciation of the kindness shown her at Bucknell and said that it was largely by the reception given her here that she was encouraged to continue her work for the Serbian students in this country.

The presentation of the medal and certificate were made by the Serbian Consul General. The reception was a rather cosmopolitan gathering including several Danish ladies, the Consul General, Dr. Swartz, Mr. and Mrs. Kelchner, and Mrs. Frank Goodchild, Institute '84. Dr. Hunt received the decoration for the University and the formal salutation of the Consul General was bestowed upon him.

The certificate and the medal have been framed and are now on display in the Library.

ROUSING SEND-OFF FOR TEAM

Two hundred students, fired with the spirit of a thousand, gave the Bison eleven a rousing send-off Thursday afternoon upon their departure for Worcester.

The "Semites" were at the Pennsylvania station in numbers almost equal to the men, and added materially to the cheering which was led by Elder. The snappy October air, the high spirits, and the good-fellowship of all, combined to assure the team of the whole-hearted and unanimous backing of the student body.

STUDENTS DISCUSS WORLD COURT PLAN; MEET, HARRISBURG

Hear Morgan Jones, M. P., Lieut. Alden G. Alley, And Governor Sweet

American Backing Needed

One of the regional conferences for the discussion of the entrance of the United States into the Permanent Court of International Justice, commonly called the World Court, was held in Harrisburg recently with delegates frm seven colleges in attendance. The conference was one of the many that are being held throughout the country in preparation for the nation-wide collegiate poll that is to be taken on the subject during the early part of December. The poll itself is aimed to reveal to the Senate or the United States the tendency among th college men of the country, regarding international problems.

The conference at Harrisburg was the opening step in this region for a series of meetings that are to be held all over the nation for the purpose of finding out what students think about our international problems. It was called by the representatives of the Council of Christian Associations and attempted in the first place to find out just how much interest the student bodies of the country have in such matters. In order to do this the early conferences were composed of Christian Associatin leaders. Student Government representatives, college editors, and leaders of other organizations, such as debating, who might have information on the subject.

Bucknell was represented by Ray Edwards, Y. M. C. A. president; Anna VanDine, Y. W. C. A. president; Mildred Marshall for the women's debaters; Carl Hile of the men's debating team; Catharine Frederick and Sarah Pentz for the Women's Student Government Association; and Eugene Carstater, for the Bucknellian.

Several speakers of prominence addressed the group. Governor Sweet of Colorado and Lieut. Alden G. Alley, U. S. A., were the speakers at the opening meeting held Friday evening, October 30. They gave a general outline of European conditions that had given rise to the formation of the World Court, stated the manner of its organization, the plans of entrance that have been proposed and some of the objections that have been raised. Lieut. Alley's talk was particularly clear, pointing out that the world has now become a neighborhood of nations in which, unless some governmental force is created, a condition of anarchy will exist. His clear and practical treatment of the position of the United States in international affairs, of the Leaue of Nations, and of the Court itself was the key message of the conference.

The following morning Mr. Morgan Jones, a labor member of the British Parliament and formerly an undersecretary in the MacDonald cabinet addressed the assembly and made plain the European outlook in international relations, urging that all Europe is astounded at the aloofness of the United States in the measures that have been taken since the war while they hesitate to go ahead when America is standing by. He emphasized the great moral support that American participation would give to

Y. Ps. INDOOR STRAW RIDE FOOLS THE WEATHER MAN

The Presbyterian Young People's straw ride to White Deer on Saturday, October 24, almost dissolved in the rain that fell all day, but it was saved from complete dissolution by taking refuge in the church, where what looked at first like a dismal and soggy failure was turned into a very enjoyable party. Perhaps coffee and "doggies" did not taste as good as they would have, if eaten outdoors, but everything has its compensations—it was much more convenient to cook them in the church kitchen. The time after lunch was passed in playing games suited to an indoor "straw ride," and when two-thirty arrived, the company left for the grid-graph, feeling that they had fooled the weather man and had a good time anyway.

"Coze" Seeman, agent for the L. G. Balfour Company, visited his brothers for both profit and pleasure during the past week-end.

The Sigma Chi eleven is preparing for a game with the Milton High School team, to be played on Armistice day.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Mrs. Rivenburg and her daughter, Jean, were dinner guests recently.

KAPPA SIGMA

Cyrus Holfa, '23, made a short visit with the boys at the house last week

Alpha, the chapter canine, has returned after a long absence and appears to be delighted to be among friends again.

DELTA SIGMA

T. Burns Drum attended the Oxford-F. and M. Debate in Lancaster last week.

The "Dentie" Hallowe'en dance held Saturday evening, proved to be a great success. The couples danced in the light of large orange moons hung at the ends of each room. A program of snappy music was furnished by the Campus Serenaders. During intermission pumpkin pie was served.

Mrs. Jennie Phillips and some of the boys' "Sem" friends were guests of Delta Sigma at dinner Sunday.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Visitors at the Lambda Chi Alpha house Friday included Mr. McDowell and Mr. Brown of Burnside, Pa. Mr. Brown is the father of Brother Harold Brown, '26. The men motored to Lewisburg during the heavy snowstorm of Friday morning.

Brother Nicholson, ex-'27, has sent word that he expects to visit the chapter for a short time in February.

Brothers "Bill" Strong and "X" Valentine left early Friday morning for Worcester, Mass. They were using the former's "Gas Buggy" for locomotion.

"Unk" Bailey acted as coach for the freshman team that taunted the sophomores for an hour last Saturday.

The chapter is planning a dance for the evening of November 6.

ALPHA CHI MU

Among those dates of great events to be recorded in the history of Bucknell, Father Time must hesitate long enough to inscribe the memorable date, October 31, 1925, for, in the evening of that never-to-be-forgotten day, the Hallowe'en spirit of gayety reigned supreme in the realm of Alpha Chi Mu, as the fraternity, in holding its initial dance in the history of its life on the campus, stepped boldly into the limelight to introduce itself into the social life of the University.

Gay costumes of every description, race, and origin were worn by bold Spanish toreadors, fair senoritas, George and Martha Washingtons, cowpunchers, Turks, clowns, China dolls, even an exquisite little West Point cadets, who glided over the floor to the strains of Noble's Orchestra, the snappy efforts of which gave the occasion its mark of "par excellence."

Mrs. Walter McCracken, Miss Lulu Coe, and Miss Kathryn Clush acted as chaperones for the evening.

On Tuesday, October 27, a memorial service was held at the house in commemoration of Brother Charles Bathein. Dr. Hunt attended the service and spoke of the close friendship which he had had with Charley while the latter was at Bucknell. Every man who was present at that service will always remember Dr. Hunt's story of the closing hour of the life of Charles BaThein.

Local fans have picked Harold Jordan for the All-American team after witnessing his flashy performance in the annual Frosh-Soph tangle last Saturday.

The fraternity is shrouded in mystery following "Judge" Bennett's sudden disappearance from the house on election day. He was last seen heading rapidly in the direction of Port Matilda, Pennsylvania.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

"Red" Weckerly and Pledge Pastorious spent the week-end in western Pennsylvania, "Red" stopping at Dubois and "Pat" at Titusville.

"Jeff" Thomas sojourned at Wyoming on Friday and Saturday.

Ray Edwards and Carl Hile attended the Y. M. C. A. World Court Discussion at Harrisburg, Friday and Saturday. The conference must have been a bowling success, for "Leetle Carl" returned all excited about a petite red-headed violinist whom he had met.

"Herbie" Slack got back from Worcester, Mass., early Monday morning. After seeing the Holy Cross game, "Herbie" visited the boys at Beta Alpha chapter, Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Hile, Edwards, and Merwin were the leaders for three successive Sunday at the local Methodist Epworth League.

Ray Daggs, Arland Cooper, and Richard Vastine attended a Hallowe'en dance at the nurses' home of Geisinger Memorial Hospital at Danville last Friday night.

BETA KAPPA

Among the folks taking part in the exodus for home towns during the past week-end were Harlan Downer, William Brown, Thomas Young, Kenneth McGinnis, and Paul Johnston.

Brother Carstater attended the meeting of the World Court Committee of the Council of Christian Associations in Harrisburg, Saturday and Sunday.

Gordon Throne recently went out squirrel hunting. He said that he got so many that he didn't want to discriminate against any of them and so threw all away. It sounds almost like a fish story.

John Fisher has been elected manager of the chapter basketball team for the year. He is looking for games now.

Eta of Beta Kappa announces the pledging of R. N. Tate, '29, of Allenwood, Pa.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

Allen Rarig, '29, was greeted by his mother and several other relatives who visited the house recently.

Walter Hufnagle, '27, Herbert Grundy, '27, and Daniel Calvert, '27, motored to Penn State a week ago Saturday and attended the dance held by the sister chater there.

The formal installation into the Phi Lambda Theta fraternity took place at the house on Saturday evening, October 31.

A formal opening "Sem" dance will be staged at the house on Friday evening November 6. Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders have been secured for th occasion.

PI BETA PHI

Pennsylvania Beta takes pleasure in announcing that Mrs. J. Warren Davis, of Trenton, N. J., has become a patroness of Pi Beta Phi.

The magazine section of the Philadelphia Ledger for November 1 has a special illustrated page-article about the work of Mary R. Harris, '94. Dr. Harris, head of the new Federal Industrial Farm for Women at Alderson, W. Va., discusses the increase of 400 per cent. in the number of women Federal offenders in the past ten years, and the causes which have produced these women criminals.

Mrs. Lewis E. Theiss, president of the local Pi Beta Phi alumnae club, on October 31 entertained the active members of the club at luncheon at "Otzinachson." The October meeting of the club followed. Irene Bell, who had been chapter delegate to the fraternity's Canadian convention in June, gave her report. Among the members present were five alumnae who had represented the Bucknell chapter at national conventions or had served as national officers of Pi Beta Phi.

PHI MU

A Hallowe'en party at a cabin in the mountains eighteen miles away from Lewisburg was given to the pledges of Phi Mu, Saturday afternoon and evening.

The chaperones, Mrs. Saie and Mrs. Beatty, with some of the girls, made the trip in private cars. The others followed in a truck. The time on the truck was spent in admiring the costumes and singing songs to the accompaniment of several "ukes."

At five-thirty the driver of the truck stopped and pointed out the cabin, from the chimney of which smoke was rising. Everybody "piled out" and rushed to the cabin where each was greeted by some of the girls who had arrived earlier in the afternoon.

Great black cats and ghosts in white,
Come a-snooping into sight;
Witches flying 'round full moons,
Graveyard spooks behind the tombs,
Jack O'Lanterns grin with glee
At the gray owls in the tree;
Apples roasting, chestnuts pop
Telling fortunes as they hop.
Figures queerest ever seen
Join the fun on Hallowe'en.

Savory smells came from the kitchen. Twenty minutes later a steaming dish of baked beans, a platter of "hot dogs," a plate of rolls, pickles, coffee, cider, and doughnuts, were placed on the table. The meal was served cafeteria style and the fireplace seemed to be the point at which all of the girls wanted to be.

The evening was spent in dancing and telling stories. Mrs. Sale told a hair-raising ghost story. The pledges gave a clever skit, "Docey Whyte's Public Speaking Class," with Anne Griffith in the title role. Betty McHose and Esther Heritage each gave a monologue.

At nine o'clock the party broke up to return to the "Sem."

KAPPA GAMMA

Kappa Gamma takes pleasure in announcing the pledging of William O'Neil, '29, of Kingston, Penna.

Brothers Timm, Krajeski and Gillespie spent the week-end at Hartleton. They report a hilarious time.

Wanted! a Sherlock Holmes to investigate the secrecy of their usual visits there.

Friends of F. Bawiec visited the fraternity on Sunday.

The pledges of Kappa Gamma held a smoker and Hallowe'en party in honor of the active chapter. Smokes, pretzels, and cider were indulged in. Pledge Kerwan sang "La Paloma" in Spanish. Pledge Cieri entertained the members with a humorous interpretation of an Italian witnessing his first baseball game. Tom Murphy made things interesting with his Irish jokes.

Frill and Frown Holds Gay Hallowe'en Party

Edythe Evans, '09, Receives Prize For Most Beautiful Costume

Colonial ladies, gypsies, Chinamen, Japanese, Indians, prison convicts, and various other characters invaded the "Sem" on Friday evening, October 30, and made merry at the annual Hallowe'en party given under the auspices of Frill and Frown.

The entire evening was given over to this celebration, a noteworthy event in the life of the "Semites." Dinner, at six, was a gay affair. Each class had a corner of the dining room to itself, and had its tables becomingly decorated with pumpkins and candles and orang and black festoons. During the meal, each class sang and cheered for itself and its sister class. Frill and Frown members, dressed in their colors, yellow and green, had a table to themselves and sang a number of clever songs. Quite a controversy raged between the sophomores and freshmen on the subject of freshmen behavior.

Frill and Frown had charge of the party in the "gym" after dinner. The revellers were led through darkened halls peopled with ghosts, up to the "gym", where, after the grand march and several lively dances, the prizes were awarded. Edythe Evans, '09, received the first prize, a vanity case, for the most beautiful costume, and Rhoda Herr was given honorable mention. Miss Evans wore a striking colonial dress of yellow, with black lace collar. Second prize, a box of candy, for the most original costume, was divided between Doris Worrell and Sarah Meyers. Eleanor Miller received honorable mention. Miss Worrelll, in an evening dress made entirely of pennants, represented Intercollegiate Sal, while Miss Meyer very cleverly represented a French doll.

"The Ghost Story," by Booth Tarkington, was presented by Frill and Frown. Betty Haslam took the part of the leading man, George, who had something very important to tell to the heroine, but seemed to have quite a bit of difficulty in getting it said. Eleanor Dakin was the leading lady. Edna Watson, Elizabeth Lawson, and Helen Williams, as modern college boys, made a big hit.

Refreshments, consisting of cider and pretzels, were served.

Violence Wins

Albert—"What's the difference between a drama and a melodrama?"

Bernard—"Well, in a drama the heroine merely throws the villian over. In a melodrama, she throws him over the cliff!"

Parrakeet.

"What is an opportunist?"

"One who meets the wolf at the door and appears the next day in a fur coat."

Any father would trust his daughter out with young fellows if he could forget the kind of a young fellow he was.

Bucknell students will be interested to hear that Bishop McDowell, the resident bishop at Washington D. C., will be at the Methodist church on November 8.

Mr. and Mrs. Creighton M. Konkle recently visited their daughter, Mary Konkle, '27. Mr. Konkle is a Sigma Chi from Bucknell and Mrs. Konkle is a Bucknell Pi Phi.

"Joe" Williams and "Heck" Pierson "did" Washington in two hours on the day of the Georgetown game, including in their itinerary the climbing of the Washington monument.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper, Brockport, N. Y., visited their daughter Ora Louise, '29. Mr. Cooper, known in college days as "Happy" Cooper, is a Sigma Chi from Bucknell and a former football star.

Perhaps Bucknell's most collegiate man is none other than Instructor Robert C. Harris who hails from the University of Indiana. Oxford bags and a broad-brimmed hat are to be seen at various hours on the hill.

Phoebe Bloomfield, '27, last summer went with the women's story telling club of Williamsport, to Buttonwood, Pa., to help entertain the little ones at an old farm which had been remodeled to care for undernourished children.

"The Mayor and the Manicure," by George Ade, noted Hoosier humorist, has been definitely selected as "Cap and Dagger's" vehicle in the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Dramatic Union tournament, to be held at Penn State, December 3 and 4. The tentative cast is Geraldine Kramer, Eleanor Dakin, Albert Lauderbaugh, and Kenneth Slifer.

A brand new college program is now under way and being tested by Clyde Roller. It is thought that it may prove invaluable in keeping students up-to-date in all classes. Here it is: early evening for recreation; eleven P. M. to three A. M. study; breakfast at 7:55 A. M.; classes from 8:00 A. M. to 12:00 M.; study afternoons. Death early!

"Ed" Nickel discovered a novel way to go to football games. He found that the railroad police were enjoying a brief strike, so he took passage in an inviting "beef-car" at West Milton, which lugged him right into Philadelphia. From there he proceeded in the legitimate collegiate manner to the Georgetown game at Washington, D. C.

In the dressing rooms of the League ball park in Washington, where Bucknell football men were resting during the half, appeared "Goose" Goslin and Reuther, two celebrities of the Washington American League ball club. Among those introduced was Johnny Howard. It seemed to be Howard's luck to shake hands with all the notables that were in the Capitol city that Saturday.

Anne Heysham, '24, was married on October 24 to Roy Schweiker, of Lansdale. The wedding took place in the Presbyterian Church of Norristown. The bride was given away by her brother, "Ted" Heysham, '25, and was married by her father, the Reverend Dr. Theodore Heysham, ex-'94 Sarah Heysham, '28, was maid of honor. All in the bridal party were Delta Delta Delta girls: Miriam Markham, '23, and Mrs. Paul Cupp, formerly Louise Benshoff, '24, who was married on September 31, were the bridesmaids.

Betty Harman and Alice Davis, recently attended a Kappa Delta banquet in New York.

Dr. J. R. Wood introduced the Bucknell Quartet at the recent New Jersey Baptist Convention upon its arrival there.

The quartet, Kushell, Jones, McCaskey, and Shuttlesworth, broadcasted at the Atlantic City wireless station, WHAR.

Miss Helen Vanvleft, Saranac Lake, was the guest of Acting Dean Amelia Clark, and Priscilla Branch, '29, last week-end.

Carl Hile, '26, was a visitor at Geisinger Memorial Hospital recently. Carl has been troubled with a bad case of astigmatism.

A memorial service for Charles Bathein was held at the Alpha Chi Mu house. Dr. Hunt and Professor Groner attended the services.

Rebecca Milliken, '25, spent Sunday, October 25, at Women's College. "Becky" is studying at Geisinger Hospital, Danville, to be a dietitian.

Jefferson Miers, '26, motored to Harrisburg during a recent week-end. On the way back his car slid off the road into a deep mud hole. He had to hire a tractor to pull it out.

Al Brenner, '28, bummed to Washington last week. The auto in which he was returning, turned over. At escaped injury as did his "buddie." The owner of the car was slightly hurt.

Frank Jones, '25, now located in New York City, notified his "Demie" brothers that sixteen of them could stay with him over night while burning to the Holy Cross game—provided they all stood up.

At the Belle Hop meeting on Tuesday, Glenn Doyle was elected exchange editor. He receives humorous magazines from all parts of the country and will cut out choice items from them for the Belle Hop.

David Thomas went to State College with his cornet a week ago Friday to play for the house parties being held there. We can now account for the static that ruined our radio concerts Friday and Saturday nights.

The faculty is slipping. Last Thursday there were but thirteen of the members in chapel—one-fifth of the whole number. Perhaps the introduction of a cut system would aid matters.

Miss Lulu Coe, instructor in the Music School, stayed in Lewisburg all summer teaching piano, and going to summer school. She carried four hours work in history, and psychology, which she says didn't give her much vacation.

While in Washington to see the Bucknell-Georgetown game, John Budd and David Malick took several meals in the public student dining hall, and reported a neatness, cleanliness, and refinement to be envied by the average person.

Among those who will see the Bucknell-Navy game are Goodyear, Lavers, Brenner, Gittins, Highby, Farrow, Sloan, Phillips, and Laning. They will make the trip to Annapolis in two old Fords. They hope to get there in time for the game.

Members of the Lewisburg Baptist choir surprised Professor and Mrs. Stolz by appearing at their home in Hallowe'en regalia last Wednesday evening. A party was soon in full swing, and games and dancing made the occasion one to be long remembered.

Mildred Fox, '27, had no leisurely vacation last summer by any means. She did switchboard work, filing, and figuring for the Wildman Manufacturing Co., Norristown, all summer. At the end of the summer she bought herself a handsome new Underwood typewriter.

Agnes Dunbar, and Arlene Kimball, both of the class of '27, decided that the girls at the "Sem" were not fed enough by the University, and to repair this deficiency started the Hamer Inn. They served sandwiches and cocoa every evening until a few days ago. The girls wish they would open shop again!

Dean R. H. Rivenburg and Professor J. P. Whyte were instructors at the annual institute of the teachers of Union county, which was held in the auditorium of the Mifflinburg High School last week, October 24 to 30. Professor P. G. Stolz, of the Music School, had charge of the singling and musical programs.

Who's Who at B.U.

T. Burns Drum, '26

The time-honored tale of "Abe" Lincoln's humble struggle for education, so potent in the hands of political spellbinders, finds its modern counterpart in the story of Thomas Burns Drum, product of the dingy, old, brick high school of Lewisburg. Laboring under the double handicap of being a "towner" and a professor's son, he has attained unusual prominence on the campus.

"T. B.'s" activities are indeed many and varied (to use a stock phrase) but they are most marked in the field of oratory in which he has long been an outstanding figure, serving for four years on the varsity debating team, becoming successively captain and manager of the team, and taking part in several oratorical contests in the meantime.

While a freshman he made the varsity debating team and at the same time was adjudged the winner of the Freshman Declamation Contest. The following year he won first place in the contest of the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Oratorical Union competing against representatives from Gettysburg, Franklin and Marshall, Muhlenberg, and Ursinus. He placed first in the Sophomore Oratorical Contest and was one of the members of the debating team on the World Court proposition that won eight out of its ten debates.

A severe case of pneumonia contracted during the first debate of his junior year caused him to lose a great deal of school and to discontinue debating for the remainder of the year. However he was made assistant manager of the team and succeeded to the managership at the beginning of the current session.

In his sophomore year Drum was one of the founders of the Kent Prelegal Society, an honorary club composed of pre-law students with exceptionally high averages. He was elected to the president judgeship of this society during his junior year.

Drum was elected to membership in Tau Kappa Alpha, national honorary forensic fraternity, at the close of his freshman year. Last year, in recognition of his services for the Alumni Monthly and on the staffs of L'Agenda of 1926 and the Freshman Handbook for 1928, he was elected to Pi Delta Epsilon, national collegiate journalistic fraternity. He is a member of the Delta Sigma or Demosthenean fraternity.

"T. B." has a scholastic record that he may well be proud of and he has served as an assistant in several departments. His experiences here, both in class and in his forensic efforts, will doubtless be of value to him in his chosen work, the law.

"Ad" Bealing motored home in his "flivver," last week-end.

"Ken" Slifer, our well-known sign-painter, will soon find a competitor in C. A. Weymouth Jr., of the class of '29.

Miss Christine Steinhilper, of Williamsport visited her niece, Helen Steinhilper, '29, during the week-end.

Cornelia Trowbridge, '28, spent the week-end in Philadelphia and attended the Penn-Illinois game.

Welty Grey, and Ross Ormsby drove to Worcester, Mass., to see the Holy Cross game played there last Saturday.

W. F. Wagner and Alfred G. Stoughton motored to Worcester, Mass., to witness the Bucknell-Holy Cross game at that place last Saturday. Following the game they drove to Boston where they expect to spend a few days before returning to Lewisburg.

As a special unannounced feature of the Ichevinne concert, last Monday evening, a cat very nonchalantly sauntered across the stage causing a ripple of mirth to pervade the rich cultural air of the concert hall. The ripple grew to hearty demonstrations of pent-up joy when Estelle played a weird cat song on her violin. Well, it's the little things that make life worthwhile.

N. Y. Police Prevent Ducking Of N. Y. U. Frosh

Four hundred freshmen of Washington Square College of New York University took part in the annual "Hallowe'en Ducky" in Washington Square Park October 31. The class of '26, assisted in the ritual of baptizing the "freshies" at the "Fountain of Wisdom" in the park.

Captain Thomas Cummings of the Mercer Street police station extracted a promise from the seniors that there would be no immersions, on account of the cold and inclement weather. There were seventy-five policemen on hand to see that the pledge was not broken. The "freshies" attired in kimonos and bathrobes, marched to the fountain, where they were sprinkled with water from buckets used in the baptism. After the ceremonies there was a parade around the park, with songs, and then the freshmen were the guests of the seniors at a luncheon. Similar ceremonies were conducted on the campus of New York University.

UNCONTRACTED OBLIGATIONS

In looking over the list of exchanges the editor came upon this article, written for a high school paper, evidently by a high school girl. The paper was the Dickinsonian of the William L. Dickinson High School of Jersey City, New Jersey. Written for a high school paper as it was, it nevertheless appealed to us as a message that had a wider application. That is we felt that it might be applied right here at Bucknell and in some other colleges with which we come in some contact.

Here is the article:

"When a contractor signs a contract all he is required to do is to fulfill his obligations to the letter of the contract. These are his contracted obligations. But if he is an honest and trustworthy contractor, interested in his work he will live up to the spirit as well as to the letter of his contract. This is the part which is worth while—his uncontracted obligations. The inner joy comes not so much from what he gets out of it, financially, as from what he puts into it, morally. He will find that he will succeed in life and be happy with his work to the degree that he considers his uncontracted obligations.

"The same contracts hold true in other walks of life. The employe, watching the clock for closing time, may think he is giving his employer value received. His contract states that he is to labor a certain number of hours and to accomplish a certain amount of work in that time. The employe realizes that he is fulfilling his obligations, but what greater advantages lie waiting for him if he would take an interest in matters which concern his occupation, more so than watching for the expiration of time.

"The good citizen, likewise, is required to provide for his family and care for any property which he may possess. But there is a wider field for his activities. If the citizen would interest himself in his city, state, and national affairs how much more joy he would get out of his life, and at the same time he would discover that it is his uncontracted obligations from which he receives the greatest pleasures.

"So, too, in the school life, do similar conditions exist. The student's contracted obligations are to do his best work and to do it well. When his parents send him to school and provide the means for his education they expect to receive these results, and it is his duty to conscientiously fulfill their desires.

"Like the citizen, there is a wider field for his activities. Let him interest himself in those activities for which he is fitted, and in which his keenest interest lies. Scool spirit is that which he should not lack. It can not evolve from the mass collectively, but must come first, through each individual student assuming a moral responsibility to do his share toward its accomplishment. Therefore, let him realize that his uncontracted obligations are the ones which develop a proper school spirit—a realization of the need to be physically fit, mentally alert, socially aware of what constitutes good form and good breeding and spiritually awake to the needs of a high standard of living. Thus will the student not only expect to get something out of it but he will realize that putting his spirit into it will afford him greater happiness and he will find that school is much more worth while."

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

It would appear from the showing made by the sophomores at the football game last Saturday that they need the cover of darkness to carry on their warfare against the Frosh.

We still believe in the use of class rules and occasionally having a class scrap, but we didn't believe in deceiving the freshmen.

If the sophomore class didn't want to fight the Frosh why didn't it have a meeting and decide that the scrap was too undignified for them to participate in, or make a plain declaration that the class was ready to accept a very pale shade of orange for it's standard color.

Nevertheless, the freshmen should not "get new" on account of the apparent weakness of their immediate "almost superiors." They should remember that college customs here are supported by all classes. We're chastising the class of '28 and certainly not feeling '29 on ice cream and popcorn-balls.

So many reports have come in recently saying that rooms have been "stacked" with occasionful rumors of articles missing, that we are beginning to become convinced that the college needs several policemen

The frequent childish playing with fire in the dormitories augments the need for a police force or some other protective measure such as a fire patrol or bucket brigade.

Perhaps someone wants to be given a tin helmet or large brass badge so that he may be allowed to play fire and police like we used to just after we had given up skirts for rompers.

Another conjecture might be that some one wants to try on a gray suit with stripes running crosswise. As we remember it, both arson and trucking and entering are criminal offenses.

A great number of the people who attend classes at the University will travel to Penn State to see the Notre Dame game on Saturday. On the other hand the Bucknellians will stay here and see the game with Gallaudet. When a team has to play its major engagements away from home, we should be interested enough in its progress to want to watch no matter who the opponents might be. Not only that but we owe our presence here as an act of courtesy to the Gallaudet team.

But then, when one class needs the cover of night for its actions, when the men "stack" each other's rooms and start fires where fires were never intended to be, and generally consider their own pleasure before taking even their own college into consideration, we really couldn't expect them to respond to an appeal to courtesy. "so could we?

Then it led to Segovia, one of Spain's oldest cities, which still retains its medieval appearance. The chief attraction of Segovia is the Roman aqueduct, built about 100 A. D. This aqueduct is still used for bringing water from the mountains, even though no mortar was used in its construction.

Toledo, the Gothic city of Spain important in religion and history, has many beautiful sights to offer. The old gates with their massive Gothic characteristics, and the beautiful churches of medieval origin were remarkable. Between Toledo and Madrid is situated the Escorido, built by Philip II. This pile of stone is a combined palace, administration building, and tomb. In it are contained the bodies of all the kings from the time of Philip II to the present time, with the exception of Ferdinand.

At Madrid one would be interested in the royal palace. The throne room is a work of art, beautiful draperies and large cut-glass chandeliers of great proportions adorning it. The royal dining-room is also very attractive. A few pictures of the bull fights were shown while Professor Sprague outlined the elaborate methods of conducting Spain's national sport.

From Madrid the tour led to Cordova. Here the travellers saw pictures of a Moorish mosque begun in 756 A. D.

The most Moorish city of Spain next attracted the tourists. This is Granada. Here is located the famous Alhambra, immortalized by Washington Irving. This edifice was begun in 1250, and is a typical Moorish building. Slender white marble columns and exquisite tile work typify the beauty of the Alhambra. On the opposite hills one finds the caves of the gypsies, where ancient gypsy dances are preserved by a colony of modernized gypsies. These people live in caves which have recently been modernized with concrete floors and electric lights.

Seville was the next stop. Here is located the second largest church in the world. Here also is the Giralda, the most beautiful tower in Spain, on top of which is a statue so perfectly balanced that it serves as a weather vane. Here also is that famous castle, the Alcazar.

Thence the route led to the busy port of Cadiz, and then to Gibraltar, the impregnable British stronghold.

Valencia, on the east coast, was the next stopping-place. Here is made the pottery of Spain and the fans which seem so much a part of the Spanish costume. The last city was the modern town of Barcelona, the most progressive of Spanish cities. Here the commerce of Spain is centred. Modern buildings of beautiful architecture grace the streets.

In conclusion, Professor Sprague told of the main products of Spain,—cork, salt, lemons, figs, and olives, and showed pictures of these different articles in their native states.

Throughout his lecture Professor Sprague related personal incidents which had occurred during his stay in Spain last summer, which helped much in making the lecture interesting. It was a very interesting and instructive method of teaching the students of Spanish about Spain.

His father is county commissioner of Harford county and one of its most respected citizens.

"It may be of interest to you to know that I have taken my college preparatory work at Muncy Normal back in 1912, and have known a number of Bucknell graduates intimately, therefore having a natural inclination to bring as many boys to Pennsylvania institutions as possible. Feeling that Bucknell has turned out so many capable men, I have suggested your institution to Hubert as one that would meet his needs. Administration And Quartette Represent B. U. At Convention

The eighteenth anniversary of the Pennsylvania General Baptist Convention was observed Oct. 19 to 22 at the First Baptist church in Norristown, Pa. Delegates from 350 Baptist Churches were present. President Emory W. Hunt, Dr. Joseph R. Weed, and Dr. Raymond M. West represented the Baptists of Lewisburg

Musical numbers were given by the Bucknell Quartet—R. C. Jones, Stanley McCaskey, R. Shuttlesworth, and Charles Kushell, with E. J. Hartman as accompanist. Banquets, luncheons, and conferences were delighted with their music.

The convention proved very interesting. Addresses and reports of committees at three conferences daily kept the convention in full swing. Helpful influences were exerted for both home and foreign missions, and the young people came in for special consideration.

The year in the church, while not entirely satisfactory to the leaders, has been, nevertheless, a year of real achievement. Much has been planned in growth and expansion for the coming year, which will be reported at the next General Baptist Convention to be held in Erie, Pa., in 1926.

Professor C. Arthur Lindemann motored to Philadelphia last Saturday expecting to attend the Penn-Illinois game. He found however that seats were no longer obtainable except at scalpers' rates $15.00 per seat. He returned Sunday.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Baby Bisons Defeat Waynesboro by 79-0

Bucknell Lockstep Shift Play Gains Only 5 Yards

Bucknell's baby Bisons, playing on a snow and mud covered field, severely punished Waynesboro by a score of 79 to 0, at the Memorial Stadium, Saturday afternoon, while the score board reported play by play, the 23-7 beating Holy Cross gave the varsity Bisons, at Worcester, Mass.

In Saturday's game Captain Halicki found little opposition for his strong yearlings. Gains of 10, 20, and 30 yards were consistently made at one down, by line plunging and end runs, regardless of who carried the ball.

The sharp tackling of the light Waynesboro players and the fine interference given by the plebes featured the entire game.

In a few seconds after the game started the opponents were forced back over their own goal line for the first score. From then on the yearlings carried the ball over their opponent's chalk line almost at their own wish, having the ball in their possession for nearly the entire game.

During the third and the fourth quarters Halicki's teammates, to entertain the handful of students present, used the lockstep shift play, gaining 5 yards at the first attempt, but losing 3 yards the second time.

"Texas," with his frequent war hoots, seemed to goad his teammates on to the stampede and the harvest of six pointers.

HOLY CROSS BEATS BUCKNELL BISONS

nell backs, pivoted, and was off for the first touchdown.

Toward the middle of the second quarter Holy Cross again threatened after she gained upon an exchange of punts. Crowley attempted a field goal but a Bucknell man blocked the kick. After Goodwin and Diehl gained six yards on line bucks, the latter again fumbled and O'Connell recovered. The line budged not an inch, but Crowley, whose toe had spelled defeat for Harvard, booted an accurate goal from the 30-yard line. Later in this period a pass, M. Goodwin to Diehl, brought Bucknell to the 25-yard line. Soon after the order was reversed, a pass, Diehl throwing and M. Goodwin receiving, followed by some great running on Goodwin's part, made Bucknell's single tally. Just after the kick-off Holy Cross came back strong, and on a pass from mid-field Lowrey to Foley, Foley ran thru the whole Bucknell team for the tally. The kick was blocked.

Again in this period Holy Cross scored. Trimmer's attempted 55-yard placement was blocked and Foley recovered for Holy Cross on Bucknell's 24-yard mark. Kitteredge in one sweeping end-run covered the total distance to the goal line and Crowley added the point. Such is the story of the scoring.

Frosh and Sophs Battle to 0-0 Tie

The freshman and sophomore class teams battled to a 0-0 tie here today, in a game that was remarkable only for the freak weather conditions under which it was played.

At the outset, the stadium field was covered with an inch and a half of snow, only the yard lines having been cleaned. Players and ball emerged from the first few scrimmages white-covered, contrasting strangely with the balmy sunshine. The footing, slippery enough in the snow, rapidly became worse as the field was churned into deep muck. Nondescript uniforms, mud-covered, made the individual players almost indistinguisable, and the handful of spectators devoted most of their attention to the scoreboard, where developments in the Bucknell-Holy Cross game were shown at intervals.

The sophomores won the toss and elected to defend the west goal, while the freshmen chose to receive the kick-off. The first quarter was an uneventful struggle, and the ball remained in mid-field most of the time. The sophs had a shade the better of the argument, for their line sifted through and hurried Loper, frosh quarter, in his punting, so that '28 gained on each exchange.

Late in the second period the sophomores began a new offensive, and with Captain Rasmussen and quarterback Marley featuring, advanced the ball to the six-yard line. From here, Marley carried it on a wide end run to the goal, but a team-mate's offside recalled the play. A touchdown seemed imminent, and only the whistle for half time saved the yearlings from being scored upon.

During the half, the freshmen snake-danced around the field, led by Coleman, their president. They were unmolested, except by five hardy sophomores who received a mud-bath for their bravery while their less courageous classmates furtively slipped away. Honors were even in football, but to the wearers of the dink goes all the glory of the traditional scrap.

The second half was largely a repetition of the first, except that both teams opened up their aerial and running attacks. Frable was sent into the soph backfield and contributed several substantial gains, ably assisting Marley. For the freshmen, Fessler's seventeen-yard run through the line was the longest individual advance, while Loper several times sliced through tackle for considerable yardage. However, neither team could gain consistently, and both resorted to desperate passing as time grew short. The majority of these passes were incomplete or intercepted, and the game ended with no decision.

Captain Reese was a tower of strength in a rather weak front line, while Currie's play at tackle stood out among the stronger soph forwards. There was little to choose between the respective backfields, and, considering the conditions underfoot, the standard of play was much higher than in some other years.

Bisons vs. Gallaudet

Holy Cross Defeat May Prove Needed Sting For Victory

Saturday's grid spat with Gallaudet marks the beginning of the end of Bison home football engagements. The finale of 1925 varsity entertainments in Memorial Stadium will be ushered in when Dickinson flies here from Carlisle for the traditional Bucknell-Dickinson combat, November 21. Followers of the Orane and Blue, who, for some reason or other, are unable to be present at the time of the Dickinson encounter should not fail to avail themselves of the opportunity of witnessing the tilt with Gallaudet, for it will be the only other occasion that a number of present Bison warriors will appear as varsity football representatives.

The fiasco at Worcester may be looked upon in various lights. True, the undefeated hopes of the Bisons have gone to smash, but except for the spoiling of the almost flawless Orange and Blue record the Holy Cross reverse produced no unfavorable effects. The Bucknell gridders should have derived great benefit from it. It is fortunate that the break came before the more important contests with Navy and Dickinson, opponents whom it will mean much more to defeat.

If the Bisons had not been treated to such a lashing, in all probability they would enter the Gallaudet game with an attitude of indifference, and be the recipients of a sudden and unpleasant surprise, similar to the one Dickinson pulled last year.

The Gallaudet argument will no doubt result in one of two football types. Either the Bisons will run rough shod over their opponents and amass a great number of points, or else the scrap will be so close that the winner will be a toss up. The former ought to be the result, and providing the Bisons have learned their lesson, the game will be a field day for the Orange and Blue. Whipped into frenzy by the lashes of Holy Cross, the Bucknell pride should be stung to the quick, and a series of goalward marches should result from the ferocious attacks of the angry Bison.

Can We Sink the Navy

The Middies Were Defeated 54-0 By Michigan Last Saturday

"To sink or not to sink." That is the question which is foremost in the minds of Bucknell students and other Bison grid followers. Wherever the football prospects of the Orange and Blue are discussed, their chances against the Annapolis Middies on November 14 cause the greatest debate. Can "Uncle" Charlie and his band of Bisons cruize into the foreign waters of Annapolis, torpedo the staunch ship of the sailors and come home with the scalps of the future admiral? (Pardon the mixed metaphor.)

Fans will recall with little difficulty the stirring encounter with the Middies last year; how the Bucknell warriors adopted a piratical attitude, stormed into the quiet Annapolis harbor, and with drawn cutlasses, sharp-

Sidelights From The Sidelines

At nine o'clock on Saturday morning the police blocked traffic off in front of the hotel at which the Bisons stayed in Worcester while the Holy Cross band of 60 pieces played its college songs and the student body which had followed the band cheered for both Holy Cross and Bucknell.

The game had attracted much attention throughout New England. Columns in both Boston and Worcester papers were devoted to pregame write-ups.

When the Bucknell team arrived in Philadelphia, many present at the station believed it to be the Illinois team. The players derived much amusement by pointing out Red Grange.

From the number of inquiries about the Goodwin twins which the New Englanders made, they must be as well known in that section of the country as the redoubtable Grange.

If Holy Cross defeats Fordam and Boston College she will claim the Jesuit college championship of the country. At Holy Cross they figure that the victories over Harvard and Bucknell should rank them among the top-notch teams of the country regardless of the outcome of the remainder of the season.

"And may the best team win. It is rare that a partisan coach says this in a pre-game report for a newspaper. Coach O'Donnell of Holy Cross, in an article for the Worcester papers, after he had compared the two teams and found them equal, ended his article in this sportsmanlike manner.

From the lowest point of the stadium at Worcester a cross of gold is visible just over the rim of the structure.

Everyone connected with the Bucknell administration or the team received the most courteous treatment and greatest cooperation from the Holy Cross authorities. It has done much to cement athletic relations between the two colleges.

In general the students do not realize the size of the student bodies from which Bucknell's opponents draw their teams. Few realize the remarkable athletic record which Bucknell has made until they compare Bucknell's 700 male enrolment with the enrolment of other Universities appearing upon the schedules of this and other years. Below appear the enrolments of a few of the colleges which appear upon this year's schedule:

George Washington	4,953
Georgetown	2,519
Detroit	2,106
Dayton	1,179
Holy Cross	1,123
Dickinson	693

ESTABLISHED 1878

In an isolated region, almost inaccessible in winter, this 6500 hp. hydro-electric plant located on the Deerfield River in New England, starts, protects, and stops itself.

A Self-Starting Power Plant

Dawn—the slumbering city awakens and calls for electric current. Many miles away the call is answered. A person-use opens automatically, releasing impounded waters; a water turbine goes to work, driving a generator; and electric current is soon flowing through wires over the many miles to the city. This plant starts and runs itself.

Power plants with automatic control are now installed on isolated mountain streams. Starting and stopping, generating to a set capacity, shutting down for hot bearings and windings, gauging available water supply, they run themselves with uncanny precision.

Thus another milestone has been reached in the generation of electric power. And with present-day achievements in power transmission, electricity generated anywhere may be applied everywhere.

The non-technical graduate need not know where electricity comes from—nor even how it works. But he should know what electricity can do for him no matter what vocation he selects.

The General Electric Company has developed generating and transmitting equipment step by step with the demand for electric power. Already electricity at 220,000 volts is transmitted over a distance of 270 miles. And G-E engineers, ever looking forward, are now experimenting with voltages exceeding a million.

A new series of G-E advertisements showing what electricity is doing in many fields will be sent on request. Ask for booklet GEK-1.

STUDENTS GET JOBS

City College Of New York Has Employment Bureau

Nearly 1,000 students of the College of the City of New York have been placed by the Employment Bureau of the institution since the beginning of the present college term, according to a statement by A. L. Rose, the director. "That does not include," he said, "numerous placements for a limited period. We placed some time ago 350 students at work which lasted only a brief time. The figure above represents the number of positions obtained which are more or less permanent."

In one week, more than 200 students were placed through the bureau. As no fee is charged either to the prospective employer or student employe, many firms obtain help for full or part time by dealing directly with the bureau.

In spite of the record number of placements this term, Mr. Rose said that there were very many more students who are at present idle, but the continuance of whose college career depended largely upon their ability to secure at least part employment in the near future.

"We can fill calls," Mr. Rose said, "for clerks and cops and chauffers and ushers and factory hands and what not. There is practically no minor occupation for which some of our students will not be able to qualify quite satisfactorily. We are already beginning to place in summer resorts and camps counselors and instructors for the next season.

Non-frat Grades Are Higher Than Frats at U. of Wis.

Non-fraternity men received higher grades than fraternity men in the University of Wisconsin during the second semester of 1925, figures just made public show. The difference in grades is slight, non-fraternity men averaging 1,379 and fraternity men 1,236.

Women students received grades which are considerably higher than the men's grades. The academic standing of women was 1,531 and of men 1,299. Sorority women had a slightly higher academic standing than non-sorority women, averaging 1,558 as compared with the non-sorority average of 1,514.

Students in the College of Agriculture made the highest marks in the university. The standing of the "agries" was 1,466; of students in the College of Letters and Sciences, 1,414; of engineering students, 1,340; and of law students, 923.

Curtis Publishing Co. Creates Scholarship Fund

A plan involving a $250,000 scholarship loan fund was announced recently by the Curtis Publishing Company for the purpose of developing leaders from grammar school boys.

The money will be lent to boys who, in their sales and delivery work for the publishing company, have proved that they have the requisite qualities for leadership.

These boys will be helped to complete their education by attending colleges and universities. Individual loans up to $1500 will be made.

The money is to be returned by the boys after they have begun to earn their own way following graduation from college.

Educators To Celebrate Birth Of College Entrance Board

Several hundred educators from forty colleges and universities will gather at a dinner to be held at the Park Lane, New York, Friday, November 6, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the College Entrance Examination Board.

The event, at which men and women leaders in education will deliver addresses, will mark, it was said, "the most important development in educational cooperation that this country has ever known."

The toastmaster will be President Mary E. Woolley of Mount Holyoke College, chairman of the board. In her introductory address President Woolley will tell why the board's progress is "the best example of efficient and successful cooperation in the history of education."

Conn. "Ag." Abolishes Hazing

The thin white line of night shirted freshmen is a thing of the past at Connecticut Agricultural College. Henceforth there will be no nocturnal parade of first year men singing "How Green We Are" with upperclassmen thumping and bethwacking with paddles, and upper class women squealing with delight. An order of the president of the college abolished this parade along with all other forms of hazing.

Because one freshman was seriously injured by the over-zealous paddlers the following comprehensive hazing rule is now in force:

"Any initiation ceremony or practical joking that involves physical, personal injury or bodily harm, or the performance, under threat of force of any action that entails the surrender of one's self respect shall be deemed hazing."

Another form of hazing that will go is the practice of giving freshmen cold showers as punishment for violation of rules.

William R. Rohrbach, '00, of Sunbury, was elected a vice-president of the Northumberland County Historical Society, at its initial meeting in the Sunbury courthouse last Monday. The society started with 135 members and plans to create a historical library. The Hon. Frederick A. Godcharles, of Milton, whose syndicated historical articles have been appearing in Pennsylvania papers for many months past, was elected president. At the next meeting Col. Henry W. Shoemaker, president of the state Historical Commission, will speak.

PENN GETS LIBRARY

Gift Of Dr. Adrain Also Includes Manuscripts Of His Research

The family portrait of Robert Adrain, scholar, professor, and mathematician, his private library, and the manuscripts of his original researches in mathematical science, have been given to the University of Pennsylvania, it was recently announced by President Josiah H. Penniman. The gift is from Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Duncan, of Englewood, N. J. Mrs. Duncan is a great-grandaughter of Dr. Adrain.

Dr. Adrain was born in Carrickfergus, Ireland, in 1775, the son of a mathematical instrument maker. He escaped to this country in 1798, after the British Government had placed a price of 50 pounds on his head because of his part in the Irish uprising of 1798.

He became a teacher in a grammar school at Princeton. He later became principal of the York County Academy. In 1810, after his mathematical work had already given him a high standing, he was made professor of mathematics and natural philosophy in Queen's College, now Rutgers. In 1813 he was selected for a similar position in Columbia. In 1826 he was elected vice-provost of the University of Pennsylvania.

Among the manuscripts acquired by the university are papers dealing with numerous solutions in elemetary mathematics, complete courses for four classes at the university in algebra, trigonometry, analytical geometry, calculus and mechanics, and navigation. The manuscripts also contain his class room records at the university while professor of mathematics.

Princeton Freshmen's Ages Show Majority Are Nineteen

Princeton freshman class statistics show that of the 635 freshmen most of them are in the first three months of their nineteenth year.

Although 43 per cent. of the fathers of members of the class are college graduates, only 15 per cent. of the mothers are college graduates.

Seventy-eight graduates of Princeton have sent their sons to their alma mater. Columbia, Pennsylvania, and Harvard Universities follow with nineteen, eighteen, and eleven sons at Princeton respectively.

Smith College leads the list of women's institutions, eleven Princeton freshmen being sons of graduates of that institution. Wellesley, Bryn Mawr, and Hunter College are represented by seven, six, and five mothers respectively.

Merchants lead the list of businesses engaged in by fathers of members of the class of '29, seventy being in this business. Law leads the professions, seventy-two barristers being followed by twenty-nine physicians.

Phi Beta Kappa Elects Miss Wills

Although only beginning her junior year as an art student in the University of California, Miss Helen Wills, National Women's tennis champion, has recently been elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Records of Miss Wills' scholarship show that she has attained an average of "high B" throughout her college course. Few persons have ever looked upon our tennis champion in this capacity.

The honor system has been rejected by a unanimous vote of the same committee that referred it to Harvard University.

Alaska 'Ag.' College Opens Term With 54 Students

The Fairbanks College was founded September 18, 1922. A faculty of 14 was required this fall, compared to half that number the first year. Charles Ernest Bunnell, Bucknell, '00, former federal judge in Fairbanks, is president of the college.

Courses include agriculture, civil engineering, mathematics, mining, metallurgy, geology, minerology, English, French, and business administration. Gymnastic training is offered for the first time this year.

Get Out The Dictionary

From Missouri co-eds comes this new indignity: "Girls of the freshman class shall wear their anklings, so that the articulation between the femur and tibia in which the patella shares shall be protected from vicissitudes of weather and inconsistency of winds so that male students may keep their minds on their lessons."

There you are. Are we not powerless in face of such drastic regulations. But don't worry Frosh, by and by you'll be inflicting similar punishments.

Wabash Students Near Strike

Rumblings of discontent are becoming louder and louder at Wabash College over the trustee ruling banning student-owned automobiles. When Dr. Mackintosh, president of the college, announced that no student would be allowed to drive a car after 8 o'clock on Friday night the student body voted unanimously to strike if some violator of the rule is expelled from college. When interviewed, the executive board of the trustees refused to give their personal reasons for the absolution of the "Campus Cans."

CUSS

These words about swearing have been used before but they were revived by a college president who sent them as a Valentine to every student in a western college:

Why a Man Should Swear

1. Because it is such an elegant way of expressing one's thoughts.
2. Because it is such a conclusive proof of taste and good breeding.
3. Because it is a sure way of making one's self agreeable to his friends.
4. Because it is a positive evidence of acquaintance with good literature.
5. Because it furnishes such a good example and training for boys.
6. Because it is just what a man's mother enjoys having her son do.
7. Because it would look so nice in print.
8. Because it is such a good way of increasing one's selfrespect.
9. Because it is such a help to manhood and virtue in many ways.
10. Because it is such an infallible way of improving one's chances in the hereafter.

DR. MARY B. HARRIS, '04, TO SUPERVISE NEW GOV'T INDUSTRIAL REFORMATORY

FREEDOM AND LIBERTY ALLOWED AMERICAN GIRLS IS TAKING ITS TOLL OF CRIMINALS, SAYS DR. HARRIS IN INTERVIEW

"Women are becoming much worse than they used to be, if federal offenders are any indication of the trend they are taking. In 1915 there were only 66 women in state prisons for federal offenses, as against 2687 men in Atlanta, Leavenworth, and McNeil Island, the three federal penitentiaries for men. According to the last report of the Attorney General, there are more than four times as many women and twice as many men as there were ten years ago—What is the reason for this great increase in crime among women?

With this statement Nell Ray Clarke began an interview with Dr. Mary B. Harris, '04, daughter of former President John Howard Harris, published in last Sunday's Public Ledger. Dr. Harris has recently been appointed head of the new federal industrial farm for women that is to be created at Alderson, West Virginia.

Dr. Harris repeated the interviewer's question before answering it: "Well, what is the reason? I don't know; but of course I realize what many of the contributing factors are.

Complex Life Cited as Reason

"One is our complex industrial life. Up until a few years ago women were more sheltered than they are today. It was not necessary for them to make a living. The tendency for men to commit crimes most often is based upon their desire for quick financial gain which cannot be acquired by lawful means.

"As women begin to take their places in the economic world, naturally the same opportunities and temptations will present themselves as have hitherto been offered to men alone. Hitherto their motives for committing crimes are, as a rule, different from those of men, but their field is broadening as their horizons broaden.

"Another reason has been our practically unselected immigration. In one New Jersey institution, for instance, there was but one English name on the list of the month's admissions, and that was a negro woman.

Many Are Children of Foreigners

"In these cases the offenders are not the original immigrants, but the second generation—the children of the foreign born. It often happens that the mother never learns English and is not intelligent enough to cope with her daughter's problems or tell her anything about the institutions of the country in which they live. Not speaking English, the mother often does not know what is being said or what is going on.

"The great freedom allowed American girls is also taking its toll of criminals. The automobile is just one of the agencies which reacts on girls to increase the crime figures."

The complexity of life in America, as contrasted with its simplicity in Europe, was cited by Dr. Harris as one reason why it is necessary to confine many women of foreign birth, who are just a little below par mentally. Addiction to drugs she mentions as another cause of feminine delinquencies.

Blame Adam, Not Eve, Says She

Evidently she would question Adam's version of the apple incident. He laid the blame on Eve. Dr. Harris puts it the other way. "I want to say," she told Miss Clarke, "that women seldom go into crime on their own. They are nearly always the tools or accomplices of some man, and the sex motive is always present. The 'Bobbed-Haired Bandit' is a conspicuous example of this. Wherever some woman is called by such a name as the 'Queen of the Black Hand' or the 'Bobbed Haired Bandit,' it is a ploy to her vanity by the men of the gang. If you will recall the novels you have read hinging on international complications in which a woman figures as a spy or villain, invariably she is in love with some man and is being used by him. When a woman steals an automobile, for instance, she is usually put up to it by her husband or sweetheart. After she has once got into the band of criminals, the sex rivalry and desire not to be outdone by the men develope as a motivation of crime, but not in the beginning."

No Prisons For Women Offenders

Miss Harris discussed the situation in Europe, where she says crime is decreasing. "Coming back to the situation in this country," she continued, "for many years there were no few women offenders against Federal laws that the Government did not consider that it was necessary to have a prison for them. They were 'farmed out' to any institution—State, county or city—with which the Government could make a contract on a per diem basis for their upkeep.

"During the last two or three years, however, all the State penitentiaries have been full to overflowing with offenders against local laws, with the result that there has been no place to confine women offenders against Federal laws. Many of the women sentenced to long terms of imprisonment have been kept in county jails, and some Judges have declared they would not sentence women at all because the county jail was not a proper place to hold them for long terms.

Wrongdoers Being Rehabilitated

"One reason the State penitentiaries are filled is that there is a movement everywhere to take offenders out of jails and put them in farm or State institutions where they can do outdoor work, thereby contributing to their support and relieving the communities of the heavy economic burden. Pennsylvania has been one of the foremost states in formulating a definite program for the rehabilitation of its women prisoners. The State industrial institution at Muncy is training women in occupations which will make them self-supporting by honest trade. Besides being taught to work for an honest wage, they are also taught to work for an ideal."

Alderson To Be Industrial Farm

Because of this overcrowded condition of our prisons, the federal government decided that it would create a modern industrial farm for women prisoners. For this purpose two hundred acres of land were donated to the government at Alderson, and an additional 300 acres have been purchased for the proposed institution. This is the institution which Dr. Harris is to superintend and develop.

Exhibits Will Show Inmates' Work

In order to develop pride in their work, there are being built on the front of the industrial building, on the main street, which all the inmates will see, four large show windows, in which the work of the women will be exhibited. Each week the exhibits will be changed to show the best work of the week from all departments—sewing, laundry, the tempting-looking pies, cake, and bread from the cooking school, knitting, the handiwork, or anything unusual, such as the school work of any one who has made unusual progress.

As Miss Clarke remarks, "Dr. Harris has her work cut out for her. It is going to be ticklish business to take a big bunch of women who have been closely guarded and start out with them in an institution which has no other bolts or walls than are necessary to keep out marauders.

"But Dr. Harris knows, from her own experience, that it can be done. She will select a few prisoners next summer who have good records, and with these as a nucleus try to build up those traditions of self-respect and community co-operation on which the welfare of the institution will rest.

A Graduate of Bucknell

"She has already had remarkable success in handling delinquent women, although she had peculiar training for the career. She was born in Factoryville, Pennsylvania, and was graduated from Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa., where her father was president; took her Ph. D. at the University of Chicago in Sanskrit and Latin, and taught in the Bryn Mawr Preparatory School, in Baltimore. When the World War broke out she was working in Roman coinage in Germany.

"Dr. Katharine Dement Davis turned her into a prison worker and was responsible for her appointment as head of the Woman's Workhouse on Blackwells Island, New York City. Later Dr. Harris became head of the Woman's Reformatory in Clinton, N. J., and then of the New Jersey State Home for Girls at Trenton.

"'We are going to substitute the feeling of personal responsibility for bars and bolts,' said Dr. Harris. 'I know it can be done. Twice at the State Home for Girls at Trenton, N. J., for example, the staff went off duty from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. while the girls took full charge of all the departments except the boiler house. They served luncheon to the staff and official visitors, and not one single thing happened to mar the day.'

"'When these girls and women go out from such institutions they have a different attitude toward life and society.'"

We should say the presumption is that a person underlines only those portions of a book which he understands.

Have You Ever Heard?

That Lewisburg and the region immediately north of it constitute one of the five large furniture-making districts of the United States.

That Williamsport, Montoursville, Picture Rocks, Hughesville, Muncy, Montgomery, and Lewisburg all produce fine furniture.

That much of the attractive furniture sold in such stores as Wanamakers, in New York and Philadelphia, is made right in these nearby towns.

That when what is one of the largest hotels in southern New Jersey was built recently, the Lewisburg Chair Works made all the furniture for the hotel.

That Picture Rocks, from which come numerous Bucknell students, was really founded on wood, its first settlers having been wood workers from New England.

That the very first wood machines for making window sash to be used in this region were brought to Picture Rocks. And that some of the windows in the First Building at Bucknell (now the Biology Building) were made by these machines and brought to Lewisburg in wagons.

That the big doors of Old Main are also said to have been made at Picture Rocks.

That two Bucknell graduates, W. Lee Sprout, '10, and Ernest S. Burrows, '07, are officials of two of these Picture Rocks wood-working companies.

That in the latter part of the last century this general region was one of the greatest lumbering centres in the United States.

That in 1870 and for some time after that Pennsylvania produced more timber than any other state in the Union.

That Williamsport was then the lumber capital of the United States.

That Lewisburg was a lumber centre also, with a lumber railroad running north-west to the mountains to haul logs, the Buffalo Creek bringing vast quantities of logs to town in the spring freshets, the river bringing additional millions of feet of timber from up-stream, and a boat building concern operating a prosperous plant at the mouth of the creek.

That this company built many of the canal boats used on the old Pennsylvania canal, by which students came to Bucknell in the early days of the college.

That this same concern supplied the lumber "for the University boardwalk," a board sidewalk that originally led up to the University grounds from fourth and St. George streets, there being then no University Avenue.

FORMER FOOTBALL STAR BACK FROM SARANAC LAKE

Al Jordan Returns Home in Much Improved Condition

Al Jordan, a former Central Manual High School football star, and Bucknell athlete of later years, has returned to Philadelphia after a game fight for his life against tuberculosis at Saranac Lake.

Jordan who starred for Central Manual in 1907-08, and at Bucknell the three following years, was picked on the third All-American team by Walter Camp in 1912. He was a companion of the late Christy Mathewson at the Saranac camp.

Jordan is at the home of his mother 216 Park Road, Llanerch.—Philadelphia Record.

Jordan, like Mathewson, left Bucknell after his junior year to take part in professional athletics, as a catcher for the Philadelphia Athletics. His outstanding work behind the bat at Bucknell had attracted the attention of Connie Mack's scouts, and Jordan was signed without having any minor engue experience.

In addition to being an unusual football and base ball player, Jordan was a good broad jumper. He apparently had the making of a great athlete, but tuberculosis soon took him out of athletic competitions. He has been at Saranac Lake for some years.

A RENAISSANCE OF ARMOR

From the time when Leonidas covered himself foot deep in glory at Thermopylae to the conquest of Mexico by Cortez, iron and steel armor held a place of prominence in the realm of combat. The result was most satisfactory. Bullets would strike the breastplates and harmlessly drop at the feet of the warrior, or some keen edged battle-axe would be dulled by contact with the unyielding metals.

In our collegiate field of combat, football, there is need for protection equally as great as in the time when Spartacus drove the Roman praetors around the seven hills of Rome. This need has been evidenced in recent games, both local and throughout the country, in which serious injuries have occurred. A suggestion that college football teams adopt the regulation armor suits as standard griliron equipment should be welcomed. The uniform would consist of an all steel helmet, a pair of gorgiers and paldrons for the protection of the shoulders and clavicle, a breastplate, tuiss, knee caps and jambles to cover the legs and shins. In short, a complete outfit as used by Richard the Lion Hearted in the Second Crusade.

Picture what a spectacular scene it would be to witness two teams with their coats of mail glistening in the afternoon sun, clank and jingle on the field, as the band struck up the Anvil Chorus. According to actual statistics compiled by eminent sport authorities, almost a quarter of each game's time is lost by tending to the injured. If this above plan were to be employed there would be no such casualties, and consequently no time wasted. On rainy days it would keep the assistant manager busy oiling equipment to avoid rust. And last but not least, it would solve the problem of naming animals for mascots of the teams such as the Lafayette Leopard. Teams would be known as the Cornell Crusaders, Princeton Knights, Lehigh Cavaliers, Bucknell Barons, and the Lafayette Lancers.

—The Lafayette.

True to dental form, Colgate played on a "pasty" field.

Still they couldn't "lather Lafayette, nor would one call it a close shave.

"Baby Talc," shrieked the Colgate stands as the teams came on in rubber mud pants.

And so they mudlocked at 7 to7.

—The Lafayette.

The students of Ohio State University receive two and one-half tons of mail each week, according to reports from the postoffice in Columbus.

STUDENTS TO JUDGE AMERICAN CHURCHES

Survey Of Church Problems To Be Given At Conference

Mary Harrar, '26, was one of the fifteen people chosen to act as a member of the commission which met in New York City on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, October 22 to 26 inclusive, to study the missionary problem.

This commission, with three others, is preparing for the National Interdenominational Student Conference to be held at Evanston, Illinois, from December 29 to January 1 for the purpose of bringing about a student evaluation of the church. Each commission carries on its survey of various church problems, and reports its findings at the conference in December.

In carrying out its survey the commission followed the following program: 1. Sent questionaires to many foreign students in the United States asking a frank opinion of Christian missions in their own country. 2. Questioned outstanding missionary administrators. 3. Each student was given an opportunity to study actual missionary administrative machinery in one of the church boards. 4. They got in touch with anti-Christian groups and questioned them concerning their attitude toward missions.

The meetings were held in the Methodist Building at 150 Fifth Avenue, and in the rooms of the Student Volunteer Movement at 25 Madison Avenue. Miss Corilla Broadnax, of the S. V. M. acted as chaperone, and Mrs. George Heber Jones, of the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions, was hostess to the delegates.

Stanley High, assistant secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, opened the first meeting on Thursday evening, presenting the purpose of the commission.

On Friday morning the delegates visited the church boards of their own denominations and studied the various phases and functions of the missionary boards. The boards entertained the delegates at lunch. The women of the Presbyterian Board served ten, Mrs. Charles K. Roys acting as hostess. At the meeting later Mrs. Roys and Miss Tyler spoke on "The Origin, Achievements, and Work of the Women's Boards."

A series of speeches by foreign students studying in the United States occupied all of Friday evening. The talks were criticisms of the missionary programs in their native countries.

A findings committee was appointed on Saturday afternoon to prepare a report of the details of the work accomplished by the commission.

The findings committee presented its report on Sunday morning. All of Sunday and Monday morning and afternoon were given to drawing up a report comprising the constructive and destructive criticisms of missionary ideas as found by the survey of the commission. This report will be presented at the conference in Illinois, along with suggestions for the work in the future and an evaluation of missions in the past, present, and future.

The purpose of the conference at Evanston is to study the church from four viewpoints: the church at work in a typical community, overlapping competition, community influence, etc.; the church at work on the home mission field, in relation to industrial problems; the church in its cooperative enterprises, and the church in its foreign mission program.

The members of the fourth commission stayed at the Prince George Hotel, at Fifth Avenue and 28th St.

After this meeting, Miss Harrar, who is president of the Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey division of the Student Volunteer Movement, visited Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, New Jersey, on Monday and Tuesday, October 26 and 27, where she interviewed the leader of the local S. V. M. group. She was entertained at dinner, where she met the members of the group. Later she addressed the group, discussing the plans of the Union. The next morning they planned the special meetings for their programs for the coming year.

The florist's assistant had received an order for a wreath.

The man had said, "Put 'Rest in Peace' on both sides and if there is room, 'We Will Meet in Heaven.' "

The wreath arrived that afternoon and was unwrapped. The inscription read. "Rest in Peace on Both Sides, and if There is Room, We Will Meet in Heaven."

CAN WE SINK THE NAVY

cued by previous engagements with other elevens of renown, stabbed deep, and mortally wounded the fighting sailors by a 7 to 0 score. They will remember with ease how Bill Blaisdell cut and fought his way down the field, severing the whole Navy crew for 55 yards and a touchdown.

The question then is, can Tony Kostos and his determined Orange and Blue gridders repeat the accomplishment of the Bucknell band of last year? Can the Bisons weather the bombardment of Navy thrusts and at the same time stampede their opponents under an avalanche of line bucks, forward passes, end runs, etc?

Navy's grid record so far this autumn compares favorably with that of the Orange and Blue. The sailors worked hard for a 3-3 tie with Princeton early in the season, and won all other tilts by creditable scores except their last conflict, with Michigan. The Wolverines swept the middies off their feet on the midwest gridiron last Saturday, snowing them under by a 54 to 0 score. Navy's disaster occurred at the same time the Bucknell warriors were feeling the sting of the Holy Cross lash at Worcester, Mass. An associated Press dispatch, appearing in a number of newspapers this week, quoted Jack Owsley, Annapolis grid mentor, as saying that his proteges were recovering rapidly from the Michigan defeat, however, and were looking forward to their future contests with keen anticipation. The Navy gridders apparently possess the admirable faculty of recovering quickly from misfortunes.

Navy meets Western Maryland at Annapolis this Saturday. Fans who are eager to compare the relative merits of the Bisons and the sailors should be interested in noting the result of this conflict, inasmuch as the Orange and Blue met the southern players in an early season fracas.

A great number of local fans are expected to journey to the Maryland city to witness the battle with the Middies. Those who plan to accompany the team on one of their trips during the football season generally choose the jaunt to Annapolis. There is expected to be no exception to this custom of previous years and hence many will probably travel southward with the team.

A New York paper writes that Philadelphia is the most corrupt city in the country. So's your old Manhattan.

The College Inn

Our Appreciation

The College Inn offers its sincere wishes for the rapid restauration to health of our kind friend and benefactor, Dr. Chas. A. Gundy, a Bucknell graduate and friend to all Bucknellians for many years. He has been paying the cost of exposure during his services in the World War by confinement to his home for many dreary months. Dr. Gundy has become endeared to unnumbered Bucknell students and to the poor of the surrounding community for his many charitable works and friendly acts. "He went about doing good" has been his life-long history until affliction confined his ministrations too superb example of cheerfulness and courage and faith under most trying circumstances. We offer our most sincere homage to you and count it a rare privilege to have been among your friends these many years. We offer our flowers of appreciation now and pray that you may soon move in and out among us again.

Lippincott Gets Medal For Saving Mrs. Goho

Plucked Her From Railway As Train Thundered By

Joseph B. Lippincott, '26, was awarded a medal by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission at its meeting in Pittsburgh last Friday, for saving the life of Mrs. Ella J. M. Goho, of East Market Street, at the risk of his own.

The rescue took place at the Montandon railway station on January 31 last, when Mrs. Goho and a number of other persons were waiting for a Pennsylvania passenger train. The group was standing on the southbound track, at the gate between the two tracks, waiting for a north-bound train to go by, in order to cross to the opposite station. A fast freight bore down on the group, but the noise of the passing passenger drowned the sound of its warning whistle until the locomotive was but a few rods away. Every one jumped clear of the track except Mrs. Goho, who stood powerless in the path of the freight. Lippincott leaned forward, grasped Mrs. Goho with both hands, and fairly threw her back over his shoulder. The train rushed past as he did so, and Lippincott barely escaped being hit.

STUDENTS DISCUSS WORLD COURT PLAN

the power of the court and similar peace organizations that are now merely European but were intended to be world-wide. He referred frequently to the Locarno pact as an evidence of the good faith of the European nations in their efforts to "outlaw" war.

The afternoon and evening were given up to discussion of the student fellowship movement and plans for finding out the prevailing opinions on the court question in the various colleges in the region. In this connection a leading part was taken by Bishop Paul Jones, and Mr. Conrad Hoffman.

Sunday morning was spent in further plans for carrying back the messages of the conference to the different campuses represented, and in the afternoon Lieut. Alley returned and delivered the closing address of the session.

The whole question of the international relations of the United States is opened to review by this subject. Believing that every student has ideas concerning what the United States should do, and wanting to find out what those ideas were the Council of Christian Associations has planned a series of regional meetings for the discussion of the World Court. From these regional meetings the delegates will return to their colleges and there by the use of discussion groups and the ballot that is being conducted by the Council and The New Student, an intercollegiate publication, they will attempt to find out what the tenor of student opinion really is.

The results of the poll are to be reported to The New Student by December 10 while the results of the discusions on the campuses will be reflected at a forum to which delegates from all of the colleges of the nation will be invited. This meeting is to be held at Princeton University, December 10, 11, and 12.

Locally it is planned that some speaker of national prominence will present the question preparatory to student discussion in the groups of the "Y" and "Y. W." The poll will probably be taken during the first week in December.

BIG FOUR SOCIETY ELECTS A CABINET AND COMMITTEES

To Have Convenient Club Room In Engineering Building; Also To Publish Book

HAND TO BE CHAIRMAN

The cabinet of the Big Four Engineering Societies at Bucknell University held a meeting in the Engineering Building on Wednesday evening at 7:30 for the purpose of electing officers, deciding upon the number of meetings, and discussing other projects of the engineering department.

Thomas Hand, acting as temporary chairman, took charge of the meeting and election. The election then followed, in which Hand was elected chairman of the the cabinet. The chairman of the cabinet is also to act as chairman of the Big Four Engineering Society. Theron A. Cramer was elected secretary and treasurer.

A committee, consisting of Assistant Professor D. M. Griffith, acting head of the civil engineering department, Emerson E. Ware, and Floyd Bailey, was appointed by the chairman to draw up by-laws and constitution for the Big Four Engineering Society.

The cabinet first discussed the frequency of the meetings and decided that the cabinet meetings should be held in conjunction with the regular meetings on Wednesday nights. The cabinet plans to have a meeting of each of the individual societies and of the Big Four Society each month. The Big Four Engineering Society meetings are to be held on the second Wednesday and the individual society meetings on the fourth Wednesday of each month.

After the time for the meetings had been decided upon, the advisability of having an engineers' club room on the top floor of the Engineering Building was discussed. The purpose of this club room would be to enable all of the engineering students to become better acquainted with each

Life Without Friends Not Life, Says Bishop

Bishop W. H. McDowell Preaches Sermon on "Friendship" At Methodist Church

"Do willingly what Christ wants you to do, for that is good," were the concluding words of Bishop W. H. McDowell, Methodist Episcopal bishop, in his sermon in Beaver Memorial church last Sunday morning before a crowd which jammed the large auditorium.

Taking for his text Luke XV, 1-16, Bishop McDowell spoke on "Friendship." "One of the most foolish things in the world is to make everybody think of religion alike. Too often quarrels arise and these controversies either confuse the beliefs themselves or destroy religion entirely. The primary duties of religion then are those of kindness, justice, honesty, and generosity—the true bases of frienlship, for life without friends is not life at all."

A special program in which several students took part was an added attraction. The program:

Prayer

Violin Solo, "Meditation from Thais" Alton Roth, '29

Offertory

Baritone Solo, "The Iliad Plowman" M. C. Shuttlesworth, '28

Contralto Solo, "Garden of Prayer" Mrs. Kelster

Ten Upperclassmen Now Knights

Ten upperclassmen at Lafayette College are now knights, following the "dubbing" activities of the Knights of the Round Table this week. This organization is made up of prominent men in all phases of campus activities and has as its purpose the fostering of Lafayette traditions. The new members include five members from each of the upper two classes.

Pastor Compliments Glee Club Director

Pleased That Club is To Sing On Sunday in Two Largest N. J. Baptist Churches

A letter recently received from the pastor of one of the New Jersey churches that will be visited during the Thanksgiving tour by the Bucknell University Glee Club, compliments Director Hartz on gaining permission to have the club appear in two of the largest Baptist churches of the state on the same day. The club will sing in the churches at Orange and East Orange, New Jersey, on Thanksgiving day. The letter also says that this will be the first time in the history of the churches that any outside organization will have been allowed to interfere in any way with the regular Thanksgiving services of the church.

This honor was brought about largely by the excellent work of the quartet at the New Jersey Baptist Convention at Atlantic City, two weeks ago. Director Hartz is emphatic in his statements however that the work of the quartet would mean nothing unless the work of the club itself were good enough to merit such honor.

The work of the glee club in its tours is divided into two parts, secular concerts and sacred concerts. The club has, especially in recent years, found a great demand for its services in sacred concerts at church services in the towns on the itinerary.

17 ARE INITIATED TO PI MU EPSILON

Honorary Mathematics Society Banquets At Cameron House. Dr. Everett Gives Talk

Bucknell chapter of Pi Mu Epsilon, held its initiation Thursday afternoon, November 5. Seventeen pledges became active members, other business matters were disposed of, and a banquet at the Cameron House, followed.

Pi Mu Epsilon, national honorary mathematics fraternity, was established at Bucknell in 1925. Membership qualifications include junior standing, general scholarship average of 80, mathematics average for the first two years of 85, completion of or enrolment in differential and integral calculus, and a major or a minor in mathematics or in engineering. Candidates must also be outstanding students in their class work.

One senior was initiated, John C. Deshauer. The juniors are Ruth Ackerman, Sarah DeArmond, Evelyn Deen, Agnes Dunbar, Aldus Fogelsanger, H. Willard Gardner, Katharine Gaventa, Kenneth Horsman, James Johnson, Grace Kerr, Joseph Laucks, Christopher Mathewson, Jr. Kenneth Moyle, Anna Outwater, Harold Webber, and Charles P. Geist.

Officers of the local chapter are Professor H. S. Everett, director: William I. Miller, '26, vice-director; Miss Pauline M. Limiley, '26, secretary; Penrose C. Wallace, '26, treasurer; and Miss Kathryne E. Miller, '26, librarian. Vice-director Miller presided during part of the initiation ceremony. Wallace functioned temporarily as sergeant-at-arms.

Dr. Everett, in a brief talk to the initiates, particularly, and to the older members by way of review, emphasized the fact that general scholarship and recognition on the campus as a quality student are essential qualifications for candidates and members of Pi Mu Epsilon. "Now that you belong to a chosen group, identified by your having come up to a definite standard, you should not only maintain and even attempt to exeel that standard, but you should also practice a spirit of friendliness, of kindness, of integrity in relations with your fellows. Let us not be a mutual admiration society; we shall aspire to be of some service on the campus," was a part of his message.

The chair announced a new committee, an alumni committee: Professor William Cyrus Bartol, our oldest member, Class of '72; Catherine Stahl, '22, a resident alumna; R. D. Smink; and Clarence Marts. Professor Charles A. Lindemann, Assistant Professor Dalzell M. Griffith, Orval J. Hand, Fred Snodgrass, and the five

L'AGENDA DEDICATED TO PROF. F. E. BURPEE

Built the Engineering Building; Helped in Stadium Work; Does Much For B. U.

L'Agenda of 1927 is to be dedicated to Professor Frank Eugene Burpee, of the department of engineering. That was decided at a meeting of the staff of L' Agenda held November 4 in the "Sem" parlors. Several persons were considered for this honor, but the staff felt that Professor Burpee's outsanding services to the University made him the logical choice.

For many years Professor Burpee, in addition to carrying full work as a teacher, has served as superintendent of grounds and buildings. His outstanding services were in the construction of the Engineering Building and the stadium. Taking the plans for the Engineering Building on which several large contracting firms had bid, Prof. Burpee, with his corps of Bucknell mechanics and other local workers, built this structure for just one-half the sum named in the lowest bid, thereby saving the University $100,000. When the stadium was in course of construction, Professor Burpee, with Professor Charles A. Lindemann, kept close supervision of the work, and pushed it through to completion within the time stipulated, in the face or tremendous obstacles. Professor Burpee also had charge of the recent renovation of the local Baptist church, when the structure was remodeled within and without.

The staff, in addition to deciding the matter of a dedication, created two committees to secure the individual write-ups of the non-fraternity men and the non-fraternity women. Margaret Aumiller, Florence Beckworth, and Mary Konkle are the committee to look after the women. The men's write-ups will be cared for by H. W. Gardner, Donald Barton and Donald Beldleman.

Charles Carpenter, editor of L'Agenda, is very desirous of having this material in hand by November 24.

10 GIRLS ELECTED TO FRILL & FROWN

Candidates Selected From List of Thirty Trying For Place In Dramatic Society

Ten girls out of thirty who entered the final try-outs for Frill and Frown, held on Saturday morning, October 24, were in the form of short speeches, in which each girl told what previous experience she had had in the dramatic line, and her reasons for being interested in dramatics. The final try-outs consisted of a reading or a short sketch given by one girl individually, or by two or three together.

About forty girls entered the preliminary try-outs, and about thirty the finals, the ranks of these latter being slightly swelled by several who had tried out in the preliminaries last year, and so were not required to repeat the first try-out this year.

The preliminaries were judged on poise, delivery, and the amount and nature of experience. The finals were judged on dramatic ability.

SOCIOLOGICAL SOCIETY ELECTS EDNA WATSON

Edna M. Watson, '25, formerly vice-president of the Sociological Society was elected to the presidency of the society at a meeting held some time ago. Leonard J. Coates, '26, was elected vice-president, and Eleanor Dukin, '26, former treasurer of the society, was made its secretary. Paul Schmidt, '25, was elected treasurer.

FACULTY TO ALLOW 3 DAYS' VACATION

Also Approves Petition Asking Return to Marking System Used Two Years Ago

Two petitions of the Student Council were approved by the faculty in the meeting held Wednesday afternoon, November 4. These had to do with the extension of the Thanksgiving Recess and the marking system used by the University.

In the first petition it was asked that the Thanksgiving Recess be changed from the one day period indicated in the catalog to extend over the whole week-end. In response to this the minutes of the meeting read, "It was voted that, beginning with the year 1925, Thanksgiving Recess should extend from noon of the Wednesday preceding Thanksgiving Day to eight o'clock on the Monday following Thanksgiving Day."

Regarding the grades, a return to the system used two years ago was voted. This means that the grades will be indicated by letters which will have a numerical significance. The system of marking that has been in vogue here for the past three semesters was the result of a movement in the student body seeking to do away with petty jealousies arising out of the differences in grades accorded. A joint committee of the students and faculty considered this question along with several others and proposed that the grades be reported merely as passing and not passing. This suggestion was approved by the student body after a mass meeting in which the merits of the plan were rather hotly contested. The so-called numerical grades of the students were kept in the office however and it was generally felt that if numerical grades were being given, the students should have the right to some indication of what those grades were. This feeling gave rise to the recent action of the Student Council petitioning for the return of the old system and the consequent approval by the faculty.

NAVY IS CONFIDENT OF BIG COMEBACK

Letter From Middies Says Line Is Strongest in Many Years. It Sure Is! Read It!

The following letter from Annapolis shows something of the way in which the Middies have Saturday's affair sized up. It shows a good bit of Naval partisanship to say the least but that little matter can easily be attended to when the Bisons trot out on the field to meet and get the goat.

"Speculation is rife at the Naval Academy as the contest with Bucknell approaches. Navy enthusiasts are expecting to see the fightingest Navy team in years take the field. The only question in their minds is how many points the Big Blue Team will score. Bucknell seems to have a team of more than usual strength this year, and a terrific battle is expected. The entire regiment of Midshipmen is up in arms after the disastrous trip into the Middle West, and is turning out as a man every night to encourage the team in its practice. The team has lost all sign of over-confidence, and is showing more spirit and determination to win than it has shown this season.

"From the defeat by Michigan, they have learned a thing or two about the forward passing game, and the team that is able to gain via this route must be more adept at it than any team the Navy has met as yet. They are also perfecting a passing game which looks as if it will mean the nemesis of both the Bucknell team and the Army. Hamilton's slight cut has entirely healed and his accurate passing, coupled with the infallible receiving of Iiernet and Hardwick, ends, and Shapley, stellar fullback, will inaugurate a new Navy aerial attack. None of the big four backfield, consisting of Hamilton, Shapley, Hanke, and Flippin have lost anything, and their attacks through the line will merit much yarding. Shapley's speed remains undimished, and the blond giant may be expected to skirt the ends and slip tacklers as never

Y.W.C.A. Stunt Night Mocks Chapel Conduct

"Dean" Requests That Faculty Depart First From Session And Mad Rush Follows

A representation of the students' behavior or misbehavior in chapel, and a dramatization of nursery rhymes were features of the Y. W. C. A. stunt night in the living room at Women's College, Thursday evening, November 5.

"Frankie" Harris announced that two groups should be formed, one of freshmen and juniors, and the other of sophomores and seniors. Each group was given ten minutes to prepare a little play.

The freshmen and juniors performed first. Jack and Jill, Little Miss Muffett and her spider, Jack Horner, and other Mother Goose characters were cleverly acted out.

Several of the girls impersonated faculty members while others posed as the student body in the sophomore-senior stunt. One noticeable feature about their arrangement was that the first three rows of seats were empty. When, at the end of the chapel service, the Dean requested that the faculty be allowed to leave first, followed by the classes in their order, everyone made a mad dash to get out. The reality of the scene was painful. The prize was awarded to this stunt.

3 WAR LORDS WANT CONTROL OF CHINA

W. Wong Tells Epworth League Conditions Are Terrible Among The Chinese

"All China Night" attracted the largest crowd of the year to the Methodist Epworth League last Sunday night. About 150 students gathered in the large room of the church to hear four Bucknell students from the Far East discuss the problems now facing China and Oriental countries.

An interesting program was opened with a violin solo by Alton Roth, '29, who played "Canconne" by Pabst, being accompanied on the piano by E. J. Hartman, '27. Maude Keister, '26, then took charge, and divided the remainder of the hour into four ten-minute talks.

T. R. Lavers, '29, spoke on "The Mistakes That Missions are Making." "Should biology and chemistry be taught to the Chinese when they can never hope to use this knowledge?" was one of the questions that Mr. Lavers raised. He emphatically stated that the medical missionary has been the best work of all the missionaries, and that the slowness of foreign missionary success could be laid to too much dictation by Home Mission Boards.

Then W. Y. Wong spoke. Mr. Wong is a native-born Chinese, and his topic was "China's View of Foreign Missionary Work.". According to Mr. Wong, most news from China is propaganda of the rich capitalists; conditions in China certainly are terrible, there being three military war lords contending for the control of that vast country. General Chang controls Manchuria, and is supported by Japan; Wu holds central China, receiving English backing; in the western and northern parts, Soviet Russia is backing the local Chinese cheiftain. Mr. Wong's solution is the Open Door policy which would rid China of foreign domination.

China's present religion is a combination of Confucianism, Mohammedanism, and Buddhism. The Christian missionaries used the philosophy of Christ and compared it with that of Confucius, thus confusing the Oriental mind. The present movement in China is against the missionary.

A. L. Rollinson, '29, was the third speaker, and he gave a very instructive talk on "Chinese Customs and Life." Many curios and pictures were passed to the audience, among these was a mariner's compass of vest pocket size. Four kinds of Chinese dollars were shown. China is changing her monetary system to a decimal basis.

BUCKNELL ELEVEN BEATS GALLAUDET BY SCORE OF 56-0

McCormick Boots Three Goals; His Attempt to Make Record Drop-Kick Score Fails

LOSERS FIGHT HARD

Bucknell resumed her winning stride when she swamped Gallaudet 56-0 at the Memorial stadium in a game played in a drizzling rain and before a crowd of scarcely three hundred people. The Bisons gained almost at will through their opponents, and several times deliberately stopped running when within a few yards of the goal with a clear field ahead, just to attempt a drop kick instead of scoring a touchdown.

It might be said of the Gallaudet boys that the spirit was willing but the flesh weak. For Bucknell, the game was a series of long gallops down the field for a touchdown or a field goal. The other team spiritedly sought to stem the tide, but was no match for the heavier Bison team. Twice during the game, a Bucknell man was free to make a touchdown, when, instead, he stopped in his tracks with the ball and fell in front of the goal posts on the five yard line, so that McCormick would be in excellent position to drop kick.

Coach Moran evidently wished to give our drop kicker an afternoon's workout, for in practically every run down the field, the foremost thought seemed to be to get into favorable kicking position. Altogether, McCormick attempted seven drop kicks. Three were good.

The attendance at the game was the smallest of this season. Those present, very nearly all students, did not even fill one section of the big U. These faithful rooters had to seek protection from the rain and cutting wind under umbrellas, slickers, blankets, or overcoats, depending upon whatever they were fortunate enough to possess. At the end of the half, many were forced to leave for a bet-

Pre-Meds Make Merry At Hallowe'en Party

Davies Wins Waffle-eating Race By Consuming Twenty-two Anne Stephens Second

The Pre-Medical Society of Bucknell University held a waffle-eating race at the Forest Inn on Friday evening, November 6, 1925. At least this race seemed to be the principle feature of the old fashioned Hallowe'en party. Professors Norman Stewart and John Rice were with the party.

After a series of eliminations, Anne Stephens and Frei Davies were the final contestants in the race. For a time it appeared as if Anne would be the victor, but Freel regained his enormous consuming power and finally beat her by two. Anne ate twenty.

During the course of the meal, the toastmaster, Dr. Norman Stewart, read quotations from the birth and marriage columns of the Lewisburg Journal. One of the most sorrowful of these and one which brought tears to the eyes of many in the party, was the death of Hell Bender. Everybody sympathized with Mr. and Mrs. Bender, who had been so careful to raise Hell properly.

The attention of the party was then turned to an old cabin about 100 yards distant, which had been artistically decorated for the occasion. Brightly-colored streamers covered the ceiling and walls, apples were suspended from the ceilings, and from each corner of the cabin a large pumpkin peeped at the jubilant group.

All the old fashioned Hallowe'en games were played; ghost stories were told; and couples danced to the tune of a Victrola. Every one participated in the games and was in the best of humor.

Forty-five members of the society were present. All masqueraded in some kind of a freak costume. The party left Bucknell Hall at 4:45 P. M. and traveled in two large open trucks.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

The first big social event of the Phi Psi's season was a farmers' dance held in the Phi Psi "barn," Friday evening November 6, when the actives entertained for the brothers-to-be. After partaking of the annually slaughtered hog, the boys and girls gathered around the bar where their wants were attended to by the only living playmate of Woodrow Wilson, Henry Carter.

Farm-hands from all the neighboring Greek farms were welcomed at the jamboree. Noble's "roosters" crowed valiantly and were flying high for the four hours of the dance, but finally went to roost at ten-thirty, retiring early as all barnyard fowl have a practice of doing. Mr. and Mrs. Harris chaperoned the affair.

Many of the brothers visited the chapter at Penn State during the week-end.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Brother Dietz, '27, was called home last Friday on account of the death of his grandfather.

Brother McNutt, '26, went home during the week-end with his brother.

Pledge Brother Dorsett, '29, was pleasantly surprised Friday evening by the arrival of his parents from Smyrc. "Red" and his family, accompanied by Don Catlin, '27, drove up to see the State-Notre Dame game.

Several of the brothers were on hand to see our freshmen hold the State yearlings to a tie.

The formal installation of the pledges of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity took place at the house on Tuesday evening, November 3.

The Delta Zeta Chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha will hold a dance on November 21, from 8 to 12 at its home, in honor of its town friends. The rythm will be furnished by Zeller's Happy Six of Lebanon, Pa.

A very enjoyable time was had Friday eveaing, November 6, at the first Lambda Chi "Sem" dance. The spacious porch furnished a cooling retreat from the crowded rooms. Peppy music, furnished by the Blue Band, contributed greatly to the success of the evening. The chaperones were Professor and Mrs. Robbins, and Mrs. Phillips.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Kappa Delta Rho takes pleasure in announcing the pledging of Samuel Fenster, '29.

"Hinky" Haines, '28, has been elected manager of the chapter basketball team for the year. He is endeavoring to make up a schedule now.

A formal announcement of the engagement of brother Paul Seibert, '28, to Lena Van Norstrand, of Watsontown, Pa., was made last Monday at dinner. Paul is the first one at the house this fall to give up his pin.

Mr. Charles Joyce, who is attending Syracuse University, Megan Guynn, a student at Susquehanna University, and Frank Gallagher, of Old Forge, Pa., were visitors during the week-end.

Weisenfluh, '26, Carpenter, '27, and George, '27, and pledges Mechiner, '29, and Mayers, '29, attended the Penn State-Notre Dame game, at State College, Saturday.

The Ramblers, of Sunbury, Pa., will furnish the entertainment for the "town" dance Saturday evening, November 21.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

George Long, '24, and Robert Shaffer, '25, were week-end visitors.

Ray Edwards and Carl Hile were at Bloomsburg Normal School on Monday in the interests of the Y. M. C. A. World Court program.

Plans have been completed for the second "Sem" dance of the semester on the evening after the Dickinson game, November 21. R. Vincent McNamara's Lyric Orchestra of Williamstown has been engaged for the dance.

"Jeff" Thomas spent Saturday and Sunday at State College.

KAPPA GAMMA

The Rev. Father Nichols, pastor of the St. Joseph's church at Milton, spent Tuesday evening at the house as the guest of the fraternity. Musical selections from Kerwan and Krajeski and a warlike demonstration of potash and pulmotor by pledge Kerwan and Faul, opposing each other in debate, helped make the evening enjoyable.

"Al" Conklin and "Jim" Hurley were in Elmira, N. Y., during the week-end while "Pat" Gillespie, "Tony" Cieri, and "Fritz" Bavitz went to State College to see the State-Notre Dame and Frosh-Cub games.

BETA KAPPA

Eta chapter of Beta Kappa is planning a "Sem" dance for the evening of Friday, November 20.

Ernest Shaffer, Raldo Shipman, and Richard Beatty visited Shamokin during the week-end.

Galen S. McInroy, '24, who is now teaching science in the high school at Mifflintown, Pa., stopped at the house for a few minutes Sunday night returning to his work after a trip to Williamsport. He expects to attend the Dickinson game on November 21 and is bringing a Dickinson man along. How's that?

More than half of the members of the chapter are planning to attend the game at Annapolis next Saturday.

PI BETA PHI

Gladys Emerick, '22, of Shamokin, was married to Emery G. Erdman on Friday, Ocober 30.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Mrs. C. Willard Smith has accepted an invitation to become a Delta Delta Delta patroness.

Eleanor Little, '25, visited the Delta Delta Delta suite last week before she she returned to her home from a trip to Virginia.

Sara Peniz and Anna Van Dine attended the World Court Conference which was held in Harrisburg, October 30 to November 1.

The Delta Delta Delta girls gave a tea to their patronesses in the "Sem" parlors, November 5. The entertainment included a reading by Sarah Porter, and a vocal solo by Inez Robison, two of the pledges.

Give Banquet to Pledges

Saturday evening, November 7, at eight o'clock, Delta Delta Delta gave a banquet to its pledges in the Cameron House. The decorations were in green and white, and the idea of the pledges was carried out both in the decorations and in the entertainment. The entertainment consisted of toasts and the singing of fraternity songs. Other guests beside the pledges were Miss Fowler and Mrs. Sprague.

Anna Heysham, '24, Marries

Anna Heysham, '24, of Norristown, was married October 24, to Roy Schweiker, of Lansdown. The wedding took place in the Presbyterian church at Norristown. The bride was given away by her brother. Theodore Heysham, Jr., '24, and she was married by her father, the Reverend Theodore Heysham, ex-'91. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. Many Tri-Delta girls were present at the wedding. In fact, every girl in the bridal party was a Tri-Delt. Sarah Heysham, '28, her sister, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miriam Markham, '23, and Mrs. Paul Culp, formerly Louise Bensthoff, '24, who was married in Johnstown, September 31. Other Tri-Delta girls at the wedding were Sue Plummer, '21, Marjory Sprout, '23, Miriam Stanger, '24, and Ruth Weidenhamer, '24.

Billie Dakin, '26, has been elected to Theta Alpha Phi, honorary dramatic fraternity.

KAPPA DELTA

Kappa Delta was honored last week with a visit from Miss Lilu Blitch, the national inspector.

A tea, in honor of Miss Blitch, was given on Saturday afternoon, October 24. The guests included Dean Clark, representatives from the other sororities, and several patronesses—Mrs. Nogle, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. J. P. Wilyte, and Miss Brakeman.

Geraldine Kremer and Edna Watson sang, and Mrs. Whyte entertained with two colored-dialect readings. Miss Blitch then gave an informal talk in which she congratulated the sororities of the campus on their fine Pan-Hellenic spirit.

A banquet was held in the Manufacturers' Club of Milton, Monday evening, October 26. The guests of honor were Miss Blitch, Dean Clark, and the new pledges.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

A tea, in honor of the new patronesses, was given by Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega, in the beautifully decorated parlors of the "Sem" on Thursday afternoon, October 27.

The program consisted of fraternity and Bucknell songs, a soprano solo by Mildred Fox, accompanied by Doris Worrell and piano and vocal solos by Edythe Evans.

Louise Matthews, '26, poured behind a table shining with silver service, and cheery with yellow chrysanthemums.

The patronesses present included: Mrs. James H. Matthews, Mrs. Bond, Miss Judd, Mrs. Zeller, Mrs. Kerstetter, Miss Jenkins, Mrs. Ranck, Mrs. Shrum, and Mrs. Beatty. Dean Clark also was present for part of the tea.

Alpha Chi Omega will hold an informal bid dance in the Phi Gamma Delta house on November 20.

A beautiful big five-pound box of chocolates arrived at the Alpha Chi Omega suite last week, and on Sunday was almost completely demolished. The donor was "Al" Lauderbaugh, '27, Delta Sigma, who was merely complying with the unwritten law that whenever a man gives his fraternity pin to a member of Alpha Chi Omega, he must also give a five-pound box of candy to the fraternity. Phoebe Bloomfield, '27, is wearing the Delta Sigma pin.

PHI MU

Miss Marion R. Campbell, an instructor in the Bucknell School of Music, has consented to be a patroness of the local chapter of Phi Mu.

Phi Mu held a 10:30 dance at the Phi Gamma Delta house on Saturday evening, November 7. Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders furnished the music. Professor and Mrs. Stolz and Mrs. Phillips were chaperones.

"Margie" Morgan, '23, of Scranton, Wanda Nicol, '25, and Geneva Gerlach, '24, returned for the dance.

PHI MU ALPHA

In the regular meeting of Phi Mu Alpha held in the Norris studio of the school of Music, the fraternity voted to hold a dance on the evening of December 4.

Plans are under way for the staging of a Sinfonia concert sometime in the near future. The intensive work of the glee club before the Thanksgiving tour is handicapping the program committee in its work however.

C. E. A.

The pledges entertained the "Sem" girls on Wednesday evening as a part of their mock initiation. The evening's entertainment consisted of several very clever skits. The first, representing a circus side-show, was enthusiastically received. "Sally" Heysham, representing a matronly Bucknell alumnus, and Blanche Thompson, her daughter Patsy Ruth Yolanda Frank and her tempermental daughter, who was Pauline Lindley; Marjorie Bell and Mildred Marshall as her son "Dinny", Ruth Cooper and her infant child, "Sammy." Marie Salisbury, kept the audience laughing continually by their discussion of the various "Sem" girls and their affaires du coeur, until the circus commenced. Among the main attractions of the side show were the dwarf, Sara Deck; the fat lady, Ruth Keebler; the acrobat, Betty Jack and the gypsy fortune teller, Gladys Roberts.

The other two skits represented an operation on C. E. A. and finally, her funeral. Blanche Thompson, as the minister and Cornelia Trowbridge as the chief mourner, were especially clever.

At the end of the entertainment prizes were given to the best actors. Cornelia Trowbridge received first prize, a can of baked beans. Maria Salisbury received the booby prize.

The following girls were bid:

Vera Davis, '27, Sara Deck, '28, Marjorie Belle, '27, Pauline Lindley, '26, Maria Salisbury, '26, Blanche Thompson, '27, and Cornelia Trowbridge, '28, of Pi Beta Phi.

Yolanda Frank, '28, Sara Heysham, '28, Alice Lambert, '28, and Gladys Roberts, '26, of Delta Delta Delta.

Ruth Cooper, '28, Elizabeth Jack, '27, "Ted" Keebler, '28, Mildred Marshall, '26 and Lorinne Martin, '28, of Kappa Delta.

Plans are under way for a dance to be given on November 20.

We should be good, with all the talk
Of how to live and why;
Yet it just seems we can't be good,
No matter how we try.
We live and learn, and learn to live
And have examples fine,
To show us just the way to act
And keep ourselves in line;
But we must try and try some more,
And maybe time will tell
Just how we really did succeed
In "making good" Bucknell.

GLEE CLUB TO TOUR N. J.: SWAMPED BY MANY CALLS

The Bucknell University Glee Club is receiving more calls for concerts than it can possibly fulfill. Manager L. K. Davis originally had hoped for a week's tour, but to date, ten major concerts have been booked, and more inquiries are couging in daily.

The tour of Northern New Jersey will begin on Friday, November 20, at Perth Amboy, and the club will then appear successively in Newark, Elizabeth, Hillside, Westfield, East Orange Belleville, Roselle, and Scotch Plains. The club will sing over station WOR or WEAF on Sunday afternoon.

The University Quartet advertised the club in a very effective way at the New Jersey Baptist Convention at Atlantic City on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. Many delegates at the convention were enthusiastic in their praise of the work of the quartet and also of the solo features of Charles Kushel, Jr. and Melvin Shuttlesworth.

What the University Hatchet would like to see is a triangular match between George Washington, Georgetown, and Catholic University for a series of games to be played during the normal season each year, and arranged somewhat as the Yale, Harvard, Princeton combination. Such a series would be of great attraction in Washington, would prove financially successful, and would determine each year the collegiate football champions of the District of Columbia.

Let Them Know That You Saw Their "Ad" in The Bucknellian

HILLTOP BRIEFS

"Budd" Mose, '29, is walking around the campus again after a siege of la grippe.

Mrs. Addison Outwater of Westfield, N. J. visited her daughter Anna recently.

D. J. Barton, '27, spent the summer working as a bell hop at the Wellington Hotel, Albany, N. Y.

The Misses Jane Rees and Pauline Lindley spent a recent week-end at Miss Rees' home in Nanticoke.

Dr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Branch, of Binghamton, N. Y., recently visited their daughter, Priscilla Branch, '29.

Mr. and Mrs. John McIlvene of Dumont, N. J., have a small son, John Junior. Mrs. McIlvene was Hazel Marks, ex-'26.

William Gerlach, '28, went home to witness the results of the election, since his father was running for mayor of the city of Hazelton.

T. J. Foley, of Pittsburgh, has donated a new set of silverware to the Sigma Chi house. It certainly does improve the looks of the dining room.

Gilbert R. Frith, '27, having strained his back last Saturday when he helped to lift a Ford engine, is walking about the campus bent over like some old man.

Barbara Reifsnyder, '28, and Maria Salisbury, '26, spent a recent week-end at Franklin and Marshall College, where they were guests at the house party of the Paradise Club.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Walter, of Williamsport, Pa., were guests at the Sigma Chi house during a recent week-end. Mr. Walter is a teacher in the Williamsport High School.

Four sophomores stood up for the honor of '28 at the Frosh-Soph football game. Al Brenner, Hughes, Bob Vastine, and Hurley were very roughly handled by the parading freshmen.

"Now we see ourselves as others see us" was the thought of the juniors as proofs for L'Agenda pictures were examined. As a whole, they're a fairly good-looking class, we'll admit.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lair, ex-'26, are the parents of a son, Joseph Jr. Mrs. Lair was formerly Kathryn Kleckner, Phi Mu, '26. Mr. Lair was a member of Kapa Sigma fraternity.

Miss "Billie" Smith, '26, spent her summer vacation touring New England. While there she saw the famous "House of Seven Gables," Hawthorn's home, and the witches' house of Salem.

Professor Whyte's coupe was stuck in the mud at the Soph-Frosh game at the Stadium. Some students, who at the time, were men after Abraham Lincoln's own heart, pulled the car out of the mud.

"Jeff" Thomas visited his parents at Wyoming, Pa., a week ago Saturday. Jeff's brother, who is a student at Annapolis, says that Navy is offering big odds that she will trim the Bisons on November 14.

There was not much of a turnout to greet the returning team after the Holy Cross game. Perhaps more would have been there had we known we were to see such a spectacle as Trimmer had to offer.

"Cap" Sargeant, '28, "bummed" to Worcester to witness the Bucknell-Holy Cross gridiron battle. "Cap" made wonderful time on the return trip, traveling from Elizabeth, N. J. to Lewisburg in nine hours.

The Bacteriology class is making a survey of sewage from Milton, Mifflinburg, and Lewisburg. Samples of sewage are being collected from the river at both ends of the bridge and from Bull Run near the "Demie" house.

"Sweets to the sweet" seemed to be the judges' motto when they awarded the prize of a box of candy to "Sally" Myers, a French doll, at the Frill and Frown Hallowe'en party. Doris Worrell received a share of the prize because of the originality of her makeup as "Intercollegiate Sal."

Miss Gloria Gordon, who played the leading part in the record-breaking success, "The Flapper Wife" was entertained at the Sigma Chi house recently. Miss Gordon has just completed a picture with Ben Lyon and leaves this week for Miami, Florida, to play opposite William Russell in his latest film produced by the Tilford Studios.

Eugene Horsman severly injured his leg in the Sigma Chi-Lewisburg High School game, but is able to be around.

Edward S. Hoffman, '29, was severely burned by steam which burst forth from a leaking radiator in West College.

C. A. Weymouth, Jr., '29, worked with a gang of laborers last summer reconstructing the athletic field of the Merion Convent, at Merion, Pa.

Lieut. L. R. Horton, Jr., '27, of the Ordinance Reserve, has been assigned to the 623rd Company (Ammunition), with headquarters at Dunmore, Pa.

The engineering department has also purchased a Lycoming straight-eight motor from the Lycoming Motor Works. This engine is used in several standard automobiles.

The appearance of convict number 41, Clara Lummis, caused quite a disturbance among the Frill and Frown masqueraders, at the Hallowe'en party.

A 90 horse-power Curtis aeroplane engine has been set up in running order in the automobile shop of the Engineering Building. A fly wheel is put in place of the propellor.

The photograph of the ruins of the Holy Ghost College dormitory at Cornwells Heights, which recently appeared in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, was taken only two squares from the home of Duemler, '28.

Cornelia Trowbridge was awarded first prize for being the best character in the C. E. A. sketch recently held in the living room at the "Sem." Maria Salisbury was awarded the second prize for being the most original.

The Rev. Dr. R. M. West, pastor of the Baptist church of Lewisburg and a trustee of Bucknell, had charge of the chapel service November 5. He condemned dishonesty as a means of getting by in Bucknell and in life in general.

A member of our student body, is the author of the pageant entitled, "The Light of the World," which will be given at the Baptist church a few days before the Christmas holidays. The young lady is too modest to permit her name to be mentioned.

The newly organized string quartet of the Bucknell Glee Club made its first appearance in chapel Tuesday morning. This initial performance merited the highest praise. The men composing the quartet are Paul Stolz, Robert Smith, Alexander Horoschak, and Charles Bonte.

Charles Dunmire, Welty Grey, Ross Ormsby, and Frank Waldner, journeyed to Worcester in a Ford and reported having a fine time. The car was well decorated and drew considerable attention in the New England district. At Great Barrington a newspaper reporter took a picture of the car.

Gilbert Bennett, '27 Democratic Chairman

Chosen By Veteran Politicians To Lead Worth District

Democratic chairman for Worth District, insurance man, advertising manager of the Bucknellian, and student at Bucknell—these are some of the ways in which to describe Gilbert L. Bennett, the bustling junior who has charge of the advertising matter in this newspaper.

When Bennett cuts classes there is a legitimate reason. Last week-end he bustled back to Port Matilda, his home town, to get out the vote at Tuesday's election. The job isn't exactly a sinecure, either, for Worth District has 900 voters. The local judge of election said after the ballots were cast that the proportion of voters who came to the polls was larger than it had been in the sixteen years he had refereed the contests. Maybe the fact that some important offices were to be filled had something to do with that. And quite likely our Bucknell politican was another leading cause.

Obviously it is unusual for a college student to fill such a post as Bennett has. He was chosen for the position last August by the leaders of the Democratic party at Port Matilda, when the former chairman resigned after many years of service.

Bennett knew a host of voters in Worth District because he had worked in his father's store, and had built up a rather extensive insurance business of his own, which he still carries on, though away at college, through the services of a clerk and stenographer. For more than a year he has been a Scout Master, with a troop of thirty-two boys. During the past vacation, Bennett took his patrol to "The Pewee's Nest," a favorite camping and recreation spot on the Susquehanna River near Curwensville, recently re-named as Irving Park. The patrol was in camp there for ten days.

Bennett's wide acquaintanceship and his pleasing ways and business ability evidently recommended him to the older heads in the Democratic party. The chairman's mantle descended upon his unsuspecting shoulders last August shortly before college opened. The new district chairman spent the remainder of his vacation "pulling wires" and getting acquainted with such Democratic voters as he did not already know. The result was evident in the big vote in his district last Tuesday.

Only One State Not Represented At Geo. Washington Univ.

Forty-seven states and seventeen foreign countries are represented in the arts and sciences department of George Washington University. The name and fame of Arizona is hanging in the balance—it is the only state not having a loyal son or daughter to uphold its name in the most representative university of the nation's capital.

Have You Ever Heard?

That Bucknell has supplied more than one-sixth of all the present Baptist student pastors in American colleges and universities.

That these Bucknell student pastors are located at the following institutions of higher learning. The University of Pennsylvania, Des Moines University, Iowa Agricultural College, Cornell University, Bucknell University, and in Boston, where there are several colleges and universities.

That one of them is our own Dr. Raymond M. West, '89, who holds the degree of A. B. and A. M., from Bucknell, and the degree D. D., from Denver University, and who has served pastorates in Philadelphia, St. Paul, and Rochester, as well as serving as executive secretary for the New Jersey Baptist Convention.

That he was manager of the Bucknell football team in his student days and business manager of the first L'Agenda.

That another Bucknell student pastor is the Rev. Newton C. Fetter, '09, who looks after the interests of Baptist students in Boston and vicinity.

That his brother, John D. W. Fetter, '13, is a pastor at Ithaca, where he cares for the students at Cornell University, where he was director of religious work for the S. A. T. C. during the war.

That Frederick B. Igler, '12, is Baptist student pastor at the University of Pennsylvania, where he was for some time Y. M. C. A. religious work secretary.

That the Rev. Dr. Howland Hanson, ex-'91, is Baptist student pastor at Des Moines University.

That in a sense he is the father of football at Bucknell, or at least its step-father, because he was the first student to attend Bucknell who knew anything about football, and he really was the first man to give our team a correct idea of how to play the game.

That the Rev. R. B. Davidson, '94, the sixth Baptist student pastor looks after the students interest at the Iowa Agricultural College, at Ames, Iowa.

That the Baptist colleges of major rank number twenty-one and include Bates, Brown, Bucknell, Carleton, University of Chicago, Colby, Colgate, Denison, Franklin, Grand Island, Hillsdale, Kalamazoo, Kueka, Linfield, Ottawa, Redlands, Rochester, Shurtleff, Sioux Falls, Des Moines and William Jewell.

That in addition to these major institutions of higher learning the Baptists have nine theological seminaries, six training schools, six "junior" colleges, such as Broaddus, and sixteen secondary schools such as the Peddie School and the Keystone Academy.

That there are almost 34,000 Baptist students enrolled in American colleges, and that the Baptist institutions own property worth almost $49,000,000, and have endowment totaling more than $75,000,000.

That, to repeat, with all these institutions to draw from, the denomination has taken more than one-sixth of all its student pastors from Bucknell.

Alumni Notes

Mr. Miles Henninger, '23, married Miss Barbara Cathrine Huff of Dushore, Pa., on August 31. Mr. Henninger was an assistant in the Chemical Laboratory here for two years and is now studying law in Washington, D. C.

During the vacation months, Mr. M. B. Cook, '16, was promoted to the position of refining engineer in the bureau of mines and was made chief of the refining station at the Bottlesville station.

Announcements were sent out by Mr. and Mrs. George M. Kline of the marriage of their daughter, Esther Carol to Mr. John Haas Carter, '21, on Tuesday, August the fourth, nineteen hundred and twenty-five, at Trevorton, Pa.

Carl D. Smith, '19, who recently had charge of the dye plant at Scranton, Penna., is now working with the Tower Manufacturing Co. where he has charge of the manufacture of the paranitraniline, paraphenylene dimine, and sulphur bordo lines. This probably is the only plant in existence in which paranitraniline is made by this method.

Professor Glenn V. Brown, head of the department of chemical engineering, spent the week-end at Harrisburg and Carlisle. He visited his son at Harrisburg Academy and attended the game between Dickinson, his alma mater, and Albright.

ARE YOU GETTING AN EDUCATION

What an education is and how it may be acquired are questions that we all attempt to answer. Most of us approach some definite statement on the matter, a few go so far as to lay down rules, but no one has yet given a definition or stated a rule that will hold good wherever applied. Education is too broad a term and may be acquired in too many ways for any person to set forth one statement and say, "This is complete and final."

Likewise, the marks of an educated man are legion. There is no criterion by which we can judge, no scale in which we can weigh and find, "this man is educated; that one is not."

But without attempting to define education, we may safely say that it is a process of an active and progressive nature, it is known to be going on; the exact time of its inception is unknown, both for the individual and for the race; it has never been known to be complete.

Like most other processes, the manner and extent of this process of education is determined by the environment in which we find ourselves. The educated man of the fifties would be considered something of a numbskull today, just on his information. But the capacity to learn remains fairly constant. Interest determines the direction, capacity the extent of the education acquired.

The modern trend in society is toward cosmopolitanism. The environment which is determining our plan of education demands that we obtain a knowledge of the rudiments of a great number of things, and that we come to understand the underlying connections that tie all things together. The modern education has a world outlook. The student who believes he is obtaining an education but fails to accept the standards dictated by environment is cheating himself. He must accept the responsibilities that have become those of society and learn to deal with them. The man of the fifties was dealing with states rights and responsibilities. Today society deals with the problems of national and international rights and responsibilities.

Let us open our minds to the education of today.

10 Candidates Make Girl's Debate Squad

Will Form Two 3-Member Teams For Debates on Question, League of Nations

About sixteen girls tried out for the girls' debating squad at the tryouts held at Biology 52 between 3:30 and 5:30, Monday, November 2. The contestants were judged by Professor Coleman. The girls who made the squad, and from among whom the teams will be chosen, are Mildred Marshall, Ruth Cooper, Mary Dunkel, Helen Durkin, Goldena Guilford, Jean Matthews, Elizabeth Sale, Pauline Ware, Dorothy Riker, and Elizabeth McHose.

The subject of the try-out speeches was the same subject which will be used for the debates this year, "Resolved that the United States shall enter the League of Nations." The speakers were limited to five minutes each and judged on general debating ability. The girls chosen will constitute two teams of three members each with an alternate and a reserve member for each team.

All arrangements for practice debates, squad meetings, and other preparations have been put in the hands of Mildred Marshall who was recently elected temporary assistant manager.

Lives of editors all remind us,
That they're not at all sublime;
For they have to work like thunder
To get this paper out on time.

Student Conference To Evaluate Church

Delegates From Many States To Convene At Evanston, Ill., During Holidays

The indifference and hostility of the average college student towards the Church will have an unobstructed opportunity to express itself during the coming Christmas holidays at The Interdenominational Student Conference to be held at that time at Evanston, Illinois. At this meeting students of a great many religious denominations, and also many without denominational connection, coming from all parts of the United States, will make an unbiased evaluation of the Church and its adequateness as machinery towards the achievement of a better social order. The Baptist Church of Lewisburg is planning to send a student delegate to this conference.

College students, both those friendly and those indifferent to the Church, have long been aware of the inefficacy and comparative insignificance of the Church in the face of the great problems of the day. Many of the friendly group have despaired of working effectively through the Church and are wondering whether other means might not be more likely to produce results. During the summer months of this year several groups of students have made investigations of what the Church is actually doing in various fields. At the conference the results of these investigations, combined with illuminating addresses by two classes of speakers—those friendly and those hostile to the Church—will unite to form the evidence on which united youth will gauge its future policies.

The conference, which is expected to total over 1200 students, will meet in the First Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston. This is located within three blocks of the Northwestern University campus and is excellently fitted for conference purposes. In spite of the fact that it will be held in a church, the conference is free from any obligations to the Church as a whole, and will be absolutely unhampered in any of its expressions.

That this conference, the first of its kind, will be unusually well-attended is indicated by the enthusiastic response to the information literature sent out by the executive committee. Already in scores of universities throughout the country, small discussion groups have been formed to deal with the problems which the conference will take up. The conference headquarters, at 10 East Huron Street, Chicago, reports that at the request of students in every section of the United States thousands of information pamphlets have been dispatched and that already registrations are coming in.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

It seems that somebody must always be taking the joy out of life.

That somebody is usually a busybody, too.

The latest stunt to come to our attention is the absolute disrespect for the other fellow that is shown in what we may call "billboard etiquette."

Some of the men (?) of the college seem to think that well-painted signs and notices fill their purpose better attached to the walls of the rooms in the dormitories than they do on the official bulletin boards.

There are two things wrong with this idea. The first one is that the signs were meant for everybody to read. The fellow that posted them is being robbed of a benefit that he has a right to expect.

The second is simply that pasting or nailing such posters on the walls of the dormitory roms is not sanc- of the dormitory rooms is not sanc- run up the bill for upkeep.

If you really want one of the signs that appears on the bulletin board wait until it has served its purpose and then have courtesy enough to ask for it. The owner may want it himself.

It seems that the crank, gouge, rore-head, or whatever you want to call him, is always with us.

Saturday, when the first penalty against Bucknell in the Gallaudet game was called, some one called, "That's right, give them a touchdown."

Such calls as that are unsportsmanlike enough at any time.

They may just possibly find an excuse in a game where a slight bias on the part of an official means defeat or victory. But on the first penalty, with no evidence of bias on the part of the officials, and with the game as sure as the muddiness of the field,—well if that's Bucknell spirit then there are a lot of institutions we can take lessons from.

We know perfectly well that that isn't Bucknell spirit and that's one reason why we want those who pull such remarks to say them in a triple-condensed whisper. A few such remarks as that, made at the wrong time, can do a great deal to ruin a college's reputation.

The spirit that objects to the referee's decisions in athletic contests is the same as that which defies the law and the authority of the courts in ordinary civil life.

The point of all this is that we should be better sportsmen and better citizens. Let Bucknell stand for sportsmanship.

BUCKNELL ELEVEN BEATS GALLAUDET

ter clime, where they might get dried and thawed out. But our men were in their element in these adverse weather conditions, and continued their first half romp about the field over into the second frame for the benefit of the spectators who were so brave as to remain.

Detailed Account of Game

Bucknell choose to receive. Gallaudet kicked off to Bucknell's twenty-yard line, and the ball was run back by McCormick 20 yards. Bucknell fumbled on the next play on the fifty-yard mark, and a Gallaudet man recovered, and was downed in his tracks. In two plays, the visitors lost six yards. Then Bucknell intercepted a forward pass on the thirty-yard line. On the following play, McCleary went around left end to score the first touchdown of the game. McCormick's kick was good. Bucknell 7, Gallaudet 0.

McCormick drop-kicked for the kick-off. Gallaudet brought the ball back 50 yards to Bucknell's twenty-five-yard line. Three runs by Gallaudet only lost them 10 yards, so they kicked. McCleary took the punt back 65 yards, and might have scored, but dropped down on Gallaudet's five-yard mark to put McCormick into kicking position. The drop-kick was successful. Bucknell 10, Gallaudet 0.

Gallaudet's kick-off was returned by McCormick for 22 yards. McCleary and McCormick each carried the ball twice, putting it on the opponents twenty-five-yard line. McCormick's drop-kick failed. Shortly, after Gallaudet took the ball, a pass was intercepted by McCormick on Gallaudet's twenty-five-yard line. McCormick's drop-kick for 32 yards was good. Bucknell 13, Gallaudet 0.

McCormick kicked off with a drop-kick, and then ran ahead to retrieve his own kick after Gallaudet failed to hold it. Three times Sid Goodwin carried the ball, the third time going across the goal. McCormick made the extra point. Bucknell 20, Gallaudet 0.

Bucknell kicked over Gallaudet's goal line. Here, a Gallaudet man touched the ball, but it was not picked up by them, and Hulick ran forward and covered it, which gave Bucknell her third touchdown. McCormick's kick added one more point, and the score stood 27-0. A minute later the quarter ended, with the ball in Bucknell's possession on her forty-yard line.

To start the second quarter, McCormick passed to Tuck for a short gain. The next play brought a 15-yard penalty for Bucknell. McCormick passed to Hulick, who let the ball fly out of his arms. McCleary, following close behind, gathered the ball in, and took it to the half-way mark. McCormick ran around the right end for 25 yards. Several plays netted little, then McCormick attempted another drop, but failed. Gallaudet could not advance from the twenty-yard line, and kicked. Bucknell returned the punt to Gallaudet's thirty-yard line. At this point, Bucknell replaced her whole line by the regulars. McCleary started around left end for a touchdown, but stopped five yards from the goal. McCormick made his third drop-kick of the game. Bucknell 30, Gallaudet 0.

Trimmer kicked over Gallaudet's goal line. On the first play, E. Goodwin recovered a fumble on the ten-yard line. McCormick missed the posts on a drop-kick. Gallaudet made two incomplete forward passes, and failed to gain through the right guard. End of first half. Score 30-0.

Bucknell kicked off over the goal line. From the twenty-yard line, Gallaudet advanced the ball 2 yards; then failed to gain on a tackle plunge and a pass; then kicked. S. Goodwin ran 20 yards to Gallaudet's twenty-yard line. A line play and a pass gained 12 yards. McCormick's drop-kick failed. Gallaudet, on her twenty-yard line, lost fifteen yards throwing a bad pass from center; then punted to their twenty-five yard line. McCleary ran out of bounds half way to the goal. Bucknell fumbled and Gallaudet recovered. In two plays they made 13 yards, then fumbled. McCleary ran around left end for a touchdown. McCormick's kick failed. Score 36-0.

M. Goodwin returned the kick-off to Bucknell's forty-five. McCleary knocked off 24 yards on a left end run, then 15 more around the other side, placing the pigskin on the opponents' four-yard mark. On the second center rush by the offensive, McCormick went over for a touchdown. His kick failed. Score 42-0.

Bucknell kicked off to Gallaudet's five-yard. Gallaudet returned the ball for 17 yards. A tackle plunge netted them nothing. Quarter ended.

McCleary intercepted a pass, and ran for his third touchdown of the afternoon. McCormick's kick added a point. Score 49-0.

Gallaudet received the kick-off on its twenty-five-yard line, and returned it four yards. A Gallaudet pass was intercepted by S. Goodwin in midfield. Gaskill ran around right for a touchdown. McCormick kicked for the point. Score 56-0.

Bucknell returned the kick-off 20 yards to the forty-five-yard line. Gaskill did not gain on two runs. S. Goolwin made 20 yards on an end run. Gaskill made three yards, then was thrown for an equal loss. Gallaudet fumbled, Bucknell recovered. Two forward passes by McCormick were incomplete. Gallaudet was given the ball on her thirty-three yard line. A pass grounded. End of game. Final score: Bucknell 56, Gallaudet 0.

Going To Navy Game? Here's The Itinerary

Many Points Of Interest To See Including Armory And Gym. And Long Sea Wall

For the benefit of those who intend to hike to the Navy game, the Bucknellian prints an itinerary of the best route to Annapolis:

Sunbury
Harrisburg (cross river)
York
Loganville
Parkton
Towson
Baltimore
Annapolis

Students who arrive in Annapolis before the game should make it a point to visit the Naval Academy Chapel wherein lies the sarcophagus containing the body of John Paul Jones, famous Revolutionary hero. The guide will point out the figures of Woodrow Wilson, Christ at Gethsemane, the headless Horseman, and many other characters, all formed by the natural grain of the beautiful marble pillars which support the roof of the vault.

The armory, gymnasium, and Bancroft Hall are other buildings on the grounds in which the usual visitor finds chief interest.

In driving around the grounds one has to be careful of the sea wall. Almost every year some stranger in taking a turn, loses control of the machine, or takes a wide turn and lands in the Bay. General Grant said that the waters of the Severn river and the Spa Creek which converge at Annapolis, were the clearest inland waters which he had ever seen.

Annapolis itself is a quaint old town chiefly known for the Academy and the three adjoining circles in the center of the town into which all the straight running streets converge. These are known as Capital Circle, the Governor's Circle, and St. John's Circle, St. John's College being situated on the last site. Strangers have been known to aimlessly wander around these circles for more than an hour before they have sensed that they were not getting anywhere so Bucknellians, if they have the slightest doubt, should ask directions often if they would save themselves trouble.

Last Saturday's scores of teams appearing upon the Bucknel schedule follow:

Navy 27	Western Maryland 0
Dickinson 0	Gettysburg 6
Detroit 12	St. Louis Univ 6
Drayton 6	Haskell Indians 2
Holy Cross 0	Fordham 17
Georgetown 40	Lehigh 0
St. Bonaventure 34	St. Francis 0

BUCKNELL YEARLINGS TIE NITTANY CUBS

August Runs Ninety-three Yards For Touchdown. Walls Kicks Point For 7-7 Tie

Fight, sheer guts, we would like to use a more refined word, but a less expressive synonym would not commence to describe the spirit which enabled the plucky Frosh to hold the heavy Nittany Cubs to a 7 to 7 tie in the game played on New Beaver field, State college, last Saturday.

Throughout the entire first quarter's play, although outweighed, twelve pounds per man, the yearlings more than held their own. Then in the third period when every available Frosh substitute had been rushed into the fray to take the place of an injured brother, which a tackle who had been taken out in the first half because of injuries, with Mahood who had not before been used as snapper-back acting as center, with Parsons whose injured leg should have kept him on the sidelines for another week, with the whole team reeling from fatigue, the Lion Cubs pushed across their only score. Neal, the State star who has had several years' experience with the Quantico Marines, skirted end on the fourth down for State's lone tally. Even then the Frosh were not beaten. On the first try for point after touchdown, Mitchell crashed through the line and blocked the kick, but the referee called a doubtful penalty, both teams off-side. Then Neal threw a pass to Delp for the extra point.

Only eclipsed by the grit of the team as a whole was August's ninety-three yard run back of Neal's punt. Several times previously August had skirted end for first downs, but it was not until he fought with his back to the goal line that he rose to his full powers. Neal kicked from the fifty-five-yard line to August standing on his own seven-yard mark. The doughty back cuddled the ball in his arm, side-stepped three charging State tacklers, twisted through two more, and sped down a clear field fifteen yards ahead of his closest pursuer. Then "Red" Walls entered for the first time in the afternoon's heroics. A placement kick was called, for the ball seemed heavy. "Tex" booted the cowskin directly between the posts but not high enough. The flopsy ball smacked the crossbars, careened upward and over for the point which proved the saving counter.

Late in the third period Walls again saved the game by a remarkable tackle. Neal skirted the end from his own twenty-yard mark. Past the line he crashed, past the secondary defense and up to August the Bucknell safety man, but Neal brushed by the slender August like a stone through leaves. He halted momentarily on the fifty-yard line. During the pause two movements occurred. Three massive State backs flanked Neal, one on the side nearest the side-line and two on the side toward the field. Tearing hotfoot behind came the flaming terror from Texas. Abreast the solid phalanx of panting State backs, on the side toward the center of the gridiron, Neal was still flanked by two State men, but Walls threw his body in front of their pounding hoofs to gather in Neal's legs on the thirty-yard marker.

But the man who contributed most to the Frosh exhibition featured in no critical plays. He was in every play. Acting Captain Tropp played the best game on the field. Down under every punt, he dropped the receiver in his tracks. Frequently he broke through the Nittany forwards to throw the backs for losses. Tackle was no keeping him out. First he tackled on his own side of the field, then he was diving clear over on the other side to bring a back to earth. Dizzy and staggering in the last quarter, until a time out foolishly called by a State back gave him a chance to recover, Tropp was still in the game.

Druggist: "Yes, miss, you'll find that most ladies like this lipstick."
Young Girl: "You couldn't—ah—tell me the kind the men like, could you?"

Sidelights From Side Lines

This is from the Navy publicity office:

"Next Saturday's game against Bucknell should give a line as to whether the defeat of the Army team is possible. Bucknell has a big, well-coached team and has a traditional rivalry with the Navy, always pointing specially for that contest. For years, Bucknell has been the last team to meet the Naval Academy prior to the Army contest, and many have learned to gauge the probable showing of the midshipmen by their work against Bucknell."

Jupiter Pluvius, that overworked God of the scribes, again proceeded to ball things up for "Unk." It was all decided that McCormick should annex the collegiate field goal record for a single game, by placing nine or more boots between the goal posts in the Gallaudet game. But the "best laid plans of mice and football coaches gang aft agley."

Bellefonte bumped the Freshmen off 48 to 0. Syracuse Frosh beat Bellefonte 7 to 0. The Nittany Cubs defeated Syracuse yearlings 6 to 0. And then the Bucknell Frosh held State to a 7 to 7 tie. After solving this take up Einstein on relativity as a little light reading.

Survey Shows Bucknellian Has More News Than Any of Its Many College Exchanges

WRITER SHOWS HOW AND WHY THIS IS DONE

Students doubtless often wonder just what causes the editors of college publications to carry that worried and more or less absent expression that is so easily to be found on the ordinary college campus. Some of them also wonder why the paper does not come out on time and why, when it does come out, not everything is as it should be. One of the people interested in this problem was sufficiently interested to conduct a little investigation "on his own hook," so to speak, and has asked us to publish some of the results.

Now we've long been waiting for an oportunity for an apology for the recent long-continued tardiness of our publication, and so welcomed the chance to lay out a few facts and figures in addition to our profound regrets and pleas for assistance and greater cooperation.

Now for a glimpse of what it's all about. The Bucknellian is what is called "an eight-page, six-column sheet." That is not a misnomer for it states concisely just how large the paper is. For those who desire further detail, the columns are standard width, thirteen ems, and measure twenty inches in length. The columns of the front page are two inches shorter than the others to allow space for the heading. Then, by practicing a little elementary mathematics (arithmetic), we come to the conclusion that the paper contains forty-eight columns with a total printing content of 948 column inches. Since the paper is approximately forty per cent. advertising there are 380 inches of this space accounted for and 568 inches remaining to be filled with news. And news printed, as ours is, in eight-point type averages forty words to the column inch. Multiplication brings the rather amazing result, that for each week's issue of the Bucknellian, news alone requires 22,720 words. This may be reduced by about twelve per cent. which is taken up by headlines.

But the mere writing of the news is only one phase of the work. Every piece of work that is turned in, every piece that is written by the editor himself, must be carefully read to insure accuracy in statements, correct English, conformance to editorial policy, and beyond that conformity to rules of style that every paper adopts for itself and can be learned only through experience and careful observation of the changes made in the "copy" turned in as it appears when published . As a matter of fact half of the stories received by the Bucknellian staff are rewritten altogether during the process of editing, while the perfect piece of copy, one that can get by without a mark, remains for a future contributor to send in.

Once the news is collected, written and edited, it must be "set up" in type. This is done by a machine called the "Linotype" and is one of the processes with which the student managers of the paper have little to do. But when the type is set the work begins anew. Every line and every word of the material must be carefully read over to guard against errors that may have slipped through on the first reading, and to find errors made by the compositor, as the man who sets the type is called. This reading is done on first impressions from the type, called "proofs."

Another process that usually follows the setting of the type is the writing of the headlines. This would appear to be simple at first sight for it is a perfectly easy thing to read the headline of a story and sense what the whole thing contains. But it is an entirely different proposition to find out what is in the story in the first place, and then state it in a sentence containing a certain number of letters. The work of writing headlines is as interesting and engrossing as, and really far more cultural, than the working of crossword puzzles, but it is work. Some headlines will require a half hour's careful consideration and planning and counting. The "inspired" head, one that springs up in the mind and just fits the space is indeed rare.

Even before the headlines can be written the managing editor must have in mind the importance of the story, what kind of a head it should have, and where it is to be placed in the paper when the paper is printed. After heads are written and set in type, a process usually done by hand, the paper must be arranged. The advertisements are the first material to be placed and they are usually arranged to show up to the best possible advantage. Then comes the news and other material that is ment for general reading. The placing of articles so that the paper is attractive in form is a work of art in itself, an art whose mastery is never attained.

And when the last article is set in the forms and ready to print, one last precaution is taken. Before the type is put on the press, each page is "proofed" and the articles receive a final reading, to make sure that parts have not been omitted or misplaced, or put in under the wrong heads. Then the paper "goes to press" and the final step is left to the circulation manager who often works in the late hours wrapping and mailing the copies to be sent to alumni and subscribers and travelling over the campus distributing the results of a week's labor.

It may interest you to know that among the mass of college papers regularly received by the Bucknellian, only three issue eight-page weeklies—Pitt, Temple, and Swarthmore. Penn State issues bi-weekly a four-page paper. Rutgers publishes a six-page paper. Lehigh, Lafayette, Washington and Jefferson, Ursinus, Delaware, Allegheny, Gettysburg, and other colleges of our class, issue four-page weeklies.

The Temple Weekly is a small sheet, less than half the size of the Bucknellian. The Pitt Weekly and the Bucknellian are identical in size. The Penn State Collegian is one column wider than the Bucknellian. The first two of these three papers represent student bodies of approximately 8,000 and 7,000 respectively. Penn State has an enrollment of three to four thousand. Rutgers, with a larger enrollment than Bucknell, issues a six-page paper.

A comparison of news matter is interesting. In a given week recently Allegheny published 15.3 columns of news; Gettysburg, 15.6 columns; Lafayette, 16 columns; Lehigh, 14.6 columns; W. and J., 15.9 columns; Swarthmore, 16 columns; Rutgers, 16 columns; Ursinus,13 columns; Temple, 24 columns, equivalent to Bucknellian columns; Penn State, 12.2 columns, equivalent to 24.4 columns for the two issues in a week; Pitt, 26.7 columns; and Bucknell 28.5 columns.

These figures speak for themselves. They are given here to explain why the editors of the Bucknellian ask for greater and continued cooperation from the student body. The task of providing you with a weekly paper that contains more news than any college paper on our exchange list, and almost twice as much news as is found in most papers issued by colleges of our class, is more of a burden than the student body realizes. But the staff tries to make your paper a good one.

DUKE UNIVERSITY HAS $80,000,000 ENDOWMENT

An announcement was made recently by representatives of the late James B. Duke that the $40,000,000 educational and charitable endowment fund created by the tobacco and power magnate, will be doubled under the provisions of the will filed in Somerville, N. J.

The trustees of the Duke Foundation now have at their disposal a fund of $70,000,000 for orphanage, hospital, and religious work in addition to the millions which will go to Duke University, the chief beneficiary. The part of the residuary estate set aside to provide an annuity for Mrs. Duke will go to the foundation at her death.

Duke University, the endowment of which is thus increased to $80,000,000, now has a larer endowment fund than any other university in the United States.

Harvard University has led the universities and colleges of the country hitherto in the size of its endowment, having $64,413,891 last year when a compilation was made. Columbia University had an endowment of $56,407,421; Yale, $39,697,257; Chicago University, $31,992,620; Leland Stanford, Jr., University, $27,279,571; John Hopkins University, $19,741,717; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, $17,122,000; Rochester University, $14,924,000; Princeton University, $14,000,000, and the University of Pennsylvania, $10,208,000.

Students Make Out Own Bills

This year at the University of Rochester a new custom is being inaugurated. Each student is to make out his own term bill. Each student is to "sign on the dotted line" the amount for laboratory fees, and dormitory rental, but is not to deduct the amount allowed for a scholarship.

Dalzell M. Griffith, Is Acting C. E. Head

Has Had Industrial Experience; Planned Cement Testing Lab.; Making One For Hydraulics

Dalzell M. Griffith, '23, is another of the younger alumni of Bucknell who has recently made good in the teaching profession and has risen to prominence and responsibility. Beginning his instructorship in 1924 he was promoted to an assistant professorship in 1925 and is now acting head of his department, civil engineering.

Mr. Griffith began his college career at Bucknell in 1918, and was inducted as a member of the Students' Army Training Corps, Bucknell Unit. When a quota of forty S. A. T. C. men, excellent in mathematics and enrolled in the engineering courses, was selected for transfer to Camp Zachary Taylor, field artillery school, Griffith was among those who went.

After the armistice, when he received his discharge, Griffith found employment as a county surveyor in Cambria County, Pennsylvania. In the fall of 1919 he again took up his studies at Bucknell, and graduated with the class of 1923 with the degree, bachelor of science in civil engineering.

Griffith spent one summer during his college course, 1920, with the Semet-Solvey Co., installing coke ovens. The next he held a position in the steel wheel plant of the Cambria Steel Works, located at Johnstown. Between his junior and senior years he was connected with the United States Steel Company, working as a designer for the Johnstown street railway system. After graduation he again entered the employ of the United States Steel Company, until offered a position as an instructor in civil engineering at Bucknell. He took up his duties here in the fall of 1924. This spring he was advanced to the assistant professorship in his department, and is now acting head of the civil engineering department.

Along with his teaching duties Mr. Griffith has been in charge of the designing and installation of new cement testing equipment in the laboratories of the recently built first wing of the Engineering Building. At present he is busy planning a hydraulic laboratory. While a student in the University he was for three years an assistant in engineering drawing, and for one year in surveying.

March 30, 1923, Mr. Griffith married Miss Beatrice Powell, of Johnstown, Pa. Since last fall they have been living at 130 Brown street. Mr. Griffith is an active member of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, and of the Bucknell chapter of Pi Mu Epsilon, national honorary scholarship and mathematics fraternity. He is also a charter member of the local chapter of Kappa Delta Rho.

Ed Humphreys, '26, Ships As Seaman

Becomes Deck Hand on "Dakota" For Briny Trip to Seattle During Summer Vacation

Edward Humphreys, '26, turned himself into a seaman for the summer and sailed the briny deep. Through some friends in New York, Eddie, secured a position as deck hand aboard the Steamship "Dakota," a freighter owned by the American-Hawaian Line Steamship Company. The "Dakota" plied between New York and Seattle, passing thru the Panama Canal on its route.

Eddie took one cruise to Seattle and back. He went from New York to Panama, then through the Canal, a passage requiring eight hours, then to Los Angeles, and San Francisco, and Seattle. Returning the ship touched at Tacoma, Sea Port, Astoria, in addition to the other ports.

On the out-bound trip, the ship carried a cargo of steel, machinery, etc. Coming back it was loaded with peas, beans, salmon, wool, borax and hides. In addition to this cargo in its hold, the ship carried a deck cargo of old rubber automobile tires, valued at $175,000.00. The deck cargoes are piled on the decks, and sometimes a hurricane will come along and sweep the stuff down to Davy Jones' Locker. However, Eddie says this did not happen to the "Dakota," as the ship encountered no severe storms.

On the trip, Eddie saw several whales and dolphins swimming in the ocean. Off the coast of Mexico, he saw some huge turtles swimming about. They measured probably three feet in diameter. Near the coast of Costa Rica, he caught butterflies and moths. He saw "flying fishes playing," and the phosphorus glittering in the moon light.

The crew itself was interesting. It was composed of men from nearly all parts of the world, and made an interesting sociological study. The deck crew was made up of six men; three able bodied seamen, and three ordinary seamen. Eddie was rated as an ordinary seaman. The sleeping quarters for the deck crew were situated near the stern of the ship, and when the ship was passing through southern waters, it became so warm that the men were forced to sleep on the deck. The whole crew of the ship consisted of about fifty men.

Eddie had the privilege of looking over the campuses of the University of Washington, and of the University of California, while traveling about, and he reports that the Bucknell campus compares favorably with either of them. While in California he talked over the telephone with Mr. Theron Clark, former registrar of Bucknell, now connected with the southern division of the University of California.

Eddie reports a delight summer and it seems that he must be telling the truth.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

TO STUDY TRAFFIC

Bureau of Street Traffic Research Created By Studebaker Corp. at University of Cal.

A bureau of street traffic research, endowed with funds to provide two graduate fellowships, has just been created in the University of California. The funds have been given by the Studebaker Corporation of America and the course will be known as the Albert Ruskin Erskine Bureau for Street Traffic Research.

The two fellowships will pay $1,000 a year to each graduate engineering student to develop intensive research.

The headquarters of the bureau will be in southern branch of the University of California at Los Angeles. It will limit its study to urban traffic difficulties and their corrections. Pedestrian control, conflicts between street cars and motor cars, parking methods, speed, street design,, grade separation, signaling devices, uniform regulations, and allied subjects will be studied. Its reports will be available for all American cities.

The bureau will be in charge of Dr. Miller McClintock, who formerly was connected with the Government research bureau in Harvard University.

"Much of the failure of American cities to deal effectively with street traffic may be attributed to lack of technical information," said Mr. Erskine in outlining the urgent need of expert traffic studies. "Traffic is an engineering problem. It can be controlled satisfactorily only by sound engineering methods."

PENN HAS GIRL TUTORS

"Big Sister" Plan Is Initiated To Keep Freshmen Girls From Flunking

Freshmen co-eds at the University of Pennsylvania who find they are failing in one or more subjects are to be given special tutoring under the "big sister" plan being worked out by Mortar Board, the senior girl's association. The society is working in connection with the School of Education office in an effort to cut down the number of new students who flunk part of their freshman studies.

"The freshman who finds zoology, botany, history, mathematics, or French a problem that she cannot solve alone," a Penn senior coed said, "should be helped, and if there is cooperation in this new system she will be helped."

A drive for upperclassmen tutors opened recently. Seniors and Juniors who wished to help the girl freshmen were urged to sign up.

"It is hard to overestimate the importance of this project," a Mortar Board member said. " o one upperclassman it may mean only one hour from the whole term, but to the freshman whom she helps it may mean that she will be saved possibly from being dropped from the university rolls.

TWO 1925 PRINCETON GRADS FOUND MUSIC CONSERVATORY

Two members of last year's senior class of Princeton University, Robert M. Crawford, of Seattle, and Gordon Groth, of Cleveland, have founded a conservatory of music at their alma mater.

The conservatory is decidedly a new venture for Princeton. A series of recitals by artists invited from Philadelphia and New York and a Bach festival in the spring, in which a mixed chorus of fifty voices will combine with the university orchestra, are features of the ambitious musical program of the two young directors.

Crawford was president of the Princeton Triangle Club last year. He has studied at the New England Conservatory of Music and for two years at the Conservatoire Americaine de Fontainebleau at Paris.

Groth was president and soloist of the university orchestra while an undergraduate and is an excellent violinist. While at the Conservatoire Americaine de Fontainebleau in Paris he won first prize for his playing and diplomas both as virtuoso and teacher.

COLGATE TESTS SHOW MEN LEAD IN EMOTIONAL STABILITY

While intelligence tests have put to flight old-fashioned notions of male superiority, recent investigations at Colgate University reveal that men still have the edge in emotional stability. Donald A. Laird and Thomas McClumpha, in testing 600 men and about 400 women students, found that women have more artificial emotional outlets than men. Men live their emotions, while women think theirs.

Twenty per cent more women pretend spurious mental fatigue than men; 10 per cent more women are introvert; more women too, are neurasthenic. But hysteria is as common with one sex as with the other.

LATIN STUDY GAINS

Penn Reports 90 percent Increase In Study of Latin Among Its Students Over Four Year Period

University of Pennsylvania professors are at a loss to account for a 90 per cent increase in the number of students who are studying Latin at the university. This increase has occurred during the last four years, according to Dr. Roland G. Kent, professor of comparative philology at Penn.

"Although there has been a steady gain in the Latin class enrollment, this year has been marked by an unprecedented gain in the number of students in advanced classes," Dr. Kent said.

Enrollment figures show that in 1922-23 there were 465 undergraduates taking courses in Latin. In 1923-24 the number increased to 533; in 1924-25 the total was 634 and this year the total has reached 876.

"Those who contend that the study of Latin is on the decline, and that it should be dropped as a part of the educational curriculum, certainly can find nothing in the enrollment statistics of American schools to support their contention," Dr. Kent said.

"The increased enrollment in Latin courses here at the university may be taken as an example of the attitude of college and university students toward the study of latin.

"Latin certainly cannot rightly be classed as a dead language when it has so many uses in everyday life. Not only are Latin phrases freely used in our English speech, but in addition untranslated quotations from Horace, Virgil, Cicero, Livy, Terence, Catullus, Lucan, Tertullian, and others appear frequently in the columns of the newspapers. Our whole mental background is derived from the classics; it is from them we draw our inheritance and our inspiration."

PITT DROPS BASEBALL

Difficulty of Arranging Schedule With Other College Nines Given as Cause.

The University of Pittsburg has decided to drop base-ball as a varsity sport, formal action having been taken by the University Athletic Council.

The reason for abolishing base-ball was that it was found impossible to arrange a schedule. When the Pitt Stadium was constructed it was decided to try to boost base-ball, playing the games in the stadium, which provided an excellent field.

With base-ball abolished, special attention will be given to the development of lacross and track during the spring. The Pitt stadium has quarter track and 220 straightaway, and with Frank J. Shea, of 47 3-5 second quarter mile fame as coach, the Panthers eventually will stand out in that important branch of intercollegate athletics. Shea had 150 men out for the track team last year, even with the poor facilities furnished. It is expected to have the crowd increased to 400 or 500 for this spring.

NEW YORK PORTERS ENDOW A UNIVERSITY SCHOLARSHIP

Negro "Redcaps" at the Pennsylvania railroad station in New York have endowed a university scholarship to be awarded each year to the son of a station porter who has achieved the highest high school record in English, mathematics, history, and chemistry.

The scholarship is vaued at $200 a year. Each porter at the station has pledged $1.00 every year until the winners have completed their college courses.

Girl Wins Brunton Prize

A young Scottish girl student, Janet Niven, who wears her brunette hair shingled, beat all the men students in the medical courses of Glasgow University to gain the Brunton Memorial Prize this year, awarded for the most distinguished record of a graduating student. This was the first time in the history of the university that a woman has won this prize.

Thirty-five other women students received their degrees in medicine this year, and twenty-three of them wear shingled hair.—Public Ledger.

Want Military Training Optional

More than 3,000 students at the University of Minnesota have signed a petition asking that military training be made optional for freshmen and sophomores. At the University of Michigan drill is optional. Two years ago it was made elective at the University of Wisconsin. The campaign against compulsory drill is now raging at the Universities of Washington, California, Kansas, Nebraska, and Georgia, also at Boston University, Syracuse University, Northwestern University and Pennsylvania State College.

PROF. BOND TALKS TO MINISTERIALS

Society Elects Dakin President For Current College Year; Other Officers Chosen

The Bucknell Ministerial Association held its first meeting for this year last Wednesday, November 4. A talk by Professor Charles M. Bond was the feature of the program.

Professor Bond, who teaches religious education, told the group about some of the joys of the ministry and the necessity of adopting and maintaining a decided stand on the issues that confront the minister. "There is no work," he said, "that is greater than the active ministry." He mentioned some incidents he has encountered in his career as a minister, and related some of his experiences as student pastor in a western university.

His aim now is to become associated with the leaders of tomorrow. To him no greater thrill has ever come than that of being pastor of a community church. The pastor is the first person people approach when they are in trouble. In the personal life of the minister, courage and patience are essential.

"While in college do not think so much of theology," councilled the speaker. "Get to know folks. Make about half a dozen good friends, people you can rely on. Do not try to be in favor of all groups,—make a stand."

After Professor Bond's talk, Roland N. Dutton, '26, president of the association, reviewed the purpose of the organization for the benefit of the freshmen. The business of the meeting included the election of officers.

Barton Dakin, '28, received the unanimous vote for president The elections of J. Harold Gamble, '28, for vice president and for secretary, and of Vincent Loper, '29, for treasurer, were also unanimous. A brief talk by president-elect Dakin brought the meeting to adjournment.

"Going home? Guess Siam too. If you wait till I get this fellow to Philosino ice cream I'll Russia out in my Seian."

"Say, when did you and the Sheba move India new home?"

"Oh about a week ago. There is nothing to do out home but I Malay down or I Morocco baby to sleep. Got six kids out home and last night I Guatemala stick of candy and I Haiti go home without something tonight."

NOVEMBER

If you are a member of the November family, you are in the way of becoming an interesting personality. The star which shines over your destiny is Jupiter, guiding you along your lucky way. Your color is blue and your luck runs to Thursday, as to day, garnet as to stone, and 21 as to number. Stick to these and your luck really runs smoothly.

In addition to the luck, there is great chance for the November-born to amount to something in this world, for these people are usually far-seeing in plans for the future. They have strong will-power and frequently devote themselves to bringing about a certain great change or principle in which they are interested. They live up to the high ideals they have and work toward a definite goal. They do, however, differ greatly in personality, often going to extremes in kindness, cruelty, etc. They are usually respected for their ordinary characteristics and not for the ones they assume on occasion.

They are sometimes exclusive, making few friends, but when once a friend they remain loyal. They are often extremely affectionate in private yet dislike demonstrative and public affection. They are dignified and polite in public, holding to the standard that private emotions should never be revealed to others.

They are slow workers, planning slowly but surely the best means to success, and beginning slowly, taking time in the starting of a new enterprise. They face defeat and success in the same way, not complaining and not over-jubilant. They are especially good workers when the gain is to be for themselves, and when once started they are hard to stop in any enterprise in which they are interested. They are, however, physically lazy and are better at mental work and at the head of the job rather than working for another. This is also due to their aptitude for sarcastic, quick tempers. When not quick tempered they are sure to possess good judgement and can be relied upon.

Their main asset is their ability to get work done with surness and precision, for they have the ability to be whatever they wish to be, provided they work toward that aim. They should restrain their tempers whenever possible for in that lies their greatest foe to ultimate success.

DEPARTMENT HEADS ASKED TO TALK ON TEACHING METHODS

Students of Education To Hear Series of Lectures During Educational Week

Tentative Program Given

The Education Department has announced a plan which has recently been formulated with the purpose of benefiting all Education students. Arrangements have been made for the professors in various departments to speak before the practice teaching groups that are interested in their respective departments. In order to accommodate all groups there will be a series of meetings between professors and students, extending over the period from Monday, November 9, to Thursday, November 19, sessions being held on an average of one every two days.

At each meeting one of the professors from the campus will address the group, dispensing information and instruction that will be valuable to the practice teachers who intend teaching the courses that are dealt with in the talks.

The tentative program for the conference, giving the date, department dealt with, and speakers is as follows:

Monday Nov. 9, at 10:30 o'clock meeting of club sponsors; Monday November 9 at 1:30 o'clock, Latin—Professor Ballentine; Wednesday, November 11, English—Professor Robbins; Thursday, November 12, History—Professor Colestock; Friday November 13, Mathematics—Professor Everitt; Monday, November 14, French—Professor Griffith; Wednesday, November 16, Biology—Professor Rice; Thursday, November 19, English—Professor Robbins.

A continuation of this program will be published in the near future.

There are very bright prospects that Bucknell will next year be given the opportunity to offer a course along educational lines, taught by Doctor C. D. Koch, Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction. Doctor Koch is an authority in matters relating to education, and the addition of this course to the curriculum will be an excellent one.

The education department will become a center of interest in a short time, as week after next, November, 16-22, is National Education Week. At this time the education movement, its progress, and its contemplated projects for the future will be celebrated. The purpose of the observance is primarily to stimulate enthusiasm for education in this country.

The Bureau of Education has issued a bulletin on "How, Why, and When to prepare for Education week", also a broadside of articles regarding the education movement, and a publication called "School Life." The October number of the first named pamphlet contains suggestions for the planning of a program for the week. Each day of the seven has been set aside for the special observance of some particular phase of school work and interests. Monday will be Constitution Day, Tuesday—Patriotism Day, Wednesday—School and Country Day, Thursday—Conservation and Thrift Day, Friday—Know Your School Day, Saturday—Community and Health Day, Sunday—For God and Country Day.

PROFESSOR E.S.BOGARDUS TO TALK AT BUCKNELL

Professor Emory S. Bogardus, eminent teacher and author in the field of sociology, will speak before the students in sociology and in philosophy next Monday evening, November 16. The address will be given in Bucknell Hall at eight o'clock.

Professor Bogardus is head of the department of sociology and social work at the southern division of the University of California. During the present semester he is here in the East carrying on a research at Columbia University. The Sociological Society arranged through Professor Clarence R. Johnson to have him here for a talk.

Dr. Bogradus is the author of a number of textbooks on sociology, psychology, political ethics, and kindred subjects. Many of these books are to be found in our library and one or two of them will soon be used as textbooks in the University.

Students in sociology are very keen to hear Professor Bogardus. The Sociological Society, under whose auspices the address will be given, has also decided to invite the classes in philosophy to attend the meeting. All faculty members will be welcome.

Who's Who at B. U.

"Billie" Dakin

"Who's Who" is pleased to present to Bucknellians this week "Billie" Dakin, who has in only two years at B. U. gained an envied position in college circles. "Billie" presides over the doings of Frill and Frown—playing leading roles, collecting scenery, directing its administration—all with equal ability and grace. She has been selected by Cap and Dagger to play "Ruth" in "The Mayor and The Manicure," which will be presented at State College on December 3, 4, or 5, for the Intercollegiate Dramatic Contest. She was recently elected to membership in Theta Alpha Phi—the national dramatic fraternity. As an amateur dramatist, "Billie" is making her mark.

"Billie" is vitally interested in the work of the Y. W. C. A., and does an active work on the cabinet as social chairman. She is a member of the Delta Delta Delta sorority, and of C. U. A., the honorary social sorority of Bucknell. She was secretary of the class of 1926 last year, and was instrumental in organizing the Sociological Society of Bucknell in which she has been successively treasurer and secretary.

"Billie's" charm and sociable disposition, combined with her ability to play the "Sax," to lead songs and cheers and put on plays, have made her desired as a leader and a friend. When there's something to be done, you can count on "Billie" to do it. If she doesn't find the job, the job will find her. And, speaking of college, "Billie" is a student of "no mean ability."

officers comprise the executive committee.

Members on other committees for the ear include Professor F. M. Simpson, Assistant Professor John S. Gold, Instructor Clair W. Halligan, Paul G. Schmidt, Ruth Propert, Grace Klapp, Susan Kennedy, J. B. Miller, Walter Kuster, W. H. Browne, C. G. Learn, and Charles A. Rosencrans, of the senior class.

The most important of these committees is that on scholarship. The duties of this committee are, to ascertain from the scholarship records of the University and through personal contact, what students are eligible to membership in the fraternity; and thereupon to propose to the fraternity for consideration as candidates the names of those who stand high in their marks and are outstanding men and women in their classes.

The three senior members of the fraternity who during their first three years attained the highest general average automatically become members of this committee. In order to augment this committee so as to represent more effectively all departments of the college, the by-laws of the local chapter have now been made to include the five ranking mathematics students. This year Ruth Propert, Grace Klapp, W. I. Miller, J. B. Miller, and W. F. Kuster are the student members of the committee. Two faculty members are elected to this committee each year. Professor Simpson is chairman, and Assistant Professor Gold is a member.

Pi Mu Epsilon now has eleven chapters, rather widely separated. They are at Syracuse, the parent chapter, and at Ohio State, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Alabama, Iowa State, Illinois, Bucknell, Montana, Hunter, and Washington University, St. Louis.

The fraternity proposes to assume the functions of the former Mathematics Club, from which it was a development, by arranging during the course of each college year eight meetings open to all students and faculty members on the Bucknell campus. These meetings are of distinctly mathematical interest. It is also expected that several lecturers will be imported again this year, whose presentations will be open to a limited number of Bucknellians.

BIG FOUR SOCIETY EFFECTS A CABINET

other. The plan was proposed by Professor Frank E. Burpee, and if it meets with the approval of the engineering students, he will begin to carry out the plan immediately.

Along this same line the desirability of publishing a booklet, containing the interesting things which the engineers at Bucknell are doing, was suggested. This booklet is to be sent to high schools to advertise the engineering courses at Bucknell University.

The first meeting of the newly formed society is to be a real get-together meeting. Professors and instructors of the different departments will speak on interesting topics. This meeting will be held in the auditorium of the Engineering Building on Wednesday evening, November 11, at 7:30.

The cabinet consists of the following representatives: Mr. Halligan, instructor in electrical engineering, Floyd Bailey, and Theron Cramer represent the Electrical Engineering Society; Professor Frank E. Burpee, head of the mechanical engineering department, Thomas Hand, and Philip Martin of the Mechanical Engineering Society; Assistant Professor D. M. Griffith, head of the civil engineering department, Emerson Ware, and Harold Webber, of the Civil Engineering Society; and Professor Glenn Brown, head of the chemical engineering department, Al Conklin, and Gilbert Frith, of the Chemical Engineering Society, complete the list.

NAVY IS CONFIDENT OF BIG COMEBACK

before. Coach Jack Owsley has been working consistently with Flippin and Banks, both hard-hitting line plungers, and they have improved considerably. The pony backfield, composed of Hannegan, Ransford, Millican, and Caldwell is perhaps the fastest quartet playing collegiate football, and is fully competent to relieve the big four when Owsley deems it advisable.

"In the line, Bernet and Hariwick are playing flawlessy, nailing seemingly impossible passes, and the buck that is able to skirt their ends has not been discovered on the B-squad. With Wickhorst and Captain Lentz at tackle and guard respectively a solid wall is built which will stop all progress, and no runner, however wily he may be can expect to slip by the massive Captain and get through Osborn at center. Edwards, at right guard, is a mountain of a man, and can stop anything up to a locomotive, while Eddy, tackle, is no mean bulwark to carry back. Altogether, the line is one of the strongest the Navy has had, and is above comparison with that of several weeks ago, in strength, and still more in fight.

"The entire team has gained so much since the defeat by the Wolverines that it has receded into a faint memory, and they have the unfailing confidence and backing of the Regiment and ever man who has ever gotten behind a Navy team. It is generally predicted that the sport columns will glow with descriptions of the comeback the Big Blue team has made."

3 WAR LORDS WANT CONTROL OF CHINA

T. T. Hirotsu, '28, explained conditions in Hawaii. Of the 300,000 people there, thirty-five per cent. are Caucasian and native Hawaiian, the other sixty-five per cent. are Orientals. The Japanese outnumber the others five to one. Not many years ago Japanese influence was omnipotent, but a gradual change has taken place until now Japanese sway has been broken. The problems of Christianity in Hawaii are not as difficult as they were a decade ago, for the Japs were very conservative and opposed the introduction of Christianity at that time.

PROFESSOR PAXSON WINS $2000

A prize of $2000 has been awarded to Frederick L. Paxon, professor of American History at the University of Wisconsin, by the Advisory Board of the Pulitzer School of Journalism, for the best book written in 1924 on the history of the United States.

The book "A History of the American Frontier," is one of many historical works written by Professor Paxon.

During the war he was a major general in charge of the economic mobilization section. He was a Harrison scholar at the University of Pennsylvania in 1898-99 and a Harrison Fellow in 1902-03. He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1898 and is a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Club there.

The work is going forward rapidly. Many individual pictures have already been taken, together with numerous groups. It is the desire of the editor that all photographic work shall be completed before Christmas, and all junior students are asked to co-operate with the staff to accomplish that end.

TRY TO KNOW GOD THRU DAILY LIFE, URGES DR. FOSTER

For God Works Equally in Nature And in Every Human Heart. Take Religion Sanely

UNIVERSITY HEARS HIM GLADLY; FILLS CHURCH

Speaker Sees No Finer Students Anywhere Than He Met Here. Likes Our Professors

Delivering a vital message for the students, Dr. Allyn K. Foster has been everywhere on the Bucknell campus in the past week. He has spoken to nightly gatherings in Bucknell Hall, to fraternities, classes, and various other bodies. Dr. Foster's particular work, helping students with their thinking, brought him to Bucknell with the forceful message that he delineates as follows:

"I am trying to talk about old realities in the language the students understand. Religion, which is the general term for a man's dealings with God, is the oldest reality known to man, but it must be stated in a new way in every age.

"This is a scientific age, and all the realities are approached scientifically. The thing must first be seen before it can be described. I believe that as you begin in chemistry with chemical substances and watch them work, so with religion you can feel the reality, and later attempt to define it. Christ has taught us all that we know of God; to test his words and his spirit in our daily life is the scientific way of arriving at an experience of religion. In short, I am seeking to demonstrate the inductive method of reasoning in religion as it prevails in science. And I believe that starting with any body of knowledge, one can

Faculty Cuts Week From College Year

An extra meeting of the faculty was held Wednesday afternoon, November 11, at which time several actions of interest to the students were taken. One of these gave official sanction to the practice that has already long been in force, of holding the classes of Saturday morning on the hour throughout.

Another of the rules passed by the faculty at this meeting was the adoption of the letter sequence system of grading. A grade of "A" will mean a percentage of between 90 and a hundred; B means 80 to 89; C, 70 to 79 and D, 60 to 69. I signifies an incomplete subject. Con means a condition and F a failure.

The most noteworth action, however, was that of advancing the date of Commencement from June 16 to June 9. In order to allow the full term of the college to run before the Commencement, days were taken, here and there, from the schedule. Thus the date for the opening of Christmas vacation that had been previously settled as December 16 and then December 18 has been changed finally to December 19 at noon.

HOLIDAY BELLE HOP TO BE PEPPY ISSUE

The holiday issue of the Belle Hop will be placed on sale Friday, November 20, with the usual dealers: the University Book Store, Fegley's, Montgomery's, Baker's drug store, and the College Inn. A striking cover has been drawn by "Bonnie" Butler, and other promising artists have done a part of what they promized and aided in the publication of this peppy paper.

The next number will enable the busy engineers of the institution to pour forth invectives on the academic students and by means of puns and other low forms of humor, to illustrate their innate crudities. Therefore hear ye! followers of the scientific arts: all material, laughable, grinable, or smirkable must be in the hands of the staff members on or before the eighteenth of December.

Many a man can not even do his duty without expecting to have bouquets thrown at him.

Devitt Patients Hear Bucknell Glee Club

Club Also Appears At Reformed Church For One Of First Two Concerts Of Year

The first two glee club concerts for the year were given during the past week, the first being presented at Camp Devitt, a sanitarium for tubercular patients near Allenwood, Thursday evening, November 12, and the second being presented in Lewisburg under the auspices of the St. John's Reformed Church, Tuesday, November 17.

The audiences in both instances were very appreciative. At Camp Devitt practically all of the patients gathered in the auditorium to hear the young singers, and the Lewisburg people comfortably filled the nave of the church at the local concert. All of the numbers were applauded enthusiastically and the performers responded with the good will that has always characterized the work of the organization.

The concerts themselves showed a few weak spots that the club will need to overcome before "taking the road" next Friday but, on the whole, they were equal to any of the season-opening concerts of former years.

The club will be entertained by the Consistory in the Masonic Temple at Williamsport, Thursday evening, and will leave for the Thanksgiving tour the following morning.

The program given last evening in the Reformed church follows:

'PREJUDICE CAUSE OF TROUBLE WITH JAPS'---BOGARDUS

Western Sociologist Declares Californians Fear Oriental Economic Superiority

PLEADS FOR HARMONY AS AID TO SOLUTION

Says Both Nations Can Settle Race Problems With Fairness By Self-Sacrifice

Emory S. Bogardus, professor of sociology at the suthern division of the University of California, addressed a large number of the students in sociology, philosophy, and other related subjects, and many of the faculty members on the subject, "The Race Relations of the United States with the Orient" at a special open meeting of the Sociological Society in Bucknell Hall Monday evening.

Professor Bogardus developed his subject through tracing the growth of the Japanese population and influence in his home state, California. His conclusion was that the outstanding characteristic of the race problem is prejudice, and he pointed out that if this prejudice is not to become the basis of custom, and is not to stand in the way of race harmony, it must be exercised less.

In his home state Professor Bogardus comes in contact with the Japanese in their new environment, studies their attitude toward the American people, and observes the treatment given the Japanese by the Americans.

"Mankind has always been a wanderer on the face of the earth," said the professor. "This roaming spirit is a guarantee of progress. Mankind first started in small groups, later became united, with various customs and conditions entering into the combination, then moved on, meeting strangers where prejudice grew up and finally conflict came.

"During this process the culture of people integrated as in the feudal, the monarchical, and the civil state, but,

Three Frosh Punished; Made To Carry Signs

There has been much recent complaint about the unnecessary noise created in the dormitories during study hours, and this was the charge brought against two of the three freshmen that faced the Interclass Council last Monday evening.

Donald Paterson, convicted of being too noisy, was made to carry a large sign with the words: "Frosh should be seen and not heard," on the one side, and on the other side: "Yes frosh, dormitory silence is golden."

Pollock, up for being too noisy and wearing colored socks, was required to wear a pair of white stockings over his trousers, and also to carry a sign which bears on the one side: "Sox, socks and black sox," and on the other side; "Black sox always for frosh."

Melvin Paul who was summoned for not speaking, cutting campus, and general freshness, denied all the charges with childish innocence, but was found guilty, was ordered to carry a large sign with "Hello, hello, hello," on one side, and "I look innocent, but they proved me guilty," on the other.

All of these men were given a taste of the paddle, and will be required to march around the field twice between the halves of the Bucknell-Dickinson game on Saturday.

DR. STEWART TALKS ON BIRDS

Dr. Norman H. Stewart, professor of zoology at the University, entertained the members of the Lewisburg Rotary Club and their wives at the local club's "Ladies' Night" last Thursday by giving an illustrated lecture on the birds of this territory. After a luncheon served by the caterer of the club, the meeting was turned over to Dr. Stewart, who spent a delightful hour explaining the habits, showing pictures, and mimicking the calls of some of our native birds. Professor Stewart is a member of the club.

BIG FOUR SOCIETY FAVORS CLUB PLAN, HEARS MANY TALKS

Prof. Burpee Shows Engineering Courses Grew Out of "A. B." Work of Former Years

SENIORS INVITED TO JOIN FIRST AID CLASS

Professors Brown and Griffith and Instructor Halligan Talk To Assemblage

The first meeting of the Big Four Engineering Society of Bucknell University held in the New Engineering Building on Wednesday evening at 7:30 was featured by the talks of professors and students. Professor Burpee has caused many arguments between the engineers and "A. Bs." around the fraternity houses.

Professor Burpee spoke on the subject, "The College Man as a Leader in Future Life." In his talk he explained the status of the college courses before the engineering degrees were offered at Bucknell and told of the beginnings of the engineering courses. Many of his remarks were especially funny to the engineers as most of the jokes were at the expense of the "A. Bs."

The old A. B. course, as he explained it, with the required Greek and Latin, was a hard course and not everybody could pass it. Then Latin courses were introduced which could be substituted for the Greek. This course was still too difficult for some of the students so they introduced a scientific course. Finally, the engineering courses were introduced at Bucknell. The men in the scientific course, thinking the new course would be easier took this course, but discovered later that they were mistaken. Now after several years we find the engineers who can't make the grade dropping back into the A. B. course.

At the same time Professor Burpee spoke of the advantages of the Big Four Society. He also said that if enough fellows were in favor of it they would have an engineers' club.

Fans Must Exchange Passes For Tickets

Budget tickets must be exchanged for reservations for the Dickinson game here on Saturday, if the students want to have places in the cheering section. The general admission price for the game is one dollar and reserved seats cost $1.50 and $2.00. The budget tickets are being exchanged for the two-dollar seats. The Athletic Council office, 221½ Market St., is open for this purpose each afternoon from 1:30 to 5:30.

It is expected that the East Stands will be somewhat better filled than is usually the case for the Dickinson aggregation is bringing a great number of supporters. The Athletic Council has received a request for a block of six hundred seats for the students of the Carlisle institution alone.

The fact that Dickinson has won the last two games played between the two colleges, the observance of Bucknell's first Mothers' and Dads' Day, and the game's being the last home contest of the season should bring out a large attendance.

PROF. THEISS TELLS PUPILS HOW AUTHORS GET MATERIAL

Professor Lewis E. Theiss talked to the children of the North Ward public school about an author's experiences in gathering materials for a book, during the exercises last Friday in connection with the observance of Children's Book Week.

The talk showed what the materials for book construction are, how they are gathered, and what use an author makes of them. Dr. Theiss showed numerous photographs he had collected to illustrate the setting, for a new book on airships, together with materials like those used in the construction of the recently-wrecked Shenandoah. The talk also described some of the things he saw during his three week's stay at the Lakehurst naval air station last summer.

NAVY'S LATE SCORE IN FOURTH PERIOD BEATS BISON TEAM

Middies Set Pace By Netting Touchdown Without Point In First Six Minutes

McCLEARY, BISON BACK, GETS LONE TOUCHDOWN

Bucknell Rushes Ball To Navy's 20-yard Line in Fourth But Pass Fails

Although outgained by two yards to one by both line rushing and aerial attacks, the Navy outlucked the Bison, winning their annual battle by the score of 17 to 7. One of those freaks of life and sport, a fighting team, deserving the victors crown, was crushed under the grim heel of defeat by fate and a Chesapeake wind.

Not six minutes of play had elapsed before the Navy scored six points. Shapley's attempt for the extra point striking the cross bars, shot down to the ground. Twice Trimmer kicked off and the ball was beat out of bounds by the gusty wind. Navy obtained the pigskin on her forty-yard line. Shapely kicked to Bucknell's fifteen-yard line. An offside penalty made it necessary for the Bucknell backs to gain fifteen yards for first down. M. Goodwin ran the ends for seven yards and then attempted to punt. The kick started well, high, and straight down the field, but of a sudden the tempestuous wind caught it like a dirigible in a line squall and carried it back to the place from which it was kicked. Close to the goal line, the safety man had no chance to cross the field and nail Shapley on his dash around left end. McCormick, the defending halfback, was taken out by fine interference, and Blaisdell made the tackle,

Pres. Hunt Will Teach Ethics Next Semester

President Emory W. Hunt will teach a class of ethics next semester, it was announced recently by Professor George B. Lawson, head of the department of philosophy and ethics. President Hunt has been eager to take part in some of the work of instruction in the University since his inauguration here more than five years ago. But until now his purely administrative duties have been so many as to make his regular meeting with classes almost impossible. He did conduct a class in "Fundamentals" for freshmen, a one-hour course, but was forced to be absent from this frequently.

The close of the successful endowment campaign at the end of this year will give Dr. Hunt a greater opportunity to come in contact with the students on the campus and in the classroom. Students hope that this course will be only an opening wedge for a greater number of courses under the President's instruction.

President Hunt feels that the need for the course in Fundamentals has been removed by the Orientation work under Professor Clarence R. Johnson and this course will be discontinued.

DEAN RIVENBURG TALKS AT HIGHTSTOWN CHURCH

Dean Romeyn H. Rivenburg, '97, delivered the address at the 180th anniversary of the founding of the Hightstown, N. J., Baptist Church on Sunday, November 8. He discussed "Woman's Contribution to the Church" and showed how, both directly and indirectly, women have been the mainstay of the church and of religious work. Directly they have served in the various activities of the church, and in the creation and maintenance of such Christian oranizations as the Y. W. C. A., the W. C. T. U., the Red Cross, hospitals, orphanages, and the like. Indirectly women have served humanity through the sons they have borne and trained. Lincoln, Lloyd George and Edison were named by the Dean as striking examples.

Fred Kemery, '28, was elected vice-president of the Bucknell University Band at a business meeting held in Theta Alpha on Monday evening, November 16, at seven o'clock.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

A "Vic" dance was held Saturday evening by the members of the fraternity who did not go to the Navy game. Many a "Semite" relieved the monotony of an inactive week-end with the evening's entertainment at the home of Sig Alph.

Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Coleman, and Miss Brakeman were dinner guests at the S. A. E. house last Thursday evening.

PI BETA PHI

The pledges entertained their active sisters at a tea given in the home of Mrs. N. H. Stewart on Thursday afternoon, November 12.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Brothers Hoffman, Winters and Clinger, and Pledge Potter, of the Zeta chapter at Penn State were visitors at the Lambda Chi Alpha house last Wednesday.

The chapter enjoyed the presence of Dr. Allyn K. Foster at lunch Thursday. Dr. Foster gave a short talk on the value and character of the right kind of fraternity life.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Seventy per cent. of the members of the fraternity attended the Bucknell-Navy game at Annapolis last Saturday.

Brothers Moyer and Dauber, of the Zeta chapter at Penn State, were guests of the local chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha during the week-end.

Iota of Kappa Delta Rho announces the pledging of Harrison Fahringer, '28.

A number of the men of the fraternity who were unable to attend the game at Annapolis last Saturday made the evening the occasion for a Victrola dance at the house.

ALPHA CHI MU

Professor Charles M. Bond was a guest of the fraternity at dinner Tuesday, November 11.

KAPPA GAMMA

Several members of the football team of the St. Joseph's High School at Lansdowne were the guests of the fraternity after the game between Lewisburg and the St. Joseph's team. The visitors stayed at the house Saturday and Saturday night, leaving early Sunday morning.

BETA KAPPA

The first "exploring party" of the year was held Monday night. Many of the features of the local topography were revealed to the uninitiate in this expedition.

The chapter had Dr. Foster as its guest at dinner Saturday.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

Instructor C. Willard Smith and Mrs. Smith dined at the house Sunday noon.

Twenty-one of the members and pledges witnessed the Navy game at Annapolis last Saturday afternoon.

About twenty-five couples kept time to Gardiner's serenaders during the first "Sem" dance of the season last Friday night.

Ralph Dorman, '27, was visited by his father and mother last Sunday afternoon.

Five hours of "steppin lively" to the tunes of the Serenaders will take place at the house next Tuesday evening. Appropriate to the season, it will be a "turkey trot" affair.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Elizabeth Lawson was presented with the Delta Delta Delta Scholarship locket which is given each semester to the girl holding the highest average.

At fraternity meeting on Tuesday night, Anna Van Dine gave a most interesting report on her trip to the Delta Delta Delta convention, held in Yellowstone National Park this summer. She illustrated her report with some clever snapshots and pictures of scenery.

Delta Delta Delta is planning a formal dance for November 25 to celebrate Founders' Day. The dance will be held at the Phi Kappa Psi house.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Alpha Chi Omega announces the pledging of Pauline Milliken, '27.

ZETA GAMMA TAU

Zeta Gamma Tau takes pleasure in announcing that Mrs. Harry F. Babcock has consented to become a patroness.

The following girls were pledged to Zeta Gamma Tau: Grace Williams, '28, Helen Everitt, '26, and Emily Williams, '29.

Zeta Gamma Tau announces the bidding of Elizabeth Humphreys, '29.

LATERNA LATITIAE

The L. L. Club entertained its pledges and a number of guests at a chicken dinner, Saturday, November 14.

The party assembled in front of the "Sem" and from there drove in trucks and cars to Mooresburg, where the ladies of the Presbyterian church had a chicken dinner ready for the frolickers. After dinner, the party drove to the home of Anna Stephens, president of the club, near Danville.

The young folks gathered in the cosy living room of the Stephens home, and played amusing college games for the remainder of the evening. Just before driving back to Bucknell, everyone gathered around the piano for a good, old-fashioned sing.

Have You Ever Heard?

That one of the most celebrated nut growers in the United States lived in Lewisburg.

That he was Mr. C. K. Sober, who died only a few years ago, and who lived in the yellow brick house on Third Street, just north of the Baptist church.

That if it had not been for the chestnut blight, he would have revolutionized chestnut culture in America, and perhaps in the world.

That he had a farm of 800 acres the Irish Valley, near Paxinos, half of which was wooded hillside, covered largely with native chestnuut growth.

That he conceived the idea of grafting the shoots from the stumps, that sprang up after lumbermen had cut down the trees, with scions of a superior chestnut.

That he searched far and wide for this superior nut and found it in Germantown, Pa., in a spot—probably a seedling growing from an Italian chestnut—which he secured and called the Paragon chestnut.

That he grafted thousands of his hillside chestnut shoots with scions of this nut, until he had hundreds of acres of these grafted young trees.

That his annual crops were amounting to tens of thousands of bushels of these marvelous, large, sweet nuts.

That in order to handle these huge crops he invented a threshing machine to hull them.

That he invented traps to catch and destroy the moths that laid the eggs that grew into chestnut worms.

That he grew thousands of seedlings and grafted them with scions of his superior nut.

That in addition to his hundreds of acres of hillside chestnut orchards, to produce crops of nuts, he had 300,000 young trees ready for sale.

That the chestnut blight came along at that juncture and completely wiped out all these chestnuts, ruining their owner, and ending one of the most interesting and significant experiments in the production of food crops that has ever been attempted in America.

That through all Mr. Sober's years of experiment and labor with his trees, he was constantly aided and advised by a Bucknell scientist.

That that advisor was Professor Nelson F. Davis, head of our biology department.

That some day the chestnuts will be back on our hillsides, for there is evidence that they are acquiring immunity to the blight.

That when that day comes, some one will carry out Mr. Sober's plan, and millions of acres of mountain forests will become food-producing areas, thus providing provender for additional millions of population.

That when this happens, Bucknell can rightly claim to have had a big part in the achievement, through the work that Professor Davis did in helping along the original experiment which proved the practicability of the idea.

"Si" Morgan, '21, of Rochester, New York, arrived in Lewisburg Wednesday evening. He is staying with his brothers at the Lambda Chi Alpha house and expects to remain for several days.

SUNNY SEMITE SAYS:

Work seems just one steady stream
Of notebooks due and papers long;
And then I find it's long past time
To write my weekly Semite Song!
I should be sunny, yes, I know
It should be full of cheer;
Yet how the duece can I be glad
When "hand in" days are near?
So if I make a mournful wail
Sometimes when I should sing,
Remember all the times I've made
The joyous echoes ring.

Stu: I hear you're an awful strong man.

Pal: Yes, I get up every morning and pull up the river.

Stu: Aw, that's nothing, I took an ax and cut down a tree this morning and then took another ax and chopped it up again.

Mrs. William Gretzinger, assistant librarian, visited in Williamsport last week.

Mildred Houseman, '24, Alpha Chi Omega, spent the week-end visiting her sorority sisters.

Miss Grace Williams, '28, was employed as a clerk in the Atglen National Bank during the past summer.

Professor B. W. Griffith and his son Daniel were among the Bucknell supporters at the Naval victory last Saturday.

Professor Clarence R. Johnson entertained a number of young people at his home after the church services on Sunday evening.

President Hunt attended a meeting for the discussion of the work of foreign missions, held in New York City Monday and Tuesday.

Paul Webster, '27, is making a desperate effort, or series of efforts, to keep his "yellow peril" hitting on some of its four cylinders.

Debaters Preparing For Lafayette Meet

Affirmative Debates Lafayette, Negative Meets F. and M., in Contests Dec. 3

The Bucknell debaters will start the present season, meeting Lafayette at Bucknell and Franklin and Marshall at Lancaster, December 4. Due to the defeat of last year by the strong Lafayette team much interest is centered around the contest. Lafayette has lost but two debates in the last two years and is out to add another Bucknell scalp to the list. The Bucknell affirmative team, composed of T. B. Drum, captain, and Bruce Miller, Willaerd Snow, and James G. Williams, hopes to turn her back defeated. The other members of the squad—Carl Hile, Francis Lybarger, Henry Coleman, and Dwight Bahr, will journey to Lancaster and try to administer a defeat to the Franklin and Marshall team.

The debaters have been working hard for the first contests, meeting every night for the last three weeks. Under the able coaching of Professor E. F. Howes and Professor W. H. Coleman they will be ready to put in a good claim for decisions. The next two weeks will be put in on practice rebuttal work and various exercises in debate.

Great difficulty has been encountered in the scheduling of debates due to the fact that four questions are being used in the state of Pennsylvania alone, but at present five contracts have been signed and seven other contests are being worked out. A dual debate with Juniata, the regular Penn State-Dickinson-Bucknell triangle, debates with Temple at Phiadelphia, Elizabethtown at Elizabethtown, Westminster at New Wilmington and the University of Richmond at Lewisburg are assured. The manager is in touch with many southern colleges and hopes to arrange a trip into Virginia.

A victory over Lafayette in the opening contest will mean the first step in putting out a championship team. Nothing succeeds like success and so the "talking Bisons" are out to win the opener. Student support is expected to count for a lot in that contest.

Students at the University of Oregon may take golf as gymnasium work and receive credit. A three hole course is maintained on the campus.

The freshmen need not get stuck-up because Harold Lloyd is in their class. —Juniatian.

CHESS CLUB PLAYS KRIEGSPIEL GAME

Keyser Wins Four, Young One, Ross Loses Three, at Meet Between Club Members

The Bucknell University Chess Club at its regular meeting Thursday, November 12, at the "Y Hut," forget the serious pursuit of chess and for one evening played "Kriegspiel." Keyser won four, Young won one and drew one and Ross lost three and drew one.

Kriegspiel, as the name implies, is a German game of war. It has been derived from chess. It is truly a game of war, for the players do not see their opponents, nor the enemy men.

The contestants play with their backs to each other, each one facing a chess board with half the men on it. The player having white has the white pieces, but does not see the black. The opposite is true of the player having black pieces. Moves are made in the regular manner of chess, these being recorded by a referee on another board with both sides set up.

The players do not know what moves have been made by the opponents, but by various methods they seek out the enemy and finally checkmate him.

"Kriegspiel is a game that develops originality and teaches psychology, for both play an important part.

Probably the most amusement comes to the referee who sees all that might happen, for he gets the thrill of seeing queens attacked without apparent danger. Kings narrowly escape thru a mesh of enemy pieces. The referee may be likened to a great god who has put his pawns on earth, and is watching a great battle, for the results are much the same.

The chess club will hold its regular meeting on December 3. All men who like the game are invited to be present.

Stewart Rankin, '26, and Jack Hubbard, '29, are gaining valuable experience in "making little ones out of big ones" by their spare-time labors toward the erection of a new house for Judge Johnson, '96.

The large number of signs that the student council requires wayward freshmen to carry helps the Slifer Snappy Sign Service in its rapid growth.

Jane Beakley, '28, spent the past summer working in the Vineland Hospital.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

A group was recently discussing the ever-recurrent question, "When can we get together?"

There are only seven nights in the week and twenty-four hours in the day for each one of us.

In this respect, at least, we may truly say that "All men are created equal."

It seems that practically every person on the campus belongs to at least two organizations in excess of those whose regular meetings he can find time to attend.

Some people refer to this condition of affairs as over-organization.

But we'd prefer to look at it as under-organization, from the individual's viewpoint. The man who doesn't pick out the things that are worth while, and then lend them his full support, isn't organizing his time or his efforts properly, and isn't helping in the effective organization of the society of which he is a part.

Bucknell organizations have been run pretty much on the "laisez faire" policy in the past. A movement to keep the students from taking part in too many activities was strongly opposed some years ago.

The contention then was that every man, while in college, should learn from experience how to apportion his time and efforts.

But any process of learning, even if it is from experience, involves thought and conscious effort. If the students want to learn how to apportion their time, they should give the matter some thought before joining every organization that exists on the campus, and letting the time and interest elements determine which ones they will eventually drop or be dropped from.

The student who joins everything in the experimental attitude receives nothing from the organization and is a stumbling block to that organization.

The first point of this is that students should connect themselves only with movements in which they have a real interest. Saying the thing negatively, don't go in for it just because it's an honor or because your fraternity brothers tell you that you ought to be engaged in more activities. Your own work and interests must decide such matters for you.

Another point is that some provision should be made for the calendaring of events so that the students who do have varied interests will be able to give expression to as many of them as possible.

All fraternities meet Tuesday evening. Why shouldn't all of the department organizations have a common night of meeting?

Why don't the leaders of the various organizations get together and agree upon some reasonable schedule instead of making dates for their own organizations, only to find several cnflicts when the time of meeting comes?

Incidentally, there is a college calendar in the office of the publicity director, on which all such meetings should be scheduled. Some of the organizations use it to avoid conflicts.

And the point of this is co-operation. Here is a paradoxical statement which we'll allow the rhetoric instructor to attack for redundancy. Our campus would not feel the effects of over-oranization so much if the organizations already there would form one other organization. Under-organization of the organizations, "inter se," produces the effect of over-organization. It's just like a littered desk that looks full but needs only "reddling up."

PROF. F. G. DAVIS SPEAKS AT MAINE TEACHERS ASS'N.

Professor F. G. Davis, of the department of education, spoke at the Maine Teachers Association on October 30, on the subject, "The Present status of the Junior High School Movement." He told his audience that there are now in this country approximately 1500 junior high schools, Pennsylvania has about 150. Only four states have colleges which accept graduates of the junior high school with 12 senior high school credits, neglecting the work done in the junior high school. One hundred per cent. of Kansas colleges accept freshmen students on this basis, and Pennsylvania comes next with about 35 per cent. of its colleges falling in line. Bucknell is one of these.

Many schools in the South are organized on the 5-3-3 basis instead of the 6-3-3 arrangement as in the North. A considerable number of educators are urging the shortening of the school period from 12 to 11 years.

On his way back Professor Davis stopped at Worcester for the Holy Cross game.

PROF. WHYTE DELEGATE

To Discuss Little Theatre Movement At Carnegie Conference

James P. Whyte, professor of oral English, will represent Bucknell University as a delegate to the National Conference on the American Theatre to be held at the Carnegie Institute of Technology on November 27 and 28.

One of the chief purposes of the meeting, which, incidentally will be the first of its kind in this country, is to study the potential influence of the community playhouse movement and to ascertain, also, the nature and extent of the movement now going on in American colleges for the promotion of interest in the serious drama. Whether the movies and other common forms of light entertainment have really "killed" the commercial theatre, and whether or not the American public cares, are questions that will be discussed.

The conference will be divided into three sessions, the first to be a "general survey of the American theatre," the second to study the extent of "dramatic training in colleges and universities," and the third to consider the movement among "little theatres and community playhouses."

The students of the department of drama of Carnegie Tech, the first department of its kind in this country, will present Galsworthy's "Justice" on one evening during the conference by special permission of the author.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Navy's Late Score Beats Bison Team

but too late. Thus Navy won the game.

It was better to have played the game and lost, than never to have played at all, for McCleary, unknown to varsity ball, showed calibre that made the efforts of the other backs seem puny. He could not have been in the game for more than fifteen minutes, but during that time he scored a touchdown, gained thirty-five yards by catching McCormick's pass, and out-footed the Navy team in end slashes for forty-two more. To wind up the days' performance, McCleary got off a fifty-yard punt against the heavy wind. Another of his kicks traveled eighty yards counting the roll.

Following Navy's touchdown, Trimmer again kicked off and Shapley returned the punt.

Bucknell was pushed back to the five-yard chalk by a penalty, and Goodwin kicked to the thirty-five-yard mark. Here the Bison held, and the Navy forfeited the ball in a vain attempt to make the distance. Diehl and M. Goodwin hit the line and ends for a first down, but a fumble by Diehl immediately lost this yardage. As the Navy backs were playing close to the line of scrimmage, Goodwin kicked, the ball rolling to mid-field. Navy again returned the punt, and Bucknell was penalized, the ball resting upon the five-yard mark. Nine yards on line plunges and Goodwin kicked to his own thirty-yard mark against the stiff wind. Here Stevens balked the Navy threat by recovering a loose ball. Soon after the goals were changed and Bucknell kept the ball in Navy territory. In the second quarter, the Bison could not get an effective offensive going. Passes, which seemed sure, were snatched from the tips of receivers' fingers by the fickle wind. McCormick attempted a sixty-five-yard drop kick which lit at the foot of the goal posts, squarely between them, but Bucknell could not score. Again with the wind behind him, McCormick shaved the post from the forty-yard mark as the half closed.

After the kick-off and an exchange of punts McCormick, planted on his own forty-five yard line, hurled a twenty-yard pass to M. Goodwin. This started the Bison. McCleary substituted for M. Goodwin. Four end runs and he had gained twenty-six yards, but, on the third try for ten yards, Bucknell lost the ball. Shapley kicked back to mid-field. McCormick's pass grounded. Then he launched one to E. Goodwin for a twenty-yard gain. Another aerial failed. McCleary snatched the ball from beside a Navy defender and left him far in the wake in the goalward dash. McCormick kicked the point.

Goals again changed for the last period. The wind had died down to some extent and Bucknell kept the ball in Navy territory for Navy seemed unable to gain. McCormick attempted another drop against the wind from the forty-three-yard line. A Navy lineman crashed thru and blocked the kick, recovering on Bucknell's thirty-five yard line.

Bucknell held for three downs, then a double lateral pass followed by a brace of thirty yards brought the cow-skin to Bucknell's five-yard mark. Another running lateral pass and the ball was again over the line around the left side.

But Bucknell was not yet beaten although there were but six minutes to play. Taking the kickoff back to her fifteen-yard line, in eight plays, passes interrupted by a twelve-yard line buck by Diehl, Bucknell had swept down to the Navy twenty-yard line. A pass was called. It appeared to have been struck by a Navy man before it hit over the goal line. A confab between umpire and referee, and Navy was given the ball on her twenty-yard mark with but two minutes left to play. Bucknell had shot her bolt, and Navy had the ball in mid-field as the game ended.

HOMECOMING GAME WITH LEHIGH, 1926

Bucknell To Meet Penn State; With Exception of Haskells: All Games To Be in Pa.

Graduate Manager McCormick has announced the partially formulated football schedule for the 1926 season. Many newcomers are found among the teams that the Bison will meet, but all are worthy foes. The schedule is notable for the number of strong Pennsylvania teams which Bucknell will encounter on the gridiron, and the trip to Lawrence, Kansas, to dedicate the new stadium of the Haskell Indians.

To Bucknellians however, the resumption of football relations with Penn State, is of most interest. Penn State will entertain Bucknell on Beaver field, November 13, their Homecoming Day. Rivalry between the two schools is always keen, and the football rivalry, dormant now for eight years, should exceed that of any other game on the schedule.

On November 6, Lehigh will be played in the Memorial Stadium as the Bucknell Homecoming Day attraction. In 1923 Bucknell last met Lehigh, the game resulting in a 7 to 7 tie. Wendell, the new Lehigh coach, expects a great team next year, for he has been laying strong foundations this season, and has a sturdy freshmen eleven to fill the few positions vacant by graduation.

Washington and Jefferson, always a threat in the football world, will be met in the second game of the season at Washington, Pa., October 2. Pitt has been the only team which has defeated the Presidents during the current season.

Negotiations are on to have either Susquehanna or Juniata to act as a warmer-up for the Bison in the opening game, September 25. This game will be played in the Stadium. The following week Washington and Jefferson will be the contestant at Washington. On October 9 George Washington will be played on the home field. The Capital College made a good showing in this years' contest. Most of their regulars are expected to don the moleskins again.

Either West Virginia Wesleyan or Gettysburg will be the opponents on October 16. If Wesleyan furnishes the opposition then, Gettysburg will be played on the next Saturday. Conversely, if Gettysburg is played first, Wesleyan will be met on October 23. The playing field for these games has not been finally decided. One of them, however, will be a home contest. The long journey to Kansas is undertaken the next week-end followed by the Homecoming Game with Lehigh, November 6. The scrap between the Nittany Lion and the Bison holds November 13. November 20, is assigned to Western Maryland, another team from below the Mason Dixon line which furnished stiff opposition this season.

The season closes with the annual contest with Dickinson on November 27. No game has been scheduled for Turkey day. The Dickinson game will be played at Harrisburg. Students should be able to see every game with the exception of the Haskell Indians, for with this single exception, providing West Virginia Wesleyan is played at home, all the games will be played on Pennsylvania fields.

DICKINSON CONTEST IS LAST HOME GAME

Enemy Has All-Star Backfield Has Lost Only One Game, That With Gettysburg

The last home game of the Bucknell grid season will be staged in the stadium Saturday afternoon when Dickinson journeys here from Carlisle for the annual combat with the Bisons. The Dickinson-Bucknell clash looms up as one of the most important football engagements in Pennsylvania, and certainly it has stirred up the greatest amount of interest in the central section of the state.

Reports from Carlisle indicate that practically the whole populace will move to Lewisburg Saturday to witness the traditional encounter. Dickinson students are all "het up" over the game and many plan to make the trip with their team. Bucknell "Mother and Dad" day will be observed and a number of Bucknell alumni and grid fans throughout the state are expected to fill Memorial Stadium with one of its largest crowds.

The Dickinson game will probably be the last time that a number of Bisons will don the Orange and Blue to represent their Alma Mater in a home varsity grid contest. Captain "Tony" Kostos, "Gus" Shorts, and "Bill" Stephens, will have their last opportunity to appear in a varsity game in the stadium. These four athletes, members of the class of '26, with their mates are expected to play as never before to bring honor to Bucknell, in the endeavor to wipe out the stain of the 11-7 defeat suffered last year at the hands of Dickinson.

Dickinson will have practically the same outfit which appeared against the Bisons last autumn. Dickinson's first game of the 1925 campaign was with Lebanon Valley, and a 6-6 tie was played. Harry Stuhldreher's Villanova boys were surprised on the following Saturday when Lightner's pupils upset the dope, and beat them after a nip and tuck battle, 13-2. Franklin and Marshall was defeated 7 to 0, the game with Muhlenburg ended in a scoreless tie, and Albright knocked off 13-0.

Two weeks ago the Dickinson gridders suffered their only reverse when Gettysburg managed to score a touchdown at Harrisburg, winning 6 to 0. Pennsylvania Military College, an undefeated combination until it journeyed to Carlisle, was whitewashed 24-0, last Saturday.

The record which the Dickinson players have made is still commendable when it is realized that Coach Lightner has a comparatively small number of candidates from which to choose his varsity. It is a rare occurrence at the Methodist school if there are more than 30 football men. There are no freshmen, junior varsity, or class elevens to keep the candidates in togs and those who do not make the varsity squad do not come out for football.

Only one player on the Dickinson squad has not had previous college football experience, Watson, a 180 pound guard is playing his first year at the Carlisle institution. Watson played at Steelton high school last year.

Dickinson presents an all star backfield, Captain Books, halfback, and former Harrisburg Tech star, playing his fourth season at Carlisle, is one of the best backfield players in the state, fast and tricky runner, placement kicker, passer, and interferer. Harter calls the signals for the Dickinson eleven, and in games this year has proved his ability as a field general. He is likewise an all around performer in the backfield. Carpenter plays the other halfback post. It is his third college football year and he is flashy in a broken field. Dickinson offers White at the fullback position. White rates with the best as a line bucker, and defensive man. Sweeley, Rupp, and Bowes, substitute backs, have given good accounts of themseves in several games.

The Dickinon line of Roth and Baiz, ends; Keller and Snell, tackles; Watson and Crooks, guards; and Lashley, center, is one of the best in the history of the college. Lashly, who received his early grid knowledge at Bellefonte Academy, has performed brilliantly as snapper back at Dickinson for the past three years; Roth and Keller are playing for their fourth year, and Baiz, Snell, and Crooks, are in their second season.

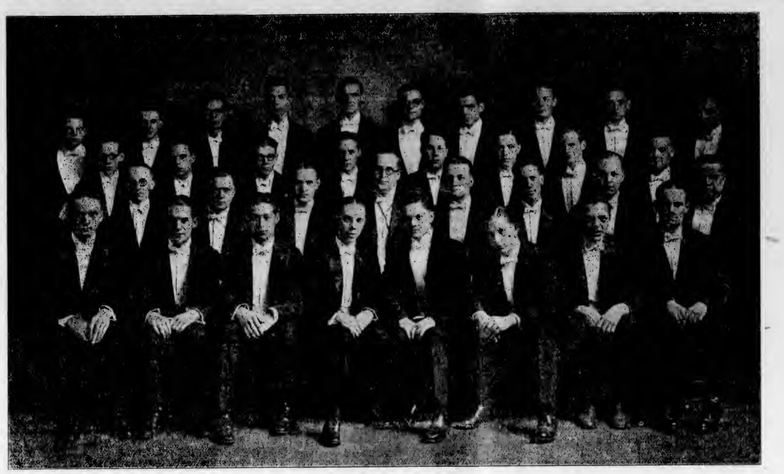
GLEE CLUB LEAVES FRIDAY ON THANKSGIVING TRIP



BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY GLEE CLUB

The Bucknell University Glee Club sang its first engagement of the year at Camp Devitt last Thursday evening and opened its local work at the Reformed church last evening. The first tour fos the year will begin Friday when the club sets out on a ten-day trip into northern New Jersey where it is scheduled to present ten regular concerts and will probably be called upon for as many more appearances in high schools and churches. This will be but one of the three major trips that the club makes each year. The others are taken during the Christmas and Easter holidays and carry the organization into western Pensylvania and southern New Jersey. In all the club will probably sing in more than sixty regular concerts during the year.

Club in Great Demand

Mr. Ralph Hartz, director and manager of the club, in speaking of the prospects for the year, said, "From the way we're starting, it seems that we'll have more work than ever. We attempted to make this Thanksgiving trip a seven-day tour but the demand for concerts made us lengthen the time to ten days, and then some had to be disappointed. The trip will be made in Northern Jersey, too, and that is all new territory where our club has not been heard before. It is a section that is filled with other colleges, some much larger than Bucknell, but the people have heard of our club and are anxious to hear us."

The Thanksgiving tour will include concerts in Perth Amboy, Newark, Elizabeth, Hillside, Trenton, East Orange Belleville, Roselle and Scotts Plains. Two concerts will be given in Newark, one of which will be a program made up entirely of sacred music. The club will divide on Thanksgiving day in order to sing for the churches of both East Orange and Orange. These concerts, too, will probably be made up of sacred selections. It is expected that the club will broadcast from one of the radio stations in New York City during the tour.

Wants to Enter New Territory

Many of the dates for the other trips of the year are already arranged. Practically all of the return engagements have been contracted although these are allowed to constitute only about fifty per cent. of the work of the club. The management has refused to return to several towns formerly on the regular schedule in order to be able to enter new territory and to bring the name of Bucknell and contact with Bucknell people to new groups. The first trip will be entirely in new territory. During the Christmas trip which will begin on December 28 and continue until January 9, five return engagements have been booked and five cities not previously visited have reported favorably on having the club. It is, as yet, too early to state the itinerary that will be followed, but the club will probably visit Hollidaysburg, Dormont, Irwin, Monongenela, Reynoldsville, Bradford and Johnsonburg, Pa., and Conneaut, Ohio. There are also possibilities of its appearance in Erie, Pa., and Buffalo, N. Y.

At least three new towns will appear on the Easter schedule. This seven-day trip beginning the Monday after Easter will include Westfield and Haddonfield, New Jersey, and Lancaster, Pa., in addition to return engagements at Norristown and Chester, Pa., and Pitman and Penns Grove, New Jersey.

The club usually has a score or more concerts in towns that may be reached overnight in addition to the regular tours. This year will probably take the club to Lock Haven, Williamsport, Newberry, Watsontown, Milton, Sunbury, Mifflinburg, Muncy, Picture Rocks, Danville and Bloomsburg.

Glee Club Men Represent Bucknell

It is estimated that the club appeared and sang before fifty thousand people last year. This year with an extended schedule which will necessarily require that a greater number of side concerts in high schools and churches be given, that number will probably be increased to seventy thousand. One can readily understand that an organization that represents Bucknell to so many of the people on whom the University ultimately depends for support, must be of the highest type. The membership of the club includes men from all departments of the University. Not only musicians, but also athletes, debaters, engineers, classical students, ministerials, biologists, and educators make up the club.

In order to secure the best men for the club many candidates must be eliminated. Eighty or more students try out for the club each year. This number is soon cut down to about forty and the number selected for the major trips is usually thirty. These men must stand well in their studies and be morally and socially able to represent the University. Every new man must undergo an examination before he is taken on a trip, and all of the members of the club are examined on the music before undertaking any of the major trips.

The men who are selected to make the various tours are entrusted with a peculiar responsibility. The club caters especially to churches and high schools. Each year it includes a number of towns not previously visited. Frequently the club is entertained after its concerts in social gatherings where the members become acquainted with a number of the people of the town. To these people the men represent Bucknell and so the men must be careful to represent Bucknell properly. In addition to those gatherings, the men are always entertained in private homes in the towns they visit. The management usually insists on this. Thus the men make still wider circles of acquaintance both for themselves and for the University. A committee of the club is responsible for seeing to it that the men do represent the University properly, and failure to do so quickly brings the man to account.

Advantages in Membership

While, primarily, the club represents the University, every man receives a distinct benefit. The members receive no pay for their services but their travelling expenses are paid and they thus are given an opportunity for free travel. Their engagements and social contacts teach them to meet people of all classes, and the scope of the club's work brings them acquaintances in all parts of the state. Many of the members of the club find opportunities for employment in their own lines of work while travelling with the club, and music students especially find the training in singing before large audiences very helpful.

Club is Better than Ever—Hartz Says

Concerning this year's club, Director Hartz says, "The club works together better this year than ever before. Clubs of past years have had their greatest difficulty with the blending of voices and the expression and shading of the music. This year the blending has been corrected by careful selection of the men, and the shading and expression by careful training." Practices are held regularly twice each week and during the past two weeks the practices have been almost a daily occurrence. Practically all of the men are taking voice culture, and, along with their work in this field, they study especially the music that is used by the club. Thus they become almost letter and tone perfect in the singing of their separate parts. The work of the general practices is to secure blending of the parts and expression in the ensemble.

The club selections include works from such composers as Frederic Hollard, Stephen C. Foster, Dudley Buck and H. Lane Wilson. Encore numbers are prepared for every selection and the audience usually hears more than twice as many numbers as the program calls for.

Many Special Features

Several new features have been added to the work of the Glee Club this year. One of these is the string quartet—Paul Stolz and Henry Bonta, violins; Robert Smith, viola; and Alexander Horoschak, violincello. Another is a special trio in which Robert Dilworth, baritone soloist, sings with an accompaniment consisting of a violin and an imitation of a reed organ produced by playing chords on a banjo with a violin bow. Robert Smith plays the violin and Alexander Horoschak the banjo in this unique number.

Dilworth, who has become a club soloist only this year, has already spent two years with the Glee Club and has had some previous experience in solo work. He has a voice of great power and tone quality. His diction is also very distinct. Charles Kushell, bass-baritone, who has sung with the quartet and as a soloist for two years will continue his work.

Alton Roth, a freshman, is taking up the viloin solo work of the club. In the first concert his playing was enthusiastically received. Present indications are that he will soon equal the proficiency and popularity of Theodore Heysham who served as violinist with the club for four years, graduating last June.

Heysham's graduation also left a vacancy in the quartet which necessitated a reorganization of this foursome. Director Hartz has been trying different men in the various positions to find out who will be best able to carry the work of this important branch of the club. Competition has been so keen, and there are so many things to take into consideration in the selection of these four men that he has not as yet been able to make a final decision as to who will be chosen. Interested followers of the club may be assured, however, that the group will be one that will be equal in every way to quartets of the past.

Alexander Horoschak displays his versatility in more ways than one. In addition to playing the 'cello in the string quartet, playing the difficult chords of the imitation reed organ with the special trio, and singing in the chorus numbers, he has taken up the work of the club artist. In this role he has shown exceptional originality and personality. He breaks away from the ordinary "cracks" of the "ham" artist and gives his act a touch that is purely Horoschak.

Gilbert McCune who has been the club reader for two years will also continue in that role. His humorous, dramatic presentations have always set his audiences in an uproar. He is being understudied by Emerson Thomas, another talented young reader who will probably be used in several appearances during the year.

Hartz is Director and Manager

Mr. Hartz, the director of the club, graduated in civil engineering and from the school of Music simultaneously in 1921. He was student manager and director of the club for three years during his college course. After graduation he spent some time at the Royal Conservatory in Naples, Italy, and, in the fall of 1923, returned to become director of the club and instructor in voice in the University School of Music. He also acts as manager of the club, a work in which he assisted by L. K. Davis, '27.

Charles Kushell is president and assistant director of the club. Earl J. Hartman is the accompanist. The other members of the organization are as follows:

FORMER PROFESSOR TELLS OF OLD DAYS

Dr. A. E. Waffle Says College Had 55 Students When He Came Study Hours Enforced.

HAD NO COLLEGE SPORTS

It gave me quite a shock the other day, when I figured that it was forty-five years ago this fall that I came to Lewisburg to take pastoral charge of the Baptist church and to teach as professor of rhetoric in Lewisburg University.

Many changes have taken place during these years. The general appearance of the village is much the same; but there are improvements. New buildings, some of them important and sightly, have been erected. The interior of the old Baptist church, where I used to preach, has been renovated and made more beautiful. An unsightly, ill-smelling, disease-breeding, old canal bed that ran through the town in those days has been filled up and built over. The streets are much improved.

But I must not forget that I am writing for the university paper, whose readers are interested chiefly in changes that have occurred in the college. The oak groves, which nearly cover the campus, seem about the same, though I suppose the trees must be larger. The greatest change is noticeable in the buildings.

At that time there were only three—Main College, on the top of the hill; the Academy, on the hillside; and the Institute, down on the flat. The many buildings which have been added in recent years I need not enumerate or describe, for you are here to see them. At that time the equipment in all lines was very meagre.

The greatest and most surprising change is in the size of the university. That was the day of small things. When I came, there were fifty-five students in the college, and that was more than the average attendance of the three years immediately preceding. There were seventy-five in the Academy, and only thirty of them were in the regular course and preparing for college. There were eighty-one in the Institute, but two-thirds of them were students in music or painting. The first college class I prepared for graduation had only five. The next one had eight. After that the numbers went up quite rapidly. In 1880 the college faculty numbered seven.

A great change has also taken place in the management of the university and in its methods of work. Then the day began with chapel exercises at 7:45. The first recitation was from 8 to 9. Then came two hours of study, and the second recitation was from 11 to 12. Two hours for recess and dinner, two hours for study, and a third recitation from 4 to 5, filled the afternoon. There was another study period from 7 to 9 in the evening, in preparation for the first recitation in the morning, and then the day's work was over.

The keeping of study hours by college students seems to us a strange custom; but President Loomis had believed that it was the only way to keep the boys at work, and the new administration had not seen fit to change it. It was expected that there would always be a professor in the building to see that the boys attended to business. It was reported that in Doctor Loomis found them playing on the campus when they ought to have been studying, he would order them to their rooms; and if they did not go promptly enough to suit him, would throw his cane at them. There is no doubt in my mind that study hours did promote regular and faithful work. To attempt to maintain them now would certainly mean work for the professors.

In that early day very little attention was given to sports, recreation, or amusements of any kind. The great business of the university was study, and most of the students were in earnest to do it well. Nearly everybody was poor, and plain living was the rule. It was reported that some students managed to get their board for one dollar a week.

One important and significant fact ought to be mentioned. Out of those very small classes came a considerable number of men who afterward attained eminence in the Baptist denomination. The proportion of such men was much larger than it was in the big classes that followed. A few of them come to mind as I recall those days: H. F. Stillwell, Ernest Tustin, Milton Evans, S. Z. Batten, Frank Goodchild, and others.

What was the reason for the superior success? Were they of better stock than the men of the larger classes? Had the smallness of their classes anything to do with it? Did they get better training because they were few? Did they get more personal attention from the professors? In the recitation-rooms they were pretty certain to be called up every day. Did that fact make them more diligent in their studies? This superiority I have referred to starts a good many questions. One of them is—are universities useful in proportion to their size?

A. E. WAFFLE

Dr. Albert Edward Waffle, who wrote the foregoing story at the request of the editors of the Bucknellian, forgot to tell us certain things about himself that will also be of interest to present-day students in the University; for in addition to having been a professor here and a pastor of the Lewisburg Baptist Church, Dr. Waffle has done many other interesting and distinguished things.

He attended Alfred University during the years 1863-68 and was graduated from Colgate in 18782, with the degree A. B. In 1875 Colgate gave him an A. M., and in 1892 the same institution made him a D. D.

After leaving Colgate, Dr. Waffle was a student at the Hamiton Theological Seminary for one year. He was ordained as a Baptist minister in 1873. That same year he married Mary R. Harvey, a daughter of the dean of the Hamilton Theological Seminary. His first pastorate, at New Brunswick, N. J., began that year and lasted until 1880, when he came to Lewisburg to be pastor here and teach in the University—then the University at Lewisburg. His title was professor of rhetoric, logic, and oratory.

When Professor Waffle left Lewisburg in 1885, he became pastor of a Baptist Church in Bay City, Mich, where he served for three years. From 1888 to 1895 he was pastor at Jamestown, N. Y. For ten years following he preached at Albion, N. Y. His final pastorate was in Woodstock, Ontario, Canada, where he served from 1905 to 1908, when he retired. Since then he has served as a stated supply preacher.

Dr. Waffle is a trustee of the Rochester Theological Seminary. He is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and the Phi Beta Kappa scholarship society. He was president of the Conversation History Club of Albion. He is the author of a number of books. One of these, "The Lord's Day," brought him a prize of $1,000 in a nation-wide contest. Other books of Dr. Waffle's are "Paul Sidney," "The Interpreter With His Bible," "Christianity and Property," "Mr. Arnold's Week of Christian Living," "If Christ Were King."

Since his retirement from the ministry, Dr. Waffle has spent much time in writing and travel. He has visited the Holy Land, Egypt, and various countries in Europe. Since the death of his wife not long ago, Dr. Waffle has been visiting some of his old friends, and has been the guest for a little while of Professor William G. Owens.

Likens Football Game To Grand Cock-Fight

Dr. Prince Says Spectators Care For Their Fun,—But Little For Players Feelings

Agreeing with George Owen, former Harvard star, that the majority of college football players do not enjoy the game, but, conscious of "duty" to alma mater and not wanting to be "quitters" are practically commandeered, Dr. Morton Prince, Harvard '75, the Boston neurologist who also once played football for Harvard, declares that modern college football is "cock-fighting on a grand scale," and adds that "whether the birds enjoy the sport they have not yet told us."

Writing in the current issue of the Harvard Alumni Bulletin on the question—"For whom Is Football a Sport?" Dr. Prince says:

"As to whether or not the players enjoy the game, I don't believe the undergraduates, nor the general public care a brass button, any more than the Roman populace cared whether the gladiators enjoyed the game of slaying one another, so long as it was given a 'Roman Holiday.' Nor any more than the spectators care whether Jack Dempsey or Georges Carpentier enjoy being punched and mauled and knocked out.

"Nobody cares about the players having 'fun'; it would be well for them to bear that in mind. What we want is that they play for our fun."

If the majority of players do enjoy the game, Dr. Prince asks why undergraduates do not go out and play the game by themselves, with or without team organization, under their own leadership, which, he points out, is the way in tennis, baseball, and other sports and used to be the custom in football.

"Football was played at Harvard long before there were any contests between colleges," he says. "Intercollegiate games were gotten up merely as an added enjoyment, not to make the game itself enjoyable; and intercollegiate games were also usually enjoyed in the same spirit as were the scrub games, as I can testify from having payed in a Harvard-McGill game.

"If it is true that football is not enjoyed by the 'majority of players,' this is one face the fact that it is not sport for them but only for the professional coaches and the spectators. What the 50,000 spectators enjoy in a sport is the fight; they want to see their own particular college win."

Calling attention to the account in "Tom Brown at Rugby" of the game between "School" and "School House," Dr. Prince asks if one can possibly imagine that account of a game that was "true sport," or anything like it, being written of the present American college game.

"If the 'majority of players' do not enjoy the game," he concludes, "it is mere idle chatter to speak of modern college football as a sport. It is sport for the spectators, and it is sport for the professional coach who plays his team against a rival coach."

DEANS OF WOMEN CONFER

Acting Dean Clark Attends Fifth Annual Meeting of Pa. Ass'n.

Miss Amelia Clark, acting dean of women, attended the fifth annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Association of Deans of Women held at the Penn-Harris Hotel, Harrisburg, Pa., on Friday and Saturday, November 6 and 7. During her absence, Mrs. Beatty, house mother of Brady and Doebler houses, took charge of Women's College for her.

Miss Margaret Lawson, who took the Columbia University course for Advisors of Women, also attended the convention.

Governor Pinchot addressed the members of the association at the banquet held on Friday evening. Other speakers were Dr. Francis B. Haas, Miss Thyrsa W. Amos, Miss Edna Arnold, Miss Grace D. McCarthy, and Dr. Martha Tracy.

The convention was divided into three groups: high school deans, normal school deans, and college and university deans.

Mrs. Beatrice S. Kitchen, national student secretary of the Y. W. C. A., was one of the speakers at the Saturday morning meeting. Her subject was "Cooperation between Y. W. C. A. Secretaries and Deans of Women." Mrs. Kitchen is planning to be at Bucknell November 24 and 25.

The Girls' Athletic Association held a meeting Wednesday evening November 11, and selected the following officers: president, Edna Watson, '27; vice-president, Grace Mihaus, '27; secretary, Florence Parmeley, '27; treasurer, Miriam Burns, '28.

LARGEST COOPER LIBRARY NOW IS BOAST OF YALE

Novelist's Grandson Makes Important Addition to Collection

The Yale University library has attained first place in the possession of works of America's first novelist, James Fenimore Cooper, of the Yale class of 1806, according to an announcement from the Yale secretary's office.

The most recent addition to the Cooper material at Yale is a gift by his grandson, James Fennimore Cooper, of Cooperstown, N. Y., of letters and documents dating from 1800 to 1850.

The gift includes a number of manuscripts of the Leatherstocking Tales and other novels, the three surviving diaries, about 300 letters to members of his family and several hundred letters to the novelist, including many from Samuel Morse, William Dunlap, Charles Wilkes, Washington Irving, Lafayette, and Sir Walter Scott. Much of this material has never been published.

Yale already owns 150 volumes of the first edition of Cooper.

PEDDIE DEDICATES NEW HALL

Dean Rivenburg Present at Exercises Honoring World War Dead

Memorial Hall, the new $400,000 class-room and administration building of the Peddie School was formally dedicated on Saturday, November 14, with official delegates from many colleges and secondary schools in attendance. Addresses were delivered by General James A. Drain, past national commander of the American Legion, and by President John Martin Thomas, of Rutgers University. Dean Romeyn H. Rivenburg, formerly assistant headmaster of the school represented Bucknell at the exercises.

Former United States Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen presided over the exercises, while others who participated were: Headmaster R. W. Swetland, the Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, the Rev. Powell H. Norton, the Rev. Robert P. Zebley, Charles W. McCutchen, and Judge Horace Robertson.

The new building was dedicated in memory of the sons of Peddie who served their country during the World War. Gold star mothers unveiled the bronze memorial tablet which contains the names of over 600 former Peddie students.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE ENJOY OLD STRAW RIDE

Fun and a general feeling of sociability ran rampant at the Baptist Christian Endeavor straw ride to Wolfeland last Saturday. After the party had attacked the eats with the usual amount of ravenousness, it proceeded to settle them by different sorts of rather strenuous activity, featuring football. In this, the young lady huskies bucked the line very commendably, though not without casualties of disarranged hair and de-powdered faces. Waning afternoon started the party Bucknellward. The ride back resulted in placing the playful group into the closest imaginable relation with the lowly straw on the wagon bed. But the friendly exchange of barrages only served as a fitting finale to the day's merriment.

NEW TESTS FOR STUDENTS

College Board Adopts Psychology Examination for Entrance

Beginning next June psychological or intelligence tests will be given officially for the first time by the College Entrance Examination Board, representative of forty American colleges and universities and numerous secondary schools, comprising the board, it was decided at their annual meeting at Columbia University.

Despite much opposition from educators, tests were sanctioned, it was announced, so they may be "co-ordinated and standardized." Professor Carl Brigham, of Princeton, was named chairman of a committee of psychologists who will prepare and conduct the tests. Harvard University and Bryn Mawr, however, will pay no attention to the tests, on the ground that they are "unintelligent" rather than intelligent, it was learned here.

The college board met in the Columbia University library and, following the adoption of the tests, several professors pronounced the action "the most important development in educational co-operation in the history of this country."

Well of Humor Dries Quickly

Those that have never held the unenviable position of a humor editor on a college weekly would be surprised how quickly the well of humor dries. If our imagination does not come to our rescue, we will be forced to reprint the speeches of Coolidge—they at least will put the reader to sleep. —Valparaiso Torch.

Big Four Society Favors Club Plan

room on the top floor of the Engineering Building. Since this plan was approved by most of the engineers present, the club will be established in the near future.

Following Professor Burpee's speech, Arthur Hirt, '26, gave his opinion of the engineering courses, differing greatly from that of Professor Burpee.

The meeting was in charge of Thomas Hann, the chairman of the organization. Kenneth Gardner, a pre-medical student, was introduced as the first speaker. He presented the proposition whereby the senior engineers were invited to join a class in practical first aid to be given under the direction of Professor Norman H. Stewart. The object of this class will be to train men to be masters of situations when the occasion should arrive.

Professor Brown, of the chemical engineering department, then gave a talk on the possibilities of getting a job, presenting the fundamental objects of the chemical engineering course at Bucknell University, and also explaining the system by which all the graduate chemical engineers can obtain information from any other graduate.

Mr. Halligan, instructor in the electrical engineering department and Assistant Professor D. M. Griffith, the acting head of the civil engineering department, gave interesting talks on the advantages of the Big Four Engineering Society. Professor Griffith spoke on "The Relation of Engineering Education to Industries." He presented the advantages of the engineering graduates over the older men who rose from the ranks of the workmen. He showed that the engineering graduates are needed for executive positions. Towards this purpose the Big Four Engineering Society helps to get everyone together and to bring the big men from the outside ranks of industry, who can present to the society the actual problems which they will encounter when they get out into real life.

The next meeting of the Big Four Society will be held in the Engineering Building on December 9, at 7:30 P. M.

The cabinet of the Big Four Engineering Society at Bucknell University held its meeting after the regular meeting of the society, Wednesday evening.

The proposed constitution was presented by Assistant Professor Griffith for discussion and suggested corrections. This will be presented to the engineering student body at some later date.

Phillip Martin, '25, was elected vice-president of the society, an office created at this meeting.

A committee was then appointed for the investigation of an honorary fraternity. The committee consists of Gilbert Frith and Instructor C. M. Halligan.

Prejudice Cause of Trouble—Bogardus

even in the last stage, there are two distinct cultures: occidentalism and orientalism. Where they come together and overlap a well cultured civilization should be built up. This work will be a step in line with social idealism.

"In reality these two cultures are so different that they don't recognize each other. A smoke screen of prejudices grows up which greatly hinders the intelligence of both groups. Unfortunately the ultimate result of these racial prejudices will be conflict.

"In 1923 a group of men interested in the racial question started a survey with the object of investigating the life histories of men of both races who had dealings with the men of the other, and to find out how each reacted to the presence of the other race.

"The people of the Pacific sea coast of America have developed certain fears of the Japanese. They are especially afraid economically after observing the superiority of the Japanese. At first the Orientals were invited to come into the country but prejudices soon grew up. The first reaction was 'Teddy' Roosevelt's 'Gentlemen's Agreement,' in which Japan agreed to restrict all immigration to America with the exception of the wives and fiancees of men already here. From the abuses that came out of this agreement these people came to be known as 'picture brides.'

"In 1913 the Anti Alien-landowners Law in California kept Japanese from owning land and allowed them to lease it for only three years. As a result of this the majority moved into or near the cities, especially Los Angeles which has more Japanese than any other city in the state. There they work every day including Sunday as is their custom. A law was soon passed that they could not lease land at all and soon after that even the coming of 'picture brides' was prohibited.

"But these steps came too late. The Jap was firmly settled in the wealth of opportunity in America. He surpassed the Americans in intelligence tests. One family of Japanese contained four geniuses.

"The people of California are divided in the ratio of seven, two, and three; seven twelfths are anti-Japanese, two-twelfths scientifically minded, and three-twelfths pro-Japanese. When we gave liberally to Japan at the time of the earthquake, the gap was bridged a little. But the Japs were still conservative and suspicious. When asked why he urges increased military training for boys as a safeguard against the United States, the minister of education of the Empire replied that, although the United States talks more peace than any one, it spends more money on the army and navy than any other country.

"There is another problem in assimilation with the Mexicans. There should be no amalgamation. The Japanese then are neither welcomed by their own nor by the Americans. The younger generation will lose faith in America. The solution for the whole problem is in the question: 'Can the oriental problem be solved in America with fairness to the Americans?' Mutual self sacrifice answers this question. Entering into this, too, is co-operative action, and finally, all nations together can settle this question."

An open forum discussed some of the problems raised by the lecturer, at the close of the address.

Professor Bogardus is an eminent teacher and author in the realm of sociology. At present he is in the East studying social service work in New York in connection with Columbia University. He has written several textbooks for college work in sociology and social psychology which have met the approval of some of the foremost educators of the country. His book, "The Essentials of Americanism" is being used in one of the courses in sociology here and some of his other works are under consideration for introduction as class texts.

FROSH HAVE ROLL CALL

The sophomores, apparently dissatisfied with the showing at the interclass football game a few weeks ago, undertook to give the freshmen a taste of proper discipline Tuesday afternoon. The occasion was a roll call held in Commencement Hall.

The primary reason for holding the affair seemed to be the demonstration of the ability to do so, for no important announcements or actions were taken. A short cheering practice was held and it was announced that the students would hold a snake dance at the Bucknell-Dickinson game next Saturday. The freshmen were also commanded to attend the mass meeting to be held Friday evening.

Try To Know God Thru Daily Life

easily arrive at the reality of the spiritual world. Science describes the effects of material forces on definite material; religion describes equally definite effects of spiritual powers on human nature. Religion, therefore, is an essential part of the structure and operation of nature. God works in nature and in the human heart.

"Thinking men today demand that we look at spiritual things in the same rational way that we look at all other things. Science and religion are not two separate spheres; they are hemispheres of the same sphere. In this light, the old practices of prayer, of Bible study, of service, and all the offices of religion take on a new meaning.

"To make it more definite still, I am urging students to cultivate, more than ever, their own religious life by trying to show that it is their reasonable service. Loyalty to Christ and to his cause is still the greatest height that any thoughtful man can reach. I am urging men and women to keep close to their pastors and usefulness. Education without this centering in God can never be complete."

During his series of talks the audiences, though not large, were very attentive and receptive. Dr. Foster's appearance in classes and in the various fraternities brought him in contact with practically all of the students. The reception given him brought this reaction in his last message before leaving. He said, "I get no better response anywhere, and see no finer group of students anywhere than at Bucknell. I know few colleges where so many professors are so much interested in the moral and spiritual life of the students."

His last two messages were sermons given both night and morning in the Baptist church. The church was well filled on both occasions.

JUNIORS ENTERTAIN

Men, swinging fair partners around the living room of Women's College to the time of compelling syncopation in the middle of the afternoon, was the unusual sight on November 14 when the junior girls gave a tea dance from 2:30 to 5:30 o'clock.

About thirty couples danced now to the vic, now to "Frankie" Harris at the piano and "Billie" Williams at the drum, or Evelyn Fischler, or Ruth Marion, at the piano.

The tea urn was presided over by Marjorie Kerr, who performed her duty with graciousness and charm. Delicious little sandwiches and dainty cakes were also served.

Miss Brakeman and Miss Ruhl chaperoned the dance; the chairmen of the committees for the dance were Ruth Marion and Mary Foust.

This is to be held at Bucknell University December 2, 4, and 5, 1925. Other instructors in the training school will be: Dr. Homer L. Grice, director of vacation church schools for the Southern Baptist Convention; Mrs. Vivian B. Wilkenson, instructor in hand work; Dr. Thomas S. Young, director of fvanation and weekday church schools for the Northern Baptist Publication Society.

A complete schedule for three days, beginning at 3:30 and lasting till 9:30 each day, has been arranged.

BUCKNELLIAN TO RUN STRAW VOTE ON WORLD COURT

Students' Stand on Question To be Determined by a Ballot Conducted December 8.

MANY OTHER COLLEGES TO TAKE LIKE ACTION

Results Will Be Published by New Sudent and Sent Out to All College Papers

In connection with the campaign of the World Court Committee of the Council of Christian Associations, the Bucknellian will conduct a straw vote on the question of adherence to the Permanent Court of International Justice, popularly termed the World Court. The date that this straw vote will be polled has been set as December 8.

The question of adherence to the agreement to enter the court will be brought up in the United States Senate on December 17, according to the senate calendar. Interested in finding out what the opinion of the college men on this subject is, the Council of Christian Associations has appointed a special committee to consult with the leaders in the various colleges of the country in order to cause discussion on the court, and the different plans of "entrance" proposed.

This committee has caused several intercollegiate discussion groups to be brought together to plan ways and means of getting the question before the minds of the college people. Locally this conference was held in Harrisburg four weeks ago and was attended by seven Bucknell delegates; Raymond H. Edwards, Y. M. C. A. president; Anna Van Dine, Y. W. C. A. president; Mildred Marshall, for the women's debaters; Carl A. Hile, of the men's debating team; Catherine Frederick and Sarah Pentz, for the Women's Student Government Association; and Eugene Carstater, for the Bucknellian.

Another intercollegiate conference in which practically every college in the country will be represented will be held at Princeton University during the week-end of December 12.

It is felt that these discussions and the poll that is to be taken throughout the colleges of the land will serve as some guide to the Senate in its decision on the matter of the court. The results of the straw vote will be reported to The New Student and, in turn, that publication will send out the results for the whole country, for publication in college newspapers.

The ballot to be used here will allow of five distinct choices. It will give the voter a chance to vote on the following proposals:

1. For U. S. participation in the World Court under the "Harding-Hughes-Coolidge Terms." (The U. S. not to be connected with the League of Nations or bound to any obligations under the League Covenant; not to be bound by advisory opinions of the Court on questions not voluntarily submitted by the U. S.)

2. For participation under the "Harmony Plan" of thirty peace leaders. (The U. S. to join the Court under the "Harding-Hughes-Coolidge Terms" but to withdraw after five years unless a code of international law has been adopted outlawing war, and the Court given jurisdiction.)

3. For U. S. participation under the "Borah Terms." (The U. S. not to join the World court until international law has been codified outlawing war, and the Curt given jurisdictin; the U. S. not to be thereby connected with the League of Nations.)

4. Against participation in the World Court.

5. Are you disinterested in the World Court question?

The poll will be conducted during the chapel period.

DR. KOCH, '00, TO TEACH

Doctor C. D. Koch, '00, deputy state superintendent of public instruction, will offer a course on "The Curriculum," next semester, one afternoon a week. About 75 students have expressed a desire to take the course. Dr. Koch is an authority on the curriculum problem, and is a student of wide and successful experience.

LITTLE'S ART WORK TO BE SHOWN HERE

Scarce Water Color Paintings to Be Displayed at Bookstore First Week in December

Bucknell students are to be privileged to see a rare display of paintings when Mrs. J. Wesley Little places on sale a number of compositions of her husband, the father of our fellow-student, Eleanor Little, '25, and Jean Little, '28. The exhibition will be in the University Bookstore during the first week in December.

Mr. Little ranked high among the artists of the world. He is perhaps better known in Europe than he is in America, and he will be far better known fifty years from now than he is now, because the work he has done is of the quality that wins enduring fame.

Mr. John T. Dull, Philadelphia artist and architect, in commenting upon Mr. Little's place in the world of art, has this to say: "In placing Little in the long history of art, it may be said that his work was, and is, a continuation of the English tradition of water color landscape begun by Cozens and Sandby, continuing through Crome, Cotman, and DeWitt, enriched in color by Turner and Constable, carried down to our own day by Sir Alfred East and his contemporaries—the beautiful art of aquarelle, in its best estate; free from all the tricks and affectations of the scrub or gouache methods. The art of J. Wesley Little was the natural descendant of these distinguished forerunners. I have every confidence in the thought that, as time goes on, his splendid works will be more and more appreciated by those for whom they were male and whose neighborhood and environment they portray—the people of Pennsylvania."

Mr. Little left a considerable number of very excellent canvases. He was at his best in depicting pastoral scenes. His "Misty Morn," a subject that he reproduced again and again with delightful variations, is perhaps his crowning achievement. These pictures all show cattle at the margin of a stream, come for their morning drink. It is doubtful if any other painter has ever equalled Mr. Little in the picturing of the misty morning atmosphere. As a draftsman of sheep and cattle he was almost photographically accurate. But the quality that made him great was his ability to seize and set down the significant —to imprison in color, as it were, the very spirit and meaning of the things he depicted.

Discriminating buyers have been securing these remaining pictures fast. It is likely that the people of Lewisburg and the college students

Education Students To Hear Dr. Snedden

Notable Columbia Educator to Lecture to Future Teachers Next Monday Afternoon

Education students will be given an opportunity to hear an educator of national prominence in the near future, when Doctor David Snedden of Columbia University gives a lecture in the new lecture room of the biology building, at 4:30 P. M., Monday, November 30.

A brief account of his life and accomplishments will serve to mark Dr. Snedden as an eminent authority in the field of education. He is a native of California, having been born at Havilion in that state in 1868. He made a thorough preparation for his life work of education by taking his A. B. at St. Vincent's College, Los Angeles, Cal., his A. M. at Leland Stanford Jr. University, and Ph. D. and A. M. degrees at Columbia University.

He was principal of schools at Santa Paula, Cal., from 1892 to 1895; superintendent of schools in Paso Robles, Cal., from 1897 until 1900; assistant professor of education at Leland Stanford Jr. University from 1901 to 1905; adjutant professor of education at Columbia from 1905 to 1909; state commissioner of education of Massachusetts from 1909 to 1916; and professor of education at Columbia University since July 1, 1916.

"CAP AND DAGGER" TO GIVE 3 PLAYS

"The Mayor and The Manicure" Will Be the Feature

The dramatic season at Bucknell will be initiated on Thursday, December 10, with "Cap and Dagger's" production of three one-act plays in Bucknell Hall.

The forthcoming offerings mark the inception of the Society's twentieth year, and were planned principally to enable the student body to witness "The Mayor and the Manicure," Bucknell's entry in the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Dramatic Association tournament, although the local presentation must follow the contest which is held December 4 and 5 at State College. George Ade, well known Hoosier humorist, is the author of the play, which is noteworthy both for its novel situation and sparkling dialogue. Eleanor Dakin, Edna Watson, Frank E. Johnston and Kenneth Slifer compose the cast, which was well received recently in an appearance before the Lewisburg Rotary Club.

As companion pieces to "The Mayor and the Manicure," "Cap and Dagger" will offer "The Girl," by Edward Peple, author of "Officer 666," and "The Prince Chap," and "The Brink of Silence," by Esther E. Galbraith. The first of these is an intense bit of action with a surprising climax, while the second presents a powerful psychological study of human emotions under the thrall of the long Arctic night.

The vogue of the one-act play is rapidly growing; its possibilities are being increasingly recognized. An entire evening's entertainment of such a nature should be warmly welcomed on the campus. In addition, several men, who have not yet appeared before Bucknell audiences, will make their debut.

The price of tickets will probably be set at seventy-five cents, and, because of the limited seating capacity, only the first three hundred applicants will be able to secure them. Further plans are afoot for a more ambitious production to celebrate fittingly the organization's twentieth anniversary, and it is to be hoped that the halcyon period from 1906-1920, when "Cap and Dagger" reached its dramatic peak, can be equalled, if not surpassed.

Rehearsals last year were cancelled when Commencement Hall came under the ban of the state fire inspectors, but several private performances insured an unbroken continuity of activity. Present plans provide for a stage to be built in Bucknell Hall, which, though small, will satisfy immediate needs.

"Puritans" Conduct Special C. E. Service

Students' Thanksgiving Program Is Held in Baptist Church: Junior Council Elected

The Baptist C. E. held a unique service Sunday evening, November 20. After an election of the students who are to comprise a Junior Church Council for the work of the students in the church, the meeting was turned over to a special Thanksgiving program.

The lights were turned out, except for one dim light on one side of the large room. Three Puritans entered and took their places at the rough table at the front of the room. Mildred Fox, the Puritan maid, lighted the candles which were placed about the room. Then, the Puritan, Harold Gamble, read the evening devotions from the large, old, Bible on the table. Pauline Shepson, the third Puritan, read an appropriate Thanksgiving prayer. This was followed by the reading of several Thanksgiving poems by Vera Herrick, Mildred Fox, and Gordon Goolyear. A couple of hymns added to the beauty of the service which was closed by the reading of the Thanksgiving Psalm by Paul Webster and the singing of "Old Hundred" by the entire audience.

After the evening church service, the Rev. Dr. R. M. West met with the C. E. executive committee at his home to discuss the plans for the Junior Council and the regular C. E. work.

GLEE CLUB MAKING SUCCESSFUL TOUR

First Regular Concert Given, Perth Amboy High School

The men's glee club, now on an extended tour through northern New Jersey sends back glowing reports of an exceptional trip. The territory through which the club is travelling is all new to the club, and, in covering this section, it is constantly appearing before audiences that have heard the clubs of other institutions such as Rutgers, Princeton, Yale, and the universities in New York City.

Just before starting on the present tour, the club accepted the invitation of the Consistory to appear in a special concert before the Masonic order in the Masonic Temple at Williamsport. This concert was given Thursday evening, November 19. The Consistory Choir entertained the men at dinner before the concert. A former glee club man, "Chief" Wm. E. Parson, Music, '08, is one of the members of this organization. The Masons were very enthusiastic in their applause of the various numbers and this led the club to stage one of the best concerts that has ever been given by the Bucknell organization.

Several of the members of the club went direct from the concert in Williamsport to Newark, N. J., where they appeared Friday afternoon before the students at the Madison Junior High School. The remaining members of the club returned to Lewisburg for the night and left early the next morning. The first regular concert of the trip was given in the auditorium of the Perth Amboy High School that evening. Perth Amboy is the home of Alexander Horoschak and Alton Roth, respectively cartoonist and violinist for the club, and these boys were especially well received. The work of Dilworth, McCune, and Kushell was outstanding as well as that of the boys who were "entertaining for the home town."

The next move was to Newark where the coming of the club had already been advertised by the singing of the special group in the junior high school. The concert there was given under the auspices of the South Baptist Church of which the Rev. Finley Keech, '22, former cartoonist for the club, is pastor. In the Saturday night concert there the boys gained the enthusiastic approval of an audience of some four hundred people. Sunday morning the quartet, R. C. Jones, S. A. McCaskey, M. C. Shuttlesworth, and C. J. Kushell, sang in the First Baptist church of Elizabeth, while the remainder of the club took part in the services of the Rev. Mr. Keech's church. In the evening a double quartet sang at Elizabeth and the remainder of the club in Newark.

Uncle Charlie Moran Flays Bison Critics

Condemns Criticism of Varsity By Fraternity Brothers as Poor School Spirit

"When Bucknell football men become so tired of criticisms by their fraternity brothers that they desire to form an exclusive club of their own, then there is certainly something the matter with school spirit," said "Uncle" Charley Moran in addressing the mass meeting in Commencement Hall, Friday evening, November 20, prior to the Dickinson game.

He was so disappointed in the small turn-out to the "pep" meeting before a game which means much to Bucknell, that he minced no words in characterizing the knockers and amateur critics of the football team.

"Don't be a knocker, help the athlete; he's a natural sleeper and doesn't like to study," he urged. "The spirit of the football team must come from the school. If you are not back of your team, that team knows it. If you will come out and yell, I'll guarantee that the team will give its best," he concluded.

"Uncle" Charley's remarks closed the pre-Dickinson mass meeting, which was also addressed by Cloyd N. Steininger, '03, who raised the spirits of his auditors to a high pitch, with a forceful message by heart, spirit, courage, and soul, he said. The football struggle involves physical and

Degrees Mean Little In Teaching—Lawson

Good Education is Not the Only Requisite Says Dr. Lawson To Education Society

Prof. G. B. Lawson addressed the Education society last Wednesday evening, November 18, at 7:30, in Commencement Hall. A short business meeting was held and officers for the year were elected.

In his talk, Dr. Lawson emphasized the fact that a good education is far from being the only requisite to a good teacher. "The number of degrees," he said, "counts for nothing. There are more idiots with A. M.'s and Ph. D.'s than can be counted. The people are now beginning to realize fortunately, that this thing of degrees is highly inconsequential in teaching. Not how much he knows, not how many degrees he has, but—can he teach? Does he have a vision? There is the test."

A warning was sounded to the future teachers not to allow their individuality to become submerged by the routine of school work or to be crushed by interference and meddling from individuals outside the school.

"To be really successful, a teacher must retain and assert his individuality. So long as we think of teaching as a work to be carried on by a machine process, just so long will our schools fail to be what we have a right to expect. Mechanical tactics

LIBRARY PURCHASES SEVERAL NEW BOOKS

Sociological List Contains One Written by Former Convict Who Served 14 Years

Several new books have been purchased for use primarily by the sociology department. However, they will be of interest to the student body at a whole. One of the books, "In the Clutch of Circumstance," is a true life-story that is as picturesque as any fictional creation.

In it a famous burglar tells of his career of crime, of the punishment he has undergone, and the steps by which he has become useful and productive in the world. The book not only forms an intensely interesting human document, but is remarkable for its justification of the modern belief of the helping hand towards criminals.

The author served two terms, amounting to fourteen years, in two state penitentiaries. His account of his coming alone to this country as a boy, his arrest for vagrancy, at the age of sixteen, of the course of his burglaries, which he perpetrated in many of the most prominent homes of the country, and of his years in prison, is reading of the most intensely human character.

His career as a law-breaker ended with his well-known burglarizing of Mark Twain's home, an unsuccessful attempt which won him the name of "Mark Twain's Burglar," and which led to his second prison term, from which he emerged capable of taking his place as a useful member of society.

Another book of interest is Dr. William Healy's "The Individual Delinquent." Dr. Healy is the director of the Psychopathic Institute, connected with the juvenile court of Chicago, and associate professor of mental and nervous diseases, at Chicago Polyclinic. This piece of work is a discussion of the conditions and causes leading to criminal tendencies, especially on the part of the youthful offenders, the theory being that adult criminals acquire their delinquency in early childhood. The parts played by heredity, disease, mental abnormality, and environment in the production of the criminal are clearly shown, and the best methods of study and diagnosis are indicated. It is the first text book on a vitally important subject, of which all who have to deal with offenders need the utmost possible understanding.

A book of a different type, but of no less interest, is "The Soul of an Immigrant," by Constantine M. Panunzio. This is the story of an Italian immigrant who came to the

THIRTY-YARD PASS DIEHL TO GOODWIN GIVES BISON GAME

Dickinson Eleven Prove Worthy Opponents by Holding Line, Tightening Defensively

CONTEST WITNESSED BY TEN THOUSAND PEOPLE

Rival Bands Entertain; Frosh Parade Between Halves at Last Bison Home Game

Late in the last period when even the most optimistic had become resigned to a seemingly inevitable scoreless tie, ten thousand people saw E. Goodwin snatch, by a super effort, Diehl's accurately timed pass of thirty yards and scamper over the remaining ten yards of gridiron turf to score the deciding tally in Saturday's game with Dickinson, which has become the collegiate football classic of the Susquehanna Valley, Bucknell took partial revenge for the ravages of the Dickinson eleven of the past two years, when she defeated her down-state rivals 7 to 0 as Trimmer added the extra point after Goodwin's aerial classic.

Inflamed by the hope that the jinx of the last two years, when Dickinson the under-dog in popular opinion compelled the Bison to lap the dregs of defeat, would again work, Coach Lightener of the Carlisle college brought a well groomed eleven, schooled in the deceptiveness of the modern game, rabid with the thought of successfully defending the hard won laurels of past seasons. A fighting Dickinson team took the field. A team which though out played was never outgamed. A team which tightened time after time as Bucknell neared its goal line and held the Bison at bay for three and a half periods.

But overtowering the plucky defense of Dickinson, flashing more brilliantly than the scintillating end running of Hooks and Blaisdell, the work of Diehl, Bucknell backfield ace, as he cut down a man mowing thru the line, dashed thru tackle for substantial gains, forward passed or booted the football, surpassed all others as the moon outshines the evening star. As a climax to his wonderful afternoon Diehl checked the last Dickinson sortee by intercepting a pass in midfield.

For three periods the score remained knotted. Although Bucknell had attempted upon three occasions to score by the kicking route. With the exception of a short attack at the beginning of the second half, Dickinson never gained two consecutive first downs. Only twice did the Carlisle players cross the fifty-yard mark into Bucknell territory, and neither time could they penetrate past the thirty-five yard mark.

After the rival college bands had entertained the crowd in characteristic manner, Trimmer kicked off to Sweeley on his own five-yard mark. He ran back fifteen yards before being downed. Sweeley's lengthy punt carried to Bucknell's twenty-yard line. Then it looked as though circumstance again was toying with the Bucknell eleven. Goodwin fumbled, and after much excited ecort regained the ball. Neither team being able to gain thru the line, a punting duel followed in which the only advantage accrued to Bucknell by a fifteen-yard penalty. Diehl dropped back as though to perform his usual kicking act, made the motions, and then darted for a hole where a Dickinson tackle had once been barring the path. For twenty-four yards to near mid-field he lumbered on before Sweeley clamped round his flying legs. Dickinson tightened and McCormick attempted a drop-kick from his own forty-three-yard line. The kick went wild, being recovered by Books on the twenty-nine yard mark. Bucknell kicked back to Dickinson after both teams had held and the quarter ended.

Dickinson punted back to mid-field, and Blaisdell by line bucks punctuated by a ten-yard gain of his own private vintage, carried the ball to the thirty, the danger mark. Nine more yards the Bucknell backs manufactured in four trials. A scant yard still was lacking for a first down, and Dickin-

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Thirty-three men of the local chapter took the Johns Hopkins chapter house by storm Friday, Nov. 13, on their way to the Navy game. Some of the brothers drove home after the game while others stayed over till Sunday.

The Fijis who were unable to make the Navy trip held a "vic" dance Saturday evening from 7:30 till 10:30. The dance was ably chaperoned by Mrs. Phillips. The neighboring Kappa Sigs were guests and everyone proclaimed the dance a great success. Marshmallows and ice-cream formed the only refreshments, but these were eaten to the accompaniment of "Johnnie" Gilmour's voice.

Word has been received of the marriage of Brother C. P. Dawson, '24, to Miss Ione May Iddings, on November 7, at Camp Hill, Pa. The couple will reside in New York City.

Delta Chapter held a "Sem" dance Saturday evening from 8:00 to 11:30. Chaperones were Professor and Mrs. Harris and Miss Kathryn Clush. Many of the alumni and guests over the week-end attended the dance. Ice-cream and "Phi Gam" cake were served as refreshments. The music was furnished by the Pennsylvania Aces of Harrisburg.

DELTA SIGMA

"Charlie" White, '25, of Olyphant, spent the week-end with his fraternity brothers, who saw him on several occasions, at meal time.

The glee club trip has caused the "Dernie" house to be somewhat depopulated, as eight of the men, Pierson, '28; Stolz, '28; Davis, '27; McCune, '27; Dilworth, '27; Meyer, '29; Murray, '29; and Smith, 26, are with the club.

"Lee" Lighton, '20, and "Burp" Wenver, '22, came back for the Dickinson game.

"Mike" McClune, '27, and George Roller, '27, officiated as referee and umpire, respectively in a football game that was recently played at Picture Rocks between the Picture Rocks and Benton High Schools.

Plans are under way for a "Sem" dance to be held at the house December 12. Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders will play.

While on a hazing party last Friday night, Donald Diehl, '29, unintentionally collided with a barbed-wire fence and suffered several cuts and bruises. He was treated by Dr. Ashbogast.

PAYNE'S CAR SMASHED

Parks Auto, Enters Station, But Car Runs Away, Crashing into Post

Guy Payne, proprietor of the College Inn, tried to let his auto "go smash" last Wednesday afternoon. He had parked the vehicle on the grade ir. front of the Post Office and had gone into the Reading station. Somehow the brake was released and the car rolled down the grade until it came against the steel warning post at the railroad crossing, bearing the words, "Stop, look and listen." The car obeyed this injunction but the post broke a motor support, wrenched the radiator, and bent the splash apron of the car before the arrest was effected. A bicycle that had been leaning against the post was also badly bent in the encounter.

When Mr. Payne came out of the station he found several people crowded around the car but was somewhat surprised to find that it was his. Latest reports are that no advance in prices has been made at the Inn.

BLANCHARD GUMMO, EX-'25, SCHOLARSHIP CANDIDATE

Bunchard C. Gummo, ex-'25 who left Bucknell at the end of his freshman year to attend Yale University, has been recommended by the faculty of Yale for appointment as a Rhodes Scholar. At Bucknell "Blan" made an enviable scholastic record, and at Yale he heightened the powers he so strongly developed here. Especially promising as a literary artist, he has produced much notable student writing at Yale. At Bucknell he was a member of the Delta Sigma fraternity.

The American student would strike for his auto, the Chinese for his autonomy.

So far as we can see the only difference between a girl chewing gum and a cow chewing her cud is that the cow looks thankful.—The Robert Reedite.

Richard Benner, Harry Swartz, and George Phillips, now juniors in Kingston High School, were guests of the fraternity over the week-end. They were greatly elated at witnessing their first college game.

Mr. John Heidrich, Mr. John Gittins, and Mr. Samuel Gittins dropped in over the week-end to see the Kingston boys. Mr. Heidrich was congratulated on having been recently elected tax-collector of Kingston Borough.

Paul Schmidt, '25, visited with his brother Frederick, a junior at Dickinson, during the game Saturday. The two were opponents in a dual meet here last spring.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

Brothers William G. Thomas, '25, Howard F. Thomas, '25, George W. Long, '25, and William D. Stayer, ex-'27, returned for the Dickinson game.

The chapter held its second "Sem" dance on Friday. R. Vincent McNamara's Lyrie Orchestra from Williamstown, Pa., played. The chaperones were Instructor C. Willard Smith, and Mrs. Smith, and Assistant Professor George I. Irland and Mrs. Irland.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Grove, of Conemaugh, Pa., became the bride of Brother James Thomas Meckley, ex-'26, of Conemaugh, on November 18. They were married by the Rev. Mr. H. H. Hoover of the Conemaugh United Brethren Church. Mr. and Mrs. Meckley will reside in Mineral Point, Pa.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Delta Delta Delta is pleased to announce that Mrs. W. N. Lowry has accepted an invitation to become a patroness.

Delta Delta Delta also announces with pleasure the bidding of Helen Rillo, '29, to the fraternity.

Mrs. Luella Shortess, '24, and Miss Sarah Bernhardt visited their fraternity sisters, recently.

A Delta Delta Delta formal dance will be held November 25, at the Psi Kappa Psi house. The dance will celebrate Founder's Day.

KAPPA DELTA

Kappa Delta held its informal dance for the pledges in the Kappa Sigma house November 7. Noble's orchestra furnished the peppy syncopation. Assistant Professor and Mrs. Warfel and Miss Brakeman were chaperones.

Miss Katherine Bergstresser, an instructor in the School of Music, has consented to become a patroness of the fraternity.

FORTY-NINE PRINCETON FRESHMEN TO RECEIVE SCHOLARSHIPS

Forty-nine of Princeton's 635 freshmen will receive financial aid from the university this year in the form of scholarships according to an announcement from the office of the secretary. Of these thirty will be benefitted by war memorial scholarships founded in memory of Princeton men who died in the World War. The remainder are scholarships provided by alumni associations, classes of the university, or friends of Princeton.

Among the new awards is the Plattsburg scholarship, which has been founded as a memorial to men of Company L of the 307th Infantry killed in action

Commenting upon the scholarship awards, Secretary Collins drew attention to the fact that twenty-five of the recipients are high school and twenty-four are preparatory school graduates. They represent eighteen different states.—N. Y. Times.

College Editor Suspended

Because he criticized a chapel speech, Malcolm Stevenson, managing editor of The Tripod, student publication of Trinity College (Connecticut), was suspended from college for a month.

Dean Edward Noxell was the criticized speaker. He said, "Our duty in college is to disregard the individual and to turn out a Trinity type." A letter to the Tripod sharply censured the Dean for this remark and called the editor to account for not denouncing this "goose stepping" policy. This aroused Editor Stevenson to comment as follows:

"..... f Dean Noxell's words correctly expressed his views, we are at a loss as to what to do. We have always thought of college as a spawning ground for individuals—for men who think. Better a radical with a beard and a bomb than a type—a goose stepper—a man without brains enough or courage enough to declare himself."

Sacrifice For Studies, Declares Pres. Lowell

Harvard President Says Youth Ought to Deny Pleasures For Worthier Things

The twenty-seventh annual convention of the Association of American Universities, met at Yale, October 30, 31. At one session of the convention President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard, delivered a stirring speech on athletics and scholarship.

Some selections from his speech follow:

"Students and graduates of this generation are far more proud of their achievements on the athletic field and on the campus than in the classroom," he said. "Their studies are regarded as a chore that must be done as quickly and as easily as possible. When I have one of Harvard's robust graduates come up to me and loudly say, 'I am a red blooded man, I want to know why the football team doesn't win,' I cannot help recalling what the physiologists say, that the human blood is most red when it has not been through the brain.

"What youth wants above all else is to sacrifice itself for something that is worth while. Students are willing to train vigorously and deny themselves all sorts of pleasure in order to make the football team, they give up a lot of their time to the acquirement of other ends which they feel are worth the effort, and during the war they left everything immediately to get over-seas and participate in the struggle.

"If we could make youth feel that scholarship was worth while, we would undoubtedly have more scholars. The question is, how are we to do this? One way is to get rid of the idea prevalent among undergraduates that a man studies hard for honors only because he wants to and does not care for anything else. As soon as students can be made to realize that examinations are not a test of an ability to grind and work unusually hard but are rather a test of intellectual grasp, mental ability and general taste, then they will show some interest and see that this kind of work is really worthy of effort.

"Another requisite for the accomplishment of this purpose is to give the student smore personal contact with their instructors. And this contact should be not with a man who has an intellectual interest in only one particular phase of his subject, but with one who sees clearly all that goes on in the whole field with which he is connected. A narrow viewpoint can only harm the student who is interested often in widely divergent topics."

Students Give Odd Excuses

The following are some of the many excuses for absence received at the Recorder's Office:

A student filed an excuse for absence on a certain afternoon, which absence "was due to the fact that I had to drive my mother out of town."

Another man having been absent from classes during the seventh and eight periods gave as the reason that he "felt bad in the sixth period."

A really unusual excuse was that of the student who "Had to have treatments for two extracted teeth," and we thought of sending a blanket to the one who "went to bed under the doctor's orders."

Our sympathies were all with the doctor in the case where a student was "confined to bed by a doctor with a boil on the leg."

—The State of Stevens Tech.

Chem. Lab. To Be Improved

Improvements costing about $2500 will be made in the chemistry laboratory during the cessation of classes for the Christmas holidays. A large room in the east end of the basement which has been used as a storeroom, will be converted into a laboratory for the junior and freshmen chemical engineers. There will be room for about sixty new desks.

Those laboratory desks in the basement and the first floor which have long been inadequate with their wooden tops are to be fitted with modern soapstone covers which will be a great aid to the cleanliness and the

MEN WIN INTELLIGENCE TEST

Take Highest as Well as Lowest Places at Vermont University

Men showed the widest variation, winning highest and lowest places in intelligence tests of 372 freshmen at the University of Vermont this year, while women in general held the midground, it was disclosed.

dle ground, it was disclosed today.

As a result of the tests, investigators concluded that "intelligence did not appear to be a matter of preparation, for students from small schools stood as well as those from the largest." In mathematics men stood higher than women, while women excelled in languages.

PENN STUDENTS AIDED IN CHOOSING VOCATIONS

The committee of the Christian Association of the University of Pennsylvania, known as the vocational guidance committee, has been established to aid students in seeking out their proper life work. The committee is headed by Dr. Arthur Holmes, of the department of psychology.

The work of the committee is in the nature of a "work clinic," where a complete study of the student's ambitions and abilities is made in an attempt to sift out the proper sphere in which his talents will be of the most use, and where, for his part, he is likely to exert the most influence. The opening lecture of a series supplementing the individual assistance, will be delivered in Houston Hall by Dr. Holmes. The subject will be "Principles Involved in Choosing a Life Work."

YALE STUDENTS TOLD HOW TO USE LIGHT IN STUDY

Instructions as to the proper use of light while studying have been formulated by the Yale department of university heath, based upon the recommendations of the illumination bureau of the Westinghouse Lamp Company.

The instructions are:

1. Do not read with direct sunlight on the white page nor when facing an unshielded window.

2. Insufficient illumination, as in twilight, strains the eye. Use artificial light when necessary; adequately but not wastefully.

3. Avoid glass-top or hihly polished study tables or desks because bright lights will be reflected therefrom and injure the eyes through glare.

4. Never study while facing a bare lamp and do not have unshielded lamp bulbs in the field of view.

5. Use frosted lamps where possible or enclosing shades from which the bulbs do not project.

6. Avoid highly glazed or shiny reading paper.

7. Do not leave lamps burning when you are absent; they may consume power needed elsewhere.

The recommendations of the Westinghouse bureau were made after an extensive survey of artificial lighting conditions in the university, following a preliminary survey by Professor Charles F. Scott of the Yale electrical engineering department.

Students Burn "Worldly" Goods After Evangelism Meeting

"Evolution and all worldly enticement" went up in smoke at Southern Junior College, at Collegwah, Tenn. controlled by Seventh Day Adventists, recently. Following chapel exercises search of the boys' and girls' dormitories was made, and novels, pictures, jazz story magazines, lipsticks, rouge, candy, and other "forbidden" articles were cast into a campus bonfire.

The proceeding followed a revival conducted by Evangelists Carlysle B. Haines, of New York City, and J. F. Simon, of Washington, who have inveighed against "vanity and worldliness."

A committee was appointed to search the college library and eliminate everything in reference to evolution.

The students, led by the faculty, then marched out singing, carrying their "idols" to the bonfire.

Rutgers Has 114 Honor Men

Honor men in the three upper classes at Rutgers University were announced recently. The list contains 114 names, including thirty-four seniors, thirty-eight juniors and forty-two sophomores. To gain a position on the list the undergraduate must obtain an average of 80 per cent. in his work.

Lester E. Hanf, star end on the football team, is high on the list. In addition to his football playing Hanf is working his way through college and is a member of the varsity baseball team.

PLUMBERS MAY HAVE DEGREES

Pittsburgh School Has Professorship and Two Scholarships in Trade

The plumber may now have a degree tacked to the end of his name.

The Carnegie Institute of Technology has added to its curriculum a professorship and two scholarships in plumbing, heating, and ventilating. Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of the Institute, says he hopes they will result in a further improvement in standards of living in America.

The scholarships, each valued at $500, are available to Carnegie Tech students.

GREEK LETTER 'FRATS' HELD NOT IRRELIGIOUS

A statement issued by Dr. John R. Hart, head of the religious education department of the University of Pennsylvania Christian Association, gives the lie direct to the statement frequently made that Greek letter fraternities at the larger institutions of learning in this country are hotbeds of irreligion and atheism.

According to Dr. Hart, twenty fraternity houses are now holding weekly discussion groups on religious questions, and similar groups are being established in rooming houses and in the dormitories.

URSINUS PLANS TO HAVE TOWNSHIP SCHOLARSHIPS

Plans for the establishing of scholarships at Ursinus College from every township and borough in Montgomery County, have been announced by Dr. Omwake, the president, and placed before the county's School Directors' Association.

At present the college is conducting a campaign for funds, and the president's plan is a part of that campaign.

Dr. Omwake's idea is to have each township subscribe to a $2000 scholarship to permit at least one four-year high school graduate to enter the college. The public will be appealed to in an effort to realize that plan.

The school directors approved the scholarship plan and urged the people of the county to support it.

The plan was not formed to get students, Dr. Omwake said, because the institution is already filled to overflowing.

"Rather," he added, "we desire Ursinus to be of real service to the surrounding territory. It will stimulate sound scholarship and high ideals among the young people, and is a lasting contribution to civic and moral welfare."

Photo-Naturalist is Appointed To Pitt Zoology Staff

Norman McClintock, famous nationally for his success at wild life motion picture photography, has been appointed photo-naturalist with the rank of professor on the University of Pittsburgh zoology staff. All of his films, the product of 15 years of pains taking work, revealing the intimate lives of scores of wild animals and birds with remarkable clarity, will be used in the zoological classwork, so giving students a comprehension of the daily life of animals that has not been possible even for experts in nature study before. McClintock is a Yale graduate.

With Pennsylvania abounding in wild animals, about whom little is known, opportunities are open to add many a chapter to McClintock's realistic record of life in the woods. The university, through this newly established branch of activity, will cooperate with the bureau of game commissioners, the Izaak Walton League and other state and National organizations interested in game and wild life in promoting efforts to understand and conserve wild life.

N. Y. U. Remembers St. Gaudens

Imposing ceremonies marked the unveiling at the Hall of Remembrance in the rotunda of the library of New York University of a bust of Augustus St. Gaudens, the sculptor. The event took place Tuesday as a part of the centennial celebration now being held by the National Academy of Design.

The Hall of Remembrance, which is in no way connected with the Hall of Fame, opens its door only to those who have achieved distinction in the arts. It was conceived about five years ago at the university.

The St. Gaudens bust, by John Flanagan, is placed beside those of George Inness, William M. Chase, Clinton Ogilvie, J. Q. A. Ward, Carroll Beckwith, Frank Duveneck, Henry K. Brown, and Walter Shirlaw.

Eventually there will be sixteen busts in the Hall. They will be set up on either side of the marble columns supporting the dome of the library.

CALIFORNIA INTERNATIONAL RELATION SCHOOL PLANNED

The west coast will soon have a school of international relations matching the Walter Hines Page School in the East. It will be called the Los Angeles University of International Relations and will be established at Burbank, California.

Dr. Rufus B. Von Klein-Smid, president of the University of Southern California is now touring eastern cities on a money gathering trip to finance the new project.

The site for the school was offered by the city of Burbank. There will be four colleges, an institute of international politics, school of foreign trade, school of diplomacy, and a school of international law.

While the press reports contain no account of the potential intellectual resources of the new school, we are assured that $10,000,000 will be raised to meet its financial needs.

NEW GRADUATE SCHOOL BUILDING READY AT U. P.

Exercises marking the formal opening of Bennett Hall, the University of Pennsylvania's newest building, will be held on Saturday afternoon, November 21.

Bennett Hall, made possible through the generosity of the late Colonel Joseph M. Bennett, houses the school of education and the graduate school of the university, and contains many features which make it especially adaptable to the work of these two schools.

Large, airy class rooms, an exceptionally large number of seminary rooms, a library and comfortable offices for the members of the faculty are contained in the building, while on the top floor has been installed a well-equipped gymnasium for the use of the women students at the university.

Former Boy Scouts Organize Lafayette Fraternity

Former members of the Boy Scouts of America now enrolled as students in Lafayette College are to have a continuance of their interest in scout matters fostered by a new honorary society to be known as Alpha Phi Omega, according to a movement recently approved by the faculty and sponsored by scout executives in Easton. It is hoped to arouse sufficient interest in other colleges in this movement, and to make it a national affair. The organization's purpose would be to aid in training scout leaders.

The college's personne records show that of its 1,028 undergraduates, 504, or 49 per cent., were one time members of the Boy Scouts, and that 57 per cent., or 184 members of the entering freshman class were members of the organization. These figures compare with recent surveys which showed that 28 per cent. of the undergraduate student body of Yale had been boy scouts, and 49 per cent. of the student body at Harvard.

Pays Tribute to Mathewson

In an article entitled "Football" in the Princeton-Yale official program used at the game November 14, William Lyon Phelps, Class of '87 at Yale, pays the following tribute to Christy Mathewson, the late president of the Boston Braves and one time great pitcher of the Giants.

"A word of tribute to Christy Mathewson. His fame as a pitcher dimmed his fine record as a college football player. He played fullback for Bucknell University, and was proficient in every department of the game. In his senior year Walter Camp put him on the All-American football team. Years later Mr. Mathewson said that this gave him more pleasure, pride, and satisfaction than his success as a professional pitcher.

"It was on the football field that Mr. Mathewson exhibited and developed those qualities of courage, fair play, generosity, and sportsmanship that characterized his subsequent career."

Mercer Has Hoboes Club

Every college has its hoboes. In the summertime they migrate, via the brake beams of a freight car, to the harvest fields, or travel to seaports to ship out as deck hands or coal passers. During the semester they spend their week-ends hitch-hiking or on the "Blind baggage" of passenger cars.

Last year, at Oberlin, one of these modern scholar gypsies conducted a seminar in hoboing. For a small consideration he initiated beginners in the occult art of vagabondage. They were given courses in both freight and passenger bumming.

At Mercer University, Macon, Georgia, a Hoboes Club was organized a year ago. The president is known as Regal Rod Rider; the vice president Duke of the Dust; the secretary, Holder of the Jack.

The qualification for membership of this club is that the prospective member shall have hoboed 1000 miles since last June. Membership in the Club is limited to 25 persons.—The New Student.

Students and faculty of the Carnegie Institute of Technology will pay tribute to Andrew Carnegie next Friday, November 20, when the thirteenth annual observance of Carnegie Day, commemorating the founder's birthday, will be held in Carnegie Music Hall.

When a person who is good joins a group, the conversation begins to lag.

DO YOU BUDGET YOUR TIME?

"Kidding" ourselves is not only "the greatest American pastime," but is an art developed nearly to perfection by many college students. Time goes by unheeded and unaccounted for, while we chew the proverbial rag, starting with the latest dance step and ending with the rise and fall of man. The evening drifts by with nothing accomplished.

What shall we do? We aren't prepared for classes for we haven't studied. Well, the chance of being called on next day is small. There are thirty in the class, and the "prof." cannot call on everybody. Besides the subject matter is general, and in a pinch it would be possible to "spoof" the old boy along. Thus we reason with complacency, unworried and unalarmed.

But take this tip. You cannot learn to be even a good ditch digger or janitor by continuing this policy, much less a man of position and attainment. We have been gullible long enough to think success is assured with every college diploma. Yet, sheepskin remains but sheepskin, be it a lining to a coat, or a certificate signifying that one was exposed to Philosophy, Sociology, Public Speaking, or any other study for twenty weeks, three recitations a week. Success is for the man who can do his work better than any one else.

The question you are going to be asked when you apply for a position at the end of your college course is not whether you were president of your fraternity, or whether you can run a hundred yards in ten seconds, but what good you are when you are set to work out a problem.

What do you know and can you apply your knowledge? Are you ready to be tested on what you have learned in idle chattering? Will it help any in solving definite problems? Finally, what is there here that is going to be valuable later? We all want to stand out as among "the elect," but do not know how to prepare to become distinguished.

"What we are to be, we are now becoming." Do you believe that? Then you must get busy. You must use well your time.

Dr. Bogardus, of the southern branch of the University of California, who spoke here recently, has become an outstanding figure in sociological circles. When asked how he ever managed to teach during the regular session of college, and in the summer school, besides writing several books on sociology, he credited it to his division of time rather than to the possession of genius. Success depends on how you use your time, rather than upon intellectual superiority.

Time is the thing with which all men work. A college president once said that he could get students to think in terms of dollars but not in terms of time. Most of us suffer from the same sort of mental astigmatism. Perhaps it is because money is cash already coined while time is but the crude metal not yet minted. If we are going to succeed, we must get the habit of regarding time as capital, and as limited capital. Time is the raw material out of which we must build our success.

Students who enter a certain well-known New York music school are required to take a course in efficiency. A certain lad from Pennsylvania, taking this course, kept track of his every minute for two weeks. His diary read something like this:

MONDAY—

Arose	7:30
Bath, toilet, etc.	7:30— 8:15
Walked to restaurant for breakfast	8:15— 8:20
Ate breakfast	8:20— 8:40

Walked to school	8:50— 9:03

At dinner	5:40— 6:40
Walked home	6:40— 6:50
Read papers, magazines, wrote letters	6:50—10:00
Retired	10:00 P. M.

So it went for two weeks.

When he analysed this record, he was amazed. He found that on Monday he had spent only five hours and 37 minutes at work. On Tuesday, with an extra hour's work at home, he put in only six hours and 40 minutes. So it went, day after day.

He drew up an ideal scheme for his day. In short, he made a budget for his time. As he worked it out, it ran something like this:

Rise	6:45
Toilet	6:45— 7:10
To breakfast	7:10— 7:15
Breakfast	7:15— 7:35
Back home	7:35— 7:40
Practice one hour	7:40— 8:40
Walk to school	8:40— 8:53
At work	9:00—12:15
Luncheon, half hour	12:15—12:45
Work	12:45— 4:00
Walk home	4:00— 4:15
Practice	4:15— 6:15
To dinner	6:15— 6:25
Dinner	6:25— 7:10
Evenings, given to reading writing, with one hour of home study	7:10—10:00

Saturday and Sunday nights he scholued for concerts, the opera, etc.

Merely by re-arranging his time and systematizing his work, he was able almost to double his working hours. Under this new arrangement he got in ten and a half hours a day as against less than six under his previous method. Yet he had not lengthened his day a particle.

What was the result? He began to grow in efficiency, for he learned to work more efficiently in the hours he labored. He moved up. He grew in musical ability. He attracted attention. He was offered a job paying an attractive salary, for concert work. Hardly of age, he is already mounting the heights. He is one of the notable young musicians you paid money to hear in last year's Artist Course. He is on his way to the top. But it isn't his talent that put him where he is. It is hard work. He owes his success to the fact that he learned how to make use of his time.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions to Events in the Week's News.

Bucknell spirit doesn't mean anything unless it is shown at the proper time.

Last Thursday evening, when the Glee Club sang in Williamsport, several Bucknell people in the audience did not rise when the Alma Mater was sung.

In fact, only one, a girl who was graduated only recently, was the only one who did rise when "Dear Bucknell, oft of thee—" was heard.

And for her to stand alone was a thing that took moral courage.

There is too great a tendency on the part of students to stand for Bucknell when it is easy to do so, but to appear to have no relation when that relationship demands anything from them.

We were mighty proud of that girl who stood alone when the club sang the Alma Mater that night. The club gave a concert that was nothing at which to be ashamed. The others simply lacked the moral courage to call attention to themselves by rising.

They forgot that, on the other hand, they were drawing attention to themselves by FAILING to rise.

A great contrast was shown by an occurrence during the trip in Northern Jersey. At one concert half a dozen Bucknell alumni stood while the Alma Mater was being sung, and the whole audience rose, too, out of respect for their loyalty to the college.

Those who stand for Bucknell spread respect for her by acknowledging their connection. Those who do not, tacitly deny their allegiance, and are unworthy to be called her sons.

The education that counts trains moral courage as well as the intellect.

It does not neglect to develop the loyalty that makes men valuable in whatever line of work they undertake.

The man who stands for his college, wherever he is will stand for his principles wherever he is, alone before the world if need be.

Bucknellians, if you want Bucknell to do her best for you, you must do your best for Bucknell. Show the world that she is producing men who know the meaning of loyalty. Stick to Bucknell through thick and thin, in victory and defeat, as a college to be proud of.

Alumni Notes

Grace Poust, '22, Dies

Miss Grace Poust, '22, for several years a well-known school teacher of Union and Lycoming Counties, died at the Williamsport Private Hospital, Tuesday, November 10, after a few weeks' illness. For the past year she had been a school teacher in the Montgomeryville High School.

Miss Poust, before entering Bucknell University, prepared at the Muncy High School and the Lycoming County Normal School. She enrolled in Bucknell in 1918 in the A. B. course. While here she became proficient in mathematics and was appointed an assistant in that department. In 1922, at her graduation, Miss Poust received the degree Magna Cum Laude.

The funeral was held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Shipman Poust, on Washington street, Williamsport, Friday, November 13. In respect to her memory, the Montoursville High School closed for the afternoon and a large delegation of students and teachers represented the school at the funeral.

Besides her parents, Miss Poust had three brothers, Grover C. of Kansas City, Mo., who was graduated in 1917 from Bucknell with the degree B. Se. in E. E., and Chalmer and DeLa Poust of Williamsport.

In appreciation of the educational work of Mr. Charles Lose, who was awarded the degree, Master of Arts, by the University in 1885, the president of the Parent Teacher Association of the Williamsport High School, Mrs. Edward Lyon, has announced the establishment of a prize in his name. The prize is to be awarded to that pupil who attends school under the most adverse circumstances, and is to be known as the Charles Lose prize.

Mr. Lose was formerly principal of the Lock Haven High School.

If the buildings are but the shell of the College, as Prexy says, then it must be that the students are the nuts.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Thirty-Yard Pass Gives Bisons Game

son took the ball. Dickinson punted out of bounds and McCleary substituted for M. Goodwin. On the next play, McCleary skirted right end for twenty-three yards, his only flash of the game. Again the game Dickinson forwards stopped the Bucknell attack with two yards to gain for the next first down. Punts were exchanged and again Dickinson stopped the Bison charge, this time on the thirty-five yard line. With two minutes to play before half time, Dickinson rushed the ball. Books circled end for a run of twenty yards before the half was over.

Between the halves the freshmen formed a stream-like snake parade, massing behind the band. Again Trimmer kicked off, but the ball rolled out of bounds. The second trial carried to the Dickinson three-yard chalk, but Books by shifty open field running dashed back twenty yards. Then Carpenter, fresh in the game, hammered the Bucknell line for two first downs. An unfortunate mid-field fumble recovered by Bucknell thwarted this offense. Both Sweeley and McCleary got off remarkable boots, the former for sixty-yards and the latter traveled seventy-three yards, resting on Dickinson's seven-yard line. An exchange of kicks and Bucknell rushed the ball to within eighteen yards of the goal line as the quarter ended.

Trimmer's attempted placement missed the cross bars by a mean five yards. Dickinson kicked seemingly out of danger. Line plunges gained a first down. Then Diehl leashed the oval to E. Goodwin who scored the winning points. Trimmer kicked the goal. Carpenter made a remarkable thirty-five yard runback of Trimmers' kick off. Frank, the assistant Dickinson coach, misinterpreted Diehl's actions when he turned the dazed Carpenter's head over with his foot, as an attempt to kick the Dickinson player. "Hap," as he is known to his friends, was at one time middle-weight collegiate champion and in ring parlance, "knows how to handle his dukes." He did not await further provocation in his attempt to display his knowledge of fistina. Prompt work by cool headed players, spectators and the police however averted a brawl.

Trimmer again failed in an attempted drop-kick soon after the game was resumed. Punts were exchanged and Sweeley ran the ball back twenty-five yards. Dickinson attacked by the air until Diehl snatched down a pass in mid-field. The game ended with Bucknell rushing the ball toward her goal.

intellectual clashes; body versus body, wit versus wit, strength of mind versus alertness.

Cheer leaders Dietz, Elderand Shepard were there; the band played; President Evans, of the Senior class, presided; and the students cheered and sang. The inimitable Scotti, '27, swept the audience with his singing of Professor W. C. Bartol's latest composition, "Look ont for the Bucknell Bison." He followed this with an encore number, "Hail Alma Mater," which was also sung by the audience.

Students Vote Down Army Training

The student body of the College of the City of New York, by a vote of 2092 to 245, on November 20, recommended abolition of compulsory military training in that institution.

The results of the referendum will be placed before the Board of Trustees. The course in "military science and tactics" is conducted through a unit of the Reserve Officers Training Corps, instituted at the college in February, 1919.

B. U. 60-YARD PASS WAS MADE IN 1913

Philadelphia Ledger Publishes Letter of Stoughton's Which Recalls 1913 Game

In telling of the daring pass of the Illini on Franklin field in the Penn game, Gordon Mackay, sports writer of the Philadelphia Inquirer was tempted to reminisce. Among accounts of famous aerial plays we find the following:

"But this pass has opened the way and paved the avenue for many letters advising of other great stunts. Billy Crowell, the football official par excellence, perhaps the most experienced of all the mahobs who don the ermine of football, ships along this interesting letter from A. G. Stoughton general secretary of the Bucknell Alumni Association.

"'In reading the Philadelphia Inquirer's columnon the famous forward passes, I have dug into history a bit concerning Bucknell's forward passes and find that in 1913 against the University of Pittsburg, Cruikshank, a Bucknell back, passed to Sturgis, Bucknell end, for 60 yards, the ball traveling in the air from the Bucknell 40-yard line to the Pitt 10-yard line, where it was received by sturgis and carried over for a touchdown. Bucknell won the game 9-0.

"'Professor B. W. Griffith, a member of our Athletic Council, informed me that you would well remember this pass as being one of the officials in that game. I would appreciate very much your advising me of the authenticity of this pass so that I might inform Gordon Mackay, of the Inquirer, about it, or if you wish, you might call upon him and give him this dope which is a mighty interesting historical fact.'

"Incidentally, Billy says that Bucknell did score that touchdown and that we are away off our trolley. We refuse to be led into any more battles, we have our hands full already. If Bill says that touchdown was scored it was—and Bill's decision in the matter is worth about one million of our words. For he bossed the job that day, and did it in his own inimitable fashion. So when Bill reaches for our jaw with a left hook, we are going to take it on the run. We're panting now."

FIRE DESTROYS PHOTOS

State Juniors Lose All Year Book Photos in $50,000 Fire

Following the total loss of more than 200 photographs intended for the Pennsylvania State College junior class year book in the $50,000 fire that completely destroyed the Penn State photo shop building on College avenue, November 10, editors of the publication immediately began arrangement for the re-taking of pictures of all fraternity groups, athletic teams, students organizations and individuals.

Great delay in the publication of the annual will probably result. Hundreds of other valuable college plates and pictures were destroyed, many of which cannot be replaced.

The business was a private concern conducted by the firm of B. Reon and Stover. The blaze spread so rapidly that nothing was saved. The frame building and its contents were insured for about half the estimated loss. Volunteer firemen worked until late afternoon but none was able to find the origin of the fire. It was the fourth big fire within a year in the heart of the State College business section, all but one starting in frame structures.

Some people who remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy, don't bother much about the other six.

Bison Team Leaves For Final 2 Games

Will Play Detroit University, Thursday, and Dayton Team on Following Saturday

Following the clash with Dickinson, the Bison football squad is making its final journey into foreign fields for the last grid games on the Orange and Blue schedule. Tomorrow will find the Bucknell gridders in Detroit, Michigan, engaging in a stirring struggle with Detroit University. Saturday they will appear in their final contest, with Dayton, at Dayton, Ohio.

The Bucknell squad left Lewisburg for Detroit Tuesday. Coach Moran took practically the entire Orange and Blue squad with him, for two games within three days may prove too much for the Bison regulars who have participated in some strenuous combats this season. The Bucknell gridders will undoubtedly have to fight it out also in the last two games, without any side-line encouragement. Bucknell alumni in Detroit and Dayton may be present to witness the games and back up the players with cheers, but there will hardly be many Bucknell students at the games, the great distance and the Thanksgiving turkey at home being too great obstacles to the accompanying of the team.

The Turkey Day program at Detroit should be interesting, but the Bisons should gobble up their opponents, if comparative scores mean anything. The Detroit eleven received a 24 to 0 reverse some time ago on their home field, at the hands of Georgetown. Bucknell defeated the latter at Washington 3-2; hense by all rights the Bisons should emerge from the Detroit game victorious.

Little is known of the Dayton players. They have appeared on the schedules of many of the most noteworthy teams in the midwest and also have made jaunts eastward several times, for games with foreign foes. In all their contests they have made creditable showings. The Bisons, however, are determined that their 1925 grid season shall not end disastrously and may be counted upon to play their best football, at Dayton, November 28.

U. P. GUIDES STUDENTS

Vocational Guidance Committee to Institute Lecture Course

Functioning at the University of Pennsylvania is a group of experts which is helping bewildered students to choose their life work. It is the Vocational Guidance Committee, operated as one of the varied activities of the University Christian Association, which will open a course of vocational lectures for students next month.

The lectures will be held on Monday afternoons during December and January, beginning with an address on "Principles Involved in Choosing a Life Work," by Professor Arthur Holmes of the Department of Psychology.

Law, medicine, teaching, journalism, the ministry, social service, politics and other professions will be considered during the course by members of the committee.

Collegians Poor Railway Men

Many railroad officials believe that college men are unpromising candidates for executive positions in transportation companies, says the committee in charge of the nation-wide survey of transportation being made by Yale University.

Other tentative findings made public by the committee were: university instruction in transportation is sometimes of mediocre character; scientific experiment is being conducted by many agencies, among which commercial concerns are becoming increasingly important.

Sidelights From The Sidelines

It took two midshipmen to hold the Navy goat which strained at its leash during the whole game. It took eleven of them to hold the Bison, and then they had a mean afternoon.

The uniform insignia of the cheer leaders fill a much noticed need. Organized cheering amounts to little if the leaders themselves are not organized. The attractive CBL makes a neat appearance.

"Say Coach", said Texas Walls to Chinn after the Frosh game with State, "every man who was suited got in that game." "Yes," Chinn replied, "and if I'd had a few of the faculty along, I could have used them too."

"Haps" Benfer, the Muhlenberg coach, who lived for some time in Lewisburg, picked up a couple of the Bucknell hikers as he was returning home from Muhlenberg's gruelling 7 to 0 victory over Catholic U. Benfer is a brother-in-law of "Mul" Musser of Third street.

SIDELIGHTS—

Saturday was all sports day at the Naval Academy. Four of the Midshipmen's teams met invaders on the home field. Beside the Bucknell-Navy game, the Plebes opened the afternoon with a 41 to 0 victory over Catholic U. Freshmen while Dartmouth and V. P. I. were victorious in soccer and cross country respectively.

Coach Chinn's wife, as Chinn himself puts it, "The big boss," usually sits on the players' bench during the game. Says Chinn about August's ninety-yard run, "And when my wife saw August a streakin' it, she started making cider out of my Adam's apple. Why down South, I had to fire her from the bench for three weeks once."

Japanese Students to Convert U. S.

Japanese-American youths soon to visit Japan, will be recruited from American universities, and, after a period of religious training, will return to America to attempt to convert the Western World to the Buddhist religion.

Details of the plan were unfolded recently by Count Lord Abbot Sonyo Otani, supreme prelate of the Buddhist religion in Japan, who is visiting in Fresno, Cal. The high priest of Buddhism is related to the reigning sovereign in Japan.

Wellesley Bars Smoking

A proposal to permit smoking by Wellesley College students when off the campus has been defeated by the "Senate" of the college government association, it was announced November 18. The five faculty members of the Senate voted down the proposal against the affirmative votes of the three student delegates.

The new regulation was passed some time ago by the other branch of the student government body, and had been indorsed by 82 per cent. of the 1207 who voted in a referendum on the subject.

Have You Ever Heard?

That among the states in the East, Pennsylvania has the second largest state-owned forest, being surpassed only by New York.

That our Pennsylvania state forest totals more than one and a quarter million acres.

That our total area within the state is 28,000,000 acres, of which 13,000,000 acres are really fit for nothing but the production of timber.

That the state is soon to vote on a proposition to bond itself for $25,000,000 to provide money to secure enough additional forest land to make the state forests total 5,000,000 acres.

That when we secure those 5,000,000 acres, which will be handled scientifically, Pennsylvania will again become a great lumber state.

That when our natural forest land is again restored to its proper use—as it eventually must be and will be—Pennsylvania will again produce enough timber to supply her own needs and furnish some for her neighbors.

That this means the saving in freight on lumber alone to the people of Pennsylvania of $25,000,000 annually, figured at present freight prices.

That it probably means a saving much greater than that, because we now get most of our lumber from the South, whereas in a dozen years more we shall have to get our lumber from the Pacific Coast, thus practically doubling freight costs.

That in addition to saving these enormous yearly sums in freight charges Pennsylvania will be the direct gainer in dollars and cents through the millions of dollars that will accrue from the state forests.

That a conservative estimate places those profits at six dollars an acre a year—they will probably be much larger—and that on 5,000,000 acres we should have an annual yearly income of $30,000,000.

That under the law of the state all revenues from the state forests go to support the public school system.

That at present the state tax payers must provide $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 of state tax each year for school purposes in addition to local taxes, so that the expenditure of $25,000,000 now to buy forest lands will mean an annual income, a generation from now, that will be greater than the entire sum we now collect yearly for state purposes.

That the thing that has shown the citizens of Pennsylvania the feasibility of this plan—and so made possible its success— is the successful handling of the great forests the state already owns.

That some of these forests are right at our very door, where Bucknell students are priviledged to see some of the best work in scientific forestry that is being accomplished in America.

That the state forest nearest to us the Bald Eagle forest, containing Hairy John's Park, the virgin timber at Troxelville, and the Bucknell forest biological station in charge of Professor Nelson Davis—is the largest of all the state forests.

That the man in charge of it has more forest area under his control than any other of the many foresters in Uennsylvania; namely, more than 100,000 acres.

That his great responsibilities are a reward for his great ability and unswerving fidelity to duty.

That he is a Bucknell man—having been a member of the Bucknell S. A. T. C. 1918—as well as a graduate of the state forest academy at Mont Alto—Forester Raymond B. Winter.

That one of the successful teachers at the Mont Alto state forest academy was Coleman J. Harris, '12, one of the sons of our late president, John Howard Harris.

That one of the leading forest engineers of this country is also a Bucknell man—Ernest Sterling, '02, who was the head forester for the Pennsylvania Railroad, and who initiated its practice of growing its own ties, and is now one of the 15 directors of the American Forestry Association.

That two other successful Bucknell men worked under him as foresters: Carl Tiffany, '02, and Jay F. Bond, ex-'03. That A. Donald Gray, '14, was another Bucknellian employed in the forestry department of this great railway.

That the publicity work that has made the forest bond issue almost certain of success, was done by another Bucknell man—Albert O. Vorse, '05, who was likewise a Lewisburg boy.

So that Bucknell will have had a worth-while part in restoring the timber to our hillsides and winning back that large total of prosperity that vanished from our confines with the going of the forests.

McCORMICK TO BE COACH OF ARMY BASEBALL NINE

Graduate Manager of Athletics, Harry E. McCormick has resigned in order to become baseball coach of the U. S. Military Academy nine.

McCormick's resignation was accepted by the Athletic Council of the University at a meeting held in Baltimore last week. Professor B. W. Griffith, who formerly controlled the athletic destiny of Orange and Blue teams for several years with great success, was elected to the graduate-manangership to fill the vacancy.

"Moose" has also been coaching basketball and baseball here and it will be necessary to find older men to fill these positions. No definite action was taken in this direction but it is thought that two coaches will be secured, one for each of these sports.

German Students to Repay "Loan"

Dr. Reinhold Schairer, director of the German Student Co-operative Association, announced November 3 that the students of Germany have decided to consider as a loan the gift of $400,000 contributed to Germany in 1921-23 by students of the United States and other countries. Repayment of the loan will be made in the form of contributions from Germany to an international student trust fund; to be used to meet emergencies in education in all parts of the world.

The fund to which payment on the gift of $400,000 will be made is administered by the International Student Service with headquarters in Geneva. The fund is the only one of its kind in the world. The first payment has already been made by the students of Germany. In the futre an annual contribution will be made, increasing as conditions in that country improve.—Public Ledger.

AFTERMATH

Gee! now that rushing's over,
And all the boys are pledged,
We find the club in clover,
Our boys have cleared the hedge.
We look with critical eye,
And in our hearts we know,
That of all the gangs, old Eta Pi
Has clinched the most of dough.
Now we lamp the other eggs,
And decide that half will flunk,
Then we glance at Tappa Keg,
And vote their gang a bunch of drunks.
But we are glad that we came thru,
And didn't get those lazy ones
Which we concede to Mu Tau Mu
With all the other bashful sons.

FLEAS

(With greatest of apologies to Joyce Kilmer).

I think that I shall never see
A bug so nasty as a flea.
A flea which never suffers rest,
But out bites every other pest.
A flea which brings us all to pay
With scratches on the warmest day.
A flea that doesn't ever care
But lives within your clothes and hair.
Of all my life it is the bane
A flea that bites and raises cain.
Poems are ruined by fools like me
But only Flytox can kill a flea.

Little words of wisdom,
Many words of bluff

"Sit down, now that's enough."

ENDOWMENT APPEAL OF 1856 UNEARTHED

Mrs. Everett G. Owens, Daughter of Ex-President Loomis Finds Old Paper

TO THE CITIZENS OF LEWISBURG AND VICINITY

The undersigned, Officers of a Public Meeting held in Ammons' Hall, Friday evening, 11th inst., respectfully ask your earnest and candid attention to a subject of the first importance, to us as individuals, and as a community.

The Advantages

It is not quite ten years since a High School opened, in the basement of one of our houses of worship, with one Professor and a handful of pupils. From that humble beginning, have originated the Academic, Collegian and Theological Departments, which, with the Female Institute, constitute the UNIVERSITY AT LEWISBURG. Since that time, the Taxable Valuation of our Borough has nearly doubled, having been $322,000 in '46, and $500,000 in '56. The University has, without doubt, contributed more than anything else to this large and substantial prosperity.

We learn from the reports of the first four years and the catalogues of the last six, that the No. of STUDENTS has varied from 76, the first year, to 247. Deducting one-fourth for absentees part of the year, there have been an average in constant attendance of 155 students. Of these, we estimate 81 from abroad, and 54 home students, annually. The TEACHERS have increased from 3 the first year to 10 the present.

The outlay for BUILDINGS erected or bought for the various Departments, and for the Teachers, is (say) $40,000.

The $1 STUDENTS from ABROAD it is believed expended in town annually for Board, Washing, Lights, Books, Clothing, and other incidental expenses, $217 each, or $27,770 per year, which for ten years is $227,770.

The TEACHERS were paid $1,600 the first year, and $8,550 the last. An average of $5,200, ten years, is $52,000.

There are, in addition, constantly, 15 or 20 FAMILIES, attracted to or retained in town and neighborhood solely for the advantages of the University. Their outlay in Rent, Merchandise, Provisions, etc., with the sums expended by strangers, visitors and patrons at Commencement and similar occasions, is at least $10,000 per year and has amounted in ten years to $100,000.

THE 54 STUDENTS AT HOME have saved at least half the expenses they would have incurred while going elsewhere for the same opportunities. This is a saving of $5,859 per year, or during the ten years of $58,590.

Showing a sum total of outlay in Lewisburg and a saving of $418,380.

(These statements are all low, and the present income considerably over the above average.)

FOUR HUNDRED AND EIGHTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS is indeed a very large sum, a considerable portion of which has been clear profits, a permanent addition of buildings and money capital to both town and country.

Thus much for the pecuniary importance of the University to our community. It has also extended our name and reputation over and beyond our State limits. It has given us better opportunities for bestowing upon the young that surest and best of all earthly treasures—a refined, religious education. And it enables us to gain that end while keeping our children at home, and thus better guarding them from the many dangers which beset them when abroad, as well as enabling us to secure the end at half the expense which would be incurred by sending them elsewhere.

The Future

There is reason to anticipate a future enlargement of every Department of the University. Additional Buidings are contemplated, requiring an outlay of $40,000 to $50,000. But the present actual expenditures of $30,000 to $40,000 among all classes of our citizens yearly, and its constant tendency toward the expansion and improvement of our town, and the increased moral and intellectual culture of the rising generation—appeal at once to the self-interest and to the benevolence of every good citizen, to do what he or she consistently can to sustain and strengthen the enterprise. While we can never expect freedom from errors in any human Institution, no penurious or selfish or fault-finding spirit should be cherished or even harbored to the detriment of what has so many overbalancing benefits.

The Danger

When the University was originated, it was expected and promised of Eli Slifer, secretary of state for Penna. during the Civil War, was the father of Eli Slifer, Jr., ex-'72, W. H. Slifer, ex-'70, Annie F. Slifer, Inst., '72 (Mrs. Wm. C. Walls), and a Methodist, while Mr. Worden, then editor of the Lewisburg Chronicle was a Baptist and scribe of the University's Board of Curators from 1851-1862.

Boston Transcript: "Life's definition of a football game: Twenty-two nice young men entirely surrounded by maniacs."

Religious Ed. Prof.: "Give me a quotation from the Bible."
Student: "Judas went out and hanged himself."
Prof: "And another one?"
Student: "Go thou and do likewise."
—Volante.

and for Lewisburg and vicinity, that they would raise at least $25,000, or one-fourth of the $100,000 required. Considerable sums were accordingly subscribed, but not much over half the $25,000 has ever been realized. There is therefore an obligation resting upon us as a community, to make up the deficiency. The denomination, elsewhere, have subscribed and secured more than their $75,000. They now look to us to make up our full share. As all the benefits in a pecuniary point of view, are ours, they deem it only fair that we should incur at least the share of the expense promised, and upon which encouragement they bore the heavy portion of the burden. This is the common sentiment of the patrons and friends of the institution at a distance. Is it not right?

John F. Crozer, of Delaware county, a wealthy and benevolent gentleman, who has already contributed over $8,000 to our University, has made a formal offer to the Board of Trustees of an additional sum of $50,000, provided the University be removed to Delaware county. This sum would more than cover all probable losses from removal. The offer will come before the Board of Trustees on the 29th of the present month. A majority of the Board reside in and near Philadelphia.

The Remedy

It is not believed the Board will accept the above offer, if Lewisburg and vicinity will only come up to the alleged understanding, and do what in honor and equity they should. Two years ago they appointed a committee (a majority of it from Lewisburg) with authority—as soon as the sum of $25,600 was secured in valid subscriptions, and $10,000 paid in—to let for building the main Central Edifice of the University Plot. About $12,000 has been secured, leaving $13,000 still wanting. It is claimed that if this balance is secured before the 29th, the Trustees will be content to let the University remain: that in that case they would be committed by their own offer, against removal; and that no subscription for such building could be collected in case of removal.

The Plan

Many of our citizens have already subscribed and paid liberally, while others have made less donations, and others nothing. It is neither honest nor honorable to ask a few to bear all the burden. It is now proposed to appeal to all—in town and vicinity—to raise the sum needed, by voluntary additional subscriptions, by an APPORTIONMENT or EQUALIZATION of the amount based upon the State Assessment and the Mercantile Appraisement of the present year. This plan appears equitable and fensible. One third the sum would be paid upon laying the foundation, one third in six months, and the remainder in one year, thereafter. Some of the heavist tax-payers have had this plan proposed to them, and all thus far have assented to it.

Shall It Be Done?

That some measure must be taken, and that, too, quickly, seems evident. Every real estate owner in the vicinity, is deeply interested; for the removal of such a source of profit might be the commencement of a decline in property, the end of which no one could foresee. Every one engaged in trade, would miss the money now continually flowing in from this source. And our citizens, generally, would feel, directly or indirectly, the check to our business and prosperity—but perhaps too late.

A liberal, far-sighted, manly meeting of the question, it is hoped will avert the danger, and secure a lasting blessing to our beautiful and cherished town. A failure to do what we now propose, was the cause of a loss to a neighboring town in our own county, of a benefit (not one-fifth the value of this) which reduced their Assessed Valuation from $157,582 to $138,447. Let us not imitate their error, but, by a generous and liberal and profitable investment guard against the threatened loss.

The Committees purpose waiting upon every citizen this week or early in the next. "Be not weary in well doing." Give the matter a thoughtful, candid examination, and meet them in a friendly and hopeful and (if need be) self-sacrificing spirit, and all will be well.

A beautiful pink rose may now be seen growing at the rear of Dean Rivenburg's home.

"Betty" Slifer, '28, has returned to college after a week's absence due to an attack of tonsilitis.

Mr. and Mrs. William James, of Nanticoke, Pa., visited their daughter, "Betty" James, '28, November 14.

Roland C. Cunningham, '25, who is employed in the branch plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, at Sparrow's Point, Md., was married on Saturday, November 14.

D. W. Anderson, '27, who has been assisting in the Registrar's office, turned in his keys recently in order that he may put more time on his studies.

Beulah Wally, Doris Siner, Mary Evans, and Helen Steinhilper, all of the class of '29, took a trip to "little ch- New York," on a recent Sunday excursion.

The girls' quartet, composed of Hannah Metcalf, Kathryn Bossler, Grace Peffer, and Edna Watson, sang a beautiful hymn in chapel in Commencement Hall on Tuesday morning, November 16.

Marthat Von Neida and Mary Wagner entertained over the week-end at a cabin party among the mountains near Laurelton. The guests were Loretta Barbour, Peg Sterling, Frances Saul, and Jane Beakley.

Milton Endres, '27, and his roommate, Douglas Anderson, '27, spent a recent week-end in New York. They made use of every minute while in the metropolis and returned to college all primed for a few days' sleep.

William B. Brown, '28, and Warren G. Knierlem, '27, have very radical ideas of what should be done to Maryland motorists. They walked 15 miles in that State before getting a lift on Sunday after the Navy game.

The Frosh hockey team has been chosen by Miss McCann, and gives promise of some interesting games. The girls composing the team are: Fielding, Jones, Welch, Wagner, Sale, Fortner, Reese, Zerby, Sofan, Slater, and Fetherolf.

The leader of a Bucknell orchestra, none other than "Jack" Gardner, attracted a crowd of about two hundred while playing the piano, on a boat in the harbor at Annapolis. As soon as the spectators beenme numerous, Jack, with his characteristic modesty, stopped playing.

W. Norwood Lowry, instructor in physics, is moving into one of the new houses on Fourth Street. He drove into Lewisburg from Carbondale, Pa., with a truck full of household goods recently. With the assistance of several of his fraternity brothers it was not long until the truck was unloaded.

Professor H. S. Everett, while driving over the Pocono mountains a few days ago, saved a car load of people from skidding into a deep ravine to possible death. The car ahead skidded back into Professor Everett's car, which fortunately was heavy enough to hold it from going over the embankment.

"Don" Rigg took a Bucknell atmosphere to the parlors of Goucher College during his trip to the Navy game. His entrance was made in the true slap-stick fashion, and before he left, the walls of Vingolf Hall were ringing with his praises of Bucknell. If Bucknell receives many transfers from Goucher next year, it will be credited to "Don's" glowing accounts of our university.

"Jerry" Hathaway, '29, is to spend the holidays in Lock Haven at the home of "Ted" Blackburn, '28.

Ross Ormsby, '27, returned safely after having spent a recent week-end with his father in New York City.

Women students may be interested to know that J. L. Cornely, '26, has a good recipe for making fudge, and surely knows how to use it.

Professor R. F. Howes, of the political science department, was entertained at dinner on Wednesday evening, November 19, by Alpha Chi Mu.

Betty Green and Donald Shaffer, of Harrisburg, were guests of Jane and Mary Foust at the Alpha Chi Omega informal dance on November 20.

Emil Kontz, '28, not only keeps up to date by reading newspapers printed in English, but also peruses the Hungarian paper which his parents send him.

Mildred Biddison, '25, and Beatrice Mettler, '25, returned to Bucknell on November 20 to attend the Alpha Chi Omega informal dance held in the Phi Gamma Delta house.

William Baldauf, ex-'28, is now a plebe at the U. S. Naval Academy. "Baldy" enjoys the life at the academy very much and hopes to become an Admiral some day.

Charles Rivenburg, '29, will be Glee Club pipe organist on the Thanksgiving trip. He will play solo numbers on the organs of many of the churches to be visited.

Milford Riffe, '28, and James Kerwan, '29, attended the card-party and dance held at the Elks' Hall in Milton recently. The boys came home early, reporting that the affair wasn't so "hot."

Professor Paul G. Stolz, Miss M. R. Campbell, and Mr. John C. Gilmour enlivened Chapel exercises Thursday, November 20, by singing "There is Joy in Work." Mr. Lewis B. Kesler accompanied them at the piano.

Two attendants at chapel exercises last Thursday failed to receive attendance cards. However, we all knew the little birds were there, for they attracted much attention on their perches on the lighting fixtures.

Registrar Holter is proud of a large picture of a Bison, which now adorns one of the walls of his office. Mr. Holter secured the picture last spring when he attended the National Convention of Registrars at Colorado.

At a meeting of the Y. W. Cabinet, at which "Shorty" Parmley presided, Wednesday evening, plans were made to send a joint-letter to "Tiny" Vanhorn, president of the Cabinet, who was injured in an auto accident when returning from the Navy game.

Assistant Professor William Schuyler, who was at the Navy game, says that Bucknell out-played the Navy but the breaks were in favor of the Navy. The first night of his return, he got only three hours' sleep, and says that that is not enough to rest a professor properly.

Frank Waidner, '26, Welty Gray, '27, Charles Dunmire, '26, and George Rogers, '26, commonly known as the "Four Horsemen," drove to Danville a week ago Saturday evening. On the way home they run over an opossum and the next day they enjoyed a real delightful meal.

Professor and Mrs. Clarence Johnson informally entertained a group of students at their home on Sunday evening, November 15. These present were Mildred Fox, Helen Thompson, Agnes Dunbar, Mary Lanning, Mary Harrar, Lewis Davis, Clyde Elizey, and Albert Sheckells.

When the students in Junior-Soph chapel laughed at Dr. Hunt's expression "a member of the local bar," the president scratched his head for a second and said, "Educated people know that word has two meanings." That is getting back in short order. Nobody laughed, so we think that was over their heads, too.

Professor Leo L. Rockwell, the head of the German department, has placed German newspapers, magazines, and other German literature on a table in his recitation room, B 21. Students are at liberty to read any of the literature in the spare moments. Professor Rockwell also plans to give a lecture on German university life.

Mary Menges, '26, is back. The only traces she bears of her recent accident are two large strips of adhesive plaster on her face.

Anne Outwater, '27, went to Wellesley College this week-end as Student Government representative to the Student Conference there.

Meredith Scott, who spent the last two weeks in quarantine for chicken pox, is able to be about again. But oh! the smell of that fumigating!

I. W. Winemiller, '28, with his father and two friends, will spend Thanksgiving week-end hunting bears in Sullivan County, Pa.

Betty Green and Donald Shaffer, of Harrisburg, were guests of Jane and Mary Foust at the Alpha Chi Omega dance on Friday evening, November 20.

Ralph L. Walter, '26, and David Thomas, '28, motored to Mt. Carmel one day last week. They visited at the home of Ralph's father, the Hon. L. S. Walter.

F. C. Hopkins, '27, says he is taking a course in forestry under Professor Burpee. Any afternoon he can be seen observing leaves under the influence of a rake.

Mildred Marshall, '26, had her week end spoiled last week by news that her brother had been seriously injured in an automobile accident in Washington, D. C.

Mildred Biddison, '25, and Beatrice Mettler, '25, returned to Bucknell, November 20 to attend the Alpha Chi Omega informal dance held in the Phi Gamma Delta house.

"Len" Coates, '26, is still looking for the fellow that passed him up with an empty car on the other side of Harrisburg during the trip back from the Navy game. "Len" says he can lick him.

If you do not believe in evolution, just notice the difference in the size of the signs that the freshmen have to carry this year. "I look innocent but they proved me guilty." There is no mistake about seeing it.

Pi Beta was well represented at the Navy-Bucknell game, those attending being, Veta Davis, Marian Higgins, Mary Kohler, Helen McElravy, Jane Rees, Babs Reifsnyder, Peg Tennant, Blanche Thompson, and Neal Trowbridge.

Mrs. George Sale entertained several of her friends at a little dinner party at the Women's College, a week ago Sunday. The guests at her table were, Mrs. Harry Robbins, Miss Armstrong, Mrs. B. W. Griffith, Dorothy Griffith, '28, and Jean Matthews, '29.

George Fritzinger, Fred Rothhill, Montgomery Mayes and Paul Eggleston drove to the Navy game. About a mile this side of Dauphin they burned a bearing out on the Ford and from there the going was not so good. The repairs to the bug set them back only eleven dollars.

A theater party, of which Professor and Mrs. Leo L. Rockwell, Mary V. Laning, '28, Pauline Milliken, '27, Willard H. Laning, '27, and J. Charles Phillips, '28, were members, enjoyed "The Student Prince," a play which was given in Williamsport the week of November 9-14. The party witnessed the play on Saturday evening.

Did you ever realize how many people there are on the campus having the same surname? One hardly goes into a class where there is not at least one Davis or Davies. Some rather odd coincidences occur; there are two Professors Griffith living on Brown Street; and there are two girls in college who bear the same rather unusual name—Elizabeth McCracken.

VALUE OF COLLEGE PLACED AT $72,000

Boston University Statistics Show College Man's Salary Increases Steadily

The four years spent in college net the average college graduate $72,000. This is the finding of the Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industry, based upon the statistics of earnings of students and graduates of of the College of Business Administration of Boston University, and also upon like statistics from other colleges.

The statement was sent to Dr. Joseph R. Wood, assistan to the President, and he has handed them to the Bucknellian, together with some of the figures upon which this statement is based.

According to the figuhes compiled by the Boston University statisticans, the untrained man goer to work at the average age of fourteen and reaches his maximum earning capacity at thirty. His greatest is less than $1200 a year. And since his earning capacity is dependent largely upon physical strength, it falls off at fifty or earlier, to a point below the level of self support. More than 60 of every 100 untrained workers are dependent upon others for support at the age of sixty.

The total earnings of the untrained man, between 14 and 60 years of age, are reckoned at about $45,000. Not more than $2,000 is earned the four years that would have given the untrained worker a high school education.

The high school graduate goes to work at 18, passes the maximum of the untrained man within seven years, rises steadily to his own maximum of $2,200 at forty years, and continues at that level the remainder of his active life. His total earnings between 18 and 60 are $8,000, or $33,000 more than the untrained man earns.

The college student starts at 22 years. By the time he is 28, his income equals that of the high school man at 40. It continues to rise steadily for many years. The average of $6,000 at sixty is often exceeded. The college man's total earnins from 22 to 60 are $150,000. This is $72,000 more than the high school graduate earns, and so represents the cash value of a college education.

Not all men by any means, earn as much as the sums considered representative for their course of training. Some vastly exceed those sums. Since the large earnings of a few raise the average of the many, it is likely that these figures may in a sense, be misleading. But whether they be exact or not, they show one thing unquestionably: a college education not only makes us different men and women, filling our minds and hearts with the treasure of culture and learning, but it has, as well, a real, cash value. Looked at from any point of view, the boy or girl who goes to college is making a very worth while investment of time. In a hundred ways it pays back remarkable dividends.

Virtue is the latest fashion of doing up one's prejudices.

Degrees Mean Little In Teaching--Lawson

will surely turn out a mechanical product.

"Practically everything we have about us—newspapers, churches, industries, everything we eat, think, or wear, is standardized. We must save the schools from this fate in order to prevent them from becoming engines of mediocrity. In order to do this, teacher must save his individuality, even at the cost of some idiosyncrasy. He must be free, unshackled."

Dr. Lawson also dealt briefly with the matter of pay in the teaching profession.

"Thousands of people in the United States are spending more money on automobiles every year than the annual salary of the average teacher amounts to; the teacher who prepares the children of those same people for life. Starvation wages of teachers is the fundamental error of American life. This state of affairs is bound to undermine the very foundation of our most important institution. You and I have to be propagandists. If it is true that the teacher is the criterion of our intellectual evolution, an adequate return must be made. Propaganda is necessary. Unless we use it we cannot get money for the schools, or recruits for the profession," he said.

Following Dr. Lawson's address the chairman, Leo F. Weisenfuh, '26, expressed the thanks of the society to the speaker, and then called a business meeting. Miss Hannah Metcalf, '27, read the constitution, which was recently drawn up for the Education Society, and the members voted unanimously to accept it as read.

Officers for the year were then elected. Leo F. Weisenfuh, '26, was chosen president; Ethel M. Fowler, '26, vice-president; Hannah Metcalf, '27, secretary; R. A. Lady, '26, treasurer; and R. D. Smink, '25, business manager.

will never again have the opportunity to see such a collection of Littles as will be shown at the bookstore next week.

Lewisburg is particularly rich in Littles. Next to Williamsport, our town boasts more Littles than any other single community. A number of faculty members and college officials are included in this fortunate list of possessors of Littles. Among them are Professor Nelson F. Davis, Professor E. M. Heim, Professor F. M. Simpson, Mrs. Llewelyn Phillips, Miss Eliza J. Martin, Professor Lewis E. Theiss, Dr. John T. Judd, and Judge Albert W. Johnson. Among townsfolk who own Littles are Mr. William C. Walls, the Misses Lawshe, Miss Regina Hoffa, Mrs. John P. Bahl, Andrew A. Leiser, Esq., Dr. W. R. Roland, Mrs. Enoch Perrine, Dr. C. A. Gundy, Mrs. William Leiser, Mrs. A. W. Brown, Mrs. G. S. Mathack, Mrs. Christopher Mathewson and Mrs. T. A. Edwards.

Skunks to the right of us, skunks to the left of us, and skunks in front and behind—yes, the Myerstown "kittens" are proving to be bold and a little too friendly. LIBRARY PURCHASES SEVERAL NEW BOOKS

United States, and was treated with stupidity, misunderstanding, and unfairness, which at times reached incredible burtality. However, this immigrant became a citizen, and is proud of his citizenship. It is a striking narrative of personal achievement, intensely interesting because of its fine dramatic quality and more than ordinary literary power.

Another book is one by Reginald Heber Smith, "Justice and The Poor." This piece of work is a vigorous portrayal of the injustices practiced upon poor citizens and immigrants. It is a searching analysis of the causes of this deplorable situation, so dangerous in a democracy. It is a constructive presentation in simple and non-technical language of the agencies through which this evil may be eliminated—the small claim courts, domestic relations courts public defenders, legal aid organizations and industrial accident commissions. Many of the leading executives of our universities today praise this book as practical and timely.

The foregoing do not complete the list, but are merely samples. Other books such as "Penology in the United States," by Louis N. Robinson, and "The Female Offender," by Caesar Lombroso, which deal with our crime and punishment problems, have also been secured by the library.

Library Receives Fiction

The library received from the Contemporary Club a number of books, among which were some of the leading works of fiction of the day. Among the books received were Galsworthy's "White Monkey," and "The Freelands;" Sinclair's "A Cure for Souls;" Walpole's "The Old Ladies" and "The Catherial;" "Lew Taylor's Wife;" Sedgwick's "The Little French Girl;" Macaulay's "Potterism" and "Told by an Idiot;" Wells' "Joan and Peter;" and Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

Students' Decoration Bit of Ames' Plane

Dorsett and Seigh Have Souvenir of Lately Lost Aircraft

A piece of the wing covering of Aviator Ames' plane now decorates the walls of "Red" Dorsett's and "Johnny" Seigh's room, as a result of their trip to Bellefonte several weeks ago. These souvenirs were procured at the Bellefonte Academy, where "Red" was enrolled last year.

At the time of the search for Aviator Ames, thirty of the Academy boys boarded a truck and were taken to the mountains to join the farmers and townspeople in their task of trying to locate the plane.

When the plane was found that night by a country lad, several of the boys were within a half-mile of the spot, and, hearing the signal, rushed to the place. Later, as they left the scene of the disaster, they succeeded in towing away a large part of the wing. It was from this piece of the wing that "Red" and "Johnny" cut their souvenirs.

While at the Academy last year, "Red" made several trips to the flying field, where he watched the various aviators land. Ames was among them. At one time he and "Red" rode into Bellefonte and played a few games of pool together. Ames impressed "Red" as a carefree, jovial man, who was flying not for wages, but for the sport of it. Hence, although almost everyone would cherish a souvenir of the disaster, "Red's" piece of the plane brings back memories of the sporting courage of Ames.

Owens, '87, Saw Hopis Perform Snake Dance

"The Snake Dance," a composition of Cecil Burleigh's that was played by Mme. Gray-Lhevinne in her concert here a few weeks ago, has a bit of local interest in it. A Bucknell student, John G. Owens, '87, was one of the early white men to witness this sacred dance of the Indians.

Mr. Owens and a companion were sent into the Hopi Indian country on an archaeology expedition several years ago.

The Indians were suspicious about the intentions of the white men and would not permit them to come any nearer to their village than the edge of the mesa. As little progress could be made without the friendship of the Indians, Mr. Owens tried in every way to gain their confidence.

One day, while idly watching some young braves racing across the plain, Mr. Owens took out his watch to time them. "Why," he exclaimed," I used to do better than that on the track at old Bucknell." He challenged one of the braves to a race and beat him.

In admiration, the Indians invited the white men into the settlement. Mr. Owens knew that the sacred snake dance was soon due. He wanted to see it, but he was told that only blood brothers were allowed to be spectators. Mr. Owens asked that he might become a blood brother, and the old chief gave his consent.

The two pale faces were taken into a council room where the chief and the elders of the tribe sat in a circle. It was with some trepidation and misgiving that they watched the medicine man draw out a long knife. He slashed the arm of Mr. Owens much in the same way that a doctor would in treating a snake bite. One of the Indian youths stooped and drank some of the blood. The arm of the brave was slashed, and Mr. Owens drank of the blood. The same ceremony was repeated with the other white man. The pale faces were then blood brothers because they had Indian blood in their veins.

In the meantime, the boys of the tribe were out on the plains gathering rattlesnakes. The Indians believe that the snakes go to the sun to beg for rain. The dance is given in honor of the snakes that help bring a fruitful season.

A fire is built and a chief dancer is chosen. He places a ball of clay in his mouth, then puts a living rattler through the clay, leaving the head out on the left side of the cheek. An assistant dancer goes around with the chief dancer. This second man has a stick with feathers which he uses to attract the snake from the cheek of the chief dancer. The two men dance until they drop.

Mr. Owens later headed the second expedition to Copan sent out by the Peabody Museum of Harvard University. He contracted yellow fever and died February 17, 1893. He was a brother of Professor William G. Owens.

Wong To Be Architect And Go Back To China

"East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet," said Kipling, but he seems to have been barking up the wrong tree; for every day we see more of the East coming West. W. Y. Wong, who is now a special student at Bucknell, was born in China about twenty-two years ago, in the city of Canton. In 1905 his parents left him in China to be reared and educated as a good Chinese boy should be, and went to Mexico, buying a sugar cane ranch near Tampico. They still have this ranch. They also have a plant in which they manufacture sugar which they sell to the Mexicans.

In 1923, young Wong came to join his parents in Mexico. At this time, he says, he really met his parents, for he had no clearly defined impression of them from his former acquaintance with them.

He sailed from Shanghai to San Francisco. He then went by rail to Mexico. He was in a rather bad situation, for he could speak no Spanish and very little English. He remained with his parents in Mexico but a short time. In April, 1923, he went to Chicago to study English under a private tutor. By September, he knew English well enough to enter the University of Pennsylvania. He pursued his course there, which was architecture, until coming to Bucknell last summer for the Summer Session of the University. He liked Bucknell so well, that he remained for the regular winter term, and is here now. He expects to return to China when he has become a competent architect.

Although Wong received his grammar school and high school training in China, his early education does not differ much from that of American children. His father and his uncle founded and organized a grammar school in South China, and in this school Wong received his first period of training. He next went to the preparatory school connected with the Fuh Tan University, at Canton.

This university was founded by Chinese, and is supported by the donations of wealthy Chinese. It gives a four year course. The principal subjects covered are Engish literature, English composition, mathematics, history, and Chinese literature. The class rooms are like ours. The faculty was entirely Chinese, except the history teacher, who was an American girl. The students, Wong says, are no more serious than our students, and are anxious for the last class to come, so that they can engage in some athletic contest.

Chinese students are very fond of tennis and soccer. Soccer is the more popular. They also play volley ball, basket ball, and baseball. They have not yet learned to like baseball. They like swimming. Wong, himself, swings a "mean racket," to which any tennis shark who attended summer school will agree.

So even though East is East, and West is West, yet the twain shall meet.

Fordham Gets Rare Books

A set of books by Edward S. Curtis, ethnologist and historian on "The North American Indian," was recently presented to the library of Fordham University by Morgan J. O'Brien, of the class of 1872, former Supreme Court Justice.

The work is in twenty volumes, bound in tan leather, each with a portfolio supplement of forty graphic pictures showing phases of Indian life. Each volume deals in detail with the customs, legends, religious ceremonies, and superstitions of North American Indian tribes. Only 500 copies of the edition were printed.

GLEE CLUB SINGS TO MANY HEARERS IN JERSEY CITIES

Pleases With Both Secular and Sacred Concerts; Gets Fine Reception Everywhere

GUEST OF JUDGE DAVIS AT THE HOTEL STERLING

Merriman, Alma Mater Composer, Leads Club in Singing Song During Trenton Concert

Returning from one of the most successful trips in the history of the organization, during which it made twenty-two appearances and entertained twelve thousand people, the Bucknell University Glee Club arrived in Lewisburg last Sunday evening, just in time to take up the college work after the Thanksgiving recess.

Following the appearances in the Masonic Temple at Williamsport, and the concerts at Perth Amboy, Newark, and Elizabeth, New Jersey, the club entered on a succession of appearances that kept it moving about continually. After splitting for the church services in Newark and Elizabeth on Sunday evening, the club reunited on Monday morning to sing in the high school at Belleville. Immediately after that the club returned to Newark where it entertained the Baptist Ministers' Association of Northern New Jersey at its regular monthly meeting in the Peddie Memorial Church. The ministers, in turn, entertained the club at lunch during which many of the men became well acquainted with the college-boys and expressed their appreciation of the opportunity to meet the representatives of the Baptist college.

The evening concert was given in the First Baptist church at Elizabeth. Here the appearance of the quartet and the double quartet at the church services of the previous day had served as a drawing card for the entertainment, and the large church auditorium was comfortably filled. The young ladies of the church served dinner before the concert and the freshmen members of the club had their first opportunities to show their oratorical ability. It is customary for the club to call on all of the freshmen for speeches of thanks at such functions and the freshmen lived up to tradition on this occasion.

Tuesday evening's concert was given at the high school in Hillside and was one of the best concerts of the tour. Tuesday was a sort of day of rest for the club, the evening concert being the only one given by the full club. The quartet, violinist, reader, and trio, however made an appearance in the high school at East Orange in the morning. Many of the men used the time thus left to them to make visits to New York.

The following morning the club made an early start for Trenton where the concert was given under the auspices of the men's bible class of the Central Baptist Church. The teacher of this class is Federal Judge J. Warren Davis, '96, vice-chairman of the Board of Trustees of the University. The club sang at the assembly of the high school in the morning and the boys were the guests of Judge Davis at luncheon at the Hotel Sterling. The feature of the evening concert was the appearance of Samuel Sears Merriman, '86, who wrote the words of the Bucknell Alma Mater. Mr. Merriman was a former director of the glee club and led the club in the singing of the last number.

The Thanksgiving Day concert in the Baptist church of East Orange was given under the auspices of the Bucknell Alumni of New York. Two preliminary appearances were made in "The Oranges": the first at a union Thanksgiving service held in the Presbyterian church of East Orange and the second in the North Orange Baptist church. After bounteous Thanksgiving dinners in the various homes where the men were entertained, the club was given the afternoon off and many of the men attended football games being played nearby.

Friday morning the club moved to Belleville, the home of Assistant Manager L. K. Davis. Luncheon was served in the high school lunch room

Cherchez la Femme? Not Now At "Sem"

Co-eds, Hunting, Round Up Fifty Men—Dance 'em, Feed 'em, and Send 'em Home Again

"The most original event of its kind" was the unanimous opinion of the fifty couples who attended the "Thanksgiving Vacation Dinner-dance" at the "Sem" Saturday night, November 28.

During all Friday afternoon and Saturday morning, 13 fraternity telephones were put on the blink by the "Semites" hunting the elusive male. This time it was: Cherchez l'homme rather than Cherchez la femme. However difficult the task, about 50 men were found and the party began at 6 P. M. sharp.

Shouts rang through the dining-room as 100 eager diners opened their unique favors, and found paper hats cleverly concealed in pasteboard cylinders.

Mock turtle was the piece de resistance, and everybody thanked Mrs. Sale for the wonderful dinner set forth.

After dinner, the company promenaded to the "Sem" parlors and the dance was commenced. Original programs were available in limited numbers. However, Dorothy Griffith, '28, "syncopated" on the piano, and everybody made merry.

Before intermission time, Miss Wainwright took up the piano duties, and the dance went on apace. At half-time, Doug MacKenzie, '26, and John Gilmour, '27, sang some very charming love ballads. Those who did not dance played bridge and 500. All too soon 10:30 came and 50 boys wended their weary but happy way home.

PADDOCK TO SPEAK ON SPORTSMANSHIP

World's Record Holder Will Be Artist Course Attraction At Baptist Church

Charles Paddock, holder of world's records in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, will lecture in the First Baptist church on Monday evening, December 7, at 8:15 o'clock, where he will talk on "The Spirit of Sportsmanship." Single admissions are $1.00.

In spite of the fact that Paddock did not win first place at the last Olympic games, he is constantly being referred to as the "super-athlete of modern times" and "human flash."

There are other sides to Paddock. He spends his summers on a ranch and he has also worked around the movie studios in Hollywood during his spare time. He is also a special writer for several newspapers and has interviewed such men as Pres. Calvin Coolidge, the Prince of Wales, and many others.

He discusses a theme that is close to the heart—clean sportsmanship—in the battle of life as well as on the athletic field. He is an exceptionally fluent speaker, with an incisive and thought-inspiring style and with a trend of sparkling humor that adds much to his wide popularity on the lecture platform.

Paddock's record for the 100-yard dash is 9 3-5 seconds; for the 220-yard dash it is 20 4-5 seconds. He made his best showing in the 1920 Olympic games, where he beat the world in the sprints. In the 1924 Olympics he failed to win his races, although finishing second in the 200-metre dash. Following those games he toured the world, with other American athletes, competing in many countries, and winning many races. Paddock will always be rated as one of the fastest men who ever wore spiked shoes.

'EDUCATION TO BE SCIENCE'---SNEDDEN

Columbia Professor Tells B. U. Students About Progress In Teaching Methods

"Education is not yet a science, but within a comparatively short time it can very likely be properly designated as such," was Dr. David Snedden's answer to his own question, "Can We Make a Science of Education?," which was the subject of an address he delivered before the education students in the biology lecture room, last Monday afternoon, November 30. The talk was followed by a business session in which officers were elected.

Dr. Snedden began his talk by showing how professions, other than that of education, grew from mere occupations into sciences. Navigation he used as one example; medicine served as another.

"It has only been within the last 75 years," he said, "that medicine has evolved from an ordinary profession into what can truthfully be termed a science. Agriculture, too, has become a science, as distinguished from a mere means of eking out a livelihood, since 1850. This is largely due to the advances made in botany, chemistry, and bacteriology.

"That brings us down to the matter of science in the profession of education. It will not, perhaps, become as exact and infallible a science as that of agriculture or navigation but, nevertheless, it will become a science.

"Education will have to derive its scientific character from the material adjuncts, such as scientific methods of lighting and ventilation, the erecting of fire-proof school buildings, and improvement in the print used in the texts. We are working out methods in these directions that are really going to be sciences.

"Within the last fifteen years we have made great strides toward a scientific understanding of that quality we call intelligence. This new understanding of the human being himself is helping to a great extent in making education a science. Individual differences and capabilities are gradually coming to be measured and taken into consideration."

In connection with this, Dr. Snedden said that we must take a more scientific attitude toward the curricula for different individuals, pointing out that what might be best for one person would, very likely, not be best for another, a fact that has not even yet gained wide enough acceptance although great advances have been made in this direction.

"It was formerly thought," he said, "that one student could understand a subject just as well as any other student, provided he was willing to try, but the incorrectness of this belief

Music School Recital Planned Wednesday

Student Talent To Be Featured by Second Musical Program Dec. 9. Bucknell Hall

It has been the custom, in past years, for the School of Music to give monthly recitals in which the students of the school take part. Each member of the School of Music faculty prepares one or more of his students to participate in each recital. The type of music rendered has always been of a high order, and the skill and training which the students have displayed have been especially commendable. Those who heard the recital November 11, discovered the social and recreational value of the recitals as well as the musical advantage of attendance.

The recitals are open to the public and the members of the faculty and student body of the College are especially invited to attend.

The second student recital of the Bucknell University School of Music will be held on Wednesday, December 9, at 4:30 o'clock, P. M., in Bucknell Hall. Among those who will appear at that time are: Esther Wester, Mildred, Headings, Anna March, Frances Beiber, Evelyn Oyler, Lorenzo Scotti, Melvin Shuttlesworth, Alten Roth, and Edwin Dolbey.

TRIANGLE DEBATE TO START FRIDAY

F. and M., Lafayette, and B. U. Will Argue on U. S. Entry Into League of Nations

Debating teams will smell the first blood of the forensic arena here on Friday evening at seven-thirty when the Bucknell affirmative team will do battle with the negative of Lafayette College on the question, "Resolved that the United States should enter the League of Nations." The debate will be part of the annual Lafayette, Franklin and Marshall, Bucknell triangle, Bucknell's negative team meeting the Lancaster aggregation at the same time, and Franklin and Marshall, in turn, sending its negative to Easton. Franklin and Marshall won the event last year by defeating both of its opponents. Lafayette had won the event for two years previous to that, but now the Bison team is getting "bull-headed" and will make a determined fight to win the laurels.

Coached by Professors Howes and Coleman the Bucknell team has high hopes for the victory. The first speaker here will be James G. Williams, '29, a youngster with the remarkable record of having won sixteen out of eighteen oratorical contests in which he took part while in prep school. Bruce Miller, '27, member of the debating team of 1923-24, will speak second and T. B. Drum, '26, captain and manager of this year's team and one of the members of the Bucknell team that won seven out of eight debates two years ago, will make the concluding arrument. The Lafayette men will all be experienced debaters: Robert Cunningham and William Hayes, who has been a member of the squad for three years.

Professor George B. Lawson will be the chairman of the debate. Dr. Long, president of Dickinson Seminary; Mr. E. E. Boyer, principal of the Mifflinburg High School; and Mr. R. H. Swank, of Sunbury, will be the judges. The string quartet of the University Glee Club will play during intermission.

The negative team that will debate against the affirmative of Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster on the same question, and at the same time, consists of R. H. Coleman, '29, L. F. Lybarger, '28, and Carl A. Hile, '26. These men have all had experience in debating before and feel confident with the affirmative team that the triangle of the debate will have any one point on which to stand at the close of the argument. Incidentally a victory over Lafayette would give Bucknell a legitimate claim to the debating championship of the eastern part of the United States for the Lafayette team took that distinction from Bates College last year.

Co-ed Students Train For Fire Emergencies

Dress, Close Windows, Report at Assigned Escapes, Minute Alarm Rings in "Sem"

New regulations governing the use of fire escapes and the conduct of fire drills have recently become effective at the Women's College. The new rules are very definite in laying down the exact procedure that is to be followed, both during the drills, and if there should happen to be a fire in the building.

The rules that have been adopted are as follows:

"Fire drills shall be in charge of a fire captain, the house president, and proctors appointed by the house president.

"Fire drills may be held at any time and there must be at least eight each year.

"When the alarm is sounded each student must put on shoes and a

Dayton Beats Bisons In One-Sided Game

Bucknell Worn Out By Detroit, Loses Second Contest

The Bisons found it impossible to play two major football games successfully within two days, and lost their final contest of the season, with Dayton University, by 19 to 0. The game was played at Dayton on Saturday, just 48 hours after the Thanksgiving Day contest with Detroit.

Although the Bisons tried to save themselves for this final contest, and played a purely defensive game after scoring the winning touchdown against Detroit, they entered the Dayton contest thoroughly worn with travel and scrimmage. As a result, Dayton had it comparatively easy.

Bucknell was not able to cope with the Notre Dame style of play used by the Daytonians and consequently went down before an offense that consisted mainly of long end runs and sharp off-tackle dashes mixed with thrusts at the center.

Neither team scored in the first period, but shortly after the second opened, Dayton began a march on its own 30-yard line and went right down the field until Bill Blake, a Philadelphia lad, shot over the line for the first touchdown. Mahrt kicked the goal.

Bucknell tried many passes, completing only a small number, but these went for material gains. The third period was a punting duel, but this brought disaster to Bucknell when O'Brien blocked Diehl's punt and Hipa recovered for Dayton on Bucknell's 7-yard line. This time Grace made the touchdown. Achieu missed the goal.

CAMPUS CLUB HOST TO FRESHMAN GIRLS

Reproduces 4th Commencement of Local 'Female Institute' at Reception in Gym.

The Campus Club entertained the girls of the freshman class in the gymnasium on the evening of November 11, 1925.

The feature of the evening was the presentation of "THE PROGRAMME OF THE FOURTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT OF THE UNIVERSITY FEMALE INSTITUTE AT LEWISBURG, PENNSYLVANIA," by the members of the club. Mrs. M. E. Martin, '62, made a few introductory remarks about the early graduation customs at Bucknell, then called "THE UNIVERSITY FEMALE INSTITUTE."

Mrs. H. S. Everett, as Dr. Justin R. Loomis, accompanied by Miss Eliza J. Martin, as Miss Amanda Taylor, principle of the "FEMALE INSTITUTE," followed by the graduating students, and by the visiting members of the Board of Trustees, led the way to the platform.

The programme of the "FOURTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT" opened with a march, "Susquehanna Polka," played by Miss Lulu Coe. The music was written by Theodore Held, professor of music at that time, and was dedicated to Miss Amanda Taylor, principal.

Miss Hartman, as "Jenny Lind," sang "The Last Rose of Summer."

Mrs. James McClure, as Rosetta Fairfax, read "Flowers of the Heart," an essay written by Mrs. M. E. Martin in "the style of her youth." Mrs. McClure wore the wedding gown of Mrs. Ralph Koser.

Mrs. Willard Smith as Faith Webster, was "excused because of ill health!" from reading the essay "Bud, Blossom and Fruit."

Mrs. Wilfred W. Wilcox, who was then Miss Marion Campbell, appeared as "Adalina Patti," and sang "Coming Through the Rye." Just before the close of the solo, "Reisedia Jackson, played by Mrs. Ralph Hartz, fainted. BUCKNELL PASSES WIN DETROIT GAME BY SCORE OF 7-0

Fumbles Alone Prevented Bisons From Making Larger Score; Detroit Not Dangerous

OUR LINE TORE TITAN OFFENSIVE TO PIECES

After "Making the Game Safe," B. U. Kicked on First Down To Save Players Harm

By STANLEY L. BRINK
(From Detroit Free Press)

The University of Detroit's football season had a drab ending at Dinan field Thursday afternoon, for Bucknell University from Lewisburg, Pa., won 7-0 and did it with consummate ease, even if the score indicates otherwise.

Bucknell, a superb defensive team, scored its single touchdown in the second period and was content thereafter to save itself for its final game at Dayton, Saturday. Throughout the second half, especially in the fourth period, Bucknell was content to kick on first down and confined its ground gaining attempts to forward passes.

Only for the tendency of Earl Goodwin, Bucknell right end, to drop passes—he fumbled four, each time with a clear field to the goal—the score might have been larger. On two other occasions, once in the first period and again in the third, Bucknell passes went over the last stripe for touchbacks. One pass hit the goal posts. Detroit, while amassing five first downs to Bucknell's eight, never came nearer the Bucknell goal than the 27-yard line. That was in the fourth period. On two other attempts earlier in the game the Titans advanced once to the 47-yard line and once to the 36.

Bucknell Linemen Efficient

It was Bucknell's seven linemen who broke and scattered Detroit's offensive efforts. Magee and Shorts, the tackles, were through on play after play and either threw Detroit runners for losses or confined the thrusts to small gains. When Magee and Shorts did not function, Captain Tony Kostos and Bill Stephens, the guards, Dihl, center, or the ends, Earl Goodwin and Lloyd Trimmer, filled the gap acceptably.

On the few occasions when the secondary defense was called upon, Albert Diehl, fullback, Merl Goodwin, halfback, or Harold McCleary, halfback, did their duty. Bucknell's tackling was a revelation to the crowd of 12,000. The Pennsylvanians clamped their men around the knees and once hit, the Detroit runners stopped. Again and again Bucknell men left their feet to connect with the runner and establish contact to Detroit's discomfiture.

Bad Judgment Helps Bucknell

Bad judgment by Bob Maniere, Detroit quarterback, played a material role in the making of Bucknell's touchdown as the second quarter time had nearly expired. Maniere played far too close to the line of scrimmage and McCleary booted the ball over his head, a distance of 54 yards. The Detroit back recovered on his four-yard line.

With Detroit "in the hole," Phillippart kicked from behind his goal to the Titan 31-yard mark. Diehl passed to E. Goodwin for 19 yards. From the 12-yard mark, Diehl passed again but the same Goodwin fumbled on the five-yard with nothing but the atmosphere between the runner and a touchdown.

From the same kick formation, Diehl bluffed another pass to E. Goodwin on the right but wheeled quickly and tossed to Blaisdell who had sneaked out on the left and down the sideline. Blaisdell made the catch in the end zone for Bucknell's first and only score. Trimmer kicked goal.

Grounded Pass Stops Advance

Bucknell almost had a touchdown a period one. After Trimmer's kick-off, Detroit could not advance and Phillipart punted to Blaisdell who wriggled back five yards to his 30-yard line. Bucknell unlimbered its batteries and Myrl Goodwin, aided by McCormick, reeled off two straight

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA

President Calvin Coolidge and five other prominent members of Phi Gamma Delta recently gathered in the private office of the President, at the White House, and pledged themselves to impress upon all fathers and their sons who are members of Phi Gamma Delta the need of remembering the noble trinity of principles of the fraternity, with the hope that their loyalty and consecration to the fraternity may outrun the fervor of youth.

The meeting was held in observance of Founders' Day, and the preamble to the constitution of the organization that was formed, which is to be known as the Fiji Sires and Sns, was signed by President Calvin Coolidge, Abram S. Post, Charles H. Bosler, T. Ludlow Chrysler, William F. Chamberlain, and Robert D. Williamson.

Members in the Sires and Sons Organization from Bucknell are: The Rev. Dr. Theodore Heysham, '94, and Theodore Heysham, Jr., '25, Bromley Smith, '95, and Bromley R. Smith, '20, deceased, and Donald R. Smith, '23, C. A. Soars, '88, and Ralph W. Soars, '21, and C. Austin Soars, '17, Dr. G. C. L. Riemer, '95, and Karl Riemer, (Allegheny) '26, and Grier Riemer, '28, John H. Foresman, '98, and John Foresman, '29, the Rev. William M. Courson, '90, and William O. Courson, '24, and Bram T. Courson, '27, Ephraim M. Heim, '93, and Edward F. Heim, '21, and Robert C. Heim, '24, and Herbert E. Heim, '27, Christy Mathewson, '02, and Christy Mathewson Jr., '27, Dr. Herbert Stanton, '97, and Phillips Stanton, '28.

President Coolidge qualifies for the organization because he has a Fiji son now at Amherst, his own Alma Mater.

Caterer Davies surprised the chapter last Monday night by serving the annual Thanksgiving dinner ahead of time. Wally Foster and Max Reed were guests. The menu consisted of grapefruit appetizer, chicken and waffles, mashed potatoes and chicken dressing, corn, ice-cream, after-dinner mints, and nuts.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

An informal "Vic" dance was held at the S. A. E. house by the brothers who did not go home for the vacation, last Friday evening. Mother Miller was the chaperone for the enjoyable little party.

Pennsylvania Zeta of Sigma Alpha Epsilon expects to entertain one of the most famous of all national fraternity men during the coming week-end. Brother "Billie" LeVere, who is noted for his good-natured smile and his kindly, clever wit will visit the chapter.

KAPPA SIGMA

The Dickinson and Penn State Chapters were entertained at a dance at the house Saturday night. Among those present were Brothers Bittle, Loch, Williams, and Gray from State. Brothers Camerer, Green, Gallagher, and Stutzmand were the visitors from Dickinson.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the "Sunbury Night Hawks."

Professor and Mrs. Everett and Professor and Mrs. Griffith were chaperones.

Several alumni spent the week-end at the house.

DELTA SIGMA

A "hot dog" roast and "vic" dance was held in the living room of the house Friday evening during the Thanksgiving vacation. Seven couples attended. They report a fine time.

The return of the glee club has filled the dining-room again, gladdening the heart of the caterer. There was quite a hole in the fraternity during the absence of the club.

Three plays are under consideration for the fraternity's fifteenth annal production on February 5: "Cappy Ricks," dramatized from the novel by Peter B. Kyne, "The Truth About Blayds," a comedy by the noted English playwright, A. A. Milne, and "The Monkey's Paw," a mystery play by Louis Parker, a dramatization of W. W. Jacobs short story of the same title.

There were several visitors at the house last week, among whom were pledge Reinheimer's people, "Al" Jones, and Dr. Belcher. The dance which was held after the Dickinson game was a great success. All but three of the members of the fraternity returned home during the Thanksgiving vacation.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

"Gene" Halleran, ex-'26, of Sea Isle City, N. J., awakened the house at the unearthly hour of 6 A. M. Sunday morning to proclaim to the sleeping brethren that the genial Irish Wit had once more put in his appearance.

Eleven remained in Lewisburg over the Thanksgiving vacation. A grand and glorious vacation "was had by all."

BETA KAPPA

Eta Chapter of Beta Kappa held a "Sem" dance in the hall room of the Lewisburg Club, Friday evening, November 20. Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders furnished the music and Miss Lulu Coe and Miss Kathryn Clush were the chaperones. The hall was decorated in purple and gold, the fraternity colors. Twenty-five couples attended the dance.

Donald Keim, '24, has presented the chapter with a radio set. The house radio bugs are still fussing about its proper installation but when the argument is over the fraternity expects to stage a "radio party."

PHI LAMBDA THETA

With tired feet, but light minds, about twenty-five couples left the floor at 2 o'clock last Tuesday night after a dance that was exceptionally enjoyed by everyone.

Everyone except Philip Reilly and Clyde Ellzey struck the homeward trail last Wednesday.

Philip Reilly spent his vacation at the home of Carl Krause, a fraternity brother, in Milton.

"Herbie" Grundy says he never realized how much a man could miss Milton until he spent his vacation 225 miles from there.

The boys are glad to welcome back A. B. Stutzman, '20, who was called home recently on account of the death of his mother.

Shall We All Become Clerks?

Startling figures have been revealed by W. H. Leffingwell, a writer on economic subjects, in his analysis of the rapid increase in clerical positions in the United States in the last 40 years.

According to the census reports, Mr. Leffingwell points out that in 1880, 172,575 persons were employed as clerks, 1.8 per cent. of the total wage-earners in the country. In 10 years the figure jumped to 801,455, or 4.9 per cent. of the wage-earning population. In 1900 the figure increased to 1,068,993, or 5.75 per cent. of the wage-earners. By 1920 the surprising figure of 2,951,008 clerks in industry was revealed, or 10.2 per cent. of all people in wage-earning industries.

These figures speak for themselves. This vast army of clerical employees outnumbers any other single occupational trade in the population. The final percentage given above shows that one out of every ten earning wages is a clerical worker, and this percentage, it may be noted, is rapidly increasing. What the economic limit of the growth is, no one can tell.

Mr. Leffingwell believes these figures show how important more effective office management really is to American business.

PENN WANTS INFIRMARY

Present Facilities Declared Inadequate by Writer

Students of the University of Pennsylvania are being enlisted in a drive for a special infirmary, where their ills may receive immediate and careful attention.

Among the leaders in the movement is Dr. Seneca Egbert, who, as student health officer, has been advocating such a measure on the campus for years.

Present facilities afforded by the university, including the services of a student physician, who is on duty in the Mask and Wig dormitory from 8 to 9 o'clock in the morning, and from 1 to 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and service at the University Hospital dispensaries, are declared inadequate by a student correspondent of the Pennsylvanian, the daily campus publication. In writing on the medical facilities he said:

"Only minor cases are actually treated at the Mask and Wig dormitory. Dr. Cook's service in all other cases consists of advice. Most cases observed in the Mask and Wig dispensary of a serious nature are either referred to a private physician or to one of the various dispensaries of the University Hospital. Since little actual treatment is given in our Students' Dispensary, it seems to me that this dispensary renders no real service for the more serious cases.

"These dispensaries are of a specialized character, such as the surgical dispensary, eye dispensary, etc. Each one is open only a short period each day—and if a student has a class during this period, he must cut his class in order to get the proper treatment.

SENIORS DEFENDED BY PENN FACULTY

Mental Lethargy Ascribed By Columbia Dean Is Not True at U. of P., They Say

University of Pennsylvania professors, alumni, and officials have rallied to the defense of college seniors, who, according to Dean Herbert E. Hawkes, of Columbia College, remain in a state of mental inertia during their last year in school.

Dr. Cornelius Weygandt, of the University of Pennsylvania English department, said the average senior is mentally wide awake and probably gets more out of his last year in college than during any of the previous three. He said the freshmen are green and frightened when they come to a large college or university.

"Then some of them see the light of day during their sophomore year," Dr. Weygandt said. "It may not dawn on some others until during their junior year but we find that most of the seniors are fully aware of what they are getting out of a college education and make the most of their opportunity."

Dean Hawkes made the statement last week that the minds of the students were aroused in their freshmen and sophomore years and that not until they have received their degrees do many of the finest undergraduate minds wake up again.

Thomas A. Budd, registrar of the university, denies that seniors' minds are in a state of ethargy. "It may be true that after working hard at their studies and class activities during their freshman and sophomore years men in their junior and senior years may ease up a bit," he said. "But I am sure that the average senior here is far from being in a state of coma."

Seniors make good use of the University Library, according to Asa Don Dickinson, librarian. "Many of our most frequent visitors are seniors," Mr. Dickinson declared. "But I do know of one man who is perhaps in the class referred to by Dean Hawkes. This boy a few years ago was senior class president. One day I had occasion to write to him and I asked my secretary to look up his address in the library files.

"Imagine my great surprise when I found he had never even taken out a card at the library, and so far as any one could recall, he had never been in the building. But he surely is an exception."

The Rev. "Jack" Hart, University chaplain, is another who is sure Penn seniors, at least, are right on the job. The Rev. Mr. Hart said he believes college men get the most out of the four years they spend in college during the freshman and senior years.

"In their freshman year," he said, "the students work hardest, of course. They may slow up a bit during the second year, but even then many of them continue to study hard and work in managerial competitions. By the time they reach their senior year they have become leaders and direct the work of the freshmen. And I do not doubt for a minute that they let up on their scholastic work."

U. P. Asks For Commons

Students of the University of Pennsylvania may soon have their own commons, if plans to be recommended by the Undergraduate Council to the university authorities are adopted.

A dining hall for students has been the aim of the university ever since its removal to West Philadelphia in 1872.

The plan for financing the student cafeteria is as yet indefinite. Three different plans are under consideration: selling food at cost; charging standard rates and diverting profits to university expenses; and partial financing of the cafeteria from Council funds.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

THE "IDEAL GIRL," VOTED

Students at N. Y. University Favor Personality Plus Intelligence

Questionnaires answered by 100 students of New York University revealed that the "ideal girl" must have personality and intelligence, not beauty. To the question, "would you marry a girl mentally superior to you?" Fifty-two of the students answered "no," forty-five wrote "yes," and three others were undecided.

To the question, "Are education and intelligence necessary?" ninety of the 100 students answered "yes," and only ten "no." Those who answered negatively based their opinions on the fact that they knew girls who had nothing more than a grade school training.

The "ideal girl" must be good looking, for seventy-one insisted on this qualification. Good looks, however, do not make up for lack of personality, for when asked "Do you prefer beauty to personality?" ninety-one wrote "no."

Personality proved to be among the chief attributes of a perfect woman, ninety-five out of the hundred saying that this quality was one of the most important of all feminine virtues.

To the question regarding the use of liquor by girls, twelve were in favor, five were not concerned, and eighty-three opposed it.

Cigarettes are also in disfavor. Although most of the students were smokers themselves, eighty-two objected to the use of cigarettes by girls, five did not mind what they did and thirteen were in favor of allowing them to smoke if they wanted to.

Rouge was also disapproved. Sixty-five were against it. Athletic women were favored by a vote of fifty-eight to forty.

The "ideal girl" must also be a good dancer. Only nineteen thought it was unnecessary for a girl to be a dancer to meet their standards.

U. P. Turns Away 2,000

Until the University of Pennsylvania gets the greater endowment it seeks, it is confronted by an acute problem of numbers wanting a college education and overflowing the dormitory, and classroom accommodations available.

This year 2000 applicants had to be turned away. There are now 9640 students in full-time, degree-granting courses. There are 7391 others in extension and special courses. The total enrollment of 17,031 shows a gain of 882 in degree-granting courses and 665 in the part-time curriculum.

The university is not striving for a record registration at the expense of quality. It is merely doing its best to accommodate as many as it can of the increasing host of young people who appreciate the value of a college training. Those for whom the door swings inward are aware of a waiting list eager to share the privilege, and the knowledge that many are ready to fill every place vacated has a tendency to make any college less of a recreation center than it used to be.

A college student who thinks that he pays for all he gets is uninformed. At the University of Pennsylvania his tuition fee pays somewhat more than half of the cost of keeping him on the roll. Why should the university assume any part of the cost of training one who does not justify the outlay? That is the question that asks itself with an imperative accent, in view of the crowd at the gate of each of our more important colleges.

Harvard's Oldest Graduate Dies

Joseph Randolph Coolidge, oldest graduate of the Harvard Law School, died at his home, November 10, at the age of 96. He was a brother of the late T. Jefferson Coolidge, former United States Ambassador to France, who died in 1920.

Mr. Coolidge, who took special courses in the Lawrence Scientific School from 1848 to 1850, at the age of 96 had the distinction of being the oldest Harvard man. He was two years older than George A. Peabody, of Danvers, Mass., oldest Harvard College graduate, who, entering as a freshman in 1848, was graduated in 1852. Mr. Coolidge received his degree from the law school in 1854. His son and grandson both graduated from Harvard.

Miami Univ. Plans Under Way

The foundation stone of the $25,000,000 University of Miami, at Coral Gables, is to be laid on New Year's Day, it was announced on November 21 by Judge William E. Walsh, president of the Board of Regents.

The university will open next October. The campus of the university will be one of the largest in the world. Landscape plans have been made for its 170 acres.

DEFENDS COLLEGE "FRATS"

Twenty Houses Conducting Religious Discussion Groups

A defense of college fraternities, sometimes regarded as breeding places for irreverence, lack of religion and absence of morality, has been made by the University of Pennsylvania Christian Association.

Twenty fraternity houses on the campus are conducting religious discussion groups, according to the statement, issued recently. In no other phase of student life, says the statement, is the desire to study religious problems more strongly manifest than in the fraternities.

The rest of the campus is to be asked to follow the lead of the fraternities and dormitories, which are far from being the hotels of irreligion they have been pictured. The Rev. Dr. John R. Hart, Jr., Episcopal student pastor, and head of the religious education department of the association, announces plans to institute discussion groups elsewhere among the students.

"Popular members of the faculty will be secured to lend oc hours or take part of their lunch hour to meet with the students," said Dr. Hart. "Another section to be covered is the rooming houses. This extensive work should increase the number to something like seventy-five classes, which will make it the most thorough work of its kind being done in any college."

Fifteen members of the faculty, professional men, Christian Association secretaries and ministers, and influencial senior classmen are leaders of the discussion groups.

Beliot Will Explore Africa in Search of Man's Birthplace

Beliot College will place five expeditions in the field at once to trace man's origin, Dr. C. L. Collie, head of the department of anthropogy announced recently. This work is made possible by two annual gifts aggregating $15,000, of which Dr. Frank Logan, Chicago, furnishes $11,500 annually.

Dr. Collie believes that man originated in Northern Africa, or near the Mediterannean Sea, and the expeditions will work in that area.

COLUMBIA BEGINS RUSHING

Freshmen Eligible for Bids Must Pass Mid-Term Exams

Fraternity "rushing" at Columbia began November 23 and for the next three weeks the fraternities will bid for recruits among the freshmen. The new "rushing" rules have been adopted by the representatives of thirty-six houses and ratified by the individual chapters.

The order provides that no freshman may enter a fraternity house or be rushed by a member of any fraternity until the Monday before Thanksgiving, when a period of "rushing" lasting three weeks is sanctioned.

To become eligible for membership a freshman must attain a certain rank in his studies. No freshman will be asked to join unless he has passed at mid-term academic subjects aggregating twevе hours. Penalties for infraction are imposed.

A new method of bidding also has been adopted. On Thursday, December 10, each fraternity will submit to the chairman of the Inter-Fraternity Council a list of the freshmen it wishes to bid, toether with envelopes containing sealed bids addressed to the men. The chairman will forward the invitations to the designated freshman, who will receive them on Saturday, December 12, the day rushing ends. On Monday evening, December 14, the freshmen will indicate their acceptance by going to the houses of the fraternities they wish to join.

Merchants Endow Pittsburgh U.

Seven stores which have supported during the past seven years the Research Bureau for Retail Training of the University of Pittsburgh have joined with 12 others—constituting the total membership of the Retail Merchants Association of Pittsburgh—in subscribing $600,000 for the permanent endowment of the Bureau. This endowment will be paid during the period of 10 years. In the meantime, the stores will, in addition to paying the annual amounts toward the endowment, continue their present support of the Bureau. When the stores have paid the endowment, they will have submitted a total of $985,000 to the support of the Bureau. This will be the first time in history that the stores of a city have spent nearly a million dollars for personnel research in retailing.

STUDENT EARNINGS BIG

Large Football Crowds Net 220 Undergraduates $6000

What the thousands of football fans do with some of their money when they flock to Princeton for games was revealed in a report of the Bureau of Student Employment, made public recently, which showed that 220 undergraduates earned a total of almost $6000 by supplying some want of the huge crowds during the last season.

Seventeen students made a total of $1762.61 by parking automobiles outside Palmer Stadium. They kept the incoming hordes of motorcars moving toward the right sections of the parking areas and took turns standing watch over them during the games.

It took 107 student gatemen, guards and ushers to handle the crowds at the stadium, and these earned the second largest total for their services, nearly $1500. The Bureau of Student Employment lists many other methods which students hit upon to help pay their way through college. It took six to run the big scoreboard on top of the stadium, student cashiers at the ticket windows made a total of $250, and some sold flowers, cushions and every kind of novelty and made a total of nearly $500 at it.

F. and M. Lays Cornerstone of Large Outdoor Auditorium

College students and graduates gathered November 13 to take part in laying the corner-stone of the William U. Hensel auditorium at Franklin and Marshall College. Dr. Henry H. Apple, president of the college, presided at the exercises in the college chapel.

The auditorium will be the outstanding building of the quadrangle group of structures now under construction in the college's "greater F. and M." program. The adiutorium will seat 1000 persons and have a stage large enough to be used for religious services and other college functions.

William U. Hensel, whose name the auditorium bears, was a former president of the Board of Trustees, a former Attorney General of Pennsylvania and one of Lancaster's distinguished citizens. The auditorium is one of four buildings for which the alumni of the college are raising $800,000. A total of $478,892 has been pledged or contributed.

PAUL BLANCHARD TO LECTURE HERE

Traveler, Author, Sociologist, To Tell Bucknell Students About Organizing Labor

Paul Blanchard, field secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy, of New York, has been secured by the Y. M. C. A. to visit Bucknell Thursday, December 3. His stay at Bucknell will be a busy one. He is scheduled for an address at 9 o'clock A. M. to Assistant Professor R. L. Matz's class, in Eapic, on "The Coming of Industrial Democracy." At 10:30, in the Chemistry lecture room, Prof. C. E. Johnson's class will be the host to Mr. Blanchard. His tentative subject for this talk is: "Problems of the Labor Organizer." Again at 4:30 Mr. Banchard will hold an informal discussion with a group of Sociology students at Prof. C. E. Johnson's home Dinner at the "Sem" will be followed by Mr. Blanchard's talk: "Who is a Lady?" Various other lectures will be given to classes on the Hill during the day.

Mr. Blanchard has had a unique experience as lecturer, author, factory worker, labor union officer, and world traveller. He has just returned from a trip around the world and brings first hand, vivid pictures of social movements in Japan, Soviet Russia, Denmark, and Great Britain. He has lectured during the past two years to more than 75,000 college students, in almost every leading American university, and to hundreds of churches, service clubs, labor organizations, forums, and womens' groups.

Mr. Blanchard was graduated from the University of Michigan with Phi Beta Kappa honors, did two years post graduate work at Harvard and Columbia, served as pastor of a Boston Congregational church, and then entered the labor movement.

He became organizer for the Amalgamated Textile Workers, and organizer and educational director in Rochester for the Almalgamated Clothing Workers, one of America's most progressive unions. During his three years of educational work with the unions of the American Federation of Labor and the clothing workers of Rochester he developed many valuable experiments in workers' education.

Mr. Blanchard is the author of many magazine articles and pamphlets and of a recent book, "An Outline of the British Labor Movement." He has visited Europe three times, making special studies of the British labor movement and the Italian Fascisti. He is a member of the Congregational Social Service Commission.

SHELLEY BIOGRAPHY AMONG NEW BOOKS

"Story of World's Literature" By John Macy Surveys All Peoples, All Lands

A book that will be of interest to all students of literature has just been received by the library. It is a biography of Shelley by Andre Maurois, and is called "Ariel."

In this piece of work, true biography is touched with the magic of the novelist's art. The author has seen that the life of the poet Shelley was truly a romance of reality, its loves, happiness, and tragedy going far beyond any fictional make-believe. Shelley's poetry is hardly mentioned in the volume; it is the reckless, sincere, fascinating human being who stands out. The women who figured in his life are sharply drawn by Maurois, significant as were the parts they played in Shelley's wanderings in the garden of love. Originality is stamped upon every page of "Ariel," and its delicious wit and unbounded charm are such as you seldom encounter.

Another book of interest is "The Story of the World's Literature," by John Macy. Mr. Macy spent three years in the actual composition of this work, although his whole life as a writer and a critic can properly be considered as a preparation for it. In the back of the book will be found twenty-seven pages of bibliography and references, which show the tremendous amount of work and research that he put into this volume. Each chapter has been examined by authorities in the field which it covers, so that no inaccuracies might creep in.

In Mr. Macy's hand, vigorous, simple prose the story of the world's literature remains pre-eminently a story; the backgrounds that are so important in literature are vividly drawn; and the great figures live in this book warmly and personally. The book surveys the entire range of literature. All peoples, all lands, all ages are drawn into his story. The literatures of the world are seen in their proper relations to one another, and to the peoples whose expressions they are.

In addition to being well written, the book has more than two hundred drawings in color, tone, and black and white by the noted artist Onorio Ruotolo, who was a pupil of the famous Gemito, and is now director of the Leonardo da Vinci Art School of New York.

There is one book which is rather unusual. It is called "The Hymn as Literature," and was written by Jeremiah Bascon Reeves, Ph. D. Dr. Reeves traces the onward sweep of the religious song from King David, thru the early church history, thru the dark ages when the great hymns moved like the winds over Europe, thru the England of the Puritans, and down to the England of the present day.

American hymnody is also fully presented, from the time the sailors of Columbus, sighting the New World, burst into Christian song, down to the present day. The immortal song poems are linked up with the times and places which produced them, and with vivid glimpses of the men who wrote them. The book is a deeply moving record of those Christian poems which have made men glad to live and unafraid to die. It is absorbing to the general reader, and a mine of information to the student of literature.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions to Events in the Week's News.

Regulations, generally, may be divided into two classes; those that are constructive and those that are restrictive.

This statement is meant to preface approval of the new fire drill rules that have been introduced at the Women's College.

The rules are an excellent illustration of the fact that the oranization of society demands that certain liberties be given up in order that certain desirable ends may be secured.

The girls give up the right to break and run for their own safety in order to insure that all shall be accounted for. Each accepts a part of the responsibility for all of the others. This approaches the socially ideal.

We should all get some conception of the necessity for give and take in social organization and in social life.

But, to get back to the subject, we find an encouraging note in the adopting of the fire rules in the Women's College. The new regulations are constructive, the kind that Bucknell needs.

The next question is, what organization do the men have for the same purpose? Is it to be taken for granted that each man will be able to take care of himself without any preparation in case of fire?

How will the men be sure that all of their hall-mates are out of the building? Will some one be left asleep in his room?

Perhaps the men could take a little pointer from the women on this subject.

We don't want to minimize the value of organization by putting all of the emphasis on the fire problem though. A little more of the constructive element and a little less of the restrictive might make a great difference in the attitude of every person in the University. Let's keep that in mind when we feel like forbidding a whole raft of practices. As the fire regulation example shows, restriction must be a part but purposeless restriction, mere negative regulation, is capable of doing a freat deal of harm and seldom can be credited with a maximum of good.

And there is a meaning back of the word CONSTRUCTIVE, too. A person can build a shanty, or a hovel without much of a plan. But real construction, the outstanding work which claims the attention of the world, projects such as the bridge over the Delaware at Philadelphia and the proposed cathedral of learning at Pittsburgh, require an aim and a carefully determined plan.

Let us make the buildings of our thoughts like the buildings that have been planned, refusing to confine our mental abilities to the shanty and the hovel.

It's better "to have an aim" in your actions than merely "not to fly off the handle" before you think. Put yourself under an obligation to think the thing through.

Northwestern Students Riot During Football Victory

Defying police pistols, tear bombs, and streams from fire hose, 3,000 Northwestern University men and women students last night celebrated the prowess of their football team by rampaging all over quiet, aristocratic Evanston.

Before their enthusiasm waned early today, a vacant fraternity house was in ashes, a policeman had two broken ribs, four students were in jail, scores had black eyes and cracked heads, and Mayor Charles E. Bartlett, nursing a bruised head, declared Northwestern would never have the new stadium it has planned.

Police and firemen were helpless when the pre-arranged jubilee began, about 9 o'clock. The police were stripped of their badges and made the victims of their own maces. Firemen, dashing to answer numerous alarms, most of them false, and others resulting from bonfires, had their hose knotted and equipment dumped and scrambled.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Bucknell Frosh Play Wyoming Close Game

Misunderstanding Arises About Score But None About Ability Of Yearlings; They're O. K.

By 'Vic' Luchsinger, ex-'08
(From Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader)

Bucknell Freshmen defeated Wyoming Seminary 14 to 13 Thanksgiving afternoon on Nesbitt Field, Kingston. This was the most brilliant, hard fought, all-around best game of the year at "Sem." A Thanksgiving crowd of 2,500—the largest of the season—was present.

In the final minute of play a complication came up. Peter E. Turik, of Glen Lyon, umpire, had ruled that the extra point had been made after Bucknell's second touchdown. With 40 seconds still to play before the game's end, after Seminary had also made a second touchdown, and kicked the other point, he declared that he, in raising his hand, had intended to indicate that the Bucknell point had not been made.

Indignation was at fever heat against the officials, particularly Turik. For while Wyoming Seminary had been penalized but 10 yards during the entire game, Bucknell Freshmen suffered to the extent of 80 yards. However Turik did not do all the penalizing.

Local interest was high in this game as three former Wyoming Valley stars are on the Fresh team, Eddie Halicki, of Hanover Township, an All-Wyoming Valley back for three years; Bennie Kauptis, also of Hanover Township, an end, and Eddie Ward, end several seasons since for Wilkes-Barre High, were prominent in the visiting line-up. All played bang-up ball.

Donchess, who for five years has been starring at Seminary, being one of the best ends that Coach Quay has ever developed, in a long and successful career, shone for the prep school institution. But he was so closely watched that he did not do as well as generally. Louie Brominski, who was thrown into the game for the second half, was smothered in his attempts to run. Several times he was also gummed when he tried forward passes. But Louie did heave several wonderful forwards, with remarkable speed, accuracy and in regard to time.

Wyoming made the first score in the first quarter when, after a succession of line bucks, Sullivan dove across the goal line. Edwards missed the try for a point. On the first down in the second half Eddie Halicki came through with a fifty-yard run and the touchdown that sent Bucknell into the lead. Bucknell's second touchdown was made in the last quarter by Jones, who squirmed seven yards through the Seminary line.

Throughout the entire second half Wyoming played a forward passing game hoping to even the score. The majority of the aerial thrusts were completed although several were intercepted. Louis Brominski, who was rushed into the contest despite injuries when it appeared as though Seminary would lose, made a successful drop-kick for the extra point.

Just before the Freshmen made their touchdown the score was 7 to 6, in their favor. No one disputed this. With the Bucknell touchdown the tally went 13 to 6. Captain Halicki tried for the extra point, August holding the ball. Before coming here for the game, in practice at Lewisburg, Eddie made 93 successful kicks in succession.

When the ball was booted in the game, Umpire Turik says he raised "one of his hands." "I raised it not straight up, but to one side," he claims. Hundreds declared that Turik raised his hand straight up, signifying the extra point. Referee Robert Maguire, of Plains, the referee, got this impression too. For he also put up his hands—both of them. Moreover the score board, in Wyoming Seminary's hands, showed 7 points. These were up until the last minute of the game.

In explanation Mr. Turik said that night that the ball went about a foot below the cross bar. Those in the concrete stands contend that the leather crossed from 2 to 3 feet above the bar.

Bucknell Freshmen put up the best game seen this season in Nesbit Memorial stadium. It was a fighting bunch, but a clean, hard hitting one. Both in a sturdy defense and in a strong offense it had the shade on Wyoming Seminary. Halicki, Kaptsis and Ward all had numerous friends in the stands. Bucknell was popular with the crowd.

BUCKNELL PASSES WIN DETROIT GAME

first downs on bucks through the line or dashes around the ends. Bucknell's blocking was destructive and one Detroit man after another was taken cleanly and surely out of play.

Bachor checked the rushing attack when he tackled M. Goodwin for a six-yard loss. On the next play, Diehl pessed to Earl Goodwin for a gain of 28 yards. McCormick and Diehl made it first down on Detroit's 15-yard line. Trimmer made five yards around left end from a triple pass. Myrl Goodwin lost ground at right end. Diehl's pass hit the goal posts for a touchback. It was the only sustained march Bucknell made during the day.

Fumble Almost Fatal

Bucknell missed fire again in the third quarter when Myrl Goodwin ran out of bounds after picking up Murphy's fumble and racing to what looked like a touchdown. The ball was brought back and given to Bucknell on Detroit's 23 yard line. Bucknell advanced to the five yard mark on bucks through the forwards where Detroit took the ball on downs. Phillipart came up fast and threw Diehl for no gain when it appeared the Bucknell back was off to a score on a fourth down attempt.

Again in the fourth session, Bucknell had possession via an exchange of kicks on Detroit's 35 yard line. Diehl tossed to Earl Goodwin for a 19 yard gain. Goodwin stumbled and fell with a touchdown in easy reach. Diehl then passed over the goal stripe and it was Detroit's ball on its 20 yard line.

Detroit's only opportunity to a tally arrived in the fourth period after McCleary had punted for 13 yards and out of bounds on his 40 yard line. A pass, Phillipart to Murphy made seven yards. Stromp made six and first down. Trimmer tackled Stromp for a loss on the succeeding try and two more passes failed. Bucknell then held for downs.

Seniors Figure Heavily

Only excellent defensive play by Bachor, Carlson and Coyle, playing their last game for Detroit, helped keep Blaisdell, Bucknell's premier back in check, and the score down. Carlson came soon field once and tackled Blaisdell so hard that the latter fumbled and Carson recovered on Bucknell's 36-yard mark. Bachor and Carlson were through several times and either hurried kicks or tossed runners for losses.

Coyle and Brennan, due to the effective Bucknell blocking, took severe punishment, but rallied again and again to break up attempts to turn their positions. Flannery, as usual, rendered valiant service and spoiled several Bucknell plays that had plenty of string behind them.

Due to Bucknell's mastery of Detroit's offensive efforts, the Titans did net score a first down by rushing until the third period and only one of the total of five was made in Bucknell's section. Detroit gained one on a penalty in the first half when McCormick was ejected for slugging and Bucknell penalized half the distance to the goal line.

Janowsky and Stromp did most of Detroit's gaining as Brett was too well marked by the Bucknell defense to get anywhere.

Sidelights From The Sidelines

Walter Diehl missed his teammates in Pittsburgh, returning from the Dayton game and consequently he had to make the return trip to Lewisburg alone.

At the football banquet at the College Inn on Monday evening "Bill" Stephens was selected to lead the 1926 Bisons. "Bill" is a popular selection and deserves the honor that comes to him. He said that he wouldn't trade places with Dr. Hunt.

A Detroit newspaper printed a picture of Blaisdell interfering for Diehl, in one of the out-standing plays of the Detroit-Bucknell game played there last Thursday.

McCleary is generally conceded to be the fastest man in Bucknell. Despite this fact, Achieu, the Dayton Chinese back, literally ran him down during the Bucknell-Dayton game.

Dayton's backfield is a miniature "league of nations." It contains a Chinaman, a Portuguese, an Irishman, and an American.

Achieu, Dayton's fast Chinese back, grew very proficient in reversing his field and dodging and side-stepping would-be tacklers during the Bucknell-Dayton game, even overshadowing our own "Billy" Blaisdell in these respects.

Dayton's best play was a fake thrust at the center of the line with the man carrying the ball around end. Achieu, the Chinese back, did this trick well as he crouched about three feet above the ground and was very hard to see.

The mid-semester shift of practice teaching students has recently been made. Those who have been teaching and observing at Milton schools are now continuing their work at the Lewisburg schools, and vice-versa.

All the brawn of all the workers of the world would fail to supply the power needed for our construction and production requirements. Modern civilization is based on cheap power readily applied to tasks of all kinds.

Machinery works: Man thinks

In most long-established industries the General Electric Company has brought about important changes making for better products with minimum human labor and expense. And in many new industries the G-E engineers have played a prominent part from the very beginning.

A new series of G-E advertisements showing what electricity is doing in many fields will be sent on request. Ask for Booklet GEK-1.

According to college tests, man develops one-eighth horsepower for short periods and one-twentieth in steady work. As a craftsman—a worker who uses brains—he is well worth his daily wage. But as a common laborer, matching brawn against motorized power, he is an expensive luxury.

With a fifty-horsepower motor, for instance, one man can do the work of 400 common laborers. He is paid far more for his brains than his brawn.

The great need of this and future generations is for men who can plan and direct. There is ample motorized machinery for all requirements of production and construction. But motorized machinery, no matter how ingenious, can never plan for itself.

And that is precisely where the college man comes in. Highly trained brains are needed more and more to think, plan, and direct tasks for the never-ending application of brawn-saving electricity.

Have You Ever Heard?

That the campus grove was once known as Brown's Woods.

That this woods was the property of John Brown, owner of Brown's mill, which is now the Brady Apartments.

That this woods and some adjoining land was secured as a site for the proposed University at Lewisburg, shortly before that institution came into existence in 1846.

That this tract of land included practically all the territory between St. George street and the Kappa Delta Rho house and extended to the river on the east.

That in 1846 the local Fourth of July celebration was held in Brown's Woods, four schools from the town and two from the country joining in the celebration, there being 700 Sabbath school scholars in the procession, and the speakers being the Revs. Crever, Harbaugh, Zeller, and Sutton.

That the first structure erected in this woods was the old Academy Building, and the second was the west wing of Old Main.

That the next building to go up in connection with the University was the home of President Malcolm—his private property—which is now the property of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

That when this residence was built University Avenue did not exist, the level land along this stretch being then used for growing wheat and other grains.

That the barn of Brown, the miller, stood about where Professor H. S. Everett now lives.

That a raceway brought water to the mill, and that this raceway ran along what is now Barton Street, the little street traveled by the "Sem" girls in going from the Brady to the "Sem."

That the highway leading through the college property up to the new buildings on the Hill was a plank walk running straight toward the Hill from what is now Fifth and St. George Streets.

That the land along what is now University Avenue and eastward thereof was sold by the college authorities in a time of great financial need.

That nearly all the houses along University Avenue were built by persons in some way connected with the University.

That the "University Addition," which was surveyed in 1854, opened all that tract of land south of St. George street to settlement.

That all these changes from wheat field and forest to town and campus have occurred in the brief space of eighty years—the lifetime of a single person not overly old.

World Court Meeting To Be Held, Princeton

Student Delegates To Convene Dec. 11, 12. Dr. R. B. Fosdick To Address Conference

John W. Davis, Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, and Raymond B. Fosdick, former under-Secretary General of the League of Nations, will be the principal speakers at the National Collegiate World Court Conference to be held in Princeton, Friday and Saturday, December 11 and 12. Mr. Davis will address the opening meeting of the Conference, while Dr. Vincent and Dr. Fosdick will speak at the second general gathering the following evening.

Among the prominent men who will lead discussion groups Saturday morning, who have already accepted the invitation of the National Executive Committee, are Dr. Henry Van Dyke, former Ambassador to the Netherlands; Roland S. Morris, former Ambassador to Japan; Norman Thomas, director of the League of Industrial Democracy; Herbert Houston, member of the American Committee of the International Chamber of Commerce; Mary Wooley, president of Mt. Holyoke College; John P. Dulles, New York barrister; Herbert Adams Gibbons, noted war correspondent and author, and Ivy L. Lee, New York publicity expert.

Among the topics to be discussed by these leaders are "The Press and War.", "The Relation of the World Court to Economic Prosperity", "Imperialism and World Peace", "The World Court and the League of Nations."

To date, more than sixty-five colleges from all parts of the country have accepted the invitation to send delegates to Princeton for the Conference. The national character of the Conference is evidenced by the acceptances of such universities as Mills College, California, University of Michigan, Bates College, Maine, and the University of Texas.

It is to be one of the purposes of the Conference to form a permanent organization of American students for the purpose of discussing topics of current national import. The delegates will convene annually at institutions in various parts of the country for this purpose. Senator William Borah, Vice-President Dawes, and Chief Justice William Howard Taft have heartily endorsed the Conference.

Things are certainly becoming complicated when the sororities have to define the exact amount of cordiality that may be contained in a smile—when it is given an eligible freshman. We understand that the latest development in the rushing situation is that when a sorority girl meets a freshman downtown she may speak, but not in a manner which might suggest any unusual personal interest.

"MATTY" HELPED AMERICAN LEGION WITH PLAYGROUND

Organization Plans Tournament Of Boys' Baseball Teams To Be Held Yearly

Under the title, "In Memory of a Big Heart and a Mighty Hand," the American Legion Weekly for November 20 prints an interesting story of Christy Mathewson and the latter's connection with a Florida playground for children, that was secured through the efforts of the Legion. The story, in part, is as follows:

"St. Petersburg, like the other cities of Florida, has grown rapidly in the last few years. New buildings have sprung into the gaps of the business streets and real estate men have swarmed through the city buying and selling or holding for future bigger profits almost every bit of obtainable land. Land values, naturally, have gone sky high.

"This was the situation in St. Petersburg a year ago when St. Petersburg Post of The American Legion, in following out its program of providing recreation facilities for all the children of the city, began to look about for a tract of land suitable for a playground for boys and girls of high-school age living in St. Petersburg's south side.

"The post already had provided a number of playgrounds for the boys and girls of St. Petersburg. Most of these had been established near public schools, and the whole city had applauded the Legion for its enterprise. Inspired by the Legion's example, Edwin Gould, millionaire philanthropist, a member of the Gould family associated with the development of American railroads, donated many thousands of dollar's worth of equipment to the Legion playgrounds. The playgrounds were immensely popular. Under the palm trees, in weather like June the year round, laughing, healthy boys and girls played tag, used the swings, coasted down the slides, developed their lungs on cinder tracks and played baseball, basketball, and handball.

"Luckily the first playgrounds were all flourishing before the Florida real estate boom became a national phenomenon. And even after the boom had set in, restricting the choice of sites for playgrounds, St. Petersburg Post had succeeded in obtaining for the older boys and girls of St. Petersburg the privilege of using during most of the year Yankee Park, the splendid big-league baseball diamond used for a few weeks in the spring by the New York Yankees in training for their playing season. That park provided a play spot, ideally suited for baseball and basketball, for one section of St. Petersburg, the north side, but it left the other half of the city, the south side, unprovided for. In the south side there was the park of the Boston Braves, but that park, when not used by the Braves for their spring training, was used the year round by Florida league teams.

"But St. Petersburg Post was determined to give the south side the playground it needed. And it found, in its search, one tract of land which luckily was out of reach of those promoting real-estate developments. There was a spot on the waterfront owned by the city which had been overlooked in the city's advance. It was a large ungraded lot, and when the Legion post first turned its eyes upon it it was being used as a dumping ground—an ugly defacement of the fair landscape surrounding it.

"The Legionnaires persuaded the city council to set aside this tract as a playground for the use of the older boys and girls of the south side. The Legionnaires then cleaned it up, removed all the debris, graded it and laid out a baseball diamond.

"Fate decreed that this playground should become a memorial to one of the greatest baseball players of all time, a Legionnaire. For it was Christy Mathewson who turned the first spadeful of earth when the Legionnaires, with a public ceremony, began the work of fixing up the playground. And upon the handle of the spade he used was a silver plaque bearing his name and the date of the event. That spade, St. Petersburg Post had decided, should be used in the dedication of any future playgrounds the post might establish.

"The world knows that Christy Mathewson died only a few weeks ago. While the country was mourning his death, and The American Legion, in national convention at Omaha, was expressing its own feelings of regret by adopting a formal resolution, the Legionnaires of St. Petersburg realized that the playground which he had helped dedicate scarcely more than a year before would always be a memorial to Christy Mathewson. They recalled that Mathewson, president of the Boston Braves baseball club after his retirement as a pitcher, had come to St. Petersburg with his team when it seemed that he had won his long battle against tuberculosis.

"At Saranac Lake, New York, where Mathewson had long fought against the illness which was destined to conquer him, he had been a leader in the affairs of Saranac Post of The American Legion. The opportunity to help the St. Petersburg Legionnaires in their playground project he had accepted as a privilege, and his own spirit inspired Judge Emil Fuchs, one of the owners of the Boston baseball club, who became another supporter of the project.

"The establishment of the new Legion playground in St. Petersburg may have a result which Christy Mathewson never could have anticipated. For that playground may some day produce a boys' baseball team that will win national championship honors in an American Legion national baseball tournament. The Legion, at its Omaha convention, adopted a program for the promotion of amateur baseball among the boys of the United States. The Legion's National Americanism Commission was instructed to carry out plans under which Legion posts in towns and cities throughout the country will help organize boys' baseball teams and conduct tournaments. After a series of tournaments in each State and each section of the country, the winners of state and sectional championships are to play in a national tournament to be held during the Legion's national convention. Already arrangements have been made to hold the first national Legion tournament at Philadelphia during the 1926 national convention next October."

College Should Fit Women To Be Home-makers, Says Richmond

Dr. Charles Alexander Richmond, president of Union College, speaking at the dinner given in honor of Dr. Henry Thomas Moore's installation as second president of Skidmore College, said that one of the chief purposes of a college for women was to fit them to become homemakers.

"I do not say that they should not go into politics, although from my point of view that can be overdone," said Dr. Richmond. "I am not even stating that a woman shall not go into any activity of life for which she is fitted or even unfitted. I am only raising a piping voice to express the Victorian opinion that whatever else a woman may do the highest purpose of her life always has been, is and ever shall be to strengthen and beautify the sanctity of the home."

Saying that "some persons seem obsessed with the idea that they can obliterate the distinction between male and female," Dr. Richmond added:

"I can't help cherishing a flickering hope that the woman of the future will not be more like man but more like a woman."

PROF. BOND ENTERTAINS

Professor and Mrs. Charles M. Bond entertained the members of the Baptist junior and senior Sunday School class at their home, 110 Market street, Friday evening, November 20.

Students spent an enjoyable evening playing games and singing old college songs.

Discussion of the advisability of organizing the two classes, as one, resulted in the election of Clifford Wester, 26, for president, and Dorothy Gilbert, '27, for vice-president. The position of secretary-treasurer was given to Margarida Reno, '27.

HILLTOP BRIEFS

Professor Roy F. Howes has recently been the victim of an attack of grippe.

"Peg" Dye, '28, spent the Thanksgiving vacation with Grace Milhous, '27, at Kennett Square.

Mrs. Ross H. Jones, of Coudersport, Pa., visited her daughter Marjorie, '28, during a recent week-end.

Howard Thomas, '25, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thomas, during the Thanksgiving recess.

"Bill" Vickroy, ex-'28, visited his S. A. E. brothers over the week-end. "Vic" and his wife are now living in Pottsville, Pa.

"Bill" Brandiff, ex-'27, who is now playing full-back on the Gettysburg eleven, was a guest at the Sigma Chi house over the week-end.

Professor and Mrs. C. M. Bond entertained the professor's Sunday School class at a Thanksgiving party on Friday evening, November 20.

Miss Naomi Samuels, of Nanticoke, Pa., visited Vita Davis over the week-end and attended the Dickinson game and the Phi Gamma Delta dance Saturday.

Marjorie Bell, '28, spent a recent week-end in Philadelphia, visiting her brother, Clarence Bell, who is a medical student at University of Pennsylvania.

Lewis Hausser, '27, a member of Phi Lambda Theta fraternity, attended a house dance given by the Penn State Chapter on Saturday, November 21.

Ken Moyle's yellow chariot tried to climb the tire rack on a Buick sedan on the way down town after the Bucknell-Dickinson game. Damages—one lens demolished.

Charles Phillips, '28, was compelled to visit the Geisinger Memorial Hospital at Danville for eye-treatment last week. The weakening of his eyes was the direct result of overstudy.

"Pat" Gillespie, 28, was visited by his parents a week ago Saturday. They returned home with a much better opinion of Bucknell after watching the Bisons trim the Dickinson football team.

The father of the Heritage sisters, Ruth, '28, and Esther, '29, left his home in Mullica Hill, N. J., at midnight last Tuesday, and drove to Lewisburg to take his daughters home for Thanksgiving.

"Tel" White, '25, and "Ed" Davies, '25, are both teaching at the "Kiski" Academy. These two members of '25 were roommates during their four years at Bucknell, and are now roommates at Kiski.

Donahl Diehl, '29, received several cuts and bruises when he ran into a barbed-wire fence while on a hazing party a week ago Friday night. He was treated by Dr. Arbogast for cuts on the arms and legs.

"Dad" Cornelius, janitor in East College, predicts a cold winter this year. "According to the signs," he says, "it will be a very cold winter, accompanied by deep snows, heavy winds, and below-freezing temperatures."

The Sigma Chi "Bowery Ball" was a grand and glorious success. The decorations were appropriate, and a more hard-boiled looking crowd has never been seen on the campus. The music was nobly furnished by Noble and his gang.

Don. Diehl, John Gittins, Gordon Gooslyear, Don. Richardson and Bud Walker hired "Highby's Ford" for Thanksgiving vacation. They planned to take a trip to Wilkes-Barre, thence to Binghamton, N. Y., and finally back to Lewisburg.

The present junior class voted to "pay the piper" for the damage incurred while members of the class were on the trail of Freshman President Pierson. The main objective was accomplished— namely, the abduction of Pierson.

Professor Leo L. Rockwell attended a meeting of the National Council of Teachers of English, held in Chicago, November 27-28, where he read a paper on "Honors Courses." The material for this paper was gathered by a questionnaire answered by 50 colleges.

Loraine Suckling, ex-'28, visited her Tri Delta sisters, last week-end.

The parents of Virginia Dare Wallis, '28, spent Mother and Dad Day with her.

William Millward, '28, has entered a salesmanship contest in the hope of winning a Buick sedan.

Mr. and Mrs. Fox, and Mr. and Mrs. Bean, of Norristown, visited Mildred Fox, '27, during a recent week-end.

Several of the boys about the campus have been nursing advanced cases of hoarseness since that Diehl to Goodwin pass.

Beatrice Hetler, a sister of Willard Hetler, '27, visited her brother during the week-end and incidentally saw the Dickinson game.

Joseph Kostos, brother of the Bucknell football captain, was a guest at the Sigma Chi house during the week-end of November 21.

Miss Eva Dadio, a student at Lock Haven Normal School, Lock Haven, Pa., visited Margaret Krebs, '27, during a recent week-end.

The entire varsity team from State College, accompanied by Hugo Bezdek, the coach, witnessed the Bucknell-Dickinson game here Saturday, November 21.

"Cap" Sargeant, '28, spent many an hour recently trying to devise some scheme by which he could get to Detroit for the game. We'll bet he got there if he started.

Dutton, '26, and "Dick" Horter, '26, seem to be convinced, finally, that the tennis season is about over. They will each get in a few more games though, very likely.

T. F. Hirotsu, '28, our Japanese student from Hawaii, who entered Bucknell this fall, was suddenly taken ill and was removed to the Geisinger Hospital at Danville.

"Bunny" Learn, '26, and Howard Bull, '27, took an early start to hike home for Thanksgiving Day. They left Tuesday noon, bound for Salamanca, N. Y., and points east and west.

Even Professor Robbins couldn't keep his "dogs" still at the Lambda Chi town dance on Saturday, November 21, because of the snappy syncopep furnished by Zellers' Snappy Six of Lebanon.

Alex A. Sharp, one of the grand officers of the Sigma Chi fraternity, visited the boys of Kappa Chapter last Tuesday. This venerable old man is easily recognized by the large pipe that he smokes.

"Doug" Haviland, '28, and Eldon Parsons, '29, were forced to spend a recent Saturday night in Williamsport, when no obliging motorists came along with "lifts." Probably this is the penalty of staying too late.

"Mike" McClure, '27, and George Roller, '27, officiated as referee and umpire, respectively, in a football game that was recently played at Pictures Rocks, between the high school team of that town and Benton High School.

A number of Bucknell students and alumni have again organized the Lewisburg "Big Five" and will play amateur and professional basket-ball teams of the University and nearby cities. The player-coach is Malcolm Musser," '18, former Bucknell athlete.

"Judge" Gilbert L. Bennett, '27, went a-hunnting for rabbits in the fields about Lewisburg last week. He took his new shotgun and also twelve shells along. He returned some time later with his new shotgun and also twelve shells.

Gilbert Frith, '27, and Clare Wardover, '27, while on a hike along the river bank, found a number of arrow heads and other Indian relics, some of which were practically perfect. One of them, a smooth piece of stone with a hole drilled through the middle, was probably used as a bead.

A picture of the Ford owned by Dunmire, '26, and Grey, '27, appeared in the pictorial section of the New York Times about two weeks ago. The picture was taken in Great Barrington, Conn., while these two students were on the way to the Holy Cross game. The picture was called "A Collegiate Car."

"Dom" Mare, '27, is a unique boy. He prefers to spend the holidays in study rather than in hilarity.

Nevin Grieb, '26, visited his fraternity brother, Shorty Parmley, ex-'24, at Mahanoy City during the vacation.

Frill and Frown initiated ten new members last week. After a sketch by the new initiates, refreshments were served.

Dick Merwin will soon be chess champion of the "Theta U" House, reports show. Better come out for the team Dick.

"Bill" Miller, '26, and his mother, who has been house mother at the S. A. E. House for the past two years, spent the vacation at Lewistown.

A report from the S. A. E. house says that while Pledge Coleman was "listening in" on the radio he mistook the stock reports for football scores.

Wishing to retain their reputation, the "Goodie Twins," as usual, were the last to arrive at the Lewisburg Trust bank prior to the leaving of the Bucknell warriors for the West.

A Lewisburg family of seventeen or eighteen adds to the family income by advertising moving pictures on one side of their house. The latest advertisement was "The Birth of a Nation."

Parts for a Christmas play to be given by the Baptist Christian Endeavor Society on December 13 were distributed at a meeting of the Executive Committee, Wednesday evening, November 18.

Charles Carpenter, '27, is experiencing all the trials and tribulations that the editor of a college year book is certain to experience, in getting the '27 L'Agenda ready for early distribution.

Professor Frank Burpee is busily engaged in fitting up an Engineers Club Room on the top floor of the Mechanical Engineering Building. This club will be the means for the engineers to become better acquainted with each other.

The Sigma Chis new Victrola has at last arrived, and is furnishing splendid music for the entertainment of the house. It makes a decided improvement in the looks of the living room, and so has proved itself to be ornamental as well as useful.

A service for the Episcopalian students at Bucknell was held in Bucknell Hall a week ago Sunday afternoon. This was an opportunity for those of that denomination, which is not represented among the churches of Lewisburg, to meet together.

Elections were held to form a Student Council that will meet with Dr. West to act for the mutual benefit of the church and the College, at a recent Baptist Christian Endeavor meeting. Two members were chosen from each of the classes to act as this council.

Eugene Roemele, ex-'26, had quite a time looking up old friends in Baltimore at the time of the Navy game. "Doc" is attending Centre College and as his college was playing in Washington he decided to go to Baltimore and see as many of his old friends as possible.

Yellow slickers have not only proved to be a valuable asset to ward off the rain at this season's football games, but in identifying hikers as real students. It has been the experience of some that they are more quickly picked up because they appeared collegiate in their bright yellow coats.

Thomas Mott Osborne, America's outstanding prison reformer, who favored Bucknell with two visits during the present year, is sojourning in Florida at present. He has been bothered with a persistent cough this fall. He appeared here to lecture under the auspices of the Bucknell Sociological Society.

H. Rae Young, '28, took the initiative among our chess players in joining the Correspondence Chess League of America. Keyser and Ross of the local club have recently joined the league. The latter two are at present playing with Canadians. The plays are carried on by postcards; each in turn sending his move to his opponent. Out of 23 games started since last February, Young has lost but three, won ten, and the remaining games are still in progress.

The correspondence league includes many inmates of hospitals: doctors, lawyers, chemists, ex-soldiers, telegraph operators, and others take part in games.

Alumni Notes

LEHMAN, '99, AND ULMER, '02, SPEAK AT NORMAL MEETING

Bucknell alumni played an important part in what was described by the Williamsport Sun as "one of the most successful conferences of normal school instructors ever held in the state"—a three-day conference at the Lock Haven Normal School that ended Wednesday. Dr. Ezra Lehman, '99, principal of the Shippensburg Normal School, and former president of the Pennsylvania Educational Association, presided over one of the sessions, which discussed the teacher training of tomorrow. At a session for the discussion of science, L. J. Ulmer, '02, science teacher at the Lock Haven Normal School, read a paper on "Training Teachers of Nature Study."

Willard M. Bunnell, '97, who was one of the mainstays of the Bucknell football team and captain of the team just thirty years ago this fall, is the father of Phillip Walls Bunnell, who has just been elected captain of the Yale team for next year, after playing such a star game at quarterback. His father was a half-back.

Young Walls' mother is also well known here, having been a Lewisburg girl. She was Irene Walls, a niece of Mr. William C. Walls, president of the Lewisburg National bank.

G. Norman Wilkinson, '09, conducts in Williamsport a taxidermy business that is said to be the largest in the world for a city the size of Williamsport. The business was started forty-four years ago by Mr. Charles H. Eldon. It is interesting to note that he was influenced to do this by the late Dr. Walter Van Fleet, foremost rosarian of America. Game was scarce in Pennsylvania then. Now it is plentiful. But this state supplies only a part of the business of this firm. Its work has become so notable that heads and skins come to it from all parts of the world for mounting. At the present time skins are being prepared for customers in Norway, India, Africa, Columbia, China, Canada, and many states in the Union.

Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, who is a trustee of the University as well as an alumnus, was the speaker at the fifty-fifth anniversary of Camp 20, P. O. S. A., at Shamokin in November 25. Judge Johnson is State master of forms for this order.

Miss Emma Kathryn Levegood, '18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Levegood, of Jersey Shore, became the bride of Edward Jackson Rupert, of McVeytown, Saturday, November 14, in the First Baptist church at Jersey Shore. The Rev. Mr. James H. Carter performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Roy C. Clarke, of Cleveland, Ohio, formerly Miss Helen Levegood, '12, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Another sister, Miss Ruth Levegood, and Miss Sara R. Freeland, of McVeytown, were bridesmaids. Russell Rupert, of Worcester, Mass., was best man.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Rupert was for several years a member of the faculty of the Williamsport High School. Mr. and Mrs. Rupert will make their home in Cleveland, Ohio.

GLEE CLUB SINGS TO MANY HEARERS

and the afternoon was spent in playing basketball and resting for the evening concert. A slight rain here was the only bad weather encountered on the trip. This did not, however, cut down the attendance, and the audience was large and enthusiastic in its reception of the club's offerings. A short dance for the glee club men was held in the gymnasium of the school after the concert.

The final concert of the tour was given in Roselle under the auspices of the Clio Club, a local musical organization. This club also entertained the men at a dance after the concert which was undoubtedly the best one given this year. The club was dismissed at the end of this concert and most of the members returned to college the following day, arriving Sunday night on the Philadelphia and Reading train. This train was well filled with Bucknell students, and Bucknell and Glee Club songs and the hilarity of students reunited filled the cars on the return journey.

The features of the club's work in almost all of its appearances were the solos of Kushell and Dilworth, McCune's readings, and Roth's playing of the violin. The baritone-banjo-violin trio, the string quartet, and the cartoonist also came in for considerable comment, while the ensemble work of the club, the expression and shading of the difficult numbers was remarked again and again. Every number given in a regular concert was encored and several places the soloists were called back time after time.

The program used on the Thanksgiving tour was as follows:

Winter Song Frederic Bullard

heavy garment, shall see that the windows of her room are closed, and, leaving the door open, shall go immediately to her assigned fire escape where she will answer roll call.

"Students shall form in a single file in the hall and shall immediately march out-doors, using fire escapes. The students shall march back to their rooms at the order of the house president.

"The order of exit shall be as follows: the first floor shall precede the second and so on; use the nearest fire escape.

"In case an officer or assistant is absent for her hall, a substitute must be appointed.

"Anyone discovering fire must sound the alarm, then report immediately to the fire captain.

"Students should walk as rapidly as possible during the drill but should not run. There should be no laughing or talking.

"All questions concerning fire drills, fire precautions, or apparatus shall be referred to the fire captain. Every student must understand fire apparatus, and it is the duty of each house president to instruct the students of her hall or dormitory.

"A fine of twenty-five cents will be placed on students who do not attend fire drills."

'EDUCATION TO BE, SCIENCE'--SNEDDEN

has now been definitely proved. About two-thirds of the time being spent in education is time wasted, because of the failure properly to adjust the curriculum to the individual.

"We must work out a system of values in this connection. There were recently 120,000 pupils in the public high schools of New York City, and of this number 32,000 were studying Spanish. Have you any idea that all those persons need have studied that particular language? It would be silly to require that all students take any one foreign language. On the other hand, it would be wrong to prohibit everybody from studying it. We must strike a balance. Within a few years it will probably be possible to know with a certain degree of exactness to just how many students it would be well to recommend any given subject. That is one of the benefits to be derived from making education scientifically exact.

"We are now at the threshhold of making a science out of education. Let us all be ready for the time when education moves over into the realm of science, for that time will come within your days on earth, and very likely within your days in the teaching profession."

At the close of the lecture the Education Society held a business session for the purpose of electing the president and the secretary of the local branch of the Pennsylvania State Education Association, and to choose a delegate and an alternate to the convention of the association which will be held in Scranton beginning December 29.

Professor Frank G. Davis was elected president of the local organization and also made delegate to the convention. Roy A. Lady, '27, was elected alternate, and Richard Vastine, '27, was chosen for secretary.

"Save Constitution, Save Home"--Johnson

Bucknell Federal Judge Urges City Sabbath Association To Observe The Laws

"The Constitution, the Bible, the Christian Sabbath and the home are all linked together in this country and he who is an enemy of one is likely to be an enemy of all these bulwarks of our nation."

Judge Albert W. Johnson, recently appointed to the Federal Court of the Middle Pennsylvania District, thus declared last night at the 85th anniversary of the Philadelphia Sabbath Association in the Union Tabernacle Presbyterian Church, E. York and Coral Streets.

Judge Johnson rapped "the reds and parlor pinks of fluent talk," who would tear down our Constitution. He was introduced by Charles B. Helms, State secretary of the Patriotic Order Sons of America. Judge Johnson is an official of that organization.

An appeal for the people of Philadelphia to stand back of Mayor Kendrick, Director Butler and the police in their efforts to help enforce the Sabbath and other laws was made by the Rev. William B. Forney, corresponding secretary of the Association. He pointed out that the legislative power of government which attached a provision to the Sesqui-Centennial that it should observe the Sunday law, was back of Sabbath observance as was the judiciary and the administrative parts of government.

"It is to be regretted that some of our citizens by evasion disregard the law," said Dr. Forney. "They organize for Sunday concerts and the price of admission is membership in the organization."

"The Sabbath law is an example when the law of the land corresponds to the law of God," said Judge Johnson. "The same spirit that attacks the Constitution, the Bible and the Christian Sabbath, also attacks the sanctity of the home. It is for the spirit of the libertine who cares for himself alone. If the Constitution fails, our Bible, our Sabbath and our homes will go.

"We owe very largely the success of our Constitution to the Bible. The Bible is the Constituton of Constitutions. It is worth while to be old fashioned in those things that would preserve the Constitution. Show me the kind of Sabbath the people of a nation or city have, and I will tell you what kind of people they are. Insidious forces exist not only among the illiterate, but among the so-called educated who attack our Constitution, despite the fact that it is the oldest of all Constitutions and the one that is copied by other nations."

Opportunity Calls In Flouring Mills

College Men of Business Sense Wanted by Big Corporations; Many Openings Offered

The leading flour milling companies today have need for trained men who have constructive imagination, enthusiasm, and above all the ability to think clearly.

During the last five years there have been two major changes in the industry. The first of these is the change in the flour market. Girls nowadays are not being taught to bake bread as their mothers and grandmothers were, and at the same time the bakers are perfecting the quality of their products so that now they use approximately 66 per cent. of the flour sold by the millers. The result of the recent series of consolidations within the baking industry—the latest one having an authorized capital of six hundred million dollars —has been to increase the bargaining power of the large bakers, and this has had its direct effect upon the flour millers; it has taught both jobbers and retailers to specialize in fast-moving products and in standard brands.

The second major change in the industry is the chance in the wheat producing area. The Northwest, where most of the spring wheat was formerly grown, is gradually taking up diversified farming, the Canadian spring wheat producing areas are becoming relatively more important, and the Canadian development is closely rivaled by that of another comparatively new wheat producing territory —the hard winter wheat fields of Kansas, Oklahoma, and adjoining states. These changes and the elimination of the war-time demand of foreign countries for flour milled in the United States have resulted in much excess capacity in the milling industry, and competition is very severe among flour millers today. It is estimated that on the average, each person in the United States consumes slightly more than one barrel of flour per year. While, however, there were approximately 4,800 wheat flour mills in the United States in 1921, the five largest companies, operating forty-nine mills, produced nearly 23 per cent. of the country's total flour output.

The executives of large milling companies may be grouped as having to do with merchandising, accounting, grain purchasing, produiton, ihemical laboratory and traffic. Some of these positions, of course, are highly technical and require long experience as a foundation. Thus, the number of grain purchasing, production, chemical one firm is relatively small, and it takes years of apprenticeship to acquire the necessary "wheat sense." The situation with the manufacturing executives is similar and also with those who handle traffic.

On the other hand, the opportunities in the other departments are very considerable. The merchandising executives deal with the major problems of the industry, as the securing of proper distribution is the controlling factor. Competition has hastened the development of the scientific spirit among milling sales managers. They must be capable of handling men. They must also know how to increase the efficiency of their organization, not by volume of sales alone, but also by the ratio of performance to opportunity. The merchandising field in the industry presents a large opportunity to the college graduate who has a "merchandising sense."

So with the accounting work. An accounting executive within a large flour milling company must not only have a fundamental training in accounting but must have been in the industry long enough to learn the peculiarities of flour milling accounting, which arise largely from hedging. Hedging is the practice of the miller of protecting his flour sales, which are based on the cash price of wheat on the day of sale, by either buying or selling future contracts for the difference between his purchases of wheat and his sales of flour each day. Much progress, however, can be made in the accounting systems of the majority of flour mills. Up to date, in fact, there is no real standardized system of either cost or general accounting for flour millers. Accordingly, the Accounting Department of a large flour milling company offers a great opportunity to the college graduate who has specialized in accounting.

Finally, because of the increasing competition which has demanded greater uniformity of quality in the finished products, there are many openings for food chemists who can appreciate the merchandising problems and who will co-operate with the merchandising, grain purchasing, and production executives.

BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY

VOLUME XXIX LEWISBURG, PA., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1925. NUMBER 13

BUCKNELL PLAYERS BRING SILVER CUP FROM TOURNAMENT

Win Second Place at First Meet of Intercollegiate Dramatic Association at State

GETTYSBURG IS FIRST BY VERY SMALL MARGIN

Edna Watson Earns Big Triumph By Brilliant Performance; Johnston Also Scores

Bucknell won second place and a handsome silver cup at the first annual one-act play tournament, held at Pennsylvania State College, December 4 and 5. Bucknell's play was "The Mayor and the Manicure." The decision was close. Gettysburg, appearing last, nosed out the combined forces of "Frill and Frown," and "Cap and Dagger" by a bare 2 points in 300—a fractional part of one per cent—and captured first honors.

The play which brought the cup to Lewisburg is the work of George Ade, whose inimitable "Fables in Slang" have made him one of the most outstanding of American humorists. Chief in the cast were Frank E. Johnston, '28, as the Hon. Otis Milford, mayor, and Edna Watson, '27, as Genevieve Le Clair, the manicurist. Mr. Johnston made a distinct character of the gruff politician, and his work was uproariously applauded; while Miss Watson was publicly cited by the judges as having contributed one of the most noteworthy individual performances of the tournament.

Kenneth W. Sifer, '26, as Wallie, the Mayor's son, and Eleanore Dakin, '26, as Ruth Foster, Wallie's fiancee, played the subordinate parts. Assistant Professor Harry R. Warfel acted as director, and Ferderic B. Davies,

BISONS TENDERED TWO FINE DINNERS

Athletic Council Dines Team; Neff Brothers Also Honor Bucknell Football Men

Stephens Elected Captain

After training for a season, the Bison gridders were perfectly able and willing to do full justice to two turkey dinners that were served in their honor since the close of the season. The first of these was the regular dinner given by the Athletic Council at the College Inn. For the other the men are indebted to the team's two most consistent followers, the Neff brothers, proprietors of the Neff house at Sunbury. At the dinner at the College Inn, which was given November 30, William Stephens was elected to the captaincy of the 1926 eleven.

Professor B. W. Griffith, newly elected graduate manager of athletics, was toastmaster at the banquet and made several worth while comments on the season that has just passed. Having just returned from his first trip with the team as its manager, he said that he was impressed more by the spirit of fellowship among the players in their everyday associations than by any other thing that had come to his attention. He said that never again would the team be called upon to play three games in eight days, while he is manager, for such a schedule is an injustice to the team. Also thanking the coaches for their work and complimenting Student Manager R. Y. Garrett on his cooperation with the players, he expressed his satisfaction with the success of the season and

B. U. AFFIRMATIVE WINS DEBATE, 2--1

Shows That League of Nations Can Best Handle Problems Of International Kind

Prof. G. B. Lawson Presides

Bucknell's affirmative debating team marked up its first victory for the year in an impressive debate yielding a 2-1 decision against Lafayette in the local corner of the annual Lafayette-Franklin and Marshall-Bucknell triangle, last Friday evening.

The negative team experienced a reverse, however, at the hands of F. and M., while Lafayette's affirmative gained a victory from the negative of the Lancaster college. Thus the triangle comes to a tie in all corners.

The local angle of the debate was that of great interest, both because of its being here, and because of a strong debating spirit that has existed between Lafayette and Bucknell for several years. This is the fourth consecutive year that a Bucknell team has faced the Leopard and on every previous occasion the Eastonians have had the advantage through a superior knowledge of the science of debate. This year the Bison team was determined not to lose. Six weeks of solid preparation was the price paid for the victory gained Friday evening. But Bucknell has beaten Lafayette. And last year Lafayette wrested the debating crown of the eastern states from Bates. If the future work of the team is in keeping with the opening contest there will be no doubt that Bison brains are equal to the Bison brawn.

The argument of the victors was a masterpiece of co-operative construction. Basing the whole argument on the assumption, which the negative dared not deny, that the United States is interested in the affairs of the world, the affirmative showed that some agency was needed to control white slavery, opium trade, schemes in arms and munitions, usages in air, gas, and submarine warfare, and that there should be a permanent organization to replace the present conference system of diplomacy. The last speaker showed how the League of Nations is meeting that need and pointed out the advantages of the League over any system of conferences that has yet been developed.

The Lafayette speakers argued that the League has proved itself to be, primarily, a European institution, discussing and deciding matters that have arisen out of the World War. They cited the cases of Lithuania, Memal, Corfu, Bulgaria, and Silesia. They also put forth the argument that the League has not been entirely successful in Europe because of the fact that America has intervened in settling many of the problems that have arisen there during the years since the war. The basic assumption of the affirmative was accepted when the negative declared that "the United States can continue her political

All Graduation Hours Changed By Faculty

Pre-Meds and Engineers Must Pass 144 Hours Before They Can Graduate; A. B.'s 120

The faculty of the University has made three changes in the requirements for graduation from the college that will become effective on students graduating in the class of 1930. The classes now in college will be expected to complete their courses according to the requirements that were made at the time of entrance. The actions changing the requirements were taken at the regular meeting of the faculty Wednesday afternoon, December 2.

The changes that have been made are as follows:

Modern language will be dropped from the required work in the engineering courses.

The requirements for graduation in the course of biology and engineering shall be 144 semester hours.

The requirements for the bachelor of arts degree shall be made 120 semester hours.

"CAP AND DAGGER" TO GIVE PLAYS BY THREE AUTHORS IN BUCKNELL HALL

NEW ORCHESTRA WILL PLAY BETWEEN ACTS

Three one-act plays, a new stage, and a new orchestra will be presented for the first time to a Bucknell audience on Thursday, December 10, in Bucknell Hall, when "Cap and Dagger," men's dramatic society, makes its initial bow for the current college year.

The three plays offered are all unusual in nature and one of them, "The Mayor and the Manicure," won a silver cup at the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Dramatic Association tournament, as detailed elsewhere in this issue.

As companion pieces to the prize play, the program includes "The Girl" by Edward Peple, author of "Officer 666," "The Prince Chap" and other notable successes, and "The Brink of Silence," by Miss Esther E. Galbraith, of the Washington, D. C., Little Theatre.

This trio of plays embraces a wide range of dramatic forms, for "The Girl" is mock-tragedy, wherein two men fight a duel for a woman, ending with an unusual twist; "The Brink of Silence" is an intense psychological study of men and their emotions under the thrall of the black and icy silence far south in the Antarctic; and the "Mayor and the Manicure" is a clever, breezy comedy crammed full with all the laughs that its author, the Hoosier humorist, George Ade, could devise.

State fire regulations impose overly rigid restrictions on lighting, scenery, and staging but it is believed that with screens, curtains and the platform, which has just been built, an effective setting can be evolved.

An orchestra of 10 pieces, including most of the outstanding soloists on the campus, has been organized and will associate itself with all for the coming "Cap and Dagger" productions. The musicians have been practicing faithfully and will play before and after each play; during the change of scenes.

It is to be hoped that the student body will support these first plays, with the same enthusiasm that Bucknell has always accorded dramatics, in order that the expenses incurred by the State tournament may be defrayed and plans made for a big production in January, the society's twentieth anniversary.

All seats are reserved and tickets may be secured at Baker's drug store. Because of the limited number the price had to be set at 75c.

Prof. B. W. Griffith New Grad. Manager

Bucknell Recalls Able Alumnus To Post He Formerly Held: Was Football Player

The selection of Professor Benjamin W. Griffith as a successor to Harry E. McCormick in the position of graduate manager of athletics at Bucknell is indeed fortunate. It is doubtful if the Athletic Council could anywhere have found another man so well qualified for the task.

Professor Griffith qualifies from every point of view. He is an alumnus of Bucknell, having been graduated in 1899. He was himself an athlete, having played football during his college years. He has long been in close touch with his Alma Mater, having returned to Bucknell in 1908 as an instructor. In 1911 he became an assistant professor, and since 1915 has been a professor.

During all these years he has been in close touch with athletics at the University. He has long been a member of the athletic governing board. Prior to the war, when the athletic finances were in a bad way, Professor Griffith took charge and became the active directing head of athletics, his position corresponding to the present position of graduate manager. Through careful management Professor Griffith pulled the athletic association out of the hole, and then he surrendered the office to our first graduate manager, Albert O. Verse, in 1920, the athletic management was not only free from debt but actually had a considerable balance to its credit in the bank. During the years since his retirement from the athletic managership, Professor Griffith has been an active member of the Athletic Council, and is closely in touch with the entire athletic situation at Bucknell.

Professor Griffith's personality, his position as a professor, and his previous experience in the work, should make him an unusually able and successful graduate manager. In carrying his new duties, Professor Griffith will have his hands more than full. He will continue to teach, doing twelve instead of fifteen hours classroom work a week. The bookkeeping incidental to the managership will be cared for by Comptroller Dayton L. Hanck. But the actual arranging of schedules and the maintaining of proper relationships with our sister colleges will be Professor Griffith's particular tasks.

Next Semester Bills Must Be Paid Feb. 1

Registrar Adopts New Ruling Because Of Negligence On Part Of Some Students

Beginning with the enrolment for the second semester of this year the full semester bill will be due at the beginning of the semester and must be paid at the time of enrolment. This announcement was made by Registrar Holter when registration for the semester began.

In discussing the reasons for this action Mr. Holter said that the collection of the full bill has been made necessary by the fact that when students are allowed to carry the balance until after the beginning of the semester, they neglect to pay the bill or to make other arrangements, ignoring calls to the office for the purpose of straightening out their accounts. This negligence on the part of the students causes a great deal of extra clerical work. It is thought that the new ruling will simplify the bookkeeping for the cashier's office and do away with the necessity for the sending out of a large number of bills to students who neglect the final payments.

Inasmuch as the full bill must be paid before the end of the semester at any rate, the full payment at the beginning of the semester can not be said to work any hardship on any of the students. However, for those who may be unable to pay the full bill at once, or for those who are to be credited with scholarships during the year, arrangements may yet be made with the registrar.

Those who have not as yet completed the payment of their bills for the current semester will be required to make payment before their enrolment for the second semester. The payment of the assessment of seventy-five cents per member on the junior class will be handled in the same manner.

BELLE HOP TO ISSUE "ENGINEER'S NUMBER"

Ford slogans will constitute a new department for the Belle Hop beginning with the next issue. The engineers of the college will welcome a chance to display their wit, art, and humor in this issue for it is to be the "Engineers' Number."

The cover for the coming issue will be the work of a professional artist, George J. Keller, head of the art department of the Bloomsburg State Normal School.

Contributions for this issue should be in the hands of members of the staff before December 18. Special mention will be accorded contributors to the new department.

HOLMES DISCUSSES WORLD COURT PLAN

Describes To Upperclass Chapel Three Outstanding Proposals; Urges U. S. To Join Body

Student Vote Planned

Harry N. Holmes, field secretary of the World Alliance of Churches for International Friendship, addressed the sophomore-junior chapel on Tuesday morning on the purpose of the World Court and the plans for entrance that are under consideration in this country today. At the same time T. Burns Drum, '26, captain of the debating team, spoke to the freshmen in their chapel in Bucknell Hall on the same general topic.

Mr. Holmes is a native of Australia who for several years has shown his interest in European and World affairs. His present energies are being given largely to the development of peaceful relations among the countries of the Pacific but he consented to serve with the World Court Committee of the Council of Christian Associations in their educational program on the United States participation in the Permanent Court of International Justice. He appeared here under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and was introduced to the assembly by Eugene Carstater.

When Mr. Holmes began speaking he was given the fullest attention. The full chapel period was given over to his discussion of the problem and he took the matter up in a simple direct manner. Pointing to the pessimistic attitude that the world has been assuming in international matters he continued into a discussion of the birth of the idea of the court such as the one now established in the American delegations to the Hague conference of 1899 and 1907. Then he proceeded to outline the schemes of adherence that have been proposed and will be voted on by the students at the chapel hour tomorrow. Stressing mainly the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge proposition he pointed out its advantages over the other plans from the standpoint of practicability and moral influence.

The talk by Mr. Holmes will serve as a foundation for the vote that will be taken tomorrow. Each of the students will be supplied with a prepared ballot on which he may indicate his choice of plans, rejection of the whole proposition, or indifference to the problem. The result of the vote taken here will be reported to the New Student as a part of the nation-wide poll being taken among the colleges of the country.

N. E. A. To Meet In Washington In February

The superintendence section of the National Education Association will meet in Washington, D. C., in February. Persons desiring to become members of the N. E. A., or of the Pennsylvania State Association should see Richard Vastine, '27.

College Girls Plan Faculty Reception

Annual Custom To Be Observed At Women's College, Dec. 12. Entertainment Planned

The annual College Girls' Reception to the members of the faculty will be given this year on the evening of December 12, in the Women's College living room. It has been the custom at Bucknell for many years to entertain the members of the faculty and their wives once a year at a formal reception.

This year's reception promises to be better in every way than any former year's. The decorations in the living room, flowers and palms, will make a fitting setting for the colorful evening dresses of the women and the dark suits of the men. Red candles and poinsettias will be placed on tables in the dining room. Christmas balls and red and green paper decorations will be hung in the dining room and in the hall outside the living room.

An orchestra, several recitations, and solos will be included in the program.

CONSTANT EFFORT COST OF ATHLETIC SUCCESS—PADDOCK

Athletes Retain Their Records Only By Continual Striving To Attain The Heights

OVERCONFIDENCE IS FATAL IN ATHLETICS

Modestly Says Only A Few Of His 23 Official Records "Amount To Anything"

Charles Paddock, American sprinter in the Olympic games of 1920 and 1924, holder of world's records in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, and one of the most famous of American athletes, lectured to a large audience of Bucknell and Lewisburg people in the Baptist church Monday evening on "Sportsmanship."

Ralph F. Hartz, director of the Artist Course, introduced the speaker.

Beginning in the conventional manner of speakers, Paddock threw a bit of lightning into his audience when he mentioned the famous experiment of Benjamin Franklin. Switching his attention from the experimenter to the kite, he pointed an analogy between the circumstances that are necessary to fly a kite and those which raise an athlete and maintain him at the top of his field. The kite must rise against the wind and must then be kept there by having some solid anchor to hold against the pull of the wind. The athlete must rise to eminence through the medium of competition but he can hold his high position only by having some definite thing for which to work.

Concerning the development of professionalism in football, Paddock compared the action of Grange in accept-

BLANCHARD TALKS TO B. U. CLASSES

Outlines Progressive Tendency In Modern Industry And Its Effect on Politics

Guest of the Y. M. C. A.

Paul Blanchard, field secretary for the League for Industrial Democracy, spent a day at Bucknell, Thursday, December 3, speaking in a half dozen different meetings interested in social and economic conditions in Europe and Asia.

Mr. Blanchard has just returned to America after a journey around the world during which he made a special study of the British labor movement and the economic conditions in Russia under the regime of the Bolshevist dictatorship. He appeared here under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and had his day's program mapped out for him by Paul Webster, secretary of the "Y."

In Assistant Professor Metz's class at nine in the morning, Mr. Blanchard spoke on the subject, "The Coming of Industrial Democracy," outlining the progressive tendency in modern industry and the effect that he expects it to have on the political complexion of the world within the next few years. The next hour he addressed Professor C. R. Johnson's class in sociology on "The Problems of the Labor Organizer." In the last hour of the morning he spoke to Professor Heim's class in economics on "The Economic Situation in Soviet Russia."

The statement concerning the beginning of Christmas vacation in the Bucknellian of November 18 was in error.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA

The Phi Gamma Delta fraternity has just completed its drive for a new and finer home in New York City. The last bond of the final issue of $150,000 for erecting this new club house has been sold, and the work of erecting the building will begin immediately. Delta chapter members assisted in this work by the purchase of several hundred dollars worth of the bonds. The new Phi Gamma Delta club will be nine stories in height, and will be located at 104-05 West 56th street, New York City. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy by September 1, 1926.

For many years Phi Gamma Delta has maintained one of the finest fraternity club houses in the city of New York. The old club stood at 34 West 44th street, next to the Yale Club and opposite the Harvard Club and the New York Yacht Club. It was in effect, the fraternity centre, for thousands of traveling Fijis made it their headquarters when passing through New York. But the building was on leased ground. When the lease expired, the owners refused to renew the lease, desiring to erect a modern business building on the site. So Phi Gamma Delta was forced to seek other quarters.

Alumni and members of the fraternity's sixty-six chapters contributed to a fund which was used to buy a very fine site at the new address. Now the last of the bonds for erecting the building itself has been taken. The money was subscribed by Fijis all over the world, and the fraternity will soon have one of the finest clubs in existence. The completed structure will be worth nearly half a million dollars.

Phi Gamma Delta has striven hard for many years to maintain this sort of a centre in the metropolis for Fijis, having particularly in mind the care for younger brothers who come fresh to New York from the colleges without friends or connections in this great city. In this way the fraternity has given incalculable help to its members fresh out of college. At the Fiji club they find living quarters, food, and friends. This new home will enable the fraternity to be of even greater service to its members than formerly, for the club will have 100 bed rooms and a good dining service, in addition to its quarters reserved purely for social activities.

"Bob" Woodings, ex-'25, was a week-end visitor. He is working with his father in Pittsburgh, but is on the road most of the time selling tools to railroads in the East.

Brother "Jack" Davis, of Williamsport was also a week-end visitor. Jack has charge of the chemistry department of the Williamsport High School.

Professor and Mrs. Leo L. Rockwell were the guests of the chapter at dinner Sunday.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Delta Zeta of Lambda Chi Alpha announces with pleasure the pledging of William C. Knoll, '28.

Plans have been made for a Town Dance, Saturday, December 12.

The Lambda Chi basket ball team made a fine showing last Saturday evening by trouncing the Milton town club by a score of 30 to 15. McCormick led the scoring with six field goals, while McCleary followed with three baskets. The game was marked by clever team work, while little fouling was done by either side.

ALPHA CHI MU

The fraternity was honored with the presence of Mrs. Walter McCracken and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth McCracken, '27, of Lewisburg at dinner last Sunday.

Henry Higby was called to his home at Frenchtown, New Jersey, last Wednesday, on account of the death of his aunt.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

An orthophonic "Vic" dance livened up the dreary Saturday afternoon of December 5. About sixteen couples attended. Prof. and Mrs. Ralph P. Hartz and Miss Staufford were the chaperones.

BETA KAPPA

Professor James P. Whyte was a guest at lunch Monday.

PI BETA PHI

Pi Beta Phi held its meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Harry Brown. The advisory committee and pledges met with the actives.

Mrs. Stebbins, president of Beta province of Pi Beta Phi, was entertained by the local chapter, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, December 7, 8 and 9.

PHI MU

Phi Mu announces the initiation of Mary A. Dwyer, '28; Pauline E. Ware, '28; Floy Ziegler, '28; Katharine Gaventa, '27; and Mary Williams, '28, on October 28.

The chapter is delighted to welcome the return of one of our new patronesses—no other than Mrs. Wilfred Wilcox, who before her marriage on Wednesday, November 25, was Miss Marion Campbell. Mrs. Wilcox will continue as instructor of voice in the Bucknell School of Music. Phi Mu extends to her the "best of wishes."

Grace Milhous, '27, gave an exceptionally fine account of the Phi Mu convention held in Charlenoix, Michigan, this past summer to which she was sent as delegate.

ZETA GAMMA TAU

Zeta Gamma Tau announces with pleasure the pledging of Edith Bond, '28; Dorothy Wolverton, '28, and Genevieve Punches, '28.

Nesbit's Ramblers will furnish the music for the Zeta Gamma Tau dance to be held on Friday evening, December 11, at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house.

PI DELTA EPSILON

An informal founder's day dance was the first social activity of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity. The dance was held in the Theta Upsilon Omega house Saturday evening with Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders furnishing the rythm. The members and guests numbered twenty-five couples. The dance was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Smith and Miss Brakeman.

MU PHI EPSILON

Mu Phi Epsilon, women's musical fraternity, initiated the following girls on November 30: Beryl Fleming, Grace Pheifer, Margaret Dye, Edith Womer, Margaret Tennant, and Lois Lee.

PHI MU ALPHA, SINFONIA

Alpha Pi Chapter of Phi Mu Alpha, Sinfonia, musical fraternity, entertained the local chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon, musical sorority, and friends of the members of both organizations at a formal dance held in the Phi Gamma Delta house Friday evening.

The music for the dancers was furnished by Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders whose peppy strains made the short three hours allowed seem only so much shorter. Ice Cream, cake, and coffee were served at intermission. Miss Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph F. Hartz were the chaperones.

PHI DELTA SIGMA

Phi Delta Sigma, honorary upperclass fraternity, held a smoker in honor of its pledges at the Kappa Delta Rho house on Monday evening, November 30.

Smoking Harmful To High Standing

Study Among Antioch Students Shows Non-Smokers Better Athletes and Scholars

"Antioch Notes," a bulletin of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, contains in the issue of September 15, an interesting article on "Tobacco and Scholarship." It says:

A careful study of smoking among men students at Antioch does not disclose any permanent effects of smoking upon blood pressure, lung capacity, or pulse rate; but a definite relationship is established between smoking and low scholarship. Among men students, 31.8 per cent of non-smokers fail to maintain required grades, while 62.3 per cent of heavy smokers similarly fail. "Inhalers" fail most often. Before this study began, the more susceptible smokers had been eliminated, since many more smokers than non-smokers had failed and been dropped from college.

A study of smoking among men students at Antioch has been pursued with thorough care and in accordance with sound statistical methods. Antioch students provide material of quite unusual value for such a study. Nearly all parts of the country are quite uniformly represented. About half the men smoke, and these do so openly. There is no motive for secrecy. The men have shown interest in the research, assisting generously with information.

Smoking and Athletics

In actual experience at Antioch, non-smokers seem to do slightly better in athletics than smokers. In track meets during the past two years they have gained an easy majority of points. On the other hand, all important events in our first swimming meet, held last spring, were won by two experts, both of whom were habitual smokers.

Of 177 students who now smoke, 74 gained athletic "letters" at high school or preparatory school, and 21 have won the college letters. Of 176 students who do not smoke, only 56 gained athletic letters but they also include 21 representatives with college (Varsity A) letters.

The tentative conclusion is that high school athletes tend to take up smoking, and so increase the number of athletes among college smokers, but that the smokers do not retain their pre-eminence in sports. This conclusion is supported by the fact that of students who began smoking in high school, 37 have high school letters, but of these only three have gained college letters by accomplishments in athletics.

Smoking and Physique

Those who believe most firmly in the poisonous effects of tobacco commonly maintain that its use increases the speed of the pulse and alters blood pressure. There is some experimental evidence that in many cases these effects do follow immediately after smoking. If the speeding effect were permanent it would reduce the reserve power of the heart, and we should expect the athletic smoker to be handicapped by this loss of reserve.

Unfortunately for this theory, the average smoker's heart was found to be one-fifth of a beat per minute slower than that of the non-smoker—probably a chance variation. We found no significant difference in the blood pressure or in the lung capacity of the two groups. If from one to six years of moderate smoking causes any permanent effect on the human machine, we have yet to discover it. If a moderate use of tobacco causes a temporary but not a permanent loss of physical efficiency in these respects, then the claims of those who oppose the use of tobacco must be modified.

Smoking and Scholarship

Of 23 men dismissed from Antioch last year for low scholarship, 20 were smokers. This fact bears upon all the following statistics. As the poorest students are dropped, the average grade of the remainder is higher. If most of those dropped are smokers, then the smokers remaining in college are a selected group who are less affected by the association of smoking with low scholarships Were it not for such elimination, the scholarship of smokers would appear still more unfavorably.

On the basis of grading which prevailed when this study was undertaken, an average grade of 3.2 was required of students. A grade of 4 or higher was made by 23.0 per cent of non-smokers, and 7.9 per cent of smokers. The average grade of 176 non-smokers last year was 3.51; that of 177 smokers was 3.14. The difference is .37. The mathematical probability of such a difference arising by chance is ony one in 730 millions. The difference in scholarship of smokers and non-smokers is real, with some assignable cause.

We cannot at once conclude that the habit of smoking is that cause. It might be a third factor. For example, sociability may be associated both with smoking and with low scholarship. So we investigated further.

We found that heavy smokers have lower grades than light smokers. Heavy smokers average 3.00; light smokers, 3.23. More heavy than light smokers fall below diploma grade. (Students falling below diploma grade 3.2, must improve scholarship or leave college.) Of non-smokers, 31.8 per cent fall below diploma grade; of light smokers, 43.0 per cent; and of heavy smokers, 62.3 fall below.

Smokers who "inhale" have lower scholarship than those who do not. Of all smokers who do not inhale, 42.4 per cent fall below diploma grade; but of those who do inhale, 43.8 per cent of light smokers, and 65.1 per cent of heavy smokers fall below.

Smokers remaining in college fall steadily in scholarship (from 35.6 to 2.31 in three years). Non-smokers maintain a nearly uniform average.

With these figures before us, it is hard to avoid the conclusion that smoking is actually a cause of mental inefficiency.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

TALKS ON JOURNALISM

President Frank Calls It a Kind of Secular Priesthood

Journalism was described by President Glenn Frank, of the University of Wisconsin, recently, as "a sort of secular priesthood" calling for the "best America may have of mind and morals, of courage and creativeness." Journalism need not be "cheap and shoddy," because it deals with ephemeral happenings of the day.

Speaking to the Central Inter-Scholastic Press Association, Dr. Frank said: "Journalism is not cheap and shoddy, save in the hands of cheap and shoddy journalists. To the job of reporting for the yellowest of the yellow press, you can bring the scholar's culture, the scientist's accuracy and a poet's beauty, provided only that you achieve a writing technique that makes what you write simple and clear and intelligible to the man in the street. And making things intelligible to the man in the street does not mean writing down to him. It means becoming a better writer. An idea that cannot be written out clearly has not been thought out clearly."

Dr. Frank offered the following suggestions for writers:

"Don't underestimate the intelligence of your readers; don't overestimate the information of your readers; spend as much time thinking about your readers' interests as you do about interesting your readers; write in the vernacular."

He said he did not mean "be low brow," but that he advocated "the simple and vigorous speech that the ordinary intelligent person uses."

UNIVERSITIES CLOSE

Easy Degrees in Eucador Cause Oversupply of Doctors

All universities in Eucador were closed "temporarily" by a government decree dated August 11, 1925, reports R. M. de Lambert, secretary, United States legation at Quito. The universities were located at Quito, Guayaquil, Cuenca, and Loja, says "School Life."

For many years past there has been discontent with the so-called superior education. It has been most respectable to study for the degree of doctor of law or doctor of medicine, Mr. de Lambert states, and although many efforts have been made by Congress and otherwise to make the degrees more difficult and have the candidates for degrees more thoroughly prepared, the degrees still have remained too easy of attainment. The result is that the country is flooded with doctors, the majority of whom are unable to earn a living at their profession.

Columbia Installs Pupilometer

University psychology goes marching on. Columbia announces the installation of the pupilometer. This instrument measures the amount of dilation in the human eye-pupil under the emotion of fear.

It records the other emotions, tot but not with much success. In the attempt to record the anger emotions the psychologists were baffled by the difficulty of producing real anger by artificial stimulation. Subjects were kicked on the shins, says the experimenter, and otherwise goaded to indignation, but exhibited surprise and shock rather than anger, and frequenty refused to go on with the work. The theory of the pupilometer is that pupillary dilation, pulse beats, and respiration are correlated and that by measuring the former much useful information may be gathered about the latter for the use of the physician in making diagnoses. Eventually, no doubt, the eye will be made to give a full account of itself through the kymograph, which works in conjunction with the pupilometer.

California Professor to Fly In Hunt for Lilliputian Land

Headed by Professor M. W. Stirling, of the University of California, former curator of the United States National Museum, an expedition is preparing to sail from San Francisco to hunt the so-called Tapiro pygmies in the wilds of New Guinea.

With the exception of Professor Stirling, members of the expedition flew to San Francisco from Chicago, and their plane and other equipment is being shipped with them.

By flying over the jungle the explorers hope to find the pygmies, first discovered in 1911 by Dr. A. F. Wollaston, a British explorer. They are said to be between four and four and one-half feet tall.

The expedition is expected to require more than a year. Its members are equipped with tear bombs as well as guns in the hope of avoiding trouble and procuring the opportunity for studying the pygmies.

Science Thinks Sleep May Be Intoxication

May Be Due to Storing Poison in the Human System During the Wakeful Hours

A theory that sleep may be nothing more than intoxication, and that by cultivating better habits humanity in lessen the hours it spent, was advanced on November 28 by George Washington U. scientists who say that if the results pointed to any one theory of sleep it was that of natural intoxication, caused by the storing of poisons in the human system during the wakeful hours.

When the drunkard becomes intoxicated, they said, he sleeps, and generaly wakes up detoxicated. In the case of the students, microscopical examination showed their blood changes correspond to those of a drunken man, and that their trouble was cured by a short period of sleep.

The students were kept awake for sixty hours. It was found that insomnia played havoc with the visual senses, phantoms being reported by some, and various distortions of objects by others. A single night's loss of sleep did not affect the ability of the subjects to drive an automobile, but they became rather dangerous drivers on the second night. This was explained as due to their tendency to drop off to sleep while listening to the rythm of the motor. Their mental faculties and muscles remained up to standard.

It is quite possible, the scientists said, that through force of habit one person is able to obtain 100 units of sleep in half the time required by others.

"In short," they said, "sleep has not only length but depth.

"If this assumption be true, the length of time that people sleep is very largely a question of habit. It is possible to cure their rolling mechanisms to work faster, just as by a series of conditioned reflexes we can make the salivary glands work faster."

Materials Control To Decide History

U. S. Will Lose Her Leadership As She Uses Up Resources. Study This, Students

In the early years of the industrial revolution the outstanding problem which faced the business man was how to produce. The problem was how to make practical and efficient use of the newly discovered methods of production. As the technical difficulties connected with the change from handwork to machinework were gradually overcome, a new set of problems presented itself.

It was found very soon that, physically, production was limited principally by the capacity of the machine and was, therefore, increased with comparative ease. But, economically, production is limited by the capacity to sell. The pressure upon selling became the greater because of the known effects of large-scale production upon cost of production. To a large degree competitive strength and, therefore, business success, individually and nationally began to depend upon success in selling and in marketing.

But again the emphasis is shifting. Increased production, as well as increasing concentration of population, is placing an ever greater burden on the natural resources of the industrialized countries. One-time luxuries turned into necessities, and modern inventions making use of rare minerals and forest products are making the industrial countries more and more dependent upon a few localized sources of supply and upon the tropics.

Internationally speaking, the competitive strength of a country's industries is not only a matter of efficiency of production, of natural resources, and of skill in marketing; it is, to an ever-increasing degree, a matter of financial and political control of the sources of raw materials.

As the populations of the industrila nations increase, the struggle for raw materials will become more intense. It will express itself in a struggle for food; meat and animal or vegetable fats; for fuel: coal and petroleum; for clothing: cotton, wool, and leather; and for industrial raw materials: metals, rubber, and forestry products.

We have recently had the opportunity of experiencing what it means to have the principal source of rubber under the political control of a foreign nation. The United States will have ample opportunity in the future to practical experience to study this same question in a variety of forms.

With the whole continent of Africa, that storehouse of untold wealth of raw materials, and all the most productive tropical countries in the hands of two or three European powers, it is only a matter of years when we shall find that the natural resources of our own country, which we have exploited in such a prodigal fashion, no longer give us a favored position among the industrial countries of the world.

A study of the conditions under which raw materials are produced and marketed is therefore a logical part of the scientific equipment of all well-trained and alert business men.

Since financial control of raw-material resources is in times of peace, of almost equal importance with political control, a study of the raw-material situation leads inevitably to a consideration of the international financial relations and of foreign investments.

Only recently we were told that England, through its control of the rubber situation, may succeed in paying its debt to us in rubber rather than in gold. Although there is an element of fantasy in this statement, there is a large element of truth in it. At any rate, the statement is correct in principle and it opens up a field of interesting economic speculation. It would indeed be a most wise and farsighted commercial policy if the United States should in some way succeed, through governmental or enrough well-directed private financial activity, in translating the war debts into a financial control of important sources of supply or raw materials. It will be better for the future development of the United States to have its citizens or its government own mines, forests, or plantations in the colonial possessions of its debtors than to have large accounts on its books which are either uncollectable or must be liquidated in gold or by means of large shipments of manufactured products competing directly and indirectly with the products of American factories. It is futile and suicidal to attempt to stem permanently the natural flow of wealth by means of tariffs and other artificial restrictions.

Sooner or later international commercial rivalry will lead to new conflicts, and wars of the future will probably be fought to bring about a redistribution of raw-material resources. Only by means of some kind international co-operation can such future conflicts be avoided. This co-operation may take the form of conventions adhered to by the nations of the world. Such a working convention we now have in the League of Nations, and its activities with respect to the bringing about of an international understanding in the matter of raw-material resources are well known.

It is possible that the co-operation may in the end take the form of enormous international vertical and horizontal combinations of different industrial groups, such as have already been developed in some industries. Whichever form this co-operation finally takes, it will introduce an element of stability in world relations which will make the future of our civilization look brighter.

Questions of the first magnitude are involved in the raw-material situation. A study of the raw-material markets is probably the most effective way to make the student of business internationally minded. In studying the subject, he studies the future of nations. But he also gains an understanding of the history of nations. Why is Great Britain the center of the trade in foodstuffs and raw materials? Why does the North Dakota farmer find the price of wheat largely determined by the price of wheat in Liverpool? Economic history is given greater vitality when an answer is sought to these questions.

For these reasons the study of the raw-material markets will be a fruitful study not only for the student who intends to enter the brokerage field, but for every student of commerce who wants to see American commerce in its proper setting.

NOAH WEBSTER LEADER OF SPELLING REFORMERS

Dictionary Maker Started Movement That Persists to Our Day

Noah Webster casts a long shadow, writes Charles E. Tracewell in his column of "This and That" in the Washington Evening Star.

He was a voice in the wilderness of early American, crying loud and long for the country to wake to the coming of the new language.

Webster's great work, which appeared in 1828, was called "An American Dictionary of the English Language." Prof. Malone remarks that Webster might not inappropriately have called his work "A Patriotic Dictionary of the American Language."

Some of the things the intense Webster fought for have come to pass, many of them have not, nor ever will. The spirit of the man, however, deserves only praise. He was the earliest of the spelling reformers, and many of our spellings common today are his. Our use of "color" instead of "colour" is due to him. His spelling books sold into the millions of copies.

It may be interesting to give some of Noah Webster's own ideas of "reformed spelling" as quoted in a magazine.

"In the essays ritten within the last yeer a considerable change of spelling iz introuced by way of experiment," wrote Webster. "This liberty was taken by the writers before the age of Queen Elizabeth and to this we are indebted for the preference of modern spelling over that of Gower and Chaucer.

"The man who admits that the change of 'housbonde, mynde, ygone, moneth' into 'husband, mind, gone, month,' is an improvement, must acknowledge also the riting of helth, breth, rong, tung, munth, to be an improvement.

"There iz no alternativ!" cried Webster. "Every possible reezon that could ever be offered for altering the spelling of wurds still exists in full force; and if a gradual reform should not be made in our language, it will proov that we are less under the influence of reezon than our ancestors."

Time has proved, evidently, that the American people, in their writing and talking, are infinitely more under the influence of custom than of reason.

We still write "is" and "reason" and "words" and "alternative," just as they did in Webster's day, for as the spell of the mother country remained over America, despite the Revolution, so today the charm of our ancient tongue still works its will with us.

Yet the sturdy pioneer work of Noah Webster remains.

DON'T CRAWL UNDER TRAINS

On several occasions women students have been noticed crawling under freight trains that blocked the way at the University avenue crossing. This is an extremely dangerous practice and is almost certain to result in a tragedy. There should be no more of it.

The danger lies, not so much in the possibility of the freight train's suddenly starting, as in the fact that freight trains blocking the crossing are usually waiting for other trains to go by. The two tracks that cross University avenue merge into a single track a quarter of a mile down the river, and this single track—the only single-track section between Philadelphia and Newberry—makes it necessary for many south-bound trains to wait at the switch until north-bound traffic gets out of the way. Sometimes north-bound trains stand at the crossing while south-bound trains pass. Persons crawling under a standing train always face the possibility of creeping out from under a car on one track only to step directly in front of an onrushing train on the other track.

A very serious accident is almost certain to result in such case unless the person so trapped has the presence of mind to stand perfectly still between the two trains. If one of these trains should be a fast moving passenger, the suction of air caused bf the swift movement might draw one so standing under the wheels. The best thing to do, if you find you are trapped, is to throw yourself flat on the ground midway between the two tracks and parallel with them, and stay there until the danger is past.

There ought never to be occasion to practice this suggestion. Even if the railroad does obstruct the way to class, it is better to miss class than to run such danger. No Bucknell professor would be so unreasonable as to mark down a student who was late for class because of such an obstruction.

The University authorities would do well to call the attention of the Reading Railway Company to the continual violation of the law by its engineers in allowing trains to stand on the crossing, unbroken, for periods longer than the few minutes legally allowed. At best the University avenue crossing is an extremely dangerous one. The practice of allowing trains to obstruct the way of hundreds of students hurrying to the Hill makes it still more dangerous, because of the fact that students will take chances to reach their classes.

WHAT PRICE VICTORY

Just as football is the king of collegiate sports, so is debating the king of collegiate intellectual contests. Demanding an alert brain, a shrewd judgment of the weight of arghments, a keen appreciation of the view-point of others, the ability to feel the effect that the argument is having on the audience; combining at once the arts of logic and expression and personality, it exalts the man who is able to meet its requirements and makes of him a power.

Good debating demands that the debater love his work. There can be no avoidance, no "getting by" on the debating team that is out for laurels. Every man must put into his work his best mentality and his strongest efforts.

Few of us have any realization, and none except the debaters and coaches themselves know of the work and effort that were expended in gaining the victory over Lafayette, the victory that may put Bucknell's team in the leading place among forsenic organizations of the East. For six weeks previous to the brief two hours in which the debate was carried on, the men on the team closeted themselves with their coaches, Professor Howes and Professor Coleman, night after night, studying the subject from every angle, accumulating facts, sifting out the arguments, learning the paths of approach, developing a plan of constructive argument, reducing that plan to three short speeches, and then learning to deliver those speeches so that they would carry the conviction that was back of them to three impartial, perhaps critical, judges.

Such efforts deserve the recognition of every student of the University. They are exemplary of a loyalty that we all might do well to intrill in our own lives.

To team and coaches, the Bucknellian extends felicitations. More power to you and may the college give you the support you have earned.

Dr. R. H. Conwell Dies; Was Noted Lecturer

Author, Builder, Philanthropist, Founder and Head of Temple, Succumbs To Relapse

The Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, founder and president of Temple University, and for many years one of the outstanding figures in the Baptist clergy, passed away at his home in Philadelphia last Sunnay morning.

Dr. Conwell, in founding Temple University, gave the total proceeds from his famous lecture, "Acres of Diamonds" to the upbuilding of that institution. This lenture, repeated by its author more often than any other message has ever been, was the medium through which he became known to practically every man and woman throughout the country.

Dr. Conwell had been in poor health for some months previous to his death and had been treated for cancer at the Samaritan Hospital, connected with the School of Medicine of the University. His return to his home a few days ago was hailed by the Temple students as an indication of an improved condition, but his death has cast a shadow over the whole University which closed yesterday, and remained inactive until after the funeral, which was held this morning at eleven o'clock in the Baptist Temple. A memorial service honoring the memory of Philadelphia's most esteemed clergyman and leader of moral thought is planned by the Philadelphia ministerium to take place tomorrow evening.

Everett To Discuss Math. Group Theory

Pi Mu Epsilon Meeting, Dec. 16, Scheduled as First of Eight Similar Monthly Meetings

An open meeting of Pi Mu Epsilon on Wednesday evening, December 16, at 7:30 in the lecture room of the Chem. Lab. will feature Dr. H. S. Everett as a speaker on the group theory of mathematics.

This will be the first of a series of eight program meetings of a similar nature which are to be given by Pi Mu Epsilon to take the place of the activities of the former Mathematics Club. These meetings will be held regularly on the third Wednesday of each month for the remainder of the current college year.

All Bucknellians are cordially invited to attend these program meetings, particularly the freshmen and those who are specially interested in, or enrolled as students of, mathematics.

Noted Journalist To Talk Here Monday

Herbert Adams Gibbons, eminent author and journalist, will address the classes in orientation on Monday, December 14. He has also been engaged to speak to the Sociological Society in Bucknell Hall at 4:45, the same day.

Dr. Gibbons was formerly professor of history in Robert College, Constantinople, where he was associated with Professor C. R. Johnson. During the war he was European correspondent for several of the leading American newspapers and periodicals.

Rockwell Represents B. U. At Convention

Reads Paper at National Council of English Teachers; Other Alumni Take Active Part

Three Bucknell alumni took an active part in the annual convention of the National Council of Teachers of English, held at Chicago during the Thanksgiving recess. They were Professor Leo L. ockwell, '07, Professor Charles C. Fries, '09, of the University of Michigan, and Miss Emma M. Bolenius, '98. Professor Fries is chairman, and Professor Rockwell secretary of the College Section of the Council.

Professor Rockwell read a paper on "Honors Courses in English," telling of the Oxford plan of awarding honors in English on the basis of special work done in addition to, or as a substitute for, regular courses. Forty-two colleges are employing this system in English and fifty-one other institutions employ it in departments other than English.

This system is intended to offer greater freedom to students of exceptional ability and to give them wide latitude in the development of their powers.

Professor Fries presented a paper entitled "Testing the Academic Preparation of Teachers of English." Dr. Fries directs the preparation of students at Michigan who are preparing to teach English. He outlined the methods employed at his college to test the knowlede of students. One of his devices is a "diagnostic" test for measuring the student's familiarity with literature. The plan was originated by Professor Fries.

Miss Bolenius, who is an authority on the teaching of English in secondary schools, also spoke. She has written a number of school texts, of which her "Teaching English in the Grammar Grades and High School," ranks high.

Professor W. A. Craigie, of Oxford, who is now in this country to organize the preliminary work on the new dictionary of American English, and who served for some time as editor of the Oxford English Dictionary, explained to the Council the methods to be employed in this new undertaking.

Professor Hans Kurath, of Northwestern, chairman of the committee appointed by the Modern Language Association of America to institute a survey of American speech, presented the proposals of the committee for carrying out this task. Some of these methods are now being tested at Bucknell by Professor Rockwell's class in the history of the English Language. They include the investigation of the pronuciation of various text words by different communities. It is hoped as a result of this survey, which will extend over a period of years, to obtain a real basis for the determination of a standard of pronciation in American English, a thing at present unattainable because of the general ignorance of actual conditions.

The report of Professor Clapp, of New York University, on "The Place of English in American Life," will form the basis for a continued investigation of the actual use of the language in adult life, which may possibly re-shape the teaching of English in our schools.

Faith Was Secret Of "Moose's" Hits

McCormick Became Pinch Hitter Extraordinary Thru Belief That He Could Do It

"Moose" McCormick, ex-'04, who has been for the past 3 years graduate manager of athletics, and who goes to West Point as baseball coach at the beginning of the new year, is regarded by Damon Runyon, New York sports writer, as one of the most interesting characters that big baseball has seen. The Williamsport Sun quotes this article of Runyon's about our pinch-hitting Bucknellian:

"Harry E. McCormick, familiarly known in his big league days as "Moose," and sometimes as "Handsome Harry," one of the greatest pinch hitters that ever lugged a hickory stick to the home plate, has been appointed head baseball coach at the West Point Military academy.

"He succeeds John Honus Lobert, who resigned after holding the position for some years. The Army athletic authorities must lean toward John J. McGraw's system of baseball schooling, because both McCormick and Lobert are former members of the New York Giants, and before them another ex-Giant, Samuel Nicklin Strang, coached the young soldiers.

"Strang was another great pinch hitter, one of the first men employed in that role, perhaps. He was pinch hess alone. He once played third base for the Giants, but eventually he wound up spending most of his time on the bench, appearing only when the club stood in desperate need of a hit.

"If memory serves, Sammy Strang once made eleven safe hits out of fifteen appearances at the plate in the pinch. It is a question which was the greater hitter, Strang or McCormick. The latter gained more fame in that role, perhaps. He was pinch-hitter extraordinary, with a peculiar line of reasoning about pinch hitting.

"Hhe had tremendous confidence in his ability, which was perhaps the secret of his success.

"When I walk up to that plate, I've something on the pitcher because I know he's afraid of me," McCormick ured to say.

"This was probably true. At least it was probably true that the pitcher felt very nervous when he saw McCormick coming, walking first on one foot, and then on the other. McCormick liked to put a bit of drama in his appearances.

"With a couple of men on the bases, and the stands roaring, he would spend some time selecting his bat from the pile in front of the Giants' bench. Then he would approach the plate with majestic stride, glowering at the pitcher in a manner calculated to make the stoutest heart quail.

"He had iron nerve, and a good batting eye. And he could smack what the baseballers call that old apple with great fury. He wasn't much of a fielder, and he had no great agility on the bases, but he could slug the runners home.

"McCormick was one of the late Charles E. Van Loan's favorite characters in the days when Van Loan was daily writing baseball in New York, and long before he became famous as a fiction writer. It was Van Loan who nicknamed McCormick 'Musis, the Moose,' which finally became just 'Moose.'

"I never knew just why Van Loan picked that name for McCormick, but it certainly tickled Van Loan's fancy. He loved to write of McCormick's walk that suggested the monarch of the northern woods to Van.

"The name made no hit with McCormick. In fact, it offended him deeply and for several years he refused to speak to Van Loan. The ball players took it up, however, and finally McCormick became so accustomed to the title that he paid no more attention to it.

"He figured in the sequence of play in the famous incident at the Polo Grounds in 1908 when Fred Merkle failed to touch second, resulting in the play-off game for the pennant of that year between the Giants and the Chicago Cubs.

"Thereafter McCormick retired from baseball for some years to engage in the selling end of the steel business. He returned to the Giants along about 1912 as a pinch hitter, very rarely playing a position in the field. Then he went to Chattanooga in the Southern league as a manager.

"He was one of the first big league ball players to enter the war. He became an officer and was overseas with the first detachment of the A. E. F. and with him went his old room-mate and constant companion of his big league days, Harvard Eddie Grant.

"In deep center field at the Polo Grounds you will see a little monument of stone. It was erected to the memory of Harvard Eddie, former third baseman of the Giants, who died a captain of infantry in the Argonne forest while leading his men to the rescue of the Lost Battalion.

"McCormick is a Bucknell man, a noted football player in his day at that college, and contemporaneous with the late Christy Mathewson, who sleeps forever in the college town. Of late McCormick has been assisting in the athletic coaching there.

"I am pleased to note the return of "Handsome Harry" to a wider baseball sphere. To me he was always one of the most interesting figures in the big league, and he certainly had plenty of color.

"It was McCormick who went up in the pinch in a game between the Giants and the Phillies and stood at the plate confronting Grover Cleveland Alexander while Umpire William Klem was just opening his mouth to announce the presence of "Handsome Harry."

"Alexander wound up and let fly a pitch before William Klem could articulate and McCormick slammed out a safety—scoring what seemed to be the winning run. But William Klem held that inasmuch as he had not stated McCormick's name to the stands, the handsome one was not officially in the game.

"The hit was declared null and void, and the game went on into extra innings. I believe the Giants finally lost. Years prior to this incident, McCormick was with Philadelphia, and was waiting his turn at bat one day, according to Billy Murray, then manager of the Phillies, when a throw from the outfield designed to cut off a runner at the plate, came whistling in.

"It passed close to McCormick, who promptly hauled off and knocked the ball over the fence. Naturally, the runner was called out for the interference, and Murray querulously interrogated McCormick as to his reason for slugging the ball.

"Well, Bill," replied McCormick, "I couldn't help it—it was right over."

MATHEWSON CALLED BUILDER OF LEAGUE BY K. M. LANDIS

Many matters of importance to baseball will come before the meetings of the major leagues during the week but none of more significance than that of honoring the memory of the builders of the game who have died in the last year.

The National League has set aside Wednesday as memorial day. Commissioner Landis will tell of the career of Christy Mathewson, Giant pitcher of the early part of the century, who brought a college education and a powerful personality into the national game at a critical period.

Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburgh owner, will speak on Charles H. Ebbets, of Brooklyn, and William F. Baker, president of the Phillies, on Edward J. McKeever, also of the Brooklyn Club. Ebbets and McKeever died within a short time of each other.

Other speakers and their subjects are August Hermann, of Cincinnati, on Julius Fleischmann; John B. Foster, on John B. Day; Boseman Bulger, on Sam Crane; William A. Phelon and Joe Flanner; Branch Rickey, on Marvin M. Goodwin, and John A. Heydler, on Frank E. Gore.

When students of Dartmouth College are beset by disturbing emotions or doubts, they may go to a psychiatrist employed by Dartmouth for the special purpose of adjusting matters of this nature.

BISONS TENDERED TWO FINE DINNERS

put forth the hope that the schedule for the coming year may prove more possible of accomplishment.

Following Professor Griffith's talk, President Hunt was called upon. He expressed his sorrow at the loss of the seniors from the team, saying that he was glad there were no more graduating. He congratulated the coaches and the team on the success of the season and said that he believed it was grit and fight and loyalty to Bucknell that had carried them through. Then turning to the future he called the attention of the men to the fact that the professors have been lenient up till the present and asked the men to put football out of their minds for the present and to toe the line; to prove that they have brains as well as brawn.

"Uncle" Charley supplemented President Hunt's plea for scholarship in his talk to the team Citing "Sid" Goodwin as an example of the type of football man that will succeed, for he is here primarily for an education, he said that a man must show his brains as well as his brawn in getting a job. An education can't be taken away. He congratulated the men on their friendly and brotherly spirit, especially with the freshmen, and urged them to make their college friendships the fondest recollections of their lives. Sounding a note of appreciation for the work of Kostos, giving the best he had all the time, "Unk" wound up his talk by saying he was not ashamed of the schedule, or of the team, or of the result.

Coaches Ingerton and Chinn and Trainer "Peachy" Kling were also called on and gave short talks on the spirit of the team and appreciation of its efforts. Professor Whyte and Mr. E. W. Thompson of the Athletic Council also spoke and several of the players responded to shot toasts.

In the election for captain in which fifteen players voted, Bibi, McCleary, Magee, and Hollinger were mentioned. Stephens, who for the past two years has been doing remarkable work at guard was the favorite, however, and had the majority of the ballots.

The second banquet, given by Harold M. Neff, '11 and George H. Neff, Jr., '16, was a testimonial for the improved brand of football that "Uncle" Charley and the Bucknell Bisons are bringing to the Susquehanna Valley. The Neff brothers have been the team's most consistent followers during the past year, being present at every contest played by the Orange and Blue gridders with the exception of the two games played on the western trip.

The first announcement made at the dinner was that there would be no speeches; that the team had been asked there to eat. That rule was carried unanimously and the only remarks that were made, aside from the table-talk, were the speech of thanks by Professor Griffith and two short talks from the Neffs, welcoming the men and expressing appreciation and congratulation on the season. The end of the dinner brought the last line-up for the year and for the squad of 1925.

Do College Students Insure Their Lives?
The Answer Seems to be "Yes"

Do You Know

That in a test recently made with upper-class students of both sexes in fourteen representative colleges, 140 out of 351 said they carried life insurance policies?

It is significant that 40% of undergraduates have insurance on their lives—a notable advance over what prevailed twenty, or even ten, years ago. This shows that college students and their parents think life insurance is of considerable use in connection with the educational program. Parents believe in it because they have something invested for the benefit of their children. Students realize that their lives have an economic value.

The John Hancock is particularly interested in insuring college men and women and in obtaining college graduates for the personnel of the field staff.

Have You Ever Heard?

That the French Legion of Honor, which Napoleon created in 1802, has honored 140,000 notable men in the century and a quarter of its existence, by electing them to membership.

That of this great total 2323 are Americans.

That of these 2323 Americans two are Bucknell men.

That the membership of the Legion of Honor is divided into five classes: Grand Croix, Grand Officers, Commanders, Officers, and Chevaliers.

That among American members of the Legion of Honor only eight have ever been awarded the Grand Croix.

That one of these eight men is a Bucknellian, General Tasker H. Bliss, ex-'73, who was chief of staff of the United States Army during the recent war, and who lived on University Avenue in the house now occupied by Mrs. H. H. McClure, and built by General Bliss' father, Professor George R. Bliss.

That among the American members of the Legion only twenty have ever been elected to membership in the second highest group, that of the Grand Officers.

That of these twenty, one is a Bucknell man, Dr. David Jayne Hill, '74, former president of Bucknell, former minister to Switzerland and the Netherlands, former ambassador to Germany, and former assistant secretary of state for the United States.

Alumni Notes

T. A. K. Gessler Dies; Was Noted Preacher

Ministered To City Pastorates; Was A Prominent Baptist And Civil War Veteran

The Rev. Dr. Theodore A. K. Gessler, '64, Baptist clergyman, who had held pastorates in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and Elizabeth, N. J. died December 4, in Miami, Fla., in his eighty-fifth year, following a stroke the preceding Saturday. Dr. Gessler was an active preacher for many years, being pastor successively of the Pilgrim Baptist Church of New York, the First Baptist Church of Elizabeth, N. J., the Central Church of Brooklyn, and Grace Baptist Church in Manhattan.

Dr. Gessler was born in Philadelphia on October 16, 1841. He was graduated from Bucknell University and Bucknell Theological Seminary and ordained to the ministry in 1864.

Was Civil War Veteran

In the summer of the year, that Robert E. Lee was invading Pennsylvania, the young clergyman went to the front as a private in the 28th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, Company A.

He retired from the New York ministry in 1897, but friends at Lake Hopatcong, N. J. where he was a summer resident, built a church for him there in 1910 and he preached there regularly during the summer months until very recently.

Dr. Gessler was active in denominational affairs for fifty years. He was president of the New Jersey Baptist Sunday School Union from 1870 to 1879, secretary of the Baptist Congress from 1895 to 1912, president of the New York Alumni Club of Bucknell University in 1875, chaplain of Crescent Lodge, F. and A. M., New York, in 1880, and president of the New York Alumni Club of Sigma Chi from 1880 to 1883. He was president of the Borough Council, Lake Hopatcong, from 1897 to 1913.

Religious Writer

He was the author of many religious articles, including a series of metaphysical articles in the American edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Dr. Gessler was twice married, his first wife, formerly Miss Annie L. Sherborne, of Philadelphia, dying in 1880; in 1884 he married Miss Georgie M. Edwards, of Brooklyn.

He is survived by his wife, a son, Theodore A. Gessler, and three daughters, Mrs. George Damerel, Mrs. Lucile Keeler and Mrs. Burton Teft, all of Miami.

The bride is a graduate of St. Peters Catholic High School, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Steffenberg.

The newly married couple left Reading immediately after the wedding for a honeymoon motor trip to Florida. They expect to return by the end of the year, and will live at 608 North Second Street.

Christian Alliance Head Dies

The Rev. Dr. Frederick H. Senft, '88, died last Wednesday at Tenafly, N. J., after a brief illness. He was president of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, a world-wide missionary organization.

N. Y. Alumni Dinner

All the undergraduates, alumni, and friends of the University are cordially invited to attend the annual dinner of the Bucknellians of Greater New York at the Town Hall Club, 123 West 43rd Street, New York City, on the evening of December 19 at 6:45 o'clock.

The University Board of Trustees will be special guests for the occasion. A brilliant program of humorous talks, music and other features is being planned.

President Lincoln Hulley of Stetson University, Dr. Hunt, and others will speak.

Tickets are $2.50. For full information and tickets, address W. W. Pangburn, 585 Upper Mountain Avc., Upper Montclair, N. J.

As school closes on December 18, it will be possible for a large number of undergraduates living in the vicinity of New York will be present.

Professor Nelson F. Davis, '95, and the Bucknell biological department are mentioned in the Williamsport Grit of December 6 in an article that tells the story recently related in the Have You Ever Heard column of the Bucknellian, of the Sober chestnut farm in Irish Valley, and Mr. C. K. Sober's revolutionary plan to grow both food and timber on our mountainsides.

Dr. Davis is quoted as saying that there is evidence that the chestnut blight, which wiped out Mr. Sober's entire experiment, is subsiding, and that newer growths of chestnuts will likely acquire immunity to the disease, when we may look for some one else to go on with the work started by Mr. Sober.

Professor Davis was of assistance in this interesting work because of his knowledge of insect and plant life.

The article in Grit is illustrated with several of Professor Davis' photographs, showing the Sober chestnut thresher, and so on.

The Rev. Mr. J. Elmer Saul, '98, and Mrs. Saul of Norristown, Pa., have recently announced the marriage of their daughter, Ruth Margaret, Music, '25, to William Patterson Moyer, Music, '23. The wedding ceremony was performed at the First Baptist Church of Norristown. Professor Paul G. Stolz and Lorenzo Scotti, '27, were the ushers. Miss Mary Graham, '25, and Scotti sang during the ceremony. Professor Stolz's son, Donald, was ring bearer and his daughter, Anna Louise, was flower gir. The church was beautifully decorated. After the wedding a hundred friends were entertained at a wedding dinner.

The Rev. Dr. Raymond M. West, '89, recently addressed the Sunbury Kiwanis Club. He spoke on "The League of Nations, an Instrument of International Interest and Good Will." In his talk, Dr. West declared that France and Russia were the real instigators of the World War, instead of Germany. He upheld his statement by saying that documents had recently been brought to light in Russia and Bulgaria which tended to prove his assertions. Russia was eager to control Constantinople, he said, and France wanted Alsace Lorraine.

Miss Marion Rebecca Campbell, instructor in voice at the Bucknell School of Music from which she was graduated in 1925 was married to Wilfred W. Wilcox, '25, at Knoxville, Pa., on Wednesday, November 25. Mr. Wilcox is vice-principal of the Knoxville High School and teaches biology there. He was a premedical student while here. He is a member of the Kappa Delta Rho fraternity.

Charles V. Iredell, '20, a graduate of the chemical engineering department, is now an engineer in the Radio Lamp Division of the Westinghouse Electric Co. plant, Newark, N. J. This position is the result of his research work on the purification of Tungsten, the metal of which the filament of radio lamps is made.

Benjamin K. Focht, editor of the Lewisburgh Saturday News, who got his early scholastic training at the Bucknell Academy, was mentioned in last Friday's Public Ledger by George Nox McCain, who holds an honorary M. A. degree from Bucknell. Mr. McCain says that Editor Focht was one of the first advocates in Pennsylvania of restricting immigration. When a very early measure, known as the Nickel bill was before the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, of which Mr. Focht was then a member, Mr. Focht was most direct and emphatic in favor of it.

"He drew an oral picture of the alien tramp mechanics, the southern Europe and German peripatetic musicians, and the Russian peddlers who used this country as a convenience but never became a part of it. These speeches seem to have been forerunners of anti-immigration speeches in the House at Washington years later, where Mr. Focht, then a congressman, voted repeatedly for restriction of immigration."

Dr. Robert B. McCay, '96, of Sunbury, was elected secretary and treasurer of the Northumberland County Public Health Association which recently held its annual session at Sunbury. Dr. Charles H. Miner, of the state health department, told that the milk sold in Northumberland county was below standard, and the death rate for infants, 15 in 100, was too high. He said that the county spends only two cents a year for each person in the county for health protection, an amount that is far too little.

The Rev. J. Earle Edwards, '10, formerly pastor of the Winthrop Street Baptist Church of Taunton, Mass., was recently installed as the minister of the Queens Baptist Church, Queens Village, Long Island, New York. After taking his degree at Bucknell, the Rev. Mr. Edwards was graduated from the Crozer Theological Seminary.

DECEMBER

The last month in the year holds many promises for her children. The governing star is Saturn and the "luckies" are: color—black; day—Saturday; stone—onyx; number—thirty.

This month finds one type of wide awake people, nervously energetic, frank yet faithful, and progressive. Generally, they are quick tempered in spells, which are, fortunately, short. When not in one of these temperamental outbursts, they are kindhearted, generous and logical. They are resourceful, yet do not think ahead too far. Their plans are manly for the present, except in the gaining of wealth.

If you are truly a December child inclined to be home-loving and earnest in your endeavor to provide for the needs and desires of the group with which you are associated. Their loyalty is unquestioned and they are truthful to the point of sacrificing themselves for the sake of others they love. They are philanthropically inclined and will often give more than they can easily give when appealed to. They are slow in asking or in giving favors, but they do not hold spite even against those who hurt them in any way.

In religious attitudes, they will follow any religion with childish devotion. Their religion, however, does not interfere with their everyday living and they can be as religious as ever, even when involved in a questionable plan or project.

The professions gain greatly from this month's roll. They are thinkers along all lines of work and are useful in all professions. They have a wide variety of natural talents and can use them to advantage in all lines. They —enjoy travel and change, and are usually busy and sincere in their work. They love adventure in business, love, and life in general and are happiest when doing something new and difficult. They love power and desire to exercise it upon others around them. They are self-reliant and tireless workers to achieve their own ends. As a whole they are leaders, as they are active and, even in the face of hardships, will renew their strength and courage to enable them to "carry on" to the desired end. They are lucky people because they follow their luck with work.

These fellowships are established to do their part toward bringing about international friendship and good will by creating a tradition of cooperation and reciprocity between the United States and Germany through an interchange of students to study the institutions and psychology of the two countries. They are open to both men and women, are tenable for one year, and are offered in the following fields: political science, economics, agriculture, social economy, sociology, history, literature, psychology, theology, education, international law, commerce, and journalism.

Requirements for eligibility are the following: (a) American citizenship; (b) A working knowledge of German; (c) Ability to carry on work at a German university, which implies at least two years in an American college or university; (d) Ability to pursue independent study and research; (e) A health certificate; (f) Good moral character and adaptability.

Application blanks, properly filled out and accompanied by all required credentials, must be in the hands of the Committee on Selection by February 15. The fellowships cover tuition, board and lodging during the academic term. Students will be expected to furnish an amount of money sufficient for traveling expenses to and from the German university and for use during periods of vacation.

American Fellows will be required to report at the universities to which they are assigned at the time of official opening and to reside in Germany at least ten months. They may express preferences for certain universities, but these preferences must be supported by adequate reasons for the choice, in order to merit consideration by the Committee. Assignments will be made by the Committee after consideration of the subjects of study chosen by the Fellows.

The Exchange reserves the right to withdraw a fellowship and terminate payments in case of conduct that, in the opinion of the Exchange or its representatives, is prejudicial to the interests of the Exchange.

For application blanks and further information, address:

The American German Student Exchange of the Institute of International Education 522 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

HILLTOP BRIEFS

Miss Eliza Martin, '00, entertained her library assistants at her home, Friday evening, November 27.

Mararet Krebs, '28, and Marjorie Jones, '28, spent Thanksgiving with Mrs. W. K. Frith, at Canton, Pa.

Frances Harris, '27, spent the Thanksgiving vacation at the home of Ruth Marion, '27, at Harrisburg, Pa.

R. B. Jones, '28, spent Thanksgiving vacation at his home in Minersville by "taking in" two movie shows per day.

"Al" Jones, '25, visited with his Kappa Sigma brothers a few minutes on Monday evening before starting on a hunting trip.

Paul Eggleston, '27, visited at the home of his aunt, Mrs. J. E. Prescott, of Passaic, N. J., during the Thanksgiving vacation.

"Doug" Mackenzie, '26, sang with the Blue Band at a formal dance held at the opening of the New Elks' Club in Sunbury on Wednesday, November 25.

Many students, including the football team, while returning to school Sunday, viewed the wreck of runaway cars which piled up near the Altoona station.

J. Lester George, '27, visited the State capitol at Harrisburg, while Governor Pinchot was in conference with the coal miner's committee with reference to the coal strike.

Mary Williams, '28, made a mad dash to the "Sem" for breakfast, one morning last week, but before reaching the door tripped on the steps and bruised her knee quite badly.

"Fat" Musser, '27, knows how it feels to be lost in New York City. During the glee club tour "Fat" went astray in the metropolis and found it hard to recover his bearings.

The men's glee club entertained returning Bucknell students and passengers with a concert on the 9:33 Reading "flier" which was only an hour late on Sunday evening, November 30.

The Pittsburgh-Easton Lehigh Valley-Pennsylvania Express was three hours late in bringing Bucknell students east on Sunday. This was due to the wreck at the Seventeenth St. bridge, Altoona, Pa.

The first fire-drill of this year was held at the Women's College a week ago Monday night. The girls were called by an alarm at ten o'clock, and marched out of the buildings as instructed by the fire-rules.

"Wink" Coulter, while working at the school foundry, got some molten iron in his eye and the Doctor gave up all hopes of saving the eye. Nevertheless "Wink" is now able to see with it as good as ever.

A unique way of spending a vacation was chosen by four men of the Sigma Chi house when W. F. Wagner, N. S. Binisiell, R. L. Davis, and E. S. Horsman renovated the first floor of the Sig. house with a liberal application of paint.

"Don" Brubaker, '29, reports a sad state of affairs in his home town of Juniata. The justice of the peace and all of the constables are either in jail or out on bail. It seems that even officers of the law cannot stay "straight" these days.

Some of the returning glee club men witnessed an automobile accident on a railroad crossing near Reading Saturday, November 28. The passenger train on which they were riding crashed into the car which had broken through the gates and stalled on the track. Two women escaped with slight injury, while the driver was severely injured.

Paul M. Humphreys, '28, has assumed a church charge at the little country village of Fisher's Ferry, just below Sunbury. Paul is putting his heart into the work, and making a ... ter too. Yet he admits that it ... a whole lot of ingenuity and tactfulness to set forth the Gospel to a group composed of all types of quaint country folk.

Carl Kivler, '26, is visiting his Kappa Sigma brothers for a few days.

Frances Saul, '29, was bridesmaid at her sister's wedding, Thanksgiving Day.

Oella Kisor, '29, spent the Thanksgiving vacation with Ruth and Esther Heritage, at Mullica Hill, N. J.

Harry Engel, '25, returned for a brief visit to Bucknell on Thanksgiving. Hank is teaching at Milroy, Pa.

Betty Davis, '28, spent the vacation in Pittsburgh, the place of her birth. She must have had a very profitable time, for she has returned with a beautiful new fur coat!

Fred Evans attended a meeting of the Inter-Fraternity Council that was held during the Thanksgiving vacation in the Inter-Fraternity building in New York City.

Ross Ormsby, '26, and Alfred C. Urffer, '28, spent the Thanksgiving vacation at the home of Alfred's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Urffer, at Perth Amboy, N. J.

"Bill" Millward, alias Daniel Boone, went deer hunting on Tuesday morning and returned home in time for school the same day. "Bill" was successful, as he shot a crow.

Assistant Professor H. A. Shaffer was one of the many Lewisburgers who enjoyed "Carmen," as presented by the Metropolitan Opera Company at Milton, Thanksgiving Eve.

"Bill" Blaisdell, remained in Dayton after the game last Saturday and visited with several friends. At the present time there are eleven students at Dayton University from Hawaii.

It took three stings by a wasp to get William Cougenour, '28, out of bed one night recently. "Bill" awaited the third sting patiently before arousing the house with his cries of pain.

Professor H. W. Robbins and Asst. Professor H. R. Warfel attended a convention of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Middle Atlantic States and Maryland, held at Columbia University.

Mary Lanning, '28, spent a happy Thanksgiving in Carbondale, Pa., visiting Lois Lee, '28, and her family. One evening they tried out a Carbondale theater and have come to the conclusion that the Orpheum is better.

"Gene" Carstater, '26, and Carl Hile, '26, addressed the junior-sophomore chapel and the Freshman chapel respectively on Tuesday concerning a poll to be taken on the World Court on December 10.

"Ken" Horsman, '27, and "Doug" Anderson, '27, hummed to Kingston and saw the Wyoming Sem—Bucknell Frosh combat on Thanksgiving. They dined in royal style at the "Sem" after the game.

Captain "Tony" Kostos, '26, was given a place on the second All-Pennsylvania team that was selected in the Thursday Philadelphia Inquirer. Myri Goodwin and Walter Diehl were given honorable mention in the same selection.

"Jerry" Cargill, '28, spent his Thanksgiving vacation hunting in Turkey Valley, near Lewistown, Pa. He shot three rabbits, one gray squirrel, and missed a wild turkey. He regrets deer hunting was not in season, because a big buck passed within a hundred yards of him.

George W. Walker, '27, of Oklahoma, accompanied by Gordon Goodyear, '27, of New York, was driven in a Ford car, bearing a New Jersey license, to Binghamton, Friday, November 27, by J. Charles Phillips, '28, who had a Pennsylvania driver's license. They avoided all policemen.

"Red" Weckerly, '27, arrived in Lewisburg 5:30 Monday morning, November 30, after spending most of the night at Warriors Mark trying to get some gasoline. Red was a Good Samaritan; the gas was for several Dickinson boys who were unfortunate enough to run out of petrol at such an isolated place.

While on the glee club tour, G. G. McCune, '27, was taken out for a heman, 7-course turkey dinner by Mr. Upjohn, of the Upjohn Medical Manufacturing Company, New Jersey, at his country club. This was but one of the four "Thanksgiving" dinners that "Mac" rated on his trip.

Gertrude Rentz, ex-'28, will return to school next semester.

Fegley Hopp, '27, spent his Thanksgiving vocation at Wyoming, Pa.

Willis Snow, '28, saw the Army-Navy game at the Polo Grounds in New York City.

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon basketball team held its first practice in Tustin Gymnasium a week ago Wednesday afternoon.

Charles Kimball, '29, explored Philadelphia during Thanksgiving vacation. He plans to do New York during Christmas recess.

Frank Bavitz, '27, spoiled his vacation by becoming ill with a severe cold. "Fritz" was unable to return to school before Tuesday morning.

James Hurley, '28, claims to have beaten the train to Elmira last Wednesday when he "bummed" home. "Jim" must have made pretty fast time over the slippery roads.

Frank J. Currie, '28, is finding an outlet for his extra energy. He is peeling potatoes at the "Sem." Frank says that this is a better way of using that extra energy than breaking doors.

"Joe" Kernan, '26, on his way to Portage a week ago Wednesday, had to purchase chains in order to keep from going backward. His "Chevie" did not seem anxious to go up the long hills.

Earl Fletcher and Ralph Walter took advantage of the opening of deer season and spent Wednesday afternoon a week ago seeking the fleet-footed animal in the mountains of Center County.

Harry E. McCormick, ex-'04, was presented a beautiful watch by the Athletic Council of Bucknell University in appreciation of the service he has rendered as graduate-manager of the University.

Were it not for the striking of the Hill clock the slowness of the clock in the Biology lecture room would prove a great asset in enabling students to arrive in time for their eight o'clock classes.

Poverty Day at the "Sem" this year will be a real event. The girls will eat a regulation Near East meal. The amount they save by eating less on Saturday, December 12, will be sent to the Near East Relief.

Anna VanDine, '26, returned to Lewisburg on December 2 after an absence of nearly three weeks, caused by an accident on her way back from the Navy game on November 14. She is all right again and glad to be back.

George Trimm, '28, has received a position in the Post Office of Great Neck, N. Y., for the Christmas holidays. "Timmie" had better save his cents, as the job requires him to be present in Great Neck on December 16.

Rolland Dutton, '26, hiked 32 miles in a blinding snowstorm from Port Allegheny to Bradford, New York, in seven and a half hours. That is fast walking, the average being 4.2 miles an hour. "Dut" reports no blisters, stiff joints, or sore muscles.

A. T. Eaton, '26, witnessed the Army-Navy football game at the Polo Grounds. After the game he was fortunate in meeting two of his fraternity brothers, who are located in the city, while passing through the crowded exit.

"Bucky" Harris, '29, played quarterback for an alumni team at Plymouth during the vacation. "Bucky's" size didn't seem to matter, for he directed the Plymouth team during the entire game, helping greatly in its victory over an alumni team from Nanticoke. The score was 25-0.

At the regular Women's Student Government meeting to choose a joint committee, one girl each from senior, junior, and sophomore classes was elected, Wednesday evening. Martha Morrow, '26, Florence Parmley, '27, and Catherine Cunningham, '28, were the girls chosen for this committee.

Miss Kathryn Clush was elected as faculty advisor in the Student Government meeting, last week.

Martha Thomas, '28, spent the Thanksgiving holidays visiting friends in Factoryville, her former home.

Florence Utt, '26, spent the week-end of the 20th, visiting Mrs. J. Lehr, ex-'26, ("Cas" Kleckner) at Mifflinburg.

"Eddie" Ramsdell, '27, had West College just about to himself during vacation and took advantage of the fact to set up some new marathon sleeping records.

"Kay" Groover, '28, was unfortunate enough to run out of gas while driving her Ford down town recently. She has some consolation in the fact that it happens to the best of them.

The cover design for the next number of the Belle Hop, which will be the Engineers' number, will be contributed by George J. Keller, who is head of the art department of the Bloomsburg State Normal School.

Registrar and Mrs. Hoter have proceeded another step in the field of matrimony by setting up housekeeping in their new home on South Fourth street. The other side of the house is occupied by W. N. Lowry, instructor in physics.

"Johnny" Howard, '27, spent the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day by playing football with a team of alumni from Emporium High School against the present high school team. A severe case of stiffness and sore muscles was "Johnny's" reward.

"Phil" Murray, '29, was able to spend parts of several days at his home during the Thanksgiving recess, even though he was with the glee club every day, as the club was giving concerts in the towns near his home on Staten Island.

OXFORD AMERICANS FEWER

University Fails to Attract as Many As in Former Years

Oxford University has only 168 American students this year, as compared with 263 last year and 266 in 1922. English educators have expressed disappointment over this steady decline in the American enrolment, since they had hoped that Anglo-American amity might be further developed through the presence of large numbers of Americans in English universities.

Oxford has failed completely to attract the type of American student who was common in the German universities before the war, partly because of the costliness of an Oxford education and partly because the university does not readily give nor highly honor the degree of Doctor of Philosophy so much prized by the American teaching profession.

Of the American students other than the Rhodes scholars few remain at Oxford for the full course of three years. Modern Oxford is frankly disappointing to many Americans, for it is changing rapidly from a small quaint town to a large and noisy one. The woods and fields that a century ago lay just beyond the college gates are now laid out in monotonous brick suburbs and great industrial plants.

BUCKNELL PLAYERS BRING SILVER CUP

'26, served very efficiently as stage manager.

It was generally conceded at the conference that Bucknell had the best all-around cast and the best balanced production, but that John Sperry, who played the lead in Gettysburg's play and carried the bulk of the action, won first place for them by the sheer brilliancy of his individual efforts. Cast as the author-director of a stock company in rehearsal, he dominated their play, "The Pot-Boiler," throughout, and contributed the most superb bit of acting in the entire competition.

It was the first annual conference and tournament of the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Dramatic Association, which is composed of eight colleges—Bucknell University, Drexel Institute, Franklin and Marshall College, Gettysburg College, Grove City College, Haverford College, Penn State College and Waynesburg College. The organization was founded last May in order to increase dramatic interest in schools and colleges, to furnish a clearing-house for ideas, and to provide for a friendly competition of one-act plays each year. The Penn State Players, who gave first impetus to the movement, served as hosts to the initial tournament and carried it through with marked success.

The Bucknell delegation left by car on Friday morning for State College. Rain and a very muddy detour delayed arrival until nearly noon so that they missed the preliminaries to the conference.

The afternoon was passed in watching rehearsals of other plays and, in the evening, the tournament itself got under way.

To Drexel Institute players fell the honor of opening the competition and they responded with a delightful production of "Suppressed Desires," which was given at Bucknell in 1923, as the seniors may remember. The small cast of three handled it so well that they were later awarded third place by the judges.

Haverford was scheduled to present "Wurzel-Flummery" as the second play but faculty friction prevented her appearance and Grove City generously advanced her play from Saturday to Friday, in order to fill the gap. She gave one of Pinero's compositions, "The Playgoers," which was well cast and directed, though being very English, it seemed slow beside its more rapid American rivals.

The Green Room Club of Franklin and Marshall College completed the first evening by presenting Sir James M. Barrie's "The Twelve-Pound Look," in which Ethel Barrymore toured vaudeville for a number of years. These players' performance was unique, in that being all men, they had to use men in two feminine roles—one of which was the lead. Both men handled their parts with such skill that neither the audience nor the judges knew until afterward of the masquerade.

On Saturday morning there was a discussion for student representatives led by Miss Katherine D. Hutta, of Drexel. Throughout the conference the directors gathered at lunch and dinner table together for discussions of dramatic problems and addresses by the judges—both eminent dramatic critics—Mr. Barrett H. Clark, editor of "Drama" and of several collections of plays, and Mr. Roland Holt, formerly vice-president of the Henry Holt Publishing Company, and noted for his work in dramatic criticism.

On Saturday afternoon, delegation and conference pictures were taken and the three other casts held rehearsals. A big banquet at the University Club preceded the evening performance and brought the entire tournament group together for the first time.

Waynesburg opened the second group of plays with "Followers"—a charming costume piece set in the 1850's, wherein hoop skirts and powdered wigs featured pleasingly.

Bucknell's production followed, receiving the most generous applause yet accorded, and then Gettysburg completed the evening with her highly-successful farce "The Pot-Boiler"—a play that satirizes play-writing.

While the judges were deliberating, the hard-working Grove City players repeated "The Playgoers," in order not to disappoint the audience which had been provided four plays on Saturday evening. Penn State, as host, did not enter a play.

Prizes were awarded immediately and, after general goodbyes and congratulations, the Bucknell delegation started on its long drive homeward, arriving about 2 A. M., tired and sleepy, but bearing the silver trophy that now reposes in the window of Baker's drug store.

Send your Bucknellian home.

Blanchard Talks To Bucknell Classes

This was also the theme of a discussion at the home of Professor Johnson in the afternoon.

In all of his discussions Mr. Blanchard presented a new angle to the students of the University. His observations in Europe and in the Orient were made relative to conditions that existed in those countries previous to the wars, and uprisings, and revolutions that have unstabilized their institutions rather than in comparison with our modern Western standards. Consequently his reports are much more favorable than many that have been spread through the country by speakers who attempt to reject the new systems in Europe because they do not measure up with the American practices.

Mr. Blanchard's treatment of the Russian situation was especially interesting for he brought out the facts concerning the nationalization of industry and the reorganization of political supremacy in that country in a most graphic manner. Eighty per cent. of Russian industry is under government ownership and control according to his statements, while only twenty per cent., in the smaller trades is under private capital and management. Mr. Blanchard said that the Russin peasants accept the dictatorship of the Communist party because they feel that if it were removed a worse condition would take its place. With regard to the rejection of religion that Russia is supposed to have experienced, he claims that the Russian is no less religious than the peasant of any other nation. The churches of the nation are all open and all full. They are protected by the government and are exempt from taxation. In a sense communism has supplanted Christianity as the religion of Russia and Lenine is the god of the new faith. The Russians moved against the church because its connection with the state symbolized the political control of the Czarist regime, but now that it is separated from that control the peasant is returning to his belief in God.

Baritone Soloist To Appear in Concert

Edwin Swain, oratorio and concert baritone, will appear in Lewisburg Monday evening, December 14, in the Baptist church under the auspices of the Lewisburg Artist Course.

Mr. Swain is the possessor of a beautiful, rich, colorful voice that has pleased his Lewisburg audiences when he has appeared here in the past. He has made several appearances in oratorios here during the past few years, his most recent appearance having been in Gounod's "The Redemption," given during Commencement Week last June.

This great baritone has appeared in all the leading cities in the country and his work is especially noted for his clear diction and his effectiveness in presentation.

STANDARDIZED COLLEGES CRITICIZED BY CANADIAN

"In the United States, education is being poured into a mould. There are standardized text books, standardized methods and, in the state of Tennessee at least, a standardization of God Almighty."

Thus spoke Professor Stephen Leacock, of McGill University, Montreal, famous author and humorist, when addressing recently an assembly of the student body of Queen's University.

He turned his guns on factory-made colleges, and made frequent references to conditions at American seats of learning. He said:

"There is a tendency nowadays to reduce everything to a standard or a pattern. The standardization of a motor car may be excellent. But the standardization of brains is dangerous.

"It does not do to have every school like every other school and every college like every other college. Even as it is, our students are running to a type."

CONSTANT EFFORT COST OF SUCCESS

ing the offer of the Chicago Bears to the action of Bucknell's own premier athlete, Christy Mathewson, in his decision to give up college for professional baseball. He said that the American people want to see the best in sport, and because they are determined to have that, they will go where the best is to be found. Mathewson carried into professional baseball a spirit that made that game as played by men trained especially for it, more interesting than the amateur contests. It may be possible that Grange, coming with the same kind of influence, may do the same service for the game of football.

Throughout his address the sprinter laid stress on the value of struggling toward a definite goal. He also called attention to the value of competition, the spirit that calls for just a little bit more than the best a man can do. Illustrating this point he told of an incident that happened when he and a friend were visiting Douglas Fairbanks at his studio. Fairbanks had a great deal of athletic equipment on his lot and among the articles was a set of steps. The aim was to jump as high as possible on the steps from a standing start at the bottom. Trying alone, each of the visitors was able to reach only the step next to the highest. Then Fairbanks appeared and they knew that he was able to clear the last one. Trying again, each succeeded in clearing the whole set.

For the aim and purpose of athletics, Paddock referred to the spirit that led to the revival of the Olympic games. Reading back in the records of the Greeks, a French nobleman in 1890 conceived of the plan of furthering world fellowship through worldwide competition in athletics. In the Greek records he found that rival and warring states had been drawn together through the periodic contests in which all Greek states were permitted to enter their own best athletes. The Frenchman saw a possibility of accomplishing the same result for the world by having a world-wide competition. This resulted in the holding of the first Olympic games in Paris in 1896. America sent six athletes to these games and founded the tradition of winning, that has been maintained ever since.

Paddock and Loren Murchison were sent around the world by the American Athletic Union in 1924-25 for that same purpose of furthering international friendship through athletic competition.

In his closing remarks the speaker told of the effect of overconfidence on the part of an athlete, and outlined the spirit of the new era of athletics and sportsmanship in which loyalty to the team and to the game and to country all have a part.

After the address Paddock invited questions concerning sport but few people ventured to ask. Those who did discovered that the great sprinter's stride measures eight feet six inches and that he has 23 official records, although he modestly remarked that only a few of them "amount to anything."

PROF. G. V. BROWN TALKS ON USE OF LIQUID AIR

Liquid air has been the topic for a number of lectures given by Professor Glenn V. Brown of the chemistry department in nearby high schools. His talks have been illustrated by novel experiments that showed the properties and uses of liquid air. For the liquid air used, (It is very expensive) the department is indebted to the kindness of William Jenkins, of the United Oxygen Co., of Milton.

Tuesday afternoon, December 1, Professor Brown gave his lecture to the upperclassmen of the Sunbury High School. Friday he talked to the Science Club of Dickinson College. A similar dissertation to the underclassmen of the Sunbury High School will be given shortly after the Christmas holidays.

Bucknell Affirmative Wins Debate 2 To 1

interest in Europe without active participation in the League."

In refutation the affirmative clearly established its superiority, meeting, point for point, the arguments brought by the negative, and challenging the negative to break down the wall of fact and reasoning that had previously been constructed.

Negative teams seemed to be at a disadvantage all around for the Franklin and Marshall negative lost to Lafayette and the Bucknell negative lost to Franklin and Marshall, all the contests resulting in the same score, 2-1.

Professor George B. Lawson presided at the debate in Bucknell Hall. The judges were the Rev. J. W. Long, president of Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport; Frank A. Boyer, principal of schools, Mifflinburg, and George I. Swank, superintendent of Northumberland County schools, Sunbury.

The victors in the debate were Bruce J. Miller, '27, James G. Williams, '29, and T. Burns Drum, '26, captain. W. G. Snow, '28, who acted as alternate, deserves great credit also for his work in the preparation of the rebuttal. The vanquished are W. E. Hayes, '26, R. C. Cunningham, '26, and W. F. Foulkes, '27.

The Bucknell negative team that journeyed to Franklin and Marshall was made up of Carl A. Hile, '26, R. Henry Coleman, '29, Dwight Bahr, '28, and F. G. Lybarger, '28.

BUCKNELL VOTES FOR WORLD COURT BY 709 TO 39

Harmony Plan Gets 331 Ballots; Harding-Hughes-Coolidge, 314; Six Want No Restrictions

POLL TAKEN TUESDAY AT EACH CHAPEL HALL

Three-Fourths of All Students Express Their Conviction On Peace Proposition

The Bucknellian Poll on the World Court took a rather unexpected turn when the count of the ballots revealed that the "Harmony Plan," proposing that the United States enter the court under the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge reservations, but that we withdraw unless a code of international law outlawing war be adopted within five years, had won a plurality of the votes. The Harding-Hughes-Coolidge plan received 314 votes; the "Harmony" plan, 331; the Borah terms, 45; and total opposition to the entrance 39. This ballot, along with six votes that desired entrance "with no restrictions," and thirteen who were willing to join the court if we also joined the League of Nations, shows that the Bucknell division on the proposition in general is 709, to 39 in favor of the court.

The poll was taken during the chapel period Thursday, ballots being distributed to the students as they entered the assembly hall. These ballots were collected at the close of the session but the poll remained open until twelve o'clock so that any seniors who desired to vote but did not attend assembly might have the opportunity. About a dozen votes were cast during this period.

The ballots were counted immediately after the assembly hour so that the report of the results might be sent to the office of the New Student, which is conducting a nation-wide poll on the subject, in time to be included in the totals being found by that paper. The counters of the ballots had to use some discrimination at times in order to determine what the true intent of the voter was. Several of the ballots had three or four different spaces marked. Eight of these were so marked that it was impossible to determine the intent and these ballots were disqualified. Only six of the students marked their ballots as disinterested, although there were a few who appeared to think that marking the ballot as disinterested would add weight to their opinions and marked the slips, both for one of the plans and as a disinterested person. The desire for self-expression overcame the willingness to answer a specific question on the part of thirteen of the voters. These said in various ways that the court was all right in itself but that we really should join the League of Nations and do something definite. The Bucknellian may run a poll on that question, too, if there appears to be sufficient interest.

The statistics of the World Court Poll are as follows:

1. Harding-Hughes-Coolidge	314
2. Harmony Plan	331
3. Borah Terms	45
Enter without restrictions	6
Join the League also	13
Total favorable	709
4. Opposed to joining	39
5. Disinterested	6
Votes Disqualified	8
Total vote	762
Number of Students	1105
Per cent. voting	75.9
Per cent. favorable	70.5
Per cent. unfavorable	3.9
Per cent. of vote favorable	93.0
Per cent. of vote unfavorable	5.0

Editorial Contest

The Bucknell Chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalism fraternity, is formulating plans for a prize editorial contest open to all students in the University not members of the organization.

Regulations governing the contest will be published in the next issue of the Bucknellian.

Cap and Dagger Gives Prize Play In Recital

Also Entertain With "The Girl" and "The Brink of Silence." Frill and Frown Assists

Cap and Dagger reenacted the play it used in taking second place at the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Dramatic tournament this year, along with two others, in a recital given in Bucknell Hall, Thursday evening, December 10. In giving the play, George Ade's "The Mayor and the Manicure," Cap and Dagger was assisted by Margaret Dakin and Edna Watson, members of Frill and Frown, the women's dramatic club.

Lacking facilities for really effective representation of any kind of dramatic production, the amateur players made the best of the material and conditions at hand and put on an evening of plays that entirely delighted the audience that filled the hall. A stage was built for the production of the plays but the use of any but the merest indications of background was impossible. But after the manner of the players of an earlier day, the members of the casts of the various plays, centered their abilities on the interpretation of the characters and drew the attention away from the difficulties that the stage presented.

Before the prize play was given, the dramatists entertained with Ed-

GLEE CLUB TO TOUR IN HOLIDAY RECESS

Will Visit 12 Towns in 3 States, Singing in 7 Cities Never ... Here by Club

The Christmas trip schedule for the Glee Club has recently been completed. The tour will include concerts in 12 towns, in three states over a time period of 14 days. Manager Ralph F. Hartz returned to college last Sunday after having made the final arrangements for the tour.

The singers will meet at Hollidaysburg, Pa., for the first concert, on Monday evening, December 28. The remainder of the schedule is as follows: December 29, Greensburg; December 30, New Kensington; December 31, Irwin; January 1, 1926, Monongahela; January 2 and 3, Dermont; January 4, Conneaut, Ohio; January 5, Buffalo, New York; January 6, Erie, Pa; January 7, Bradford; January 8, Reynoldsville; January 9, Johnsonburg. The return to Lewisburg will be made on January 10.

Seven of these concerts will be given in towns where the Glee Club has not been received for several years. Hollidaysburg, Dermont, Reynoldsville and Johnsonburg ze the only places visited last year that appear again on the schedule. Bradford was visited two years ago. All of the others are towns to which the Glee Club will carry the name of Bucknell in a new lit.

In almost all of the towns the concerts will be given under the auspices of one or another of the organizations of the Baptist Church. Only one of the concerts is being sponsored by a high school; one is being given by a Presbyterian Church and another by the Church of Christ.

At least one concert of sacred music will be given during the tour, at Dormont, in the church of which the Rev. Harry Person, father of H. H. Pierson, '28, is pastor.

During the tour through this section last year the club sang in the broadcasting stations KDKA and WCAE. The men hope to have that privilege again this year.

Seniors Have Special Rooms

Being a senior carries with it special privileges at the University of Rochester, where they have provided special rooms to which the members of that class may repair at any time between 9 A. M. and 4:30 P. M. Here the august body may have impromptu spreads when they feel the need of refreshments, and may find rest and quiet if they want to study.

Non-Fraternity Men Start Organization

Bucknell non-fraternity men, in a scheduled meeting held on Tuesday evening, December 15, elected officers as the initial step toward a permanent organization of the group. Its purpose is to promote representative athletic teams and to handle all matters of general concern to the non-fraternity men.

Eighteen men attended the first meeting. Prolonged discussion as to the advisability of forming an organization came first. The men finally came to a decision to do so, and agreed to extend personal appeals to all non-fraternity men at Bucknell to join the organization and support it.

Nomiations for officers were few. The vote gave Allen Billman, '26, the presidency. F. C. Wandover, '27, is vice-president; A. Eschenlauer, '29, secretary; and Henry C. Rupp, '28, treasurer.

Paul G. Schmidt, '25, was re-elected manager of the basketball team. The organization decided to enter a team in the Inter-fraternity Basketball League again this year. Choice of a captain was left to the members of the squad. Perhaps he will not be elected until after the beginning of the playing season.

Meetings are to be held every other Tuesday night at 7:15 in Main 1.

MUSSER AND BLAIR APPOINTED COACHES

Former to Supervise Basketball; Blair Will Coach Baseball. Both Old Varsity Men

Malcolm "Mal" Musser and Walter Blair, both residents of Lewisburg and former Bucknell athletic luminaries, who were recently named by the Bucknell Athletic Council as coaches of basketball and baseball to succeed "Moose" McCormick, have produced brilliant records in the past on the court and on the diamond. Each has ranked with the best in his chosen sport. Moreover both Musser and Blair have, at previous times, superintended the destinies of Orange and Blue teams, so the coaching jobs will not be foreign to their experience.

"Mal" Musser was varsity basketball center at Bucknell in the seasons of 1915-1916 and 1916-1917 and during his senior year, the season of 1917-18, he coached the Bison five. His rangy build, speed, and clever floor work, combined with an accurate shooting eye, produced one of the best cage performers in Bucknell basketball history. It was a rare occurrence if Musser ever went to the showers after a strenuous game without a least a brace of baskets in the scoring column opposite his name.

Musser's superb build and strength stood him in good stead when he entered upon his professional court career. In 1921 and 1922 he was tip-off man and coach of the Salem Old Oaks, a professional team of southern New Jersey. At the same time he was athletic director of both the Salem public schools and the Salem Y. M. C. A. and coach of the Salem high school cagers. During the past few years the new Bison mentor has played with a number of teams in this vicinity, among these being the Lewisburg Big Five, the Williamsport A. A. team and the N. C. railroad team of Jersey Shore, Pa. His basketball prowess has always caused much comment wherever he has performed, and he has been in great demand by professional fives. Coach Musser expects to produce a winning team at Bucknell. Fifteen men are working out daily under his supervision.

Walter Blair was a flychaser on the old Orange and Blue baseball team of 1904. He was a capable outfielder but his value as a player lay in his ability with the stick, and it was this which attracted the attention of the scouts of the "Millionaires," the championship team of Williamsport in the old Tri-State league. Blair was converted into a catcher while at Williamsport and at this post he later achieved his major league fame. The battery of Blair and "Rube" Manning is still famous in baseball annals.

In 1908 Blair with Manning graduated from the minors to the old New

BROWN AND WHYTE TALK TO BIG FOUR

Brown Demonstrates Properties of Liquid Oxygen; Learn to Talk—Says Whyte

Bucknell engineers were given a novel demonstration on Wednesday evening, when Professor Glenn V. Brown, head of the chemical engineering department, illustrated the power of liquid air at the meeting of the Big Four Engineering Society in the Engineering Building. Professor James P. Whyte also spoke to the society on the practical necessity for engineers to learn to express themselves.

Dr. Brown, as the first speaker, spoke of the properties and uses of liquid air before he began the demonstration.

Using a piece of ice as a stove, he froze a frankfurt, a flower, a rubber ball, a rubber tube, alcohol and ether, and made a mercury hammer in the liquid oxygen.

The frankfurt became white and was broken into pieces when pounded with a hammer. The liquid air had the same effect on the flower, the rubber ball, and the rubber tube. The alcohol was turned into a white amorphous solid and the ether into white crystals.

Low temperature phenomena and the use of liquid oxygen in the manufacture of explosives was next illustrated. A wad of cotton was saturated with the liquid oxygen, and it exploded when it was lit with a match.

The effect of corking up the liquid oxygen was shown by filling a copper container with the oxygen and closing it with a stopper. The stopper was always blown off no matter how hard it was forced into the container.

Following Dr Brown's lecture, Professor Whyte told the society that he had an important message to give to them. He said that the poorest men in ability to express themselves are the engineers, and yet they are the men who have to demonstrate what they know.

"This business of expression is a practical thing. It is just as practical as anything you study in your engineering courses," said Professor Whyte. "It is easier for an A. B. student to get by in school, because he does not have to demonstrate what he knows."

Referring to Dr. Brown's lecture, he mentioned that he had noticed how intensely interested they had been in the demonstration with liquid air. "But you," he said, "are more important than liquid air. Why not make the most of yourself?"

Upon the suggestion of Dr. Brown, a rising vote of thanks was given to William Jenkins, of the United Oxygen Co., of Milton, the man who supplies Dr. Brown with the liquid oxygen for his demonstrations.

Swain Delights In Excellent Recital

Offers Richly Varied Program That Exhibits Fine Voice and Masterful Technique

Local music lovers were accorded a rare treat last Monday evening, December 14, when Edwin Swain, baritone, sang to an audience that filled the Baptist church auditorium. Mr. Swain, assisted at the piano by Mr. Ralph Douglass, presented a pleasingly varied program of American, Italian, French, and German songs.

Mr. Swain sang with an easy grace and an expression of personality that added much to his well-sung numbers. From a thundering voice to a soft whisper; from a deep bass to a lofty falsetto; from laughter to sobs; all these were within the range of the singer.

After each group of songs, Mr. Swain received an encore. As an encore to the last group, Kiplings "On The Road To Mandalay" was offered. This number was sung with much feeling and was vigorously applauded.

The program of the evening is as follows:

First Group
Recitative —From The Rape of the Tempest (Cipio) Handel
Aria—Hear Me Ye Winds and Waves (Julius Caesar) Handel

COLLEGES CONSIDER FOOTBALL EMPHASIS

Pass Resolutions for Four-Game Schedule, Graduate Coaches, and Other Reform Moves

The following article released by the New Student, intercollegiate student magazine, marks a trend in the consideration of all college athletics in all parts of the country. For The Bucknellian's opinion on the matter see the editorial for this week. Page Four.

Football Overemphasis Hit

Concerted action was taken against the over-emphasis of college football by delegates from nine colleges at the Wesleyan Parley, Sunday, December 6. Led by Art Howe Yale '12, all American fullback, the conference almost unanimously agreed that football had expanded for the pleasure of the spectacle-loving public and sentimental "old grads," that players got no pleasure out of the game, that football over-emphasis has warped the purpose of the college. The following resolution was proposed:

"This parley was called for undergraduate consideration of how the purpose of the American college can best be furthered, granted that the purpose is primarily the training of the mind.

"Very subordinate to this purpose is athletics. All intercollegiate athletics was incidental to their origin and should have remained so in their growth. We believe in them; because they encourage friendship between colleges and foster unity within institutions. But one sport, football, has taken such a hold on undergraduates, alumni, and the public that its importance over the courses of the playing season looms larger than any other aspect of the college, especially over the primary aspect—intellectual thinking.

"We believe that this situation would be obviated largely by the colleges, scheduling only four games each season, each game with a team in its own class and in its own vicinity.

"The reasons which lead us to this conclusion are:

1. Schedules of only four games would render impossible the present annual elimination contests among the teams of the country and consequently would render impossible the choice of mythical national and even sectional champions. Many teams would remain undefeated instead of a few.
2. With this aspect removed, less publicity would be given the game by the press and the public imagination would not be whetted so that

WRITING OFFERS BIG OPPORTUNITY SAYS DR. GIBBONS

Can Learn More of Composition Through Newspaper Training Than in Any Other Way

OFFERS EQUAL CHANCE TO MEN AND WOMEN

Reward Is Large To Succesful But Writing Is Very Taxing To Both Brain and Body

"Three words, 'His Master's Voice,' made one man a millionaire and provided a comfortable income for another." So said Herbert Adams Gibbons, eminent author and journalist, and Princeton University professor, in an address, "Writing as a Profession," before the orientation class in Bucknell Hall, Monday afternoon, December 14.

"Writing is a profession which has very wide opportunities. It is the one profession that is open on equal terms to men and women. When I was editor of the Paris edition of the New York Herald, only one woman was on that staff; she was the society reporter. Next, a girl fashion critor was added to the paper, and more and more jobs were given to women until now we find women doing all kinds of reporting.

"When we consider that 400 newspapers in America furnish a livelihood for at least 25 people each, we can see that newspaper workers make up a sizeable part of our working class. There is always a constant demand by newspapers for new reporters."

Mr. Gibbons then stressed the value of newspaper training. "Newspaper work is a preparation for greater things. One can learn more about writing and the correct use of the English language in the practical work of a newspaper than in any other occupation. If one goes into law, theology, or medicine, many years of preparation are necessary. Why not," asked Dr. Gibbons, "get paid for this training and have a good time besides? If one likes the work he can go up in the journalistic game; if he tires of the grind, he can enter any other form of professional work with an invaluable training gained from his work as a reporter.

"Advertising is the most lucrative field for writers, because it requires the greatest skill. A single page in the Saturday Evening Post costs $10,000; the buyer of this space is mighty careful to select advertisements which will catch the public eye. As a result expert "ad" writers receive large remuneration for their efforts.

"Magazine writing is another part of the writer's paradise. Editors of magazines can never get the stuff they want. They scour the land for high class writings, and have to be content sometimes with what they call inferior compositions. A good writer receives from $500 to $1,000 for each article. He generally writes it first for the newspaper, then he reworks the material in magazines, and finally writes a book.

In conclusion, Mr. Gibbons warned the audience that writing is the hardest physical labor one can do. Energy and persistence are necessary to success in the writing profession. The rewards are very great, for the prospective writer has the field of books, magazines, scenarios, and play writing before him. "Whatever form you go into there is agony, but also a joy which repays all costs."

"Propaganda" was the subject on which Dr. Gibbons addressed the Sociological Society the next hour.

"Propaganda as accepted today," Dr. Gibbons said, "means the presentation of a thing as a fact which is merely your own belief, of life. What you want to get across to the person to whom you are presenting it. It is revealing, either intentionally or unintentionally, only one side of the case in order to advance your own interests. The use of this force has invaded every walk of life. The teacher, the preacher, the salesman, the statesman employs it in advocating something he wants to put across.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA

A town dance was held Friday night from eight to one. Professor and Mrs. Floyd G. Ballentine and Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. McCormick chaperoned the party. Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Harris were guests. Noble and his orchestra furnished rythm for the occasion. Phi Gam cake and ice cream were served as refreshments.

Brother Jack Davis of Williamsport was a week-end visitor.

"Don" Streeter, ex-'28, who was Glee Club cartoonist last year was a visitor last week-end. "Don" is studying at the Philadelphia School of Fine Arts.

The Phi Gamma Delta fraternity has appropriated $400 from its general fund to provide prizes for a writing contest to be known as the Calvin Coolidge Essay Competition. This contest has been named after President Coolidge because, when he was a Fiji at Amherst, he entered an essay in a competition and, unknown to his fellows, won the prize—a gold medal valued at $150. With characteristic modesty, he tucked the medal in his trunk and said nothing about his success. The first news his brother Fijis had concerning the matter was when they saw an announcement of his victory in the newspaper. So it is thought that it would be appropriate to name this new essay competition after him.

There will be two contests this year, open to all college seniors and juniors who are members of Phi Gamma Delta. The prizes for seniors will be respectively $150 and $100. The junior prizes are set at $100 and $50 each.

The essay subjects for the current year are as follows: seniors—"Should the United States Adhere to the World Court?"; juniors—"Is the Present Emphasis in American Colleges Upon Extra-curricular Activities Desirable?" Essays are to be between 3,000 and 6,000 words in length.

Much interest has been aroused in the Bucknell chapter of Phi Gamma Delta by this announcement, and it is expected that several members of the chapter will enter the competition.

DELTA SIGMA

The basketball schedule for out-of-town games is coming along nicely under the direction of "Joe" Williams, '28. Four games have been signed up, to date.

A very enjoyable Christmas dance was held at the house on Friday, December 11, the guests being our Seminary friends. The house was appropriately decorated with the conventional Christmas colors, and punch flowing from a lion's head into the punch bowl added a novelty to the occasion. The guests and chaperones were Professor and Mrs. M. L. Drum, Professor and Mrs. F. G. Davis, and Assistant Professor and Mrs. H. R. Warfel. A very snappy program of music was furnished by Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders.

Miss Frances Hartman and her mother, of Wyncote, Pa., who were visiting Victor Meyer, '29, over the week-end, were the guests of the fraternity at the dance and at dinner on Saturday.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

To be beaten on their own floor, amid a volley of organized and compact cheering, was the fate of the Renovo High School basketball team Saturday evening, December 12, when the Lambda Chi team came out on the long end of a 43-35 score.

McCleary and Colestock were the heavy scorers for the Lambda Chi's, "Mac" making six field goals and four fouls while Colestock was credited with five two pointers. Bratton, a guard, led Renovo's scoring with six goals and four fouls.

The Renovo team is composed of young players, but they have been playing together for two years, planning to make this year one of victory. They have already defeated St. Bonaventure Reserves and several high school teams.

The second town dance, held at the Lambda Chi house Saturday night, December 12, began at 8 o'clock, when the Blue Band broke loose with catchy and peppy strains. Twenty couples attended the dance. The chaperones were Dr. and Mrs. L. H. Breiseh and Mr. and Mrs. C. Willard Smith. The dance ended at midnight.

ALPHA CHI MU

Hilarity reigned supreme on the Saturday afternoon of December 12 when the fraternity held a "Vic" dance at the house. Refreshments were served to the twelve couples who attended. Mrs. Beatty and Miss Wilson chaperoned the affair.

Alpha Chi Mu announces with pleasure the pledging of Edward C. Folbey, '28.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

T. U. O. basketball team opened its season by trouncing Milroy High School 50-16 at Milroy last Saturday night.

The "fitchees" gave the actives a smoker the night of December 12. Everybody had a good time, even Angus and Hile, who had to walk home from Milton.

Theta Upsilon Omega has in its possession a copy of the late Dr. Russell H. Conwell's "Acres of Diamonds," containing the following inscription: "Russell H. Conwell, autographed at the age of 81 years, just after the 6142 delivery of this lecture, for Zeta Alpha Chapter, Bucknell University, February, 1924." Dr. Conwell was the fraternity's first honorary member.

KAPPA GAMMA

Kappa Gamma entertained 11 pledges at a smoker on December 11. The pledges were favored with a delightful monologue by Joseph Richiutti. The pledges were given suitable tokens as Christmas gifts. At the close of the evening, the pledges presented the house with a beautiful set of dinner chimes.

After only one hard practice, the Kappa Gamma fraternity basketball team journeyed to Ashland, where they met the fast St. Joseph's basketball team. Although leading at the end of the first half by the score of 19 to 14, they were "nosed out" in the second half by a close score. The team showed up well, and put up a good fight. They have been asked to play at Ashland again in the near future.

BETA KAPPA

Eta chapter of Beta Kappa is pleased to announce the pledging of J. D. McLure, of New Castle, Pa.

The Christmas dance of the chapter will be held this efening in the Lewisburg Club.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

The Phi Lambda Theta fraternity is pleased to announce the pledging of Lee Bennett, '27.

Dean Rivenburg and family dined at the house Sunday noon.

A "Merry Christmas" dance, to the rhythm of Noble's Orchestra, will take place at the house this Thursday evening.

The Phi Lambda Theta fraternity is pleased to announce the pledging of Lee Bennett, '27.

PI BETA PHI

Mrs. Stowell Stebbins, president of Beta Province of Pi Beta Phi, was the guest of the local chapter Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of last week. Mrs. Stebbins was entertained at a tea in the Women's College parlors, Tuesday afternoon.

PHI MU

"Sweets to the sweet" was evidently the idea of George Long, '24, who sent a five pound box of chocolates to the Phi Mu girls in honor of his two years of "engaged" life. Too bad for our "dietees,"—but the rest of us say "many thanks."

Phi Mu announces with pleasure the bidding and pledging of Mary C. Wagner, '29.

A tea in honor of the patronesses of Phi Mu was given on Wednesday afternoon, December 9, in the parlors of Women's College. Eleanor Berry, '24, alumni advisor, poured tea. Mrs. Wilcox and Mary Dwyer, '28, entertained with song and piano while Esther Heritage, one of the pledges, delightfully presented a Christmas sketch.

PI DELTA EPSILON

Three members were added to the roll of the Bucknell chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity, at a meeting held in the Phi Gamma Delta house, Thursday evening, December 10. Carl A. Hile, '26, Douglass W. Anderson, '27, and Thomas J. Hann, '26, were the men extended the honor. Following the initiation the fraternity engaged in a long business meeting considering plans for an editorial writing contest that will be conducted in the College after the opening of college in January.

PHI MU ALPHA, SINFONIA

Edwin Swain, baritone soloist, who appeared in the Artist Course concert Monday evening was initiated as an honorary member of the chapter immediately after the concert. The initiation ceremony was conducted in Bucknell Hall by the officers of the local chapter assisted by a representative of the Alpha Zeta chapter at Penn State. As the chapter here was installed only last June, Alpha Zeta extended the courtesy of lending Alpha Pi the ceremonial robes for the occasion.

After Brother Swain's initiation two new active members, Kenneth Gardner, '26, and Leo H. Weisenfluh, '26, were initiated.

A lunch was served to the members of the fraternity at Wagner's Cafe at one o'clock.

MU PHI EPSILON

Mu Phi Epsilon is pleased to announce that Mrs. George Sale has accepted an invitation to become one of its patronesses. The chapter announces the bidding of Esther Weeter, '28, Anna Leslie, '29, Mildred Headings, '29, Sara Miller, '29, Mary Hite, '29, Rebecca Rentschler, '28, and Marian Campbell Wilcox, '24.

PHI DELTA SIGMA

Phi Delta Sigma, honorary sophomore fraternity, held its initiation and banquet on Thursday evening, December 3, at the Round Top Inn, Muncy. Eighteen sophomores were taken through the mystic ceremonies of the fraternity after which the actives and the initiates feasted on a dinner fit for a king.

Toastmaster for the occasion was none other than popular "Slim" Bach who delighted the brothers with many weird ghost stories. The after-dinner toasts were clever and witty and given as follows:

"I'm Knee Deep In Daisies," J. C. Sheppard; "York, Pa., and Why," Fred Rudisill; "Oh, How I Love My Banjo," "Don" Beidleman; "Up From the Ditch, in 17 Attempts," B. E. Shimp; "Hold Me Up, I'm Falling Down," W. R. White; and "The Skull and Dagger Forever," A. G. Stoughton.

Alumni guests of the Skull and Dagger were "Al" Stoughton, '24, and "Doc" Gerhart, '21.

The initiates into Phi Delta Sigma are: K. C. Albig, P. V. Arow, H. E. Barber, R. L. Bower, J. G. Doyle, P. C. Eggleston, Fred Fox, Jr., B. P. Haines, R. R. Hitchens, N. A. Karmilowicz, F. J. McCormick, P. L. Martin, R. R. Ormsby, C. W. Pearson, Jr., M. Quinn, Fred Rudisill, L. M. Trimmer, and H. M. Wendle.

MU PHI EPSILON HOLDS SECOND PROGRAM MEETING

Mu Phi Epsilon gave a recital in Women's College Monday evening, December 7. The recital was fortunate in having so many excellent performers on the same evening. Mrs. Fowle's "Christmas Carols," and Mrs. Brubaker's reading from the "Bird's Christmas Carol" which were quite unusual, were enthusiastically enjoyed by the audience.

B. U. CHRISTIAN WORKERS UNITE FOR MUTUAL AID

A council consisting of two members from each of the religious organizations on the campus has recently been formed with the aid of C. M. Bond, professor of religious education, for the purpose of maintaining co-operation between these organizations.

The idea of this council is to focus the Christian activities of the campus into a common center, so that the efforts of all may be combined in some definite work. The organizations included are: the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Ministerial Association, the Student Volunteers, the Methodist Epworth League, the Baptist Christian Endeavor Society, and the Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Society. The members of this council are the president and another officer of each of the organizations represented.

The first meeting was held during the second week in November at the home of Professor Bond, when an election of officers was made. Ray Edwards was elected president, and Mary Agnes Dwyer, secretary. It is the plan of the council to hold monthly meetings at which each organization will give a report of its work and activities.

'Sem' Girls Eat Stew To Save For Orphans

The two hundred seventy-five students and teachers at the Women's College at a meal which consisted of meat stew, bread, cocoa, and apricots, as their part in the international observance of Golden Rule Sunday, as sponsored by the Near East Relief, December 13.

The difference in cost between this meal and the ordinary Sunday dinner was $90.44. At Miss Clark's suggestion the girls agreed to make voluntary contributions in order to raise the amount to $100.00, which is the sum necessary for the care of one child for a year in one of the Near East orphanages.

The cost of the Golden Rule dinner was $34.56, or $.15 per capita. The average Sunday dinner costs $125.00, or $.52 per capita. The saving, as explained by Mrs. Clara G. Sale, dietitian was $90.44, or $.37 per capita. Mrs. Sale expressed her gratification at the hearty co-operation which was shown. Chef Moone did everything in his power to help. The kitchen force ate a similar meal. The milk man donated 22 of the necessary 34 quarts of milk for the cocoa, and the butcher reduced the price of the meat ten cents a pound.

After the meal the students went to the living room, where Professor William G. Owens explained the situation in the Near East and told about some of the missionary work that is being done there. Mrs. Wilfred Wilcox sang, and Miss Charlotte Armstrong played several selections on the violin.

The tin cups in which the cocoa was served at dinner were made from empty condensed milk cans by children in the Near East orphanages, and are exactly like those used on the orphanage tables.

Christmas Rush Causes Lincoln University To Close

Because 60 students have been employed to assist in the Christmas rush at the post office in Philadelphia, Lincoln University was closed for the holiday, December 9.

The university, an institution for colored students, is situated near Oxford. The entire student body, 240 in number, will benefit by the industry of the sixty. Sessions will be resumed on January 4.

Punch Supplants Tea At Soph Girls' Dance

A peppy three-piece orchestra, "Red" Kesler at the piano, Rudisill moaning mean blues on the "sax," and "Ed" Hoffman, with his cornet, was the main feature of the sophomore girls' tea dance in the living room of the Women's College, from 2:30 to 5:30 Saturday afternoon, December 5. This music proved much more pleasing to the college boys than the "try-and-hear-me" voice of a "Vic."

Much to the delight of the men who seem ill at ease with a cup of tea and a dainty sandwich, the usual refreshment was replaced by punch and cookies.

Each sophomore girl extended a bid to one of her college friends, who presented himself at the entrance of no-man's land at exactly 2:30 on the eventful afternoon. He was then ushered into the living-room which was converted into a regular dance floor.

Miss Ruhl and Miss Brakeman chaperoned the dance.

Amherst President Says Sons Drink Less Than Their Fathers

George B. Olds, president of Amherst College, thinks college men of today are a soberer lot than their fathers were.

Sensational fiction does not picture true conditions, he believes, but he admits that, in one respect at least, the youth of today is lacking. That is in the "virtue of reverence."

"When I happened to lament drinking at Amherst on a certain occasion two years ago before an alumnus who graduated in a famous class in the 80s, he reminded me that eighteen of his classmates had failed to graduate because of a drunken party," Dr. Olds declared in an address in Boston, December 9.

"I am convinced there is less drunkenness in the American college now than there was fifty years ago. The advance in morality is also tremendous. On the intellectual side there is equal progress.

"In the long run the average of the younger generation is better than the old."

New Urges Early Christmas Mailing

If Postmaster General New has his way about it, Christmas Day this year is going to be the biggest and the best for all the employees of the postal service and especially for the ever-faithful letter carriers.

He has issued orders to postmasters throughout the country that their offices will be closed all day Christmas except for the dispatch of special delivery letters and parcels and special handling letters and parcels.

In order that the vast army of carriers and clerks may enjoy Christmas Day to the fullest extent with their families and friends, the cooperation of every man, woman, and child in the United States will be necessary.

Under the leadership of the postmaster general, a campaign is now under way throughout the country to instill into the minds of everybody the necessity for shopping and mailing early, in order that there will be as little congestion at the post offices as possible during Christmas week, and in order that both the sender and receiver of gifts and remembrances may reap the happiness that is contemplated by such an exchange of presents.

Once more the Post Office department urges the American public to do its Christmas shopping and mailing early. If the shopping is done now the buyer gets just what he or she wants and if the gift is mailed before December 15 it is sure to reach its destination in plenty of time before Christmas Day.

PENN STATE STUDENTS VOTE DOWN CHAPEL

By a vote of 1709 to 315 students at Pennsylvania State College expressed their disapproval of compulsory chapel. This was one of the largest votes ever polled at Penn State College.

With these returns as a basis, it is expected that the Student Council will petition the Board of Trustees for abolition of the institution.

The chapel referendum came at the termination of a two weeks' discussion of the question. The entire campaign was managed by the Penn State College.

FOOTBALL—OR EDUCATION—OR BOTH?

This matter of football charges of professionalism, charges of immorality among players, the effect that the season has on undergraduates, aside from the players, the relation of the game to other intercollegiate sports, and the matter of the publicity that it is supposed to carry to the college producing a winning team has proceeded to the point where it is of interest to every student in every college in the country. During the past few years there has been so much written, both for and against college athletics, that a person not acquainted with affairs at American universities might well think that football was the purpose of all higher education in this land where college degrees are more popular than they are anywhere else. The first questions that come to a man's mind on meeting a specimen of "homo sapiens collegiensis" (pardon the Latin) are, "Did you play football?" and "What kind of a team does the college have?"

This is another of those cases where glowing newspaper reports have created an impression that has been far from the correct one, but, even at that, the papers are not entirely to blame. The papers have to play up the kind of news that people demand in order to stay in business, and the people were demanding news about football teams. On the other hand, colleges, like our own were seeking publicity, anxious to get their names before the public, and turned to the athletic teams as the best avenue of approach. As more and more of the colleges began producing "wonder teams," the case with which it was possible to get publicity by this method became less and less, while the desirability of the publicity, when obtained, became more and more questionable. Still they kept in the mad, blind struggle for newspaper space.

The struggle was not purposeless, as we can hardly suppose that football has not been responsible for this change of spirit. After the French fashion we may say "C'est la Guerre" and put the whole matter over on the spirit of individualism that is said to have been the outcome of that terrible catacylsm. Perhaps the commercialized football situation itself may be laid to the same source. After all, we may be told that we are but the pawns of Fate and that the affair will take care of itself. In answer to that we shall say that we are human and as humans have the right of free moral agency. And because we are human we may be in error, and we like to discuss things that our fellow beings are discussing. Just at present we're discussing commercialized college football.

We want to make one more statement of a general nature. The commercialism of college football is now being demonstrated in a way that is more conclusive than any charge and counterchange of college authorities through the development of professional teams. The college man who enters the university for training usually goes out into the field for which he has trained. The man who have been going to college to play football, lacking a field to which to turn, have quite naturally, developed a field of their own. In so doing we believe they have denied the amateur status which they masqueraded under in college, but, at the same time, have taken a step that will purge the colleges of professionalism. Men who will be in demand by the colleges with professionalistic tendencies will be equally in demand by the professional teams and the teams will have more money to pay for their services. The result is obvious.

Now we want to take up some of the statements of the article released by The New Student and printed on the first page of this issue just as we would have considered them if we had been present at the meeting and representing Bucknell.

That football here has been largely fostered by "sentimental 'old grads'" is true beyond any doubt. Most of the stadium subscription came from men who could be classed as such, six of the fifteen members of the Athletic Council must be alumni according to the constitution of that body.

Two of the other members are students; three are faculty members. The total membership is fifteen so that is can readily be seen that the alumni and students are in the majority. And one of the student members of the council is the captain of the football team, a significant fact. That football on the present scale has been the demand of the portion of the alumni who express themselves vigorously is most readily shown by the fact that an alumnus offered to pay the coach's salary, if it were necessary, in order to get a man of his calliber to come here and develop a team. The alumni want a team that will win games, a team that will give them something to boast about when they are talking about their college. The American economic intelligence seems to be able to comprehend readily only the terms win or lose. Fight, grit, sportsmanship have degenerated into words used by the sports writers to fill space. They are the words used by the college editor when the team loses. But they are not a part of the common lexicon of sport.

That the players get no pleasure out of the sport, we would deny. Some there may be who are entirely commercial. They may be doing their work purely for wages as they would do in a steel mill or in the ditch. But the average youth enjoys conflict as a part of the natural process of life. Civilization takes it away from him and football and boxing and wrestling give it back. Some of our football men here have openly and firmly stated that they do enjoy the game and whatever else they may be, our football men are not liars, amateur or professional. Every profession known to man has had its misfits and we can hardly suppose that football is any exception.

Again we disagree when the statement is made that the "football overemphasis has warped the purpose of the college."

True it may be that the game of football stands foremost in the thinking and conversation of college men during a large portion of the time before, during, and immediately after the season, but the purpose of the college remains unchanged. We have had too long experience in being students to say that it alters the aim of instruction, or the serious aim of the students themselves.

Various professors at Bucknell deplored the slow start that students made at the beginning of the fall semester this year. Football came in for its share of the blame, but fraternity rushing and other extra-curricular activities were also subjected to surveillance. The overcrowded condition of the curriculum itself came into consideration here, too.

That something should be done to make the student's life more nearly normal there can be little doubt, but there is no use making football the scape-goat. It is no more responsible for lack of student interest in college work than any one of a half dozen other causes.

The final point at 95% contention is that our observation has shown that the more professional football becomes the less interest is shown by the students in the efforts of the team. The difficulty in reconciling these two contentions in the arraignment of football is evident. Here at Bucknell football has not "loomed larger than any other aspect of the college," such as "intellectual thinking." Grant that it has been more talked about; that constitutes no proof.

The weather is the most talked-of thing in human society. Our friends would probably say that that subject dominates the intellectual thought of the world. As a matter of fact intellectual thinking demands a basis for thought. Football furnishes such a basis for coaches and players and those who are considering the effect that the game is having on the colleges of the land. That should include college editors who undertake to criticize the game but our observation has found a pitifully small amount of intellectual aspect in many of the criticisms thus produced.

Particularly lacking in this element is the four-game season proposition made by the conference. The plan would rob the game of many of its desirable features and in no way detract from the operation of the undesirable ones. The choice of mythical or real championship teams is one of the good points of any amateur sport. The amateur spirit in any competitive field is to play the game well and to excell. Excellence should be recognized. Take away the recognition and you foster professionalism for the professional spirit is to win for the larger share of the purse and the method of winning does not count.

As for the second argument, the shortening of the schedule would not lessen either the student or the public interest. Boxing bouts are among the most infrequent and most widely advertised of sporting events. The students would merely be kept in suspense for a longer time trying to "dope out" the comparative strength of their team. Furthermore, the conference approved sport as agents that "foster unity within the college." What then is the purpose of discouraging the interest of students in the team? The other contentions for the plan need not be answered. They have paid attention neither to the psychology of the college crowd nor to the physiology of the football man.

The rules which the commission has proposed we approve without reservation. The athletic coach should be a regular member of the faculty, at the service of all students and not for the special guidance of a few supermen. Perhaps the rule should read that every professor should have the same salary as that given the coach but it is far more economical to state it in restrictive fashion. Keeping the coach from the bench is only another safeguard of the amateur spirit.

To sum the whole matter up briefly, American colleges are finding conventional education hampered by semi-educational, extra-curricular activities, an example of which is football. Football is being used as a basis for publicity by practically every college having eleven able-bodied male students and has drawn the public attention. It has become professional, and many of the colleges have had their fair names smirched by the reports of the means they have used in winning "important" games. Consequently football is the first of the activities to be attacked and the tendency is to blame everything from the lack of scholarship to the prohibitive price of collegiate garments on the game of football. The sins of the whole college generation have been attributed to the game and an attempt is being made to offer it in sacrifice to appease the gods of Intellect and Education.

Attempts are being made to prescribe rules governing competition. Steps are being taken to debar professionals. Some colleges are doing away with the game altogether, rather hopelessly.

What is needed in football, college athletics, student activities in general, including class assignments, papers, cuts, etc., is exactly the same thing that is needed in the life of the nation; fewer rules and more principles. We tinker around with laws to remedy this and rules to govern that and neglect the basic things in nature and in life.

Since football is the matter in consideration let us apply a bit of principle to the game. The college aims to give a liberal, cultural education or a course of training in education, or theology, or engineering, or what-not. For that purpose and that alone, students should enter the institution. Men are interested in outdoor sport and competitive, physical contacts with each other. Their zest for that

Survey of 1925 Grid Season Shows Need of Line Plunging

In a year of unexpected victories and undreamed of defeats, Bucknell, with many of her sister colleges, played through a season of indifferent success, a season which cannot be summed up in terms of victories or defeats. The usual football review strikes either a note of doleful pessimism, or of vibrant optimism, for it is rarely that a completed schedule cannot be characterized by a single theme. The only structure upon which the reviewer can base his estimate of the present season, paradoxical as it may seem, is the absence, and not the presence of a theme.

Team Lacked Consistent Bucker

The only factor which ran through the play of the team during the entire season was the inability of the eleven to gain a constant three yards by line rushing when within the twenty-yard line. Time and again higher scoring was averted, or potential victories thwarted by the lack of a consistent line plunger. Excluding the Gallaudet game in which the opposition was negligible, it is interesting to note that seven of Bucknell's, ten touchdowns were made by the forward pass, one by a wide end run, one by an off tackle play and one by the recovery of a fumble behind the goal line. This, of course, is in keeping with the modern tendency of the game, but the overhead attack had not been perfected by the Bisons to the point where a beef and brawn line bucker of the old variety would have been a wall flower or a bench warmer.

Seven victories and one tie in an eleven game schedule merits neither cheers nor moans in the ordinary football year, but the close observer of the record of the Bucknell eleven of the past year finds much which borders on the heights of success.

Georgetown Victory Stands Out

The defeat of Georgetown stands out as the high spot of the past season. Had it not been for the reverse by the Bison, the Hilltoppers would have enjoyed their first undefeated season. Victory over a team of this caliber alone is sufficient to stamp the Bison team of this season as equal to those which have fought for Bucknell in the past. Then too, the reverse for the drubbings received at the hands of Dickinson in the two previous seasons, and the scoreless tie with the Haskell Indians in that period before they had become worn by their 17,000 miles of travel, marked other high spots of the Bison season.

Equals Holy Cross; Outplays Navy

In ground gaining ability the Orange and Blue, though defeated by Holy Cross, ranked equal with the Crusaders. Holy Cross as a team, was more alert than the Bison, and deserved to win the contest. At the Navy, however, Bucknell outsmarted and outplayed the seamen during the entire game. The well deserved victory over the Navy would have given Bucknell a much higher comparative rating than she is now accorded. The reverse at Dayton in the last game of the season might well have been expected for Dayton with its League of Nations backfield had a strong team which had made an enviable record. Bucknell could hardly have been in prime condition for this contest following, as it did, only two days after the Deroit game, with the players recuperating slowly on trains and in hotels.

Two Record Kicks

Trimmer's fifty-yard placement kick and McCormick's fifty-yard drop-kick made in the George Washington game will in all probability stand as the two longest kicks of these varieties made during the past season upon any gridiron. Final statistics are not yet compiled upon this point. Spalding's official football guide when it is published, will contain the data.

Kostos and Shorts Graduate

Captain Kostos and "Gus" Shorts are the only Bison to be lost by graduation. "Tony" for the past two season has alternated at tackle and guard while "Gus" has been the most consistent and dependable player on the team. His post is at the other tackle position. "Gus" has played for four seasons. To fill these vacancies several candidates from the freshman end J. V. teams will battle next year.

Defeats Western Maryland 17-0

Opening the season with the Western Maryland team, the varsity turned in a 17 to 0 victory, the scoring being accomplished in the second half. Individual brilliance of backfield members won the contest. The line seemed weak, especially when in mid-field. Most of the Maryland runners broke through to the secondary defense.

St. Bonaventure 0; Bison 13

In the game with St. Bonaventure which Bucknell won 13 to 0, the play of the line appeared even more dubious, both offensively and defensively. Flight in the backfield in this, as in many other games, proved the defensive salvation of the team. Bucknell gained rather freely by the forward pass and occasionally by end runs.

G. W. U. Succumbs 21-0

George Washington, the next opponent, succumbed to the varied Bucknell attack, 21 to 0. The Bison team scored by every method known to football. Twice touchdowns were scored, once by an aerial, and once by a wide end run. One safety was made and Trimmer and McCormick contributed a placement and a drop-kick respectively, from the vicinity of the fifty-yard line. The line held well when George Washington invaded Bucknell territory, but still lacked defensive strength in mid-field.

Haskell Institute game scoreless

On Homecoming Day the Indians from the Haskell Institute, and the Bisons, knotted the score without a tally. The two teams were evenly matched, but with the exception of the last period, a slight advantage rested with Bucknell.

Get Georgetown, 3-2

Bucknell by this time had become acclimated to marine football. Georgetown, confident in her attack, suffered her only reverse of the season by the peculiar score of 3 to 2. Georgetown assumed the offensive, and Bucknell kicked on first down, during the major portion of the game. Alertness of Trimmer and Blaisdell in recovering loose balls aided Bucknell.

Holy Cross Wins 23-7

Up to this time the backfield had been the threat of the Bucknell team both offensively and defensively. The line appeared to be but mediocre. The game with Holy Cross in which the Bison suffered the first defeat, 23 to 7, changed this condition and the line assumed its proper position as the bulwark of defense. Holy Cross found it impossible to gain consistently through the Bucknell forwards. Forward passes deep in the secondary defense, gave the victory to the Crusaders.

Swamp Gallaudet, 56-0

Mere mention of the score [illegible] suffices as an account of the Gallaudet debacle.

Wind wins for Middies, 13-7

The 13 to 7 victory by Navy in the most exciting game of the season changed the complexion of the Bucknell season. By the air and by rushing, Bucknell outgained Navy two yards to one, but a freakish Chesapeake wind gave the sailors the victory. The play of the Bue left nothing to be desired, and the backfield functioned as a unit except for one mental lapse on the part of the left halfback when Navy scored her touchdown by a pass.

Dickinson Definitely Defeated, 7-0

Clearly outplayed, Dickinson fell in the path of the Bison 7 to 0. A beautiful pass of thirty yards from Diehl to Earl Goodwin and the kick by Trimmer proved the only scores of a well fought battle.

Daily with Detroit, score 7-0

Another 7 to 0 victory registered over Detroit on the first game of the mid-western invasion, easily proved Bucknell's superiority over the Titans. In the words of their press correspondent, "The play of the Bucknell line was a revelation to football followers in this section." After gaining the lead the Bison loafed the game out, striving to conserve energy for the final game with Dayton.

Dayton Does it, 19-0

Two games in three days proved too much for the Bucknell gridders and the Orange and Blue trailed Dayton by the count of 19 to 0. Train rides, a strenuous game, and lofel fare, had drained the vitality of the team, and Dayton scored frequently. The game furnished a drab ending for an uncertain season.

Three wayward freshmen were summoned before the council on Monday evening for breaking various rules, and punishment was dealt out to all of them to the tunes of the whistling wood.

Fehlman was charged with not wearing a "dink," not speaking, no matches, and cutting campus. Dawes was found to be without matches, and Yen called on did not know the Alma Mater. The other victim, Leroy Hann, failed to have matches, and was also found guilty of raising unnecessary disturbances in the halls. The latter is considered a serious offence, and the council dealt with it accordingly.

Bucknell University Athletic Council

Mr. Harry E. McCormick,
Graduate Manager of Athletics
Bucknell University,
Lewisburg, Pennsylvania.

Dear Mr. McCormick:

The Athletic Council of Bucknell University regretfully accepts your resignation as graduate manager of athletics, and at the same time desires to record its hearty appreciation for your unselfish and loyal services.

Your broad and accurate knowledge in the field of athletics has enabled you to render to your Alma Mater a lasting service. In trying and difficult situations you have consistently shown good judgement and a fair and open-minded attitude.

You have been painstaking and successful in the coaching of baseball and basketball. Our teams under your direction have shown good sportsmanship, an intelligent knowledge of the game, and a vigorous and keen performance in playing the game.

The Athletic Council has always found you ready to work for the best interests of Bucknell in all of her inter-collegiate athletic contests. As manager and coach we shall miss you a lot; as a man and a co-worker we shall miss you more. Your genial and frank disposition has made it easy and pleasant for us to work with you, and to live with you in friendly fellowship.

In accepting your resignation, we have a real satisfaction in knowing that you resigned to assume a position that carries with it both honor and recognition of your ability. When a man's country wants him to co-operate in the making of her army's leaders, his Alma Mater can only wish him Godspeed and congratulate both herself in being able to produce a man worthy to be chosen, and West Point in obtaining the services of a good sportsman, a good coach, and a good man.

Sincerely,
ATHLETIC COUNCIL OF

Musser and Blair Appointed Coaches

York Highlanders and with this major league team he remained, off and on, for five years. The Pittsburgh Sun said this of the work of Blair in one of the early games of the 1908 season:

"Blair was the bright star in Wednesday's game at the American League ball park. This young catcher, whose ability has heretofore been hidden, proved himself to be one of the best throwing catchers in the American League. During the afternoon six of the fleet Clevelanders, after reaching first base, attempted to steal second, and the entire half dozen were caught, all of them "standing up." It was a remarkable exhibition of accurate throwing, and inning after inning the new catcher was cheered as he walked to the players' bench."

Blair also played with the Newark team, with Rochester, Buffalo, and with Jersey City. In 1910 he coached the Bucknell diamond squad, with great success. Bucknell that year played, among others, Yale, Navy, Army, Cornell, Vermont, Georgetown, Penn State, and Washington and Jefferson. The spring of 1917 found Blair as coach of the University of Pittsburgh nine. At the time of his selection as Pitt diamond mentor he was manager and part owner of the Harrisburg club of the New York State League. Under Blair's direction baseball was given an impetus never before received at the Pittsburgh University. He served only one year in this capacity, and at the entrance of America into the World War, he joined the Army.

"Mal" Musser has signed no contract with the Bucknell officials but he is under an oral agreement to coach the Bison team for the present season, his position being subject to renewal or chance next season. The terms under which Blair will take charge of Bucknell baseball are, at the present time, not made public.

LEGION TO RAISE $500,000 FOR VETERANS AND ORPHANS

Will Hand Over Principal to U. S. When Need of Relief Ends

To care for soldiers incapacitated in the recent war, and educate the orphans of deceased veterans, the American Legion is raising a fund of $5,000,000. This money is to be kept as a trust fund, only the interest being expended each year. If the fund can be made to earn five per cent, the Legion will have a quarter of a million dollars to expend each year for these purposes. When the last incapacitated soldier has passed on, and the last orphan been cared for, the principal will still be intact, and will be handed over to the United States government, to be used for any purpose designated by the President.

The quota for Pennsylvania is $750,000. Many American legion posts have already raised their quotas. The local Kratzer-Dull Post is planning to raise its own quota on January 6 and 7. The sum needed is $1250. Of this amount the local legion has raised $400 among its own members before making any appeal to the general public.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS MEET TO FORM DEBATING LEAGUE

On Saturday, December 12 representatives from ten high schools met at Bucknell to form a debating league. Lee Franklin Lybarger, Esq., of Mifflinburg, has given to the Bucknell Debating Board a silver cup and promises to do so annually, so that Bucknell in turn may present it to that high school in this section which shall show the greatest debating ability.

Williamsport, Lock Haven, Montgomery, Milton, Lewisburg, Mifflinburg, Sunbury, Bloomsburg, Northumberland, and Shamokin were represented at the meeting. They were welcomed by Dean Rivenburg. T. B. Drum, manager of debating at Bucknell, then presided and the meeting was turned into a discussion group for the purpose of forming a League.

The interest was so great that when it was seen that it would be impossible for all the work to be accomplished the delegates moved that the meeting be adjourned until the following Saturday.

I'm a poet and don't know it;
My feet, they show it,
They're—Longfellows.

MECHANICALS MEET IN NEW YORK CITY

The Bucknell mechanical engineers were well represented at the annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers held in New York City recently. Lafayette, having 16 delegates, was first; Bucknell, with 14 delegates, was second; surpassing in representation such institutions as Penn State and the University of Pennsylvania.

Twelve senior mechanical engineers together with Professor Frank Burpee, head of the department and Mr. George Kunkel, instructor, journeyed to Trenton, N. J., by automobile on Sunday, November 29.

The delegation assembled at 9 A. M. Monday morning at the Pennsylvania station at Trenton, and proceeded to the De Laval Steam Turbine Works. In the afternoon they inspected the rope mill and insulating works of the Roebling Plant in Trenton, and at about 4:30 they started for New York City by automobile.

On Tuesday morning the delegation was shown through the Babcock and Wilcox plant after which they were entertained at luncheon by the same company. In the evening they attended the annual reception at the Engineering Building, 29 West 39th Street, at which time the new national president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers was inaugurated. After meeting the new president and acquainting themselves with the delegates present, most of the members of the party sought some form of amusement.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Bucknell delegation fell in line with the visits arranged by the general society, visiting such places as the Hell Gate Power Plant and the Grand Central Palace, Park Avenue and 44th street.

Since each Bucknell mechanical engineer is, at present, designing a steam turbine and a steam power plant, the information they received on this trip will be very valuable to them.

The trip was made in two cars and an old dilapidated Ford owned by Gordon Throne, one of the senior mechanical engineers.

However, Throne made the trip without any difficulty and was more fortunate than Professor Burpee, who had 9 punctures between Lancaster and Harrisburg on his return trip.

GIRLS GLEE CLUB TO GIVE CANTATA

The Girl's Glee Club will afford Bucknell students a musical treat, Wednesday evening, December 16, in the form of a Christmas cantata, "On to Bethlehem." The chorus has been carefully trained by Miss Grace Jenkins, and the solo parts are to be sung by two of the most popular Bucknell musicians—Hannah Metcalf, '26, and Mary Graham, '27. The cantata will be given in the Baptist auditorium.

The cantata, Norman Lighthill's "On to Bethlehem," has required several week's preparation. The chorus, composed of the glee club except the two soloists, sings three parts; the soprano, Mary Graham, and the alto, Hannah Metcalf, each sing three recitatives. They also sing two duets, one accompanied by the chorus.

The cantata will begin at 8:15 P. M. A silver offering will be taken.

METHODIST PAGEANT TELLS STORY OF THE NATIVITY

Boys and girls presented the old but beautiful story of Christ's nativity in the form of a pageant to a very large audience, at the Beaver Memorial church, Sunday evening. The players were dressed to represent the Biblical characters involved in the story.

After a song by the congregation and a few words by the pastor, the church was darkened except for the light thrown upon the actors.

The first scene was that of Zachariah worshiping in a candle-lighted church. Then came the scene of the Virgin Mary's visit by the angel, the shepherd scene, and the scene of the Magi at the manger.

The collection, taken up by six members of the Queen Esther's Circle, will be used by the society in their home missionary work.

Demand of students at the college of the City of New York for abolition of compulsory military training has been rejected by the faculty.

The vote was 54 to 16, with 39 faculty members not voting.

The students have not as yet given up their attack, however. The depth of their antagonism to compulsory military training is shown by the refusal of "The Campus," student newspaper, to print the news of faculty's action.

MEN AT PENNSYLVANIA INTERESTED IN OPERA

There has been in increasing interest in the opera, the symphony orchestra and in concerts, according to Geo. E. Nitzsche, recorder of the University of Pennsylvania, who, during the year, makes it possible for Penn students to obtain tickets for these affairs at reduced prices.

Applications for more than 13,000 tickets for the opera, the Philadelphia Orchestra and numerous other cultural entertainments have been made for through Mr. Nitzsche's office and in addition hundreds of other students have obtained their tickets directly at the box offices.

"Don't think for a minute that musical shows are all that a student thinks of," Mr. Nitzsche said yesterday. "I have proof right here that the University of Pennsylvania students have been showing a keen interest in the many operas and musicales that are given in Philadelphia."

Ministerials Hear Babcock Warning: "Watch Your Step"

The outstanding rules which should govern the private life of a minister were discussed by the Rev. H. F. Babcock before a dozen ministerials at the monthly meeting of the Ministerial Society Wednesday, December 9, in the Y. M. C. A. office in West College.

Mr. Babcock emphasized first the importance of the necessity of being careful in the handling of the church's money, such as offerings and special collections. He next warned the men to be careful in their conduct with women, and avoid gossip, as nothing is more harmful to a man's ministry than to have gossip, whether well-founded or not, circulating concerning his actions.

In speaking of the necessities for a serviceable ministry Mr. Babcock emphasized the need of a pastor's budgeting his time. He suggested that mornings be given over to study and the preparation of sermons, while afternoons be devoted to pastoral duties, such as calling. Lastly he pointed out the necessity of physical fitness for a minister who intends to do good work.

President W. M. Dakin presided at the meeting. After this impressive talk by Mr. Babcock, the future plans and policies of the Ministerial Association were discussed, after which the meeting was adjourned.

PENN STATE WELCOMES PACIFIC FLIERS, ALUMNI

More than 2000 students and faculty of the Pennsylvania State College welcomed the two Penn State graduates who figured in the attempted flight last September of the naval plane PN-9 No. 1 from San Francisco to Hawaii, when they appeared at their alma mater December 12. They were Lieutenant Byron J. Connell, Class of 1918, who piloted the machine for more than twenty hours, and H. S. Cocklin, class of 1914, who designed the PN-9 type of plane and who supervised their assembly at San Diego prior to the Pacific hop.

Students of all schools turned out to pay tribute to the famous graduates of the college, and the story of nerve and privation they heard from Lieutenant Connell brought appreciative cheers from the undergraduates.

Cocklin designed the PN-9 planes while attached to the Naval Aircraft Factory at the League Island Navy Yard at Philadelphia. He was assisted in the assembly of the planes by Harry Wetzel, who was a classmate at Penn State and who supervised the building of the 'round the world flight airplanes.

THIRD OF STUDENTS ATTEND CHURCHES

Sociology Class Makes Survey In Every Church In Town. Watches 1000 Students

Some interesting figures concerning the church attendance of Bucknell students have been compiled by the seminar group studying sociology under the direction of Professor C. R. Johnson. This class sought to determine the percentage of students that attends church services while in college, and, in order to do so, made an observation on an ordinary Sunday, November 22. The only student organizations absent from the college at that time were the glee club and the football team. Assuming that these groups are of normal type with their fellow-students the figures thus obtained can be considered very approximately correct. The survey showed that 33 1-3 per cent attended at least one service that day.

Observations were made at all of the church services. The following list of facts shows the result:

"BIG 4" CABINET HEARS REPORT ON FRATERNITIES

Decides No Auditor Is Needed For Engineering Society's Books

Clair W. Halligan, instructor in electrical engineering, gave a detailed report of his investigations into the field of national engineering fraternities, at the meeting of the cabinet of the Big Four Engineering Society on Wednesday evening, December 9, immediately following the meeting of the Big Four Society.

The fraternities Mr. Halligan had investigated were, Sigma Xi, Sigma Tau, and Tau Beta Pi.

After the report on fraternities, the suggestion that Professor Martin L. Drum should be the auditor of the society was discussed. It was decided, however, that Professor Drum's services would not be needed because of the small amount of money handled by the society.

The next meeting of the cabinet will be on the evening of January 12, after the meeting of the Big Four Society.

McCormick Leads In Individual Scoring

Makes 29 Points During Season McCleary Runner-Up With 24

An analysis of the individual scoring record of the Bisons made during the past football season reveals some peculiar facts, due probably to the Gallaudet game in which nearly half the points of the Bucknell total were scored. Much of the scoring in this lop-sided contest was done by the second string men who played nearly half the game. Few points were registered in the other games of the season, and those which were accumulated were scattered sporadically thru the backfield and line so that the absence of a scoring luminary is noticable.

McCormick leads with 29

McCormick, who made but a single touchdown, leads the Bison team for high point honors with a total of twenty-nine. Erroneous newspaper reports have credited him with a higher total. Official statistics show that he drop-kicked five field goals and eight points after touchdown. Of his total, twenty points were chalked up in the Gallaudet game.

McCleary is runner-up with 24

McCleary with twenty-four points, was runner-up to McCormick. His was the honor of making the greatest number of touchdowns of the season. Of the four counters which he carried into the touchdown area, three were made in the Gallaudet game.

M. Goodwin took third place in the scoring column with three touchdowns, and Tuck, fourth with two major counters. Trimmer booted his way to fifth place by two placements from the field and five after touchdowns had been scored. Blaisdell, Diehl, Stephens, S. Goodwin, E. Goodwin, Hulick, and Gaskill follow with a single touchdown to the credit of each. The latter two of this last group tallied in the game with the Gallaudet gridders.

CALIFORNIA HAS "BIG GAME" PARADE FOLLOWING BON-FIRE

Just before their "big game" each year, students at California University build a huge bon-fire and parade about town clad in pajamas. This peculiar diversion was developed by young bucks who sought a scheme to exclude women from the rallies. The women were requested not to attend but every device short of physical force failed to keep them away. Finally someone hit on the idea of robing the men in pajamas. Women arriving at the festivities shrieked in horror and fled. The men continued the rally undisturbed. Thus the "pajamatino" developed. In recent years, however, even this plan has become ineffective. The co-eds now don their own purple and green nighties and take an equal part in the celebrations.

HOLY CROSS PUTS A BISON ON ALL-OPPONENT TEAMS

An all-opponent team picked by a sport writer for the Holy Cross College Tomahawk gives the quarterback position to Bill Blaisdell and places Kostos, Magee and Diehl on the second string. Of the twenty-two men mentioned for the two teams selected, Fordham has six, Harvard, Boston College, and Bucknell four each, and St. John's, Rutgers, Providence, and Boston University one each.

Commenting on the selection the Tomahawk says "The signal barker's berth goes undisputed to Blaisdell, the most versatile quarterback the Crusaders have encountered. A brainy, speedy, ball carrying director, he wins the position hands down, by reason of his coolness under fire."

UMBRELLAS NOT NEEDED

The young man was just home from college and wishing to show his little sister what a lot he knew, pointed to a star and said: "Do you see that bright little dot? It's bigger than the whole world."

"No, it isn't," she declared.

"Yes it is," declared the youth, who beamed with pride at his knowledge.

"Then why doesn't it keep the rain off?" was the triumphant rejoinder.

Decker Tells Montgomery Lions of Constitutional Government

Oliver J. Decker, Esq., '99, of Williamsport, spoke to the Montgomery Lions Club on December 10 on "Constitutional Government—Its Beginnings and Growth."

Mr. Decker traced the growth of government to the days when God gave Moses the first great set of rules for human conduct, embodied in the Ten Commandments, graven on the tablets of stone. Then he told of the beginnings of constitutional government among the Anglo-Saxons.

The Constitution of the United States Mr. Decker characterized as the greatest instrument that had ever been stricken off at one time by the brain of man.

Present-day restlessness Mr. Decker said is a desire for change, which is not confined to the realm of government, but extend to the fields of art, literature, and music. The speaker set forth the philosophy that work will cure this restlessness. There must be rekindled in men's hearts the love of work for the work's sake.

Mr. Decker is a member of the Bucknell Board of Trustees, and is secretary of that body. He is one of the leading attorneys of Williamsport, and is a regular lecturer for the University of Pennsylvania Extension Courses in Williamsport.

The Rev. Dr. William T. Carson Hanna died December 6 at the home of his daughter and his son-in-law, the Rev. and Mrs. David A. Pitt, of Norwich, Conn. Dr. Hanna received an honorary D. D. from Bucknell in 1899. His daughter received her A. B. at Bucknell in 1897. Her husband was a member of the class of 1902, but did not graduate.

Dr. Hanna came of a distinguished ancestry. His grandfather was Dr. Thomas Hanna, a surgeon who served under Admiral Nelson at the battle of Trafalgar. On his mother's side, Dr. Hanna was descended from Dr. Alexander Carson, the leading Greek scholar and theologian of Ireland, who was a world authority on biblical matters in his day.

During 40 years as a pastor, Dr. Hanna served at least two churches in this state—at Bradford and at Muney.

Memorial services were held at the home of the Rev. Mr. Pitt, in Norwich, which were attended by a distinguished group of clergymen and laymen. A tribute to the life of the deceased was paid by his nephew, the Rev. T. Carson Hanna, '95, of Sunbury, who is the father of our fellow student, T. Carson Hanna Jr., class of 1927.

William T. Winsor, '15, of Upper Market Street, Milton, president of the Miltonian Printing Company, was recently elected commander of Wallace W. Fetzer Post No. 71, American Legion. Commander Winsor served with the Sixtieth Artillery, C. A. C., in France, and has the distinction of having been commissioned a second lieutenant upon the direct order of General Pershing, the only soldier of the Sixtieth Artillery so commissioned.

—Williamsport Sun.

Laurence A. Henderson, ex-'12, was recently chosen as worshipful master of the Muncy Lodge No. 290, F. and A. M. Thomas Wood, Esq., '05, was elected senior warden.

Alfred G. Stoughton, alumni secretary, was in New York last week-end attending the National League memorial service as the guest of John A. Heydler, president of the National League. Mr. Stoughton also conferred with Grantland Rice and Cullen Cain in regard to publicity for the Mathewson memorial gymnasium campaign, by which organized baseball intends to raise money to erect a new gymnasium at Bucknell.

BOBBIN IS FINED FOR 8-MILE GAIT

The final straw has been added to the list of insults suffered by Old Bobbin in the wake of the motor age. He has been fined for exceeding the speed limit of eight miles an hour.

While the flivvers breezed along at much above this speed and stately limousines "did" Main Street of Steven's Point, Wis., in even less time, Hugh Leonard, teamster, was halted by officers of the law, haled into court, and fined $10 and costs for reckless driving. His steeds were timed by a motor cop at eight miles plus.

URGES OPEN-MINDEDNESS

Penn Frosh Says World Expects Much From The College Man

Open-mindedness and a properly equilibrated scale of values are two of the great characteristics that the world has the right to expect of a university or college graduate, in the opinion of Franklin Pierce Combs, a freshman at the University of Pennsylvania.

"A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, as well as of any other university, is classified by the world as a 'college man,' and as such is expected to be an educated and a cultured gentleman," Combs declares in his essay. "Foremost among his characteristics must come openmindedness. In this day of specialization it is quite easy to become so absorbed in our own task that we become quite oblivious to the needs and problems of the people about us."

Combs stated that, above all things, he world expects the college man to be an example of a well-balanced existence. Even if they did profess otherwise, it was true that people did look up to the college man and that therefore he had in his conduct a most potent power for good or evil. A college man should also know the extent of his own powers and the measure to which he should depend upon others, together with having a surely balanced scale of values.

In conclusion, Combs pleaded for a leadership of the college man which would take society up out of the "association with the depressing basic and ugly side of life into an appreciation of the inspiring aspects of our daily living." Herein alone, he claims, rests true freedom and herein lies the college man's challenge since "of him to whom much has been given, much is expected."

Pennsylvania's New Gymnasium Will Seat 10,000

The University of Pennsylvania will have a new gymnasium, which will include a basketball court with a seating capacity of 10,000, according to an announcement made recently by the athletic news department of the university. The statement adds that the Council on Athletics of the university has approved plans for the gymnasium and that bids soon will be asked. Work will not be started before spring, under present plans, but it is hoped to have the new structure ready when college opens next fall.

The university has acquired all the property north of the stadium to Chancellor street, which is the first street south of Walnut, to Thirty-second street. Contractors now are tearing down the present structures, all of which will be leveled in time for the successful bidder to start work i nthe spring.

The basketball court will be in the form of an indoor stadium, which is unique at Pennsylvania, although such basketball courts now are plentiful throughout the Middle West, where basketball is the most popular winter sport. Michigan already boasts a mammoth gymnasium, one which is capable of seating more than 10,000. Rumps, such as are used in the stadia, form a feature of the arrangements. Spectators will enter the centre of the various sections of the stands and go either up or down to their seats, thus eliminating confusion.

Edison Says College Education Is Impracticable

Thomas A. Edison, in his seventy-ninth year, has taken to sleeping more and eating less. He sleeps as much as five to six hours a day, although for a period he cut this down to four hours. He therefore has only about eighteen hours a day for work. His diet, according to an interview published in Popular Science Monthly, brings the cost of living down very low.

Although his weight is 186 pounds without variation, the inventor eats at all meals the following combination: A piece of toast, one and one-half glasses of milk, a tablespoon of cooked oats and a sardine. He observes this menu for weeks at a time, and then will change it slightly.

"What is your present view of college education?" he was asked.

"Impracticable."

He was asked whether, in his judgment, man has progressed mentally in the last 5,000 years.

"Yes. The number of men in every nation, per capita, who are honest, humane, and slightly intelligent is increasing. The number is a measure of our civilization. The Lord appears to be in no hurry."

ward Peple's "The Girl," and Esther E. Galbraith's "The Brink of Silence." "The Girl" is a farce in which two suitors, the one rich, the other impoverished, engage in a point of honor involving the girl. The denouement comes unexpectedly with a surprise that brings laughter. Stewart Rankin, '26, took the part of Robert Connell, the poor suitor, Kenneth Slifer, '26, that of Frederick Cawley, his more munificent rival, while Dom Mare, '27, took the humorous character of Krebs, Cawley's valet.

The second play, "The Brink of Silence," carried the audience to the ice floes of the Antarctic Ocean, to a cabin where two men lived, apart from the world, in a silence that they felt to be terrible. Pressure of circumstances brought the one to tell the other of his identity as the leader of a supposedly lost South Polar expedition. The action of the play centers around this fact and the finding of two explorers, one of whom turns out to be the son of the lost leader. The man's self-sacrificing action in keeping his identity a secret is the finest point of the play and the end of the action leaves a catch in the throat. Frank E. Johnston Jr., '28, took the leading role in this play as Cole. Robert E. Diworth, '27, as Macready, was his companion. Roland N. Dutton, '26, took the part of Darten, the son of the leader, and R. Henry Coleman, '29, that of Johnson, Darten's companion.

In the feature play of the evening four delightful bits of character acting were presented. The play centers around a blackmailing plot involving a politican, his son who is just graduating from college, and the manicure who is a "college widow." The fiancee of the college boy lends a touch of humor to the play and helps greatly in the denouement. The politician, Mayor of Springfield and candidate for governor, the Hon. Otis Milford, was represented by Frank Johnston. Kenneth Slifer acted the part of Wallie, the mayor's son. Ruth Foster, Wallie's fiancee, was acted by Eleanor Dakin, '26, and the part of the manicure, Genevieve LeClair, by Edna Watson, '27.

Music was furnished in the interims by a special orchestra conducted by Professor I. E. Norris. The plays were produced under the coaching of Professor James P. Whyte and Assistant Professor Warfel. Frederick S. Davies, '26, was stage manager.

TROLLEY TO WAIT FOR B. U. STUDENTS

The Lewisburg trolley company will hold its car for Milton until 12:15 P. M. on Friday, so that it will not be necessary for any students who expect to use this car in going home, to cut classes. Students departing for Buffalo and Pittsburgh will be aided by this arrangement.

Registrar Holter has also arranged to have an agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad at his office from 9:30 to 10:30 A. M. Thursday, to sell tickets. There will not be time for students to purchase tickets at the Milton Station, if they leave Lewisburg on the 12:15 trolley.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has agreed to provide a special Pullman car for Bucknell students providing enough students wish Pullman accommodations to justify the arrangement. Advance reservation would assist the company in ascertaining whether or not the car shall be secured.

Tobacco Harms Mind And Body---Groner

Chemistry Professor at 'Pre-Med' Meeting Tells About Drugs in Smoking Materials

That the use of tobacco makes inroads on mental and physical efficiency was interestingly shown by Professor O. S. Groner at the meeting of the Pre-medical Society last Thursday afternoon, December 10.

The meeting was conducted by Ray Daggs, '26, president of the society, who introduced Professor Groner. A large number of students in the biology lecture room greeted the speaker with applause.

"The danger from smoking lies in the presence of two very dangerous drugs in cured tobacco, pyniline and nicotine," said Professor Groner. The whole talk centered about the effects of these drugs on the human system. The talk was appropriately supplemented by a number of charts and statistics, gathered from colleges and insurance companies, showing comparisons of physical and mental ability of smokers and non-smokers.

Colleges Consider Football Emphasis

the fever of interest would be forced up within undergraduate bodies.

3. The necessity for spring and early season training would be done away with, since the four games would be played on successive week-ends beginning late in October. Practice, as at present could start two or three weeks before the first game.

4. The crescendo of interest, at present extending over eight games, would be limited to four games; and so the large percentage of attention given football now would be lessened by the cutting down of the length of the season.

5. Colleges playing teams only in their own class and vicinity would minimize the commercial aspect of schedule making; and no small college teams would be called upon to sacrifice themselves in order to make money for their institutions as at present. This altruistic motive as given for these set-up games, the making of money to support other sports, is in no sense a defense for football. Appropriate taxes on undergraduates would serve instead, if such a step were necessary.

"We would also inaugurate the following rules within the colleges:

1. That graduating coaching systems be instituted, and that no coach be paid a salary beyond that of a professor; and

2. That coaches be not allowed to sit on the players' bench during the game, but that players alone direct their teams so that undergraduates would be playing undergraduates and not coaches playing coaches."

The resolution was endorsed by delegates from nine colleges—Dartmouth, Harvard, Tufts, Trinity, Bowdoin, Williams, Connecticut Agricultural College, Wesleyan, and Princeton. The delegates were editors of student papers and student government officials. While their action does not commit student bodies their influence on student opinion is great.

Discussion of intercollegiate football will not hesitate at this point. The Eastern Inter-collegiate Debate League, composed of nine colleges, will take up the subject. The Harvard Debating Union recently questioned the over-emphasis of football. By a vote of 215 to 209 it decided that the game was being over-emphasized.

"Following The Star" Is B. Y. P. S. Pageant

The annual Christmas pageant, always a great event in the life of the Baptist Young People's Society, was given Sunday night in the Baptist church by the young people and the choir.

The pageant entitled "Following the Star," was written and directed by Mary Harrar, '26.

It is a beautiful rendering of the old familiar Christmas story, with a touch of what was later to grow out of that event. The shepherds and the wise men bring their gifts to the newborn King, and, after they go to tell others the good tidings, all the nations of the world, led by Christianity and America, come to worship.

The music, which was excellent, contributed much to the whole effect of the scene, and the lighting effects, obtained with a many-colored spotlight, were beautiful.

The characters included the following:

Mary	Mildred Fox
Elderly Jew	Ray Edwards
His son	Lewis Davis
Angel Messenger	Mrs. Wilcox
Shepherds	Barton Pakin, Robert Dilworth, Clarence Cranford.
Wise Men	Theodore Lavers, George Bailey, Harold Gamble.
America	Caryl Button
Christianity	Grace Cooley

sort of thing leads them to the game of football, the one perfect game for young men.

All who are interested in the game should be given training in the game, not only the few who, by large bodies and well developed muscles, are best fitted to begin the game. They should aid in the training of the others. The coach's first aim should be to develop the men and the spirit of cooperation among the men. Then to select the men who best represent the ability of the college in the sport is his duty in order that the intercollegiate aspect shall not be lost. His responsibility does not end here. He should train that team to work as a unit, to play the game all of the time that the game is being played. The team that plays just hard enough to win, deserves to lose and sooner or later will lose. That kind of a team can never claim the honor of being sportsmen. It's an insult to a man to slap him in the face and then extend your hand, but an honor if you knock him down fairly and then help him to his feet.

The present athletic situation at Bucknell is far from ideal. Men have been brought here to play football with scholarships offered to them before it was even known how they would "stack up" in collegiate football. Some of them have had regular contracts calling for stipulated considerations, not in terms of money it is true, but for things having economic value. "Uncle" Charley Moran was brought here to turn out a team that would win as many games in a season as possible. We believe that he tried honestly and faithfully to do that very thing, but he regretted in his heart the methods that were necessary in that process. With the interest of the University in his heart he has attempted to further that interest in the way that an alumni-controlled Athletic Council deemed best, although he may have doubted the wisdom of that council. Members of the team, brought here to play football, have striven equally hard to do what they came here for, to win games.

Both the men and the coach have been handicapped by the lack of spirit, a lack that is caused by the very fact that the true spirit of the American college man has not changed. That spirit is one of loyalty. He is loyal to his fellow students who have interests that are the same as his own. He is loyal to his college. But the football team does not represent the college. It represents the dreams of some of the alumni, men who love Bucknell, almost blindly.

We have no condemnation for the past. In all its actions we have silently acquiesced. The guilt, if it may be called such rests equally upon us with those who made the arrangements that harmed Bucknell's fair name.

But for the future we have a suggestion. Bucknell needs to be open and fair more than she needs the cheap publicity of any paper or system of papers in the country. What we want at Bucknell is a team that plays the game for the college and represents the college. If the men we have now will do that, so much the better. If "Uncle" Charley Moran will undertake to coach all students who want to learn the game of football on a footing equal with the luckiest veteran player here, no student will oppose his doing so. We want Bucknell to play against teams that are our natural rivals, and to win or lose as her team may be able. With such a team, under such a coach, playing such a schedule, the student support will be guaranteed. We want Bucknell to play according to principle, not just within the shadowy edge of the rule. We want to have contests that will "encourage friendship between colleges and foster unity within institutions."

WRITING OFFERS BIG OPPORTUNITY

"As a result of the widespread use of propaganda 'a "black and white" morality has developed in the people. Partisan groups say that their side is absolutely right, the other absolutely wrong. In college, school, and church the spirit of propaganda is fostered to a great extent by the biased statements of teachers and leaders."

After reviewing the growth and importance of propaganda in the war Dr. Gibbons continued:

"After the war, propaganda still filled the air. At the Peace of Paris the idea that the Germans were wholely responsible for the war lead to the formation of plans which attempted to displace Germany as a competitive rival among the other nations of the world.

"In public life, propaganda controls the destinies of men. The Fosdick case proved conclusively how propaganda can make a mountain out of a mole-hill. Fosdick, like many thousands of others, had radical ideas which flared up into the public eye only when lit by the fires of propaganda. In political life, propaganda does its greatest work. No political movement can be carried on successfully unless propagandism is at the bottom of the whole movement. There is no politician who does not realize the value of this force in all of his political schemes. The Bok Peace Plan was the result of propaganda to obtain a successful way to end war. Now, the World Court is being brought into the lime-light by propaganda thru the colleges of the country."

Concluding his address, Dr. Gibbons said that the men who know the facts about affairs and seek the truth can spot propaganda almost instantly. He then opened the meeting of the society for questions and answered several queries concerning interesting bits of near-truth that have recently appeared in the newspapers.

DR. JOS. R. WOOD LEAVES BUCKNELL FOR PULPIT AGAIN

While Assistant to The President Has Helped the University In Many Lines of Work

HAS BEEN IN CHARGE OF ENDOWMENT DRIVE

Has Had Experience as Preacher, Mission Worker, and 'Y' Man; Cited for Work in France

Dr. Joseph R. Wood, who has been assistant to the president since 1922, has returned to the Baptist ministry, and is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Reading, Pa. His pastorate begins January 17.

Dr. Wood's services for the University terminated December 31. The endowment drive, for which he has been so largely responsible, has been successful and is practically finished. His work in this drive, together with his previous wide acquaintanceship in the denomination, has made him one of the best known Baptists in Pennsylvania. When it was rumored that Dr. Wood might leave Bucknell at the termination of the drive, three churches sought his services. Dr. Wood elected to go to Reading.

He came to the University April 1, 1922, as assistant to the president, but has been of great service to the University in various fields. He cooperated with Graduate Athletic Manager C. E. Glass in starting the Stadium enterprise; and later campaigned in eleven different cities with Mr. John T. Shirley, ex-'09, for the Stadium.

When Dean Llewellyn Phillips died in January, 1923, Dr. Wood became acting dean for the remainder of the year. At the same time President Hunt was ill with sciatica, and asked Dr. Wood to assume the functions of the presidency, which he did for three months or more. During the second semester of the year 1922-23, Dr. Wood took Dean Phillips' class in the Gospels, and taught three hours a week, having a class of 75 seniors and juniors. Since that time the responsibility for the endowment campaign has been on his shoulders.

In October of last year the trustees asked Dr. Wood to continue with the University until June, 1926. Since that time Dr. Hunt has asked him to continue his services indefinitely as one who should develop interest in Bucknell on the part of the Baptist Churches of Pennsylvania, and at the same time visit high schools in search of new students. This suggestion had no appeal to Dr. Wood.

Though he has gone from Lewisburg to Reading, Dr. Wood has a continued interest in Bucknell students. He says that the latch-string will always be out at his house for Bucknell men whenever they visit Reading. His church is at present building a new parsonage, and Dr. Wood's family will not leave Lewisburg until this parsonage is completed.

In accepting this charge, Dr. Wood succeeds another Bucknell man, the Rev. Max C. Wiant, '10, who resigned some time ago to become pastor of the First Baptist Church at Harrisburg.

Dr. Wood was born near Norristown, and was educated in the public schools of that place. In 1890 he entered Bucknell University, and was graduated in 1894. He was graduated from Crozer Theological Seminary a few years later, and also studied in the graduate school at the University of Pennsylvania. In 1921 Bucknell awarded him the degree, doctor of divinity.

After Dr. Wood was ordained to the ministry, he first became pastor of the First Baptist Church of Norristown, where his father had been both deacon and trustee for more than twenty years. He has served three other pastorates: North Frankford Baptist Church, Philadelphia; First Baptist Church, Hollidaysburg; and the Union Baptist Church, Pittsburgh.

In the early part of 1918 Dr. Wood resigned the last pastorate, in order to serve the Y. M. C. A. in France. For 13 months, until April 1919, he was with the Fourth U. S. Infantry, of the Third Division, in Germany.

Artist Course Ends With Harp Ensemble

Musicians Please Audience With Diversified Program of Classic and Jazz Music

The Demarco Harp Ensemble pleased a large audience in the Baptist church Tuesday night, January 12, in the fifth and final number of the Bucknell University School of Music Artists' Course for 1925-1926.

This group of musicians is composed of three harpists, a violinist, and a cellist, recruited from widely scattered places; Indiana, Minnesota, Texas, Illinois, and Germany.

BELLE HOP OFFERS CUP TO MOST POPULAR CO-ED

The "Engineers' Number" of the Belle Hop will burst forth in honor of the "Big 4" Engineering Society this Friday with a striking cover by Donald Streeter, ex-'28, and the bulk of material from student engineers. The issue will also announce the rules of a co-ed popularity contest. A large silver loving cup has been selected as a suitable trophy for the winner and will be engraved accordingly.

Many B. U. Alumni At P. E. A. Convention

Bucknell Alumni attending the convention of the Pennsylvania State Education Association at Scranton had a very delightful luncheon together at the Hotel Casey on Wednesday, December 30. Prof. Frank G. Davis, the sponsor of the luncheon, was unable to attend because of a serious illness. James Hughes, head of the Latin department of Scranton Central High, presided at the luncheon, acting in Prof. Davis's place.

Dr. G. C. L. Riemer, principal of the Bloomsburg State Normal School; A. M. Weaver, principal of the Williamsport High School; and Dean Rivenburg spoke briefly. Dean Rivenburg announced the preparation of plans for a local Educational Convention, to be held at Bucknell during the next year's Homecoming Day. Noted speakers will be present, to give the alumni a rare treat. The local branch of the State Association was represented by Dean Rivenburg and R. B. Vastine, '27.

Those present were: Guy C. Brosius, '14; C. A. Burke; Philip C. Campbell, '22; Claire M. Conway, '05; T. E. Cole, '04; Ralph F. Davenport, '12; John Davis, '02; J. H. Eisenhauer, '05; F. Herman Fritz, '09; Gertrude Gardner, '25; Mrs. Milo Gardner; Sidney Grabowski, '15; Eunice V. Hall, '09; E. P. Heckert, '02; N. E. Henry, '05; James R. Hughes, '94; Aelfric James,

ENDOWMENT DRIVE ENDS IN SUCCESS AFTER BIG EFFORT

Adds Third of a Million Dollars To Endowment at This Time; More to Follow Later

GREAT CHANGES OCCUR ON CAMPUS IN 5 YEARS

Stadium and Engineering Wing Built, Chemical Lab Enlarged, Salaries Twice Raised

The successful completion of the endowment drive, which will add two-thirds of a million dollars to Bucknell's invested funds, is the culmination of a five-year campaign for improvement that has wrought great changes at the University. The credit for these achievements Dr. Hunt gives to the Board of Trustees, which had the courage to back his recommendations, when all there was to go on was faith. What we see now in the way of tangible accomplishment is but the outward and visible sign of that inner faith that made it all possible.

The first of these forward movements was the increase in salaries of professors by $1000 a year each. This was one of President Hunt's first recommendations, and was made to the Board in spite of the fact that there were not sufficient funds in hand at the time to make it possible. But the Interchurch World Movement was then under way, and from this Bucknell obtained more than $300,000, thus providing the necessary added revenue.

The second accomplishment was the purchase of the Miller farm. This tract of more than 150 acres, upon which the University had long looked with envious eyes, came unexpectedly upon the market; and although the trustees lacked the funds to make a cash purchase, they took title to the farm, thus adding to the campus that magnificent plot of ground west of Sixth street and Hill road, behind the Library. Two structures already have been built on this new land—the wing of the Engineering Building

BUCKNELL TO HAVE "QUALITY CREDITS"

Fewer Semester Hours Required to Graduate, But Students Must Do Better Work

In addition to reducing the number of semester hours necessary for graduation from 128 to 120, for A. B. students, and reducing the necessary hours for biology and engineering students to 144, as was reported in the Bucknellian of December 9, the faculty has made a further regulation with regard to marks for graduation. In reducing the quantity of work to be done, the faculty is placing more emphasis upon the quality. In order to graduate in future, Bucknell students will have to earn 120 quality credits.

The passing grade remains the same: 60 or D. But a grade of D will hereafter be insufficient to earn a diploma. A student must earn a grade of C, or 70, to win a quality credit. A grade of B, or 80, carries two quality credits. Three quality credits are given the student who earns a grade of A, or 90. A student failing to make a quality credit in one course can offset that low grade with extra quality credits earned in some other course. Thus a student getting a grade of 60 in one subject, would fall short one quality credit. But if the student earned a grade of 80 in some other subject getting two quality credits, he would thus offset the poor grade. High marks in some subjects will thus make up for poor marks in other subjects. The essential thing is that a student earn a total of 120 quality credits, or an average of one quality credit for each required semester hour necessary to graduation.

This new system will be put into

GLEE CLUB GIVES 25 CONCERTS ON 1000-MILE TOUR

Sings in Dozen Towns During Twelve Day Trip; Broadcasts From Three Stations

COVERS PENNSYLVANIA, NEW YORK AND OHIO

Members Make Special Trip To Niagara Falls and Set Foot in Province of Ontario

After travelling a thousand miles in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and New York, and taking a little step into the province of Ontario in Canada, the Glee club returned to the University early last Monday morning. During the tour, which lasted from December 28 to January 10, the club sang twenty-five concerts in a dozen different towns. Three of these concerts were given to radio audiences.

The club convened at Hollidaysburg on the day of the opening of the tour and gave the first concert in the First Baptist church there that evening. The program planned for the trip was only slightly different from that used during the club's Thanksgiving tour. The flute solo by Edward Ramsdell was added and the string quartet number was discontinued. However the arrival of the members for the opening concert revealed that Robert Dilworth, baritone soloist and member of the special trio, was absent. Director Hartz received a telegram from him stating that he could not come, due to the serious illness of his mother. This necessitated an immediate shift of the program. Melvin Shuttlesworth sang in the solo number and Douglas Mackenzie sang with the trio. Dilworth returned to the club two days later and took part in the later concerts.

Following the presentation of its program to the people of Hollidaysburg the club went to Altoona where it was given the privilege of singing in the radio studio WFBG operated

B. U. GETS PLANT, PHYSICAL DIRECTOR

Coach Who Scored Great Success at Peddie School Will Work Toward Intra-mural Sport

Announcement has been made by the Board of Trustees that John D. Plant, physical director of the Peddie School for the last twenty-five years, will assume the newly-created post of director of athletics at Bucknell. Plant will commence his work at the opening of the University next September.

In addition to having general supervision over all mass athletics, Plant will coach the basketball team and will also assist in developing the track team. In both these fields he has met with remarkable success.

It has been the aim of the administration for some time to initiate a program of athletics for all the students, believing that a sound mind in a sound body is the best policy in the development of manhood. The coming of Plant to Bucknell should mark a new era in athletics for the university, an era in which athletics will be for the student body as a whole.

Plant realizes that it may take several years to organize a system of mass and intra-mural athletics through which every student may obtain the benefits of exercise. He has formulated no definite plans and as yet has made no statements concerning the program he wishes to carry out other than a request for the cooperation of the student body.

It is generally understood that all entering students will be given a summary physical examination to determine their capacities along athletic lines, and exercises will be prescribed according to their needs. Physical

B. U. Will Broadcast; Assigned Call WJBQ

C. W. Halligan to be Director: Programs Twice Every Week By Bison Organizations

Bucknell will soon have a radio broadcasting station, operating on a wave-length of 211.1 meters, with an output of 100 watts, and an approximate range of 100 miles. The call letters are WJBQ. After preliminary testing the station will be on the air two nights a week, with programs furnished by various Bucknell organizations.

Instructor C. W. Halligan, of the electrical engineering department, will be director of the plant. Frank J. Currie, '28, a commercial operator, will also be connected with the station.

Mr. Halligan, with a staff of coworkers, has been busy for the past several months constructing the transmitter. This is of the four circuit, Miessner type. This type of transmitter has been used for several months by the Radio Club, which has charge of operating the short wave transmitter now in use.

The four circuit Miessner transmitter has been the standard circuit for broadcast stations built by the Western Electric Co. The majority of the large broadcast stations are built by the Western Electric Co.

The length of the aerial will be 140 feet. This includes the distance from the transmitter to the farthest end of the aerial. The aerial will be hung from a mast on East Wing to East College. This is an excellent place, it being the highest elevation on the campus.

Mr. Halligan plans to begin testing this week, and says that he will probably be on the air next week. There is much work to be done along this line, for local conditions are entirely unknown, and these can be learned only from experiment.

The location of the studio has not yet been decided. Draperies will have to be hung in order to get the proper acoustics, and this makes it difficult to determine the place on account of the strict laws of the fire underwriters.

Mr. Halligan, on behalf of the electrical engineering department, wishes to acknowledge with thanks the splendid co-operation of the members of the Radio Club. Their interest in getting Bucknell "on the air" has been a great help to the department.

If the present radio-broadcasting station is a success, the department hopes to enlarge it to a 500-watt station. Besides the regular short wave transmitter, and the broadcast transmitter, there are regular receiving sets for short waves, broadcast waves, and, in a short time, a receiver will be built to cover the commercial range of waves. These are from 500 to 25,000 meters.

Paul Althouse, Ex-'12, Sings From WEAF

Many Bucknellians who were delighted with the singing of Paul Althouse, who broadcasted from WEAF on the night of Sunday, December 12, as part of the Atwater Kent program, may not know that Althouse is peculiar among famous singers in that he is wholly an American product, and is also a product of the Bucknell School of Music. Althouse, '12, sang with Arthur Middleton in the program.

Concerning the singing of these two men, the Pittsburg Post remarked the day before the concert that Paul Althouse, tenor, and Arthur Middleton, baritone, two of the most popular Americans who ever sang leading roles in the Metropolitan Opera House, often called the "Damon and Pythias" of the concert world because of frequent recitals together, will render a varied program, opening and closing with duets, and singing six groups of solos.

Both artists are thoroughly American. Althouse, born in Reading, Pa., was the first American without European training to make his operatic debut in a leading role with the Metropolitan Opera Company. He did this in 1913, and since then has given hundreds of concerts on both sides of the world. Middleton, a native of Logan, Iowa, sang in a Chicago church choir, studied music in this country and made a memorable debut with the Metropolitan.

BUCKNELL STUDENT, FALSELY ACCUSED, FULLY EXONERATED

Latter, With Other B. U. Men, Was at Island Park Dancing At Time of The Crime

For nearly a week the victim of circumstantial evidence, accused of assaulting and beating a Lewisburg service car driver and wrecking his car on the night of December 19 last, Ernest B. Decker, a junior at Bucknell, appeared before Alderman Clyde M. Smith, of Sunbury, Monday, January 4, and was completely exonerated. The case was dismissed.

Suspicion had fastened on Decker because his suitcase, containing articles of value bearing his name, was found in the wrecked service car. The suitcase had been stolen from the local P. & R. railroad station, where Decker had left it preparatory to taking the Saturday night excursion train to New York. The person who committed the outrage against Pearson evidently stole it and then engaged the service car to take him to Sunbury. Several Lewisburg people who spoke to the culprit when they directed him to Pearson's home, and while he waited to get started, were unable to identify Decker at the hearing as the same person.

Christmas vacation began for Bucknell students Friday noon, December 18. Quite a number of them who live in the vicinity of New York, or intended to spend the holidays there, stayed in Lewisburg over night and went home on an excursion train to New York, leaving here between one and two A. M. Sunday. Decker was one of them.

George Strahon and Jerry Hathaway agreed to put Decker's suitcase on the train at Lewisburg, and he was to leave it at the station. He himself would get on the excursion train at Sunbury after the dance at Island Park. Accordingly he took the suitcase to the station about 7:30. At 8:30 Strahan and Hathaway went to the station and found it there as agreed. Decker had tagged it with his name.

As it was too early to wait for the train, the two boys left the station. When they returned after midnight the suitcase was not to be found. They figured that Decker might have changed his mind about leaving it there and had taken it with him to Sunbury.

Decker was at Island Park from about 8:30 to a little after midnight. Besides the people he danced with, he was seen by C. R. Snyder, P. J. Sargeant, J. A. Phillips, Felix McCormick, G. M. Beasor, and J. G. Doyle, all students here, as well as by a number of other acquaintances. He took a girl home from the dance, and waited in Sunbury until 2:15, when the excursion train pulled in.

Once on the train, he found Strahan and Hathaway, but no suitcase. At first he thought the boys were trying to have some fun with him. When they had convinced him that his suitcase had disappeared from the station he had the conductor wire the local station agent to look around for the suitcase.

According to Pearson's testimony at the hearing last week, he left Lewisburg with his fare about 10:45. He drives the distance to Sunbury in twenty-five minutes or so. This would make the time of the assault 11:30 at the latest. During this entire time Decker had been present at the dance at Island Park.

Decker went on to New York. There he visited friends and reatives until December 23. He spent Christmas Day at home, New Milford. Two or three days later he went to Binghamton, and while there attended a formal dance, the prime motive for his visit. When he returned home his parents informed him that some state troopers had been there and told them of the assault on Pearson and the finding of

PHI GAMMA DELTA

As a token of their appreciation of the entertainment afforded them while they were in Richmond for the seventy-sixth Ekklesia, or general convention of the fraternity, Brother and Mrs. Edwin L. Mattern have presented to the Confederate Museum there a group of documents and records pertaining to the war between the states. They include records concerning the general hospital in Richmond in 1864 and a list of sick and wounded Confederate men allowed to remain in private quarters. There is also a report of the superintendent of the Southern Telephone Company under the date of July 1, 1864. The memorabilia were collected by the late John L. Lewis, the father of Mrs. Mattern. Miss Ruth Mattern, niece of Mr. Mattern, was a student at Bucknell, graduating with the class of 1914.

Fiji Douglas S. Freeman, editor of the Richmond News-Leader and authority on Confederate history, inspected the papers before they were turned over to the Museum and was impressed by their importance.

Manager Gaskill secured new uniforms during Christmas vacation for the Fiji basketball team. The team is rounding into fine shape and a wonderful season is being looked forward to. Several out of town games have already been scheduled.

Brother "Bill" Challis, '25, visited the chapter for several days before Christmas recess.

Delta Chapter is very sorry to learn of the death of Mr. Chas. H. Dawson, the father of two Fijis, Robert M. Dawson, '25, and C. Preston Dawson, '24. Their father died at the family residence at Watsontown on December 31.

KAPPA SIGMA

Last week Carl "Canary" Kivler returned for a short time, and expressed the wish that he might return to school next semester.

Dave Arnold, who returned from Florida for the Christmas dance, is still here.

DELTA SIGMA

The fraternity basketball team played its first regular game of the season last Friday night at Watsontown, defeating the high school team of that place by the score of 47-18. The Picture Rocks high school team will be played this Friday evening.

The cast for the annual "Demic" play has been selected, and has begun work on the production, which is to be presented on February 5.

The members of the active chapter of Delta Sigma held their last regular meeting in 1925, on December 15, at the home of Professor Frank G. Davis on South Front street. When the meeting came to order the active men found that the Bemosthenean Alumni Club of Lewisburg was meeting with them. After the business session President Wayne B. Jefferies, '26, of the active group, turned the meeting over to Professor Davis, who heads the local alumni organization.

It was announced that a mock trial would be next in order. Brother "Jack" Rice, '14, was appointed judge of the august tribunal. Harry R. Warfel, '20, acted as prosecuting attorney, and Paul B. Cooley, '23, as counsel for the defense. The case dealt with the alleged impersonation of Bro. M. L. Drum, '02, by Clifford H. Mellor, Jr., '27. Before the case was concluded practically every alumnus and active man had been called in as a "special witness" by one or the other of the "attorneys."

The trial was finally interrupted by the appearance of an alumni laden with refreshments. After everyone was satisfied, including Mellor and Johnston, the "party" continued. Particularly appreciated were humorous readings by Gilbert G. McCune, '27, and a series of self-accompanied banjo solos by "Curley" Lawson, '22.

Alumni at the party were: Paul B. Cooley, '23, Frank G. Davis, '11, M. L. Drum, '02, Harold S. Eisley, '21, Charles F. Lindig, '24, Hayes L. Person, '20, J. W. Rice, '14, Robert D. Smink, '25, and Harry R. Warfel, '20 of Lewisburg. Williamsport and Danville were represented respectively by Lawrence W. Lawson, '22, and Alfred V. Jacobs, '23.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Kappa Delta Rho takes pleasure in announcing the initiation of Abius Fogelsonger, '27, into active membership.

During the holidays four of the brothers "fell by the wayside."

Brother Stewart H. Bean to Miss Genevieve Hegeman; Brother C. Irving Carpenter to Miss Anna VanDine; Brother Martin S. Cargill to Miss Sara M. Saxton; Brother J. Lester George to Miss Margaret Rombach. Brother Cargill has gone home due to illness.

The "Gang" has planned the final "Sem" dance of the semester for the evening of January 20th. The "Campus Serenaders" have been secured to furnish the syncopation.

The basketball team is rounding into shape. The squad is composed of Drum, Fahringer, Carpenter, Devitt, Bardick, D. Wagner, R. Wagner, B. Evans, Haines, Eaton, and Albig. The team will be equipped with new uniforms. Several games have been arranged with out of town teams.

Brother Harry Dykins, ex-'27, who is now a student at Franklin and Marshall, visited the house last Thursday. We expect to have Dykins back with us next year.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Brother "Swede" Larson, '25, spent Tuesday at the house.

Brother Morris, a Lambda Chi at Denison, stopped here Tuesday evening for a short visit with his brothers.

Delta Zeta of Lambda Chi Alpha is planning a formal dinner dance, Saturday evening, January 30.

ALPHA CHI MU

Professor Thomas F. Hamblin and his daughter, Miss Clarissa Hamblin, '26, were guests of the fraternity at dinner last Thursday. Prof. Hamblin gave an after-dinner talk on the growth of manners and public courtesies, showing their development from the earliest stages to the present time.

On Sunday, January 10, the fraternity house was honored by the presence of Professor and Mrs. Clarence E. Johnson at dinner. In the forepart of the afternoon a general discussion on widely divergent sociology problems was entered upon.

KAPPA GAMMA

The Kappa Gamma fraternity basketball team has arranged several basketball games to be played in the near future, the first of which will be played against the strong St. Vincent's basketball team at Girardville. The team is practicing earnestly and hopes to make a good showing.

The Kappa Gamma fraternity extends its best wishes to its many friends for a happy and successful new year.

BETA KAPPA

The men of the Beta Kappa Fraternity were somewhat surprised when they returned after the Christmas vacation and discovered that two of the radiators had burst. The wreckage was removed and two new radiators were installed, but the men have learned the lesson that it pays to be more careful in removing the water from the radiators.

The Beta Kappa Fraternity got a new Orthophonic several days after the fellows had returned from their Christmas vacation.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

Brother Herbert R. Grundy, '27, who was taken seriously ill with intestinal grip during the vacation, has been unable to return to school. Although he is slowly convalescing, we do not expect him to join us before the start of the second semester.

Brother Raymond G. Yeich, '27, took dinner with Dr. and Mrs. Bond on Sunday evening.

Brother Clyde W. Elizey, '27, evidently prefers the great snow-covered outdoors to indoor confinement in romance, as he was seen strolling about the marble forest the other evening. He was not alone, and we do not think that his companion was a ghost.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Delta Deta Delta held a social meeting on Tuesday night at the home of Laura McGann, an alumna. Mrs. Chance, '21, and Mrs. Shortess, '24, were guests at the meeting. At the same time, Delta Delta Delta pledged Helen Rillo, '29.

ZETA GAMMA TAU

Zeta Gamma Tau celebrated its first birthday by a banquet at the Lewisburg Club on Friday evening, January 8. Mrs. Daniel Greene, Mrs. George Kunkel, Mrs. Roy F. Howes, Mrs. Harry F. Babcock, Mrs. Frederick, Mrs. Weidenhamer, Mrs. F. Everitt, patronesses, and Miss Lulu Coe, faculty advisor, were guests. Vera Eister, toastmistress, gave the history of the sorority, and Mrs. Greene, Lois Reinhardt, '28, Kathryn Hallier, '28, and Catherine Smith, '29, responded with appropriate speeches. A vocal solo, "The Dream Cottage," sung by Genevieve Punches, was well received, as was the singing of a quartet composed of Grace Williams, '28, Helen Everitt, '26, Genevieve Punches, '28, and Catherine Smith, 29. A picture, "The Song of the Sea Shell," by Gibson, was presented to the sorority by Marie Fetherolf, '29, on behalf of the pledges.

The sorority is glad to announce that Mrs. F. B. Everitt, Mrs. Weidenhamer, Mrs. Frederick and Miss Hetzel, have consented to become patronesses.

The active members of Zeta Gamma Tau entertained their pledges at an informal dance at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house on Friday evening, December 11. The Pennsylvania Ramblers furnished the music. Mrs. L. Phillips and Miss Stalford proved to be most delightful chaperones. Mother Miller, too, added pleasure to the evening with her presence and hearty welcome.

SIGMA CHI

The "Three Horsemen," namely, "Dunny," "Welty," and Rogers, decided to leave their famous (or infamous) means of transportation at home until after exams. For some reason they feel that they will be more likely to pass.

Methodists Present "The Nativity"

"The Nativity," a Christmas pageant, was presented by the Queen Esther Society and the Epworth League in the Methodist Church on Sunday evening, December 13.

The choir contributed Christmas music between scenes of the pageant, and Edythe Evans and Alton Roth assisted with songs and violin solos.

Those who took part in the pageant were: Ray Daggs, '26, Anna Brown, '26, Thomas Lewis, '28, Edythe Evans, '29, Lillian Arnold, '26, C. I. Carpenter, '27, M. C. Shuttlesworth, '28, J. C. Steely, '26, and John Gittens, '28.

Fifty Flock To Methodist Social

Fifty young people enjoyed the second Methodist social of the year on Friday evening, December 11, in the Sunday School room of the Methodist Church.

Under the leadership of the minister, the Rev. Mr. H. F. Babcock, the group was examined in geography, and, sad to say, almost the whole class flunked.

After other games the evening closed with an intelligence test which revealed some woeful facts. Those found lacking in this critical examination found consolation in plenty of hot cocoa and cakes.

PHOEBE M. REINHART, 1925, WRITES FOR MILTON PAPER

Miss Phoebe M. Reinhart, '25, a member of last year's class in journalism, who is now on the editorial staff of the Milton Evening Standard, is writing serially the adventures of William Horace Aunkst.

Mr. Aunkst, who was a resident of Milton, died a few weeks ago. Miss Reinhart secured his diary, with its portrayal of his trip to South America as a member of the expedition sent up the Amazon by the P. and T. Collins Co., to build a railway around the falls of the Madeira River, above San Antonio, Brazil.

Acquaintances of Aunkst in this trip were Samuel Cloyd Hartranft, of Dewart, and Walter Van Fleet, of Watsontown, the latter of whom became the foremost rosarian in America, creating the Silver Moon, American Pillar, Dr. W. Van Fleet, Miss Mary Wallace, and numerous other notable roses.

The experiences of these travelers included all the story-book adventures of American youth, from storms on the voyage south, to the deaths of friends in the wilds of the Amazon Valley.

Miss Reinhart has made a very interesting story about this expedition.

Bucknell Benefactor Dies In 83rd Year

J. Ackerman Coles, Physician, Philanthropist, Gave Library Venus and Caesar Busts

The death of Dr. Jonathan Ackerman Coles, surgeon, philanthropist, and patron of the arts, who passed away in his 83rd year on December 16, at his home, Deerhurst, Scotch Plains, N. J., recalls Bucknell's indebtedness to him for many beautiful gifts of art.

His first gift presented to Bucknell, during the administration of Dr. John Howard Harris, then president, is a bronze bust of Caesar. It is said to be the only copy in the United States of that in the Louvre, Paris. The bust stands on a pedestal of Italian Serpentine marble, carved with dolphins and vines.

Another bronze bust, of Venus de Milo a copy of the original by F. Barthelemie, a noted French fondeur, was given to Bucknell last spring. The pedestal is of Mexican onyx-marble, inlaid with plaques of French porcelain which are set in with enameled metal decorations. On the bust is engraved, "A gift from J. Ackerman Coles and Emilie S. Coles in memory of their father Abraham Coles, M. D., Ph. D., LL. D."

An original crayon sketch, by Otto Knille, a famous German artist of the nineteenth century, was presented to Bucknell a few months ago. It is one of four mural drawings designed for the library of the University of Berlin, and represents education during the classic age.

Dr. Coles' last gift to the University, a few months before his death, was a small, framed, etching, a likeness of himself. All of his gifts may be seen in the University library.

During his life he had given, to cities, universities, libraries, and many organizations, works of art valued at several million dollars.

Makes Cranberries Turn Into Marbles

Lecturer Illustrates Many Uses Of Liquid Oxygen at Talk in Milton High School

A number of Bucknell students attended the interesting demonstration of liquid oxygen at the Milton High School auditorium Thursday evening, January 7, where G. E. Harcke, industrial engineer and director of the Airco-Davis-Bournonville Welding Institute of Jersey City, N. J., gave a lecture on the production and uses of liquid oxygen, illustrated by experiments and a four-reel film showing the practical uses of oxygen.

The early part of the evening was devoted to a lecture about liquid oxygen itself and its peculiarities. A rubber ball, rubber tubing, and a "hot dog" were frozen by the evaporating liquid and then broken. The making of marbles from cranberries, and a hammer from mercury concluded the practical demonstration.

Mr. Harcke then gave an explanatory talk with the showing of a four-reel motion picture on the uses of liquid oxygen in the industries. The audience is indebted to the Air Reduction Sales Co., through which the demonstration was secured by the American Car & Foundry Co., of Milton.

PRINCETON PLAYER TELLS OF EVOLUTION OF GRIDIRON GAME

"Play Hard" Used To Mean End Run: "Hold Hard" Signaled a Drop-Kick, in 1885

SIGNALS USED TO BE CALLED BY CAPTAIN

One Side Often Rested While Play Went 'Round Other End, But Teamwork Came, 1890

Perhaps few of the million odd spectators who annually brave pneumonia in scores of concrete coliseums throughout these United States in order to snatch a vicarious thrill from the exploits of those whom George Owen calls "modern Roman gladiators," appreciate the refinements and changes through which football passed before reaching its present highly specialized status, says the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. It is a far cry from these days of "the basketball offense" to the stone-age era of "push and pull," but everything has to have a beginning and football was no exception. J. H. Moffat, an early Tiger star, describes the evolution of the game, as it was played at Princeton, in the following graphic article. Oddly enough, Princeton, which originated the idea of having the quarterback call signals, was the first Eastern team to dispense with the pilot's voice in favor of "the Western huddle."

"At Princeton, from 1876 to 1883, there were practically no signals, no prearranged plays: chance ruled the game. Whoever could grab the ball, ran with it; whoever got the opportunity, kicked it. But the ball was not passed to a certain man for a run or a kick.

"From 1885 to 1888, a simple system of signals was used. For example, the following is a list of the signals used in 1885:

" 'Hold your man,' meant a kick;
" 'Guard your man,' meant a run;
" 'Hold hard,' meant a drop-kick;
" 'Watch out,' signaled a run by the quarterback;
" 'Play hard,' meant a run by the end;
" 'Mind what you are doing,' meant that the quarterback would delay in passing the ball until the rushers broke through the line, then pass it to one of the ends;
" 'Play up,' meant a run by the halfback through center and guard;
" 'Get down the field,' meant a run by the guard.

"These certainly were not very intricate nor difficult to memorize. The plays were simple and only one or two men took part in each; for the rule that all players in advance of the ball were off side and consequently out of the play, prevented complex formations and plays that were designed to conceal the runner. The runner was given the ball and was expected to gain ground by dodging the opposing end, or by darting through an opening in the line. In this, he was aided by the rules which allowed no tackling below the waist.

Princeton Used Rugby Pass

"Except kicking, the line of play in which Princeton was perhaps at this time most proficient was the passing game, which was developed to such an extent that frequently the ball would change hands four or five times during a down. A runner with the ball, who, having passed it, failed to do so, was a development of what might be called football instinct 'to follow the ball,' was the main feature of the game of this period. There was much opportunity for individual play, not, however, at the expense of teamwork. It was not so much in those days to know what to make as it was to be able skillfully to make it, even when the opposing team knew what play was to be attempted. Besides the simple signals, the teams then had an order of play consisting of perhaps ten or twelve formations. These, in whole or in part, could be executed without any signals whatever, with much rapidity and dash, one play following another by prearrangement in a carefully-thought-out sequence, resulting often against weaker teams in a touchdown without a word having been spoken.

"In 1889, the numerical system of signals was adopted, which, with considerable ingenuity, has been worked up to such a fine point that now it requires much practice and a fine memory for a player properly to master it.

Quarterback Calls Signals

"In the fall of 1888 Princeton made a great change and advance in the style of play, under the captaincy of

Old Indians Resent Treatment By Whites

Walker, '27, Talks on Attitude of Redmen, Saying Younger Men Have Little Enmity

"The Indian" was the subject of a talk by George Walker, '27, to Sociology 201 A on Wednesday, January 7. Mr. Walker is of Indian origin, and was raised on his father's farm out in Oklahoma. His father is a Creek Indian, and has spent practically his whole life among the Creeks. Speaking from firsthand knowledge, George Walker said: "The Indians' attitude toward the white man is a peculiar one. The older Indian, who saw the settling of the West by the whites, has a deep-rooted feeling that he has not been treated fairly by the white man. He was cheated in trades; his land, the heritage loved by his brave forefathers, was taken from him and he was driven to take up the war-hatchet to protect his home and honor. Even to this day the older Indian cannot reconcile himself to his fate. In order to preserve the original stock the older Redman advises against intermarriage with other races. He sees that if this happens, his race will be assimilated by foreign races, gradually disappearing from the earth. Therefore, he urges marriage only among his own people.

"The Indian of the new generation, however, has taken a new attitude toward the white man. He meets the situation face to face without prejudice, and realizes that such a fate was inevitable as befell him. Education in white man's schools and adoption of his viewpoint, has given him a broad minded outlook which softens this hereditary enmity held by the older Redman.

Mr. Walker stated that he himself holds the viewpoint of the younger generation, while his aged grandmother still looks to the day when it was an honor to take a pale face's scalp. "My grandmother," said Mr. Walker, "would have me become an Indian again after I am through college, return to the old ways, marry an Indian woman, and lead an Indian's life. But since I have the attitude of the new generation, I cannot do as she desires. The wigwam is rapidly disappearing, and will soon be a part of a glorious past."

Univ. of Texas Owns 2,080,000 Acres

One American university need not bother with endowment drives—that it the University of Texas. It is the owner of 2,080,000 acres of and of which more than 100,000 acres are under oil development. Last month $50,000 was turned over to the university as a royalty for the oil produced on its land.

Almost all of the land owned by the university is leased to ranchmen for grazing purposes. The income rom this source nets the university approximately $229,000 a year.

Pennsylvania Leads With 809, New Jersey Next With 140, New York Sends 50

One of the interesting things that every college presents to the world, and one of the arguments for college education is the fact that the college draws students from all parts of the world. The details vary with every college but the principle remains the same in all. To this rule Bucknell is no exception as the following figures, compiled by the registrar, will show.

The University, at the opening of the semester, had 1067 students enrolled. Of these, 168 are seniors, 201 are juniors, 323 are sophomores and 240 are freshmen. Graduate students and special students number 12 and 23 respectively.

the suitcase. This was the first hint Decker had of what had actually happened. The officers, jumping to conclusions, assumed that Decker, guilty, had gone to Binghamton to get out of the state. They returned to Sunbury and hided their time. Meanwhile no effort had been made by the authorities to search systematically the neighborhood where the car had been wrecked, on the road between Sunbury and Shamokin.

On the 29th Decker came to Lewisburg of his own accord. He went immediately to interview Dr. Hunt, whom he found at Dr. Davis' cabin near Lewisburg. They talked over the whole situation and Dr. Hunt advised Decker to let things calmly take their course. Meanwhile Bucknell authorities had done all in their power to suppress the erroneous and harmful rumors that were published and circulated in Lewisburg and vicinity. After his conference Decker returned to his home in New Milford, where he remained until the day of the hearing in Sunbury.

Mr. Decker, Ernest's father, had directed the troopers who came to New Milford, to make a thorough investigation. He retained the law firm of Cummings and Gubin, Sunbury, to plead for the defense at the hearing. Decker the younger did some defending of his own. Coming back to Lewisburg on January 4, the day set for the hearing, accompanied by W. L. Bird and Gordon Goodyear, college friends who live not so far from his home, they got Kenneth Moyle and Albert Brenner to go with them to Sunbury.

At the hearing the stage was set with a view to giving witnesses for the plaintiff an opportunity to identify the guilty man. The five students stood up in a row and the witnesses were brought into the room one at a time. The first, Mrs. John Walters, who had talked to the stranger while he was waiting for Mr. Pearson, identified Bird as the man. Mrs. Krum, the next witness, could not pick out any one of the boys as the culprit. A third woman said Moyle was the assailant. Then Mr. Hummel, a crossing watchman who had told the stranger the way to get to Pearson's house, upon his entrance immediately identified Moyle. "That's the fellow," he shouted. "Let me see that fellow in a gray cap." Brenner handed Moyle his cap, and the latter, like a born actor, hung his head and slowly drew the cap on his head. Hummel was triumphant. Sure enough, there was the culprit.

Thus not one of the witnesses had even looked twice at Decker. At the same time they disagreed in the choice they did make. Pearson could not help in the matter because he had not had a good look at his passenger. The only thing Alderman Smith could do, therefore, was to accede to the demand of the counsel for the defense that their client be entirely cleared of blame and unconditionally dismissed.

No clue of the man who did the mischief has been picked up. Some time after ten o'clock on the night of the crime, a man carrying a suitcase inquired the way to Pearson's home on south Seventh street and asked to be driven to Sunbury. Mr. Pearson was taking a bath at the time, but consented to make the trip. After he had dressed he went by a rear door to get his car, drove it around to the front of the house, and blew his horn. The stranger, who had been in the house waiting, came out and got into the back seat.

Mr. Pearson left for Sunbury about 10:45. Arrived there, the stranger said he had changed his mind and wanted to go on to Shamokin. Pearson protested, but was finally persuaded to go on provided his radiator was all right. About a mile and a half out of town the man slugged Pearson and told him to stop the car, threatening to grab the wheel if he did not comply. Two cars were approaching at the time, one from each direction. The bandit hit Pearson over the head again, shoved him out of the car, and drove away.

The automobile was found near Elysburg some time later, badly smashed against a culvert. Decker's traveling bag was still in the car. O. A. Maske, state trooper on the Northumberland detail, began an investigation, made the trip to New Milford, and brought the charge against Decker.

BUCKNELL SOON TO HAVE 'QUALITY CREDITS'

effect gradually. The outgoing class of 1926, will not be in any way affected, either by lessening the number of semester hours necessary for graduation, or by the quality plan. Members of the class of 1927 will be required to earn 30 quality credits. The class of 1928 must secure 60 quality credits each. In 1929 the students must have earned 90 quality credits in order to graduate. For all members of the class of 1930 and of every succeeding class, the full requirement of 120 quality credits will hold.

In the same way, the number of hours for graduation will be reduced, lessened work and better grades proceeding hand in hand. In the A. B. course, students in the class of 1927 will be required to complete only 126 semester hours as against the present requirement of 128 hours. The class of 1928 must complete 124 hours each. Every member of the class of 1929 will be required to do 122 semester hours of work successfully. The class of 1930 and succeeding classes will be required to complete 120 hours.

Glee Club Gives 25 Concerts On Tour

by the Altoona Globe and the Frank B. Gable Co. At the close of the concert the members of the club were introduced personally to the radio audience.

The second stop of the tour was at Greensburg, Pa., where the concert was presented in the First Presbyterian church. The next day the club travelled to New Kensington and on the last day of the year to Irwin. At Irwin, in addition to the regular concert the members of the club assisted at the watch night service of the Baptist Church singing as the year ended. Several members of the club took advantage of the opportunity to inspect the plant of the Jersey Cereal Food Company at that place.

Monongahela was the stop scheduled for the start of the new year and the start was certainly auspicious. The Baptist Church, where the concert was given was packed to the doors with an audience that applauded generously.

Saturday and Sunday found the singers located at Dormont, a part of the city of Pittsburgh. The concert was sponsored by the Mount Lebanon Baptist Church of Dormont, the church of which Harry Pierson's father is the pastor. The first concert given while in Dormont was given, however, in the auditorium of the junior high school. The second was given in the studio of the radio station WCAE, the studio of the Pittsburgh Press and the Kaufman and Baer store. Two of the members of the club assisted at the morning services of the church on Sunday and the entire club gave a program of sacred music at the evening service. President Hunt surprised the club by his presence and participation in this service. The Pittsburgh Post studio of the Westinghouse station KDKA also extended its hospitality to the Bucknell singers on Sunday afternoon and the club gave a mixed concert of sacred, secular, and popular numbers.

The Christian Church of Conneaut, Ohio, was next host to the club. Conneaut is the home of two of the members of the club, G. G. McCune and R. E. Dilworth. The welcome given to the whole organization and to these two members in particular was most cordial. A preliminary concert was given at the high school.

Leaving Conneaut early in the morning, the club arrived in Buffalo, New York, shortly before noon. Here the Rev. Dr. Dutton, father of Rolland Dutton, '26, and Caryl Dutton, '27, pastor of the Delaware Avenue Baptist Church, had charge of affairs. Paul G. Webster, '27, had also remained away from classes in order to help with the arrangements for the club in this city. The club was entertained at luncheon at the Lafayette Hotel by the Buffalo Advertising Club. After the luncheon a short concert was given in the Lafayette High School and then nearly all of the members took advantage of a specially arranged trip to Niagara Falls and a chance to set foot in Canada. The concert in Dr. Dutton's church that evening was very enthusiastically received.

Two concerts were given at the East High School in Erie. A special concert for school children was given in the afternoon and the regular program in the evening. Special concerts were also given in the schools at Reynoldsville and Bradford as well as the regular evening performances. At Johnsonburg the regular concert was given in the City Hall. The club assisted at both the morning and evening services of the church at Johnsonburg, starting for Lewisburg shortly after the close of the evening service.

The program used during the regular concerts of the Christmas tour follows:

Work without Toil

Ten or twelve hours a day toils the coolie. If he carries all he can, he moves one ton one mile in one day. For that he receives twenty cents.

Cheap labor! Yet compared with our American worker, receiving at least twenty-five times as much for an eight-hour day, the coolie is expensive labor. In America we move one ton one mile for less than one cent. The coolie, working by hand, accomplishes little; while the American, with electricity's aid, accomplishes much.

Plenty of electricity and cheap electricity —these are two great advantages which America enjoys over the rest of the world. While our present generating capacity is 20,600,000 kilowatts, new developments call for 3,000,000 kilowatts more per year.

To college men and women—potential leaders—will fall the duty of finding more and still more work for electricity, with less and still less toil for our workers. For the task is but begun!

G-E Motorized Power—an ideal combination of electric motor and control properly fitted to the individual task—is at work the world-over, relieving workers more and more for better and more profitable pursuits.

Hector Cowan, '88. Before that time, the signals were uniformly given by the captain, no matter what position he played. It was then determined, however, that the quarterback position was the one from which the team could be most advantageously run and the wisdom of that decision has been verified by subsequent experience.

"In addition to this change of management three new plays were devised. Princeton that year introduced the great play of boxing the tackle by the end coming in and the halfback taking the opposing end. It was used with great success against Yale. Cowan in the first trial making a run of over 40 yards to within a few feet of Yale's goal line. Since then it has been adopted by all the colleges. Princeton also originated the idea of keeping only two men back when on the defensive, thus strengthening the line materially. This idea has subsequently been developed further by keeping only one man back except for a kick. The third play was that of running a halfback through the opening ahead of the man with the ball in order to ward off the opposing halfback. In those days this now well-known play was considered novel, strong, and clever.

"In the fall of 1889, interference around the end was developed, though this involved none of the linemen but only the backs; the man with the ball came last and was guarded and protected by the others. In the following year Yale took up Princeton's idea and developed it thoroughly and well by adding three line men, thus making the attack almost irresistible.

Gill, Pioneer Blocker

"At this time the most aggressive rusher on the Yale team was Gill, whose greatest force was to break through the opposing line and block kicks. In order to stop him Princeton devised the play that is now known as the fake kick. The moment the ball was in play, Gill was through the Princeton line. Instead of a kick, however, the play was a buck through Gill's position. Channing received the ball and was off like a flash. Gill by a supreme effort managed to grasp Channing with one hand just as he was disappearing through the opening. The ruse, however, had its desired effect. During the remainder of the game Ames found sufficient time to kick and not a single kick was blocked. The Yale rushers feared to rush through until they saw what was going to happen. Then it was too late. The same plan was resorted to in 1890, not one kick being blocked as any of the big games. Stanley Gill, end rush on the present Yale team, is a son of the giant described above.

"It was in 1890 also that Ames reintroduced the whirling punt, which had been used with such good effect in the late seventies; by hitting the ball a certain way with his ankle he would cause it to shoot through the air end on, revolving as though on an axis. The opposing backs had the greatest difficulty in judging a kick of this kind, for the slightest change in the wind would cause the ball to sail off and land anywhere except the place where the catcher had reason to expect it. The decade beginning with the year 1890 marked a new epoch in the history of football. The first part showed Princeton working with experiments, trying to develop a system of coaching and a style of play which might more consistently bring the school its fair share of victories.

How Interference Was Evolved

"In 1891, Princeton followed the example set by Yale, working more on the theory of team work, concentrating the greatest possible number of men at one point of attack. On end runs guard and tackle, together with three backs, were thrown ahead of the other back carrying the ball. The end was used as a safety man in case of a fumble and to help shove the back forward should the latter be tackled. Interference for guards and tackles running with the ball was used after a fashion. The backs were placed nearer the line on defense, and the line stretched out farther. Kicking also received its fair share of attention and was employed not as a last resource but as one of the means of advancing the ball.

"The results of this year's work showed Princeton working in the right direction. The mass-on-tackle play was developed to a high degree of perfection. End running was improved. The 'help each other' spirit was taking a firmer hold. The quarterback trick was evolved and has been a part of Princeton's play ever since.

"The long pass was again brought into use, merely for the purpose of keeping the opponents in doubt. Then came Princeton's banner year and one concerning which she has every reason to be proud. This was the championship year of 1893. Yale had a team which was considered by all who knew anything about it, to be the strongest in years, yet it went down to defeat at Princeton's hands. The success of that year was due largely to the variety of resources which Princeton possessed. Besides the regular formations which had been worked up in the previous three years, the new so-called 'Princeton-tandem' was used for the first time with remarkable results. Flying interference which had been invented by Deland of Harvard was also in the repertoire of plays. The kicking game was well developed and the long pass, used unsuccessfully the year before, on one play netted 40 yards, bringing both the Yale and Princeton supporters to their feet in amazement. Guards and tackles, running with the ball around opposite guards and tackles, and tackle around tackle were developed to their utmost.

Direct Pass First Used, 1895

"The straight pass back for a kick was used for the first time in 1895, as a check to the increasing number of blocked kicks. Instead of the quarterback taking the ball from the center and passing it to the back for a kick, the ball was now passed directly from the center to the fullback, or halfback doing the kicking, thereby adding an additional man to aid in the protection of the kicker and making the kick a fraction of a second quicker.

"To summarize the principles in a general way, the game after 1890 by gradual development changed from being an individual one to one of teamwork. The old idea of one side of the line resting while the play went around the other side gave way to the plan of having eleven men in every play, each man a part of the machine; the failure of one part to perform its function causing a collapse in the entire workings of the machine. Individual effort was discouraged if the same maneuver could be accomplished in a better way by the co-operation of the entire team.

"The idea of individuality was swallowed up in the more important element of combined effort. Instead of making the way for himself, the runner had a path cleared for him by the interference, and where formerly the man carrying the ball did the work, now the important work was done by the remaining ten men. This style of play was more exhausting and a much greater amount of endurance was required by the participant, consequently the time of the halves was reduced from 45 to 35 minutes in duration.

"Princeton experience has taught three fundamental principles: (1) start quickly. (2) Follow the ball. (3) Be in every play with your whole strength until the whistle blows.

"Carry out these principles, and everything else that is necessary and essential will follow."

CAMPUS RELIGION STUDIED

Princeton Leader Finds Students Immoral, Not Hypocritical

"Christianity in the last ten years has been taken out of the realm of authority and convention, and with the present generation has been subjected to criticism from the outside," reports the general secretary of the Philadelphia Society, the campus religious society of Princeton University, Ray F. Purdy, Princeton, '20.

Analyzing the causes, Mr. Purdy says in his annual statement on the work of the year to the directors of the Philadelphia Society: "Among the undergraduates there is a genuine hunger for reality and sincerity. When Christians talk of conversion and surrender and the power of prayer, undergraduates want to see those things cut deep. When they do not, they seek for reality in gratifying those things which seem to them most real.

"They drink, they are immoral. They do the things in the whole gamut of flagrant commandment-breaking, and exult in it. There is a certain commendableness in all this. They the victims of their own passions, yet there is not a tinge of hypocrisy in it all, and that it just its saving feature. Men want something real, and if they can get it in the realm of supernatural Christianity they are going to take it."

W. Maryland Quintet Loses to B. U., 37-21

Southerners Have Difficulty in Breaking Through Defense

The best drilled basketball team that has represented Bucknell in several years took the floor of Tustin gymnasium last Saturday evening and administered a 37 to 21 defeat to the dribblers from Western Maryland in a fast and cleanly played court game.

Not five seconds after the opening whistle McCaskey had whipped the cord for the season's first goal, after receiving the ball from Fritzinger on the tap-off signal play. Bucknell played the orthodox five man defense and the Southerners seemed unable to penetrate the forward wall with any regularity.

Although Fritzinger was high scorer, with five field goals, Bach played the most consistent game. His height enabled him to catch the ball above the visitors' heads, and thus aided the Bisons in disrupting the Southerners' defense. Rigg, although he did not break into the scoring column, played a fine guarding game.

Before the contest the players drew lots for the temporary captaincy, and Murphy, lucky Irish, drew the slip marked X. Election of a permanent captain will occur in the near future.

Broll, of Western Maryland, played the best game for the visitors, and incidently led them in scoring, with four field goals.

Young "Zookie," a town urchin, however, proved the sensation of the evening when, between the halves he forfeited his amateur standing, and along with Grange and the other professional celebrities, took up the game for the money there is in it. "Zookie" caught everyone's attention as he strode out to the foul line, and took the ball, almost as large as himself, straining every tendon he heaved it toward the basket. When he missed the rim, groans rose from the galleries, but when "Zookie" scored, salvos of applause broke out. Young Mr. Zook received all the applause with an imperturbable air. Then nickels, dimes, and pennies showered from the audience. That ended the foul shooting contest. A Maryland basketeer tripped over him as he madly lunged for the final nickel. That was the last we saw of "Zookie."

Basket Ball Schedule Lists 8 Home Games

Danville Y. M. C. A. is Beaten in Practice Game—Writer Discusses Prospects

Prospects for a successful basketball season at Bucknell seem the brightest in a number of years. At the beginning of the year it was the general opinion wherever Orange and Blue basketball was discussed that Buck will would indeed be fortunate if represented at all by a cage quintet.

Owing to the lack of proper playing space this opinion had some ground, in recent years the inadequacy of Tustin gym caused all home court games to be played in the high school gymnasium at Milton. Consequently only a limited basketball program was undertaken. University officials decided some time ago, however, that Tustin gym should be remodeled so that it would be possible to play out this season's card. It is hoped that a new gym will be built by the time of the 1926-27 campaign.

Previously to the appointment of a coach to succeed "Moose" McCormick, of the Bucknell cage candidates worked out in the gym with no direct supervision. With the appointment of "Mal" Musser as Orange and Blue mentor the team progressed rapidly and at present Coach Musser seems to have molded a winning combination.

The new coach was blessed with a wealth of veteran material when he took over the coaching reins and these veterans seem to be fixtures on the first five. Fritzinger and McCaskey at forwards, Bach at center, and Murphy and Riggs at the guard posts appear to have the edge on the other candidates. However, Coach Musser has been giving his reserves ample opportunity of demonstrating their ability in the first two games of the season and some of the second string players may crowd out the present regulars.

In the first game of the season, not on the regular schedule but rather a practice contest, the Danville Y. M. C. A. team was met and easily defeated. The Bisons revealed a fast, rapid passing, clever shooting team. Every one of the five seemed to have a dead eye for the basket when within the fifteen-foot mark. The second game of the year, played Saturday, January 9, with Western Maryland, resulted in a 38-24 victory for the Bisons. The latter duplicated their excellent showing against the Danville team. Both games were played at home.

Coach Musser also has charge of the freshmen cagers. The establishment of the one-year residence rule at Bucknell this year forbids the participation of first-year men in varsity athletics, so the yearlings will be represented by a team of their own, as in football. Several promising men who were prominent on high school and prep school teams before their entrance at Bucknell have reported to Coach Musser and the outlook for a successful first-year team is exceedingly bright. The freshmen will start their season soon.

The card for the season as announced by the Bucknell Athletic Council, calls for 12 games, eight at home and four away. The varsity schedule follows:

Jan. 9—Western Maryland, at home.
Jan. 13—Franklin and Marshall, at home.
Jan. 14—Georgetown, at Washington, D. C.
Jan. 16—Navy, at Annapolis, Md.
Feb. 6—Penn State, at State College.
Feb. 13—Lebanon Valley, at home.
Feb. 25—Catholic University, at home. (tentative).
Feb. 27—Temple, at Philadelphia.
March 3—Gettysburg, at Gettysburg.

There is talk about the campus of organizing a wrestling team. Last year the attempt was not very successful but there is plenty of material in the college to make a winning mat team. Penn State is working out daily with almost wholly new material. Lehigh is reported as weak in the heavy-weight class. Other neighboring colleges are going to the mat daily.

The old chestnut tree back of East college which was cut down recently, caused some damage and inconvenience before it was taken away. The tree did not fall the way that it was expected to fall, it fell on another tree close by, tore down some electric wires, and was firmly lodged in the crotch of the other tree.

Melvin C. Shuttlesworth, '28, sent a photograph of himself to his parents which he had clipped out of a newspaper from one of the towns in which the glee club sang. Below the picture it announced that Mr. Shuttlesworth was one of the soloists of the Bucknell University Glee Club that would sing in the Baptist church that night.

Bucknell narrowly escaped a catastrophe on two occasions just before the holidays, when fire started. One blaze was in East college and had its origin in a waste paper basket. The other fire was in Johnny Seigh's room in West college and started during his absence at class. By the time it was discovered, the fire had eaten through a joist and burned through the wall. In each case the quick application of a fire extinguisher saved the day.

Miss Eliza J. Martin and Mrs. Mary S. Gretzinger respectively librarian and assistant librarian of the University, were invited to attend the dedication of the Priestley-Forsythe Memorial Library at Northumberland, New Year's night. Mrs. Gretzinger was a former resident of Sunbury and is a relative of Mrs. Edwin Musser Herr, one of the benefactors of the library.

The library will stand as a memorial to Mrs. William Forsythe and Mrs. Edwin Musser Herr.

Alumni Secretary A. G. Stoughton has installed an electric Addressograph in the Alumni Office. The machine was bought from the Addressograph Company of Scranton, Pa. The Office also possesses a Graphotype which makes plates with the desired addresses. These plates are placed in the Addressograph and letters or papers can be addressed at the rate of 2000 to 3000 per hour merely by placing the foot on the lever. The machine automatically feeds both the plates and the envelopes. Another prominent feature is that it automatically selects any group of addresses one desires, and prints only that group.

Eight Muhlenberg Gridders Dropped From College Sports

Eight members of the Muhlenberg College football squad recently were declared ineligible for further participation in all collegiate athletics, after confessing that they played on a Reading professional eleven during the past season.

Uses New System for Checking Time of Periods in Football

Stop-watches were thrown away and a new method of timing was followed in a recent football game between Brown and Boston Universities. The first two quarters consisted of forty plays, and the last two of thirty-five each. This system eliminates the possibility of stalling, and any system of juggling of the time. Coaches and spectators declared the experiment an unqualified success.

David Jayne Hill Writes On Origin of World Court

David Jayne Hill, '74, former president of Bucknell and later first assistant secretary of state for the United States, has an article in the January 9 issue of the Saturday Evening Post, under the title "The Whole Case of the World Court of Justice," in which he offers a complete statement of the origin and nature of the Permanent Court of International Justice established by the League of Nations.

Dr. Hill says in effect that the United States was really responsible for the promulgation of the idea of a world court for settling the difference between nations by purely judicial means. For when in 1898 this country accepted an invitation from the Russian minister of foreign affairs to participate in a conference to be held at the Hague for consideration of the limitation of armaments, our delegates were instructed to propose a plan for a stable international tribunal.

"This plan for an international tribunal, conceived in the form of a resolution to be introduced at the conference, if the occasion seemed opportune, was, I believe, the first official plan for an international court of justice, as distinguished from voluntary arbitration, ever made," says Dr. Hill. "It provided for judges, learned in international law, instead of arbitrators acting under a comprimis submitted to them. The court was to have a permanent existence, not an occasional one.

The article traces in some detail the entire history of the development of the world court idea.

Secretary J. J. Davis Produces Book on "Selective Immigration"

The Scott-Mitchell Publishing Company of St. Paul, Minn., announces the publication of "Selective Immigration," by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, to whom Bucknell gave the degree LL. D., in 1924. The book contains a statement of the latest administrative policies of the Government in regard to this important subject.

Poffenberger Describes Advertising Psychology

"Human desires and the satisfaction of those desires are the pivotal points upon which all advertising methods should turn, in the judgment of Albert T. Poffenberger, Ph. D., '09, associate professor of psychology, Columbia University, and lecturer on the psychology of advertising, School of Business, Columbia University, who has written a new book, just from the Shaw presses, 'Psychology in Advertising.' In this book the author outlines the proper utilization of human desires in effective advertising. Step by step, he shows just how they can really be stimulated and satisfied by correct advertising appeals. He describes in detail how these desires can be measured, tells what the measurement methods are, and when each method should be employed. Furthermore, he lays bare in a practical manner the profitable use of the questionnaire for sounding the consumer's interests, preferences, and prejudices, and suggests the best way to tabulate and interpret replies."

Prof. Lewis E. Theiss Publishes "The Flume In The Mountains"

"The Flume in the Mountains," By Lewis Edwin Theiss. Published by the W. A. Wilde Company.

"There is real romance and adventure in this story, based on the great development now taking place in harnessing our tremendous water supply for the generation of electric power.

"Teddy Robinson, the leading character in the book, accidentally comes across the operations of the Sphinx Construction Company, which is undertaking the building of a flume to carry the water from a stream on a lofty plateau for three miles and drop it over a precipice nearly 400 feet high. To Teddy, this method of 'manufacturing' electric power seems magical, and he decides to enter the electrical field.

"Discouragements, tests of physcial and moral stamina, and the exercise of keen powers of observation, characterize the crowded chapters, and Teddy comes to know, as the superintendent expresses it, that 'every job is important.' His adventures and misadventures will appeal to boys of every age.

"Mr. Theiss understands boys. He has proved this beyond a doubt in this splendid addition to his list of real boys' books."

Numerous magazine articles have recently been published by the same author. The latest, appearing in the January Forecast under the title "A Penny Saved is a Penny Earned," is a discussion of means of financing one's annual vacation.

The same magazine printed in its October issue an article by Professor and Mrs. Theiss on "Old Fashioned Quilts," illustrated with original photographs.

American Forests and Forest Life published in its November issue an article by Professor Theiss on "Trees for Profit and Pleasure," a plea for the wider use of productive trees in landscaping home grounds.

The October 14 issue of the Outlook published an article by the same author under the title "Why Not Parachutes for Dirigibles?" This was one of a number of articles from different sources on the airship question, published by the Outlook, following the collapse of the Shenandoah.

Other articles have appeared in the American Nut Journal, Better Crops, and the Garden Magazine.

Co-eds Sing Carols After Holiday Party

Acting Dean Clark Introduces Town Caroling. Girls Sing at Professors' Homes

Students and faculty at the Women's College forgot all about last minute examinations in the excitement of celebrating the annual Christmas dinner on Thursday evening, December 17.

The tables, daintily decorated with snow-covered Christmas trees, chimney tops filled with gifts, red and green crepe paper, and lighted by candles, gave a holiday aspect to the dining room.

Instead of the girls singing grace as usual, they remained silent while from a distance the strains of "Holy Night" were heard. It was played by Miss Charlotte Armstrong, on the violin, and sung by Mrs. Wilfred Wilcox.

Then came the best part of the party, the opening of the gifts, and the presenting of gifts to the waitresses. Songs and cheers kept everyone in high spirits. One group cheered for Home, while another gave three rays for Santa Claus.

The menu consisted of fruit cup, turkey, mashed potatoes, dressing, cranberry sauce, lima beans, rolls, mince pie, nuts, and mints.

Repeated calls for Chef Moore brought him in, smiling from ear to ear. Mrs. Sale and Miss Clark were also called upon to stand up.

A pleasant surprise came in the form of a Snowball Dance by "Billie" Dakin and "Shorty" Parmley.

After the dinner about one hundred of the girls assembled in the hall, and accompanied by Miss Clark and Miss Brakeman, went about singing Christmas carols before the professors' homes.

This is the first time in the history of Bucknell that the students have gone about the town caroling. The idea was introduced by Dean Clark, and was enthusiastically taken up by the girls. For a week before the party the dining room echoed with the carols as the girls practiced them.

More than twenty-five professors' homes were visited, and everywhere the carolers were cordially received.

Campus Club Holds Big Christmas Party

The annual Christmas party of the Campus Club was held in the living room of Women's College, December 16, 1925.

The room was decorated with evergreens. The only light was furnished by candles, and by the red glow from a fire place erected for the occasion.

Printed copies of Christmas Carols were distributed before the meeting began. The president, Mrs. Emory Hunt, turned over the meeting to Miss Olive Douglass, chairman of the program committee.

A chorus of fifteen members of the club entered singing Christmas carols. The chorus dispersed while Miss Armstrong played a violin solo.

Mrs. Fowle sang a group of carols, and was followed by songs by Mrs. Stoltz, Mrs. Wilcox, Mrs. Rivenburg, and Mrs. Hunt.

Each lady brought a small gift with a cerve attached. The receiving committee numbered the packages. Slips of paper, numbered to correspond to the packages, were shuffled and passed out to the ladies. Upon receiving the gift corresponding to her number, each lady was asked to read the enclosed verse.

Refreshments, consisting of ice cream, topped by spruce twigs, simulating tiny Christmas trees, and fruit cake, added to the Christmas spirit.

Pres. Hunt Talks to Lions Club

President Emory W. Hunt addressed the weekly noon-day luncheon of the Williamsport Lions Club, at the Lycoming Hotel, December 23.

In his talk, full of the Christmas spirit, Dr. Hunt said that Christ was a Lion—a lion of the tribe of Judah. He traced through the years from the birth of Christ the progress of mankind, and said that in important respects we are making progress. "What a world this would be if we could be like we are today (imbued with the Christmas spirit) the whole year through."

Oliver J. Decker, '99, secretary of the Board of Trustees, presided over the meeting and introduced the speaker. Mr. Decker was chairman of the entertainment committee.

S. B. Dunlap, '03, superintendent of Lycoming County schools, is a member of a committee appointed by Francis B. Haas, state superintendent of public instruction, to pass finally on the items to be considered in scoring one-teacher elementary schools.

Superintendent Dunlap said recently there are four main points which his committee must consider in evaluating one-teacher schools. The first is the grounds, which will be evaluated according to size, adaptability, and ornamentation. The second is building, exterior and interior; the third is equipment, and the fourth the service system.

There are 161 one-teacher elementary schools in Lycoming County alone, Superintendent Dunlap says.

SAYS FRENCH PROFESSORS RECEIVE LESS THAN $500

Captain G. Livingston Bayard, '99, who was retired as a U. S. Navy chaplain and is now a naval attache in France, recently wrote to Dr. Joseph Wood, enclosing a check for $25 and subscribing a total of $100 to the endowment fund.

He writes interestingly of life in France and points out the hardship that depreciation in the French currency has caused salaried workers, like college professors. "Here in Europe," he says, "all endowed institutions are in a desperate situation. Worthless or depreciated currencies have left once proud or powerful universities poor and weak. Depreciation in France has reduced endowments more than five hundred per cent. University professors receive less than five hundred dollars per annum. France, however, is better off than many European countries because of the private wealth of her people. The state is poor."

Dr. Jos. R. Wood Leaves Bucknell

This division saw much hard fighting. Dr. Wood was with the troops during his entire service in France. He was often in the trenches, and many times was under heavy fire. On one occasion he went back to bring the mail to the troops, making the trip along a road that was under heavy shell fire. He was twice cited for bravery: once during the action at Chateau Thierry, and again for service in the Argonne.

Since the close of the war, Dr. Wood has declined three calls to the ministry, in order to serve as secretary in the American Baptist Home Mission Society, in New York. He also served two years as secretary of the Federation of Churches, in Newark, N. J.

Dr. Wood was a very loyal member of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity. He was popular with Phi Psis old and young. The depth of this regard for him was well shown after the death of Wilbur Hennen, of Fairmont, W. Va., who attended Bucknell for two years. Young Hennen was killed in a motoring accident near Ava, Ohio, December 15. He was assistant treasurer of the Community Savings and Loan Company, of Fairmont.

Among his papers was found a statement, dated November 13, 1924, asking that Dr. Joseph Wood come and take charge of the funeral in case he, Hennen, should die. The young man also asked that $100 from his estate be given to the Bucknell chapter of Phi Kappa Psi. The young man's own pastor was his second choice of a minister to conduct the funeral services. This paper was found too late for Dr. Wood to attend the services.

Mrs. Wood, whose loss in Lewisburg will be felt as keenly as will that of her husband, was Eliza Bell, '94, whose family has provided more students, teachers, and administrative officers for Bucknell than any other family in the land. For seven years she herself taught in the Institute. She is president of the Lewisburg Civic Club, and has been prominent in other civic and religious work. She teaches a large class of sophomores in the Baptist Sunday school.

Dr. and Mrs. Wood have three children: a daughter, Elizabeth, who was graduated from Barnard College, and who is now teaching in the Roosevelt Park High School, New Jersey; a son, Graham, who is a sophomore in the University; and a younger son who is in the Lewisburg public school.

B. U. Gets Plant, Physical Director

classes for the freshmen will be compulsory.

Plant is best known throughout the sporting world as a basketball coach and player. The following testimonial appeared in the Trenton Times of January 2, before his appointment to Bucknell had been announced: "Not alone were John Plant's laurels gained by his athletic prowess. His sportsmanship ,love of the game, and consideration of the other fellow, soon made Plant a leader in his class and in school. He played the game fairly and impressed upon his fellows the idea of a square deal.

"After graduating from Peddie, in 1906, with a fine record on the field and in the gym, Plant stepped into the real work of his career. He took special courses at Yale and Wisconsin and then returned to Peddie as physical director and coach. In this capacity he attained almost immediate success, which has never departed. He is rounding out a quarter-century of athletic activity with and for Peddie, that cannot be equalled by any other coach in the country.

"There are few men who can boast as long and as successful a career as John Plant. More than any other man in the school, Plant has an acquaintance with every lad and is an idol of them all. 'A sport for every Peddie boy' was an axiom long ago established by Plant. Rather than specialize on a few super-athletes, John Plant has seen to it that every lad got some athletic work.

"Basketball has been Plant's shining light. Ernest Blood, coach of the Passaic High 'wonder team' has no Letter record than Plant, if as good. Peddie's teams have changed from year to year, but Plant has kept them winning. For six years Peddie has won the State championship basketball honors in the tourneys arranged by the N. J. S. I. A. A."

An article in Boy's Life claimed that Plant had developed more dribblers who later starred in college than any other coach. Princeton's captains for the past three years have all been plant's proteges, Jefferies, Cleaves, and Eben. Norris of Columbia, Suisman of Yale, Shapley of the Navy, Langren of Penn State, Ward of Swarthmore, Stifler and Marshall of Brown, Molinet of Cornell, Weed of Dartmouth, and many other present-day college stars learned their court lore from "John" as they familiarly call him.

His own career in the professional game (in his prime basketball was not a college sport) rivals his coaching record. He reached the heighth of his game with the Bristol team which for two years won the professional championship of the country. The sports editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer submitted Plant's name as a candidate for the guard position on the "all-time basketball team" which writers for that paper have recently picked.

Plant has had particular success with pole vaulters and hurdlers in his track work, although he coaches both track and field events. Two of his prep school boys reached the sectional trials for the last Olympic team, Gill who threw the javelin 180 feet, and Lloyd, the Navy plebe, who later scored 26 points in a plebe track meet.

His days at Peddie now are numbered, for his resignation becomes effective at the end of his twenty-fifth year. As he himself worded a letter to a student at Bucknell "And now I'm going out to make good for Bucknell." That is the spirit with which Plant takes up his new position.

Lybarger Offers Cup To Stimulate Debate

Through the Bucknell Debating Board, Lee Francis Lybarger, Esq., of Mifflinburg, has offered a silver cup to that high school in this section that is outstanding in debate.

Twelve nearby high schools have been invited by T. Burns Drum, Bucknell debate manager, to contest for this cup.

These twelve teams have been divided into four groups, as follows: Lewisburg, Montgomery, Sunbury; Williamsport, Milton, Northumberland; Mifflinburg, Shamokin, Watsontown; Lock Haven, Bloomsburg, Mt. Carmel.

Debates will be held the second Friday night in April. The four winners will meet in two dual debates to be held the following Friday evening. The two winners at these semi-finals will clash on the succeeding Friday night. The winner of this final contest gets the cup.

The chairman of the various debates will be members of the Bucknell University debating squad, and the judges will be mostly members of the Bucknell faculty. The winning high school will be invited to Bucknell at the close of the debating season, and at an annual banquet will be presented with the cup. A great deal of interest has been aroused over the contests and many strong teams will be in the field.

Endowment Drive Ends In Success

and the Stadium. The acquisition of this land makes it certain that Bucknell will have a campus adequate for her needs for decades to come, if not, indeed, for all time.

The construction of the Engineering Building was the next step in this program of improvement. Two hundred thousand dollars was the sum asked by commercial builiders to erect it. Professor Frank E. Burpee took his own group of Bucknell workmen, augmented it with local workers known to him, built the building, and installed machinery worth several thousand dollars, all for less than one hundred thousand. By saving more than half the estimated cost, Professor Burpee contributed notably to the University and simplified the problem of the trustees, which was to find the money to pay for the structure.

Similar achievements were scored in the enlargement of the Chemical Laboratory and in the renovation of the Woman's College and the dormitories on the Hill. A large amount of work was done at relatively small cost, though the actual cost aggregated many thousands.

The building of the Stadium is another great achievement of this lustrum. This was the work of the alumni, and to Mr. John T. Shirley, ex-'09, belongs much of the credit for the success of the campaign. Without his organizing genius and driving force, the campaign might never have been successful.

But the success of the stadium campaign made the endowment drive of last year even more difficult to carry through. Half a dozen years ago the General Education Board offered Bucknell $200,000 for its endowment on condition that by December 31, 1925, the institution be free from debt, and have raised $450,000 in cash. The campaign was first postponed because of the Interchurch World Movement. A second postponement was decided upon because of the desire of the alumni to undertake the stadium drive. Both of these drives materially reduced the resources from which Bucknell would naturally expect to draw the additional sums needed to secure the General Education Board's $200,000. Yet the endowment drive has been successful.

At the end of 1925 Dr. John T. Judd, treasurer of the University, was able to report to the General Education Board that the University was free of debt, the Miller farm, the Engineering Building, and the numerous renovations all being paid for, and that the University had $225,000 in cash and the remainder of the $450,000 subscribed. Upon this showing the General Education Board agreed to give the University at once $100,000, and to extend the time for collection the other half of the cash necessary to secure the remaining $100,000.

These sums—the $225,000 collected from endowment subscribers, and the $100,000 handed over by the General Education Board—add almost a third of a million dollars to the University's endowment at this time.

At its recent meeting in New York, the Board of Trustees went over the entire situation with President Hunt and authorized a further advance in the salaries of the teaching forces.

All that remains to make these various efforts one hundred per cent. successful is for those subscribers who have pledged money to the university to meet their obligations. This they are doing. Money is coming in every day, and Dr. Judd hopes to make a very favorable report to the General Education Board on the first of next April. Already he has in hand more than $50,000 of the sum still needed to claim the General Education Board's second $100,000.

PROF. C. R. JOHNSON LECTURES ON LIFE IN CONSTANTINOPLE

Tells of Many Turkish Customs; Census By Counting Houses; All Carry Big Burdens

COURTING ONCE DONE BY ANOTHER PERSON

Mohammedans Called to Prayer By Priest Five Times a Day; Private Life Religious

Professor C. R. Johnson, who before coming to Bucknell was a professor at Robert College, Constantinople, gave an illustrated lecture on "Constantinople and the Turks" at the Baptist Church, Monday evening, January 11. Professor Johnson lived in Turkey for four years and during this time collected a number of interesting pictures and more interesting experiences.

According to Professor Johnson's statements the city of Constantinople looks like one that has been built for centuries, but the remodelling that has been done here and there gives it the appearance of an attempt at modernization. The streets are narrow and the houses are built close, often with the second story projecting over the street. The windows are latticed. Tall buildings are lacking, the public buildings being rarely more than four stories in height.

The population of the city is estimated at a million, but this figure is not at all accurate for the method of taking the census is to count the houses and guess at the number of persons that should inhabit each one.

The Turks have many customs that seem strange to the Occidental. Men, even old men, carry enormous burdens on their backs and uncomplainingly take them up flights of stairs. Children are shown all kinds of kindness and indulgence. One Turk even said that when the children became too noisy in the house, instead of sending them out, he would go himself.

The dress of the Turk is very picturesque. Men used to wear the fez, colorful but not very useful, and the women wore veils allowing only a small part of their faces to be seen. They are adopting more and more of the western dress, however. The custom in regard to marriage is most peculiar. It was considered improper for a man to see his bride before the wedding was performed, and the courting had to be done by some other person. The Turks still retain their wide open markets in which fools of all kinds are displayed and exposed to the dirt of the city. Strangely enough the buyers seem not to mind this in the least.

The cause of illiteracy among the Turks is very high, the percentage of those who can neither read nor write being estimated at eighty-five. New schools are being opened, however, so that in the future illiteracy will be less common. Robert College, where Professor Johnson taught, is fulfilling a great mission in providing a place for education. Students from many countries attend this institution, some of them even commuting across the Bosphorus from Asia Minor.

In religion most of the Turks are Mohammedan. They have built gor-

College bills for the second semester 1925-26 are being sent out from the Registrar's office this week. Several weeks ago it was announced that the entire bill for the second semester would be due at the time of enrolment. As the registration is drawing to a close the bills are being drawn up and will all be mailed before the end of the week.

As many of these bills appear to be lost each semester in the mails the Registrar recommends that anyone not receiving his bill should call at the office before the beginning of the next semester and receive a copy. The payment, or the making of some arrangement to pay the bills, will be absolutely required before students will be allowed to enroll for the second semester or to attend the classes for which they have registered

Large Student Vote Favors World Court

Colleges Conducting Vote, 333-All But 4 Want American Entry, No Reservations

The campaign of the World Court Committee of the Council of Christian Associations had two outstanding results. The first and most obvious was the large vote that was registered from colleges all over the country, a vote that showed beyond question that the students want America to participate in the Permanent Court of International Justice. The other was the formation of an Intercollegiate student federation for the consideration of international problems.

As reported by the National director. As reported by the national director of the campaign in his report to students voted for the court in terms probably acceptable to the administration; 7,909 voted for the strong reservations of Mr. Borah; 19,895 were against the court. The division of the vote can be seen in the following table:

Total vote cast	128,767
Number of colleges conducting vote	333
Colleges favorable to American entry	329
Colleges opposed to American entry	4
Harding-Hughes-Coolidge terms	30,701
The "Harmony Plan"	21,761
Entry without reservations	39,540
The Borah terms	7,930
Against the court	19,895

In Pennsylvania the vote simply for or against the court was 1210 to 354 in favor of entrance, with the vote on the various propositions running: Harding-Hughes-Coolidge, 2404; Harmony, 2209; Borah, 449, and opposed, 694. This makes the total vote for the state 8823 in favor of the court and 958 opposed.

The second outstanding result was the foundation of the National Students' Federation of America. This organization was formed at Princeton University at the close of the National Collegiate World Court Conference held there December 11 and 12, 1925. The federation is a strictly student controlled body and explicitly states that the students of the college shall have the final authority in the choice of delegates for its meetings which are to be held annually. The federation has been invited to hold its conference at Ann Arbor, the seat of the University of Michigan, next year.

Phone Man Shows How Line Is Made

That the outside workings of the telephone industry have been greatly improved in the past few years, was shown in an illustrated lecture given by Mr. Hyde, a representative of the Bell Telephone Co. of Philadelphia at the meeting of the Big Four Engineering Society on Wednesday evening, January 13.

Four reels of moving pictures, illustrating the digging of post holes, the setting of posts, the transportation of the poles, and the stringing of wires, were shown. Mr. Hyde explained as the pictures were shown on the screen.

Some of the most interesting pictures were the ones showing the apparatus for digging the post holes, the apparatus for setting the poles, the large truck on which this equipment is carried, and the location engineer at work.

The apparatus for digging the post holes consists of a large bit fastened to a truck. This bit is turned into the ground, is raised and spun, emptying its load. This operation is continued until the proper depth is reached.

The apparatus for setting the poles is just as interesting. It picks the pole up in huge claws and drops it into the hole. This apparatus is fastened to a large truck.

Carrying the blue prints, the location engineer was shown staking out new lines. These new cable lines are then stretched very easily by the use of a large truck.

Dr. Bartol Tells Engineers About Early B. U. Teachers

SHOWS STEPHEN W. TAYLOR, FIRST PROFESSOR OF MATHEMATICS, CREATOR OF BUCKNELL

Professor William Cyrus Bartol, head of the department of mathematics, talked to the members of Pi Mu Epsilon and he Big Four, with their guests, at their major yearly meeting in Bucknell Hall, last Thursday night. Dr. Bartol chose as his subject the theme "Bucknell's Pioneer Professors of Mathematics—Who They Were and What They Did."

Professor Harry S. Everett, who presided, introduced Dr. Bartol as a Bucknellian—A. B., 1872; A. M., 1875; Ph. D., Adrian College; teacher in the public schools; instructor in the Mansfield Normal School; professor at Bucknell since 1881; architect; engineer; composer; author; builder of the Bucknell observatory and other buildings.

Dr. Bartol said he didn't know whether he could measure up to all this, but he was sure of one thing; it was sure kind of his hearers to come out on so mean a night. He said he wasn't altogether sure that he himself would have come to Bucknell Hall in the rain to hear any other speaker.

He explained the choice of his subject by showing the real need for greater knowledge in the University of the men who have had a hand in making Bucknell a success.

"I asked a student in the hall the other day," said Professor Bartol, "if he had ever heard of Taylor—Stephen W. Taylor—who did so much for the University. The student looked at me a moment and asked, 'Who was he? A football player?' It just semed to me that we really ought to understand that some people besides football players have done something for Bucknell."

Dr. Bartol's speech in full was as follows:

The pioneer professors of mathematics in Bucknell University were Dr. Stephen W. Taylor, Dr. Charles S. James, and Dr. George Morris Philips. They served in the aggregate thirty-six years. Their successor was elected in 1881. He is still the head of the department of mathematics. Accordingly, he has served, up to the present date, nearly forty-five years.

Dr. Taylor came to Lewisburg in 1845. This was before the University had a single building or a single pupil. During his first year he worked in a preparatory way, and at the end of the year had succeeded in forming a small school for boys and girls—all ages and conditions were admitted. He remained in Lewisburg only until he had succeeded in getting the University fairly under way. He graduated his first class in 1851 and immediately accepted the presidency of Madison University.

Dr. Charles S. James was elected to succeed Dr. Taylor. He entered upon his work as professor of mathematics and natural philosophy in 1871 and remained at the head of the department until 1877—a period of twenty-six years.

Dr. George Morris Philips, a graduate of the University, was elected to the chair of mathematics and astronomy in 1878. He served for three years, resigning in 1881 to accept the principalship of the State Normal School at West Chester, Pa.

It is worthy of note that all of the Bucknell pioneer professors of mathematics, during their college days, were awarded scholastic honors, and in later years attained to the highest recognition in the field of education.

Dr. Taylor graduated from Hamilton College in 1817 at the head of his class. He became in 1846 the acting president of the University at Lewisburg and in 1851 the president of Madison University.

Dr. James graduated from Brown University in 1843. He was chosen to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa scholarship fraternity in his junior year—an unusual honor. Dr. James, like his predecessor, Dr. Taylor, became a college president after leaving Lewisburg. He served as president of Monongahela College from 1880 to 1894.

Dr. Philips graduated from the University at Lewisburg in 1871. He was awarded second honors in the largest class graduated up to that year, like his predecessors in the chair of mathematics, Dr. Philips was elected to a college presidency—that of Bucknell University. He did not accept, however. He served the State Normal School as principal for more than forty years.

With such distinguished pioneers to lead the way there is evident cause and reason why Bucknell should climb among the colleges to her present high place in mathematics. These were able men. They ranked with the best anywhere.

President Daniel C. Gilman once said this to the trustees of Johns Hopkins University, when the all-important question of how to begin the building of the university was on their minds. "Gentlemen," he said, "enlist a great mathematician and a distinguished Grecian and your problem will be solved." And so it came about that before there were any classes or even rooms or buildings for classes, a great mathematician and a distinguished Greek scholar were secured as professors for the proposed university at Baltimore.

The Johns Hopkins' board of control seemed to cherish these early words of President Gilman to his trustees. We find that later, in 1876, they turned to the great mathematician James J. Sylvester, of London, and called him to the chair of mathematics. The United States Bureau of Education in circular No. 3, 1890, has this to say of Sylvester:

"He is a mathematical genius and a unit erful as such in his activity. He has no superior on this continent." Sylvester gave to mathematics a new and powerful impulse. Modern mathematics owes much of its origin and development to his rare genius.

The presence of Sylvester at Johns Hopkins was epoch-making. Dr. G. S. Halsted wrote of him, "American students could hardly realize that Sylvester—who with Caley of London outranks all other English-speaking mathematicians—was actually at work at Johns Hopkins University. Young mathematicians who felt within themselves the longing for creative power, hastened to Baltimore. The city was made to become, by this modern Euclid, a new Alexandria."

The great awakening of the University recalled the words of President Gilman: "If you wish to build a university, enlist a great mathematician—and your problem will be solved." With Sylvester's wonderful ability and activity as an impulse, Johns Hopkins began to accomplish her mission and fulfill the promise of her founders.

I note how very like the Johns Hopkins beginnings were those of our own University. One might well believe that Bucknell's pioneer committee had heard the words of President Gilman to his trustees: "Enlist a great mathematician and your problem will be solved."

For it came to pass in Lewisburg that before there were classes or buildings or rooms, a great mathematician was secured for the proposed university. The great mathematician was Stephen W. Taylor. It was he who solved the problem of building the University at Lewisburg.

Our late President Harris, in the May number, 1906, of the Bucknell Mirror, wrote concerning Dr. Taylor. He said "If any one person is entitled to be called the founder of Bucknell University it is he." And may I emphasize the fact that although Dr. Taylor, the founder of the university was its acting president at the founding, he never had any other official title than professor of mathematics. He performed the duties of president in conjunction with those of his chair of mathematics.

As professor of mathematics, Dr. Taylor delivered his inaugural address at the first Commencement of our University. This was on August 28, 1850; one year before our first class graduated.

It seems that no inaugural address delivered since by president or professor has been received with greater interest and favor. I quote the University minute made on that occasion by the Rev. Adie K. Bell, as secretary. (Fourteen years later Mr. Bell became chairman of our board of trustees.)

"Immediately after the delivery of Professor Taylor's inaugural address as professor of mathematics, the trus-

Faculty Makes Rules For Social Affairs

Agrees to Student Council Plan For Five Dances a Semester, Annual Week-End Party

The social regulations determined upon by the faculty, on recommendation of the committee on social activities, and originally suggested by the Student Council, were read in the meeting of the Student Council Monday, January 11, by President Hunt. The regulations are almost identical with the suggestions made by the Student Council in the last meeting held before vacation.

"1. Fraternities will not tolerate the use of liquor at their social affairs.

"2. Automobiles shall be used only as a means of conveyance to and from fraternity functions, and shall not be occupied by participants between dances.

"3. Each fraternity shall be permitted to hold at most, five dances each semester, two of which college women may attend. These dances shall be held only on Friday or Saturday nights, or on the night preceding a holiday or vacation.

"4. One dance each semester may continue until one o'clock A. M. and the others until twelve o'clock. The dances attended by college women shall be held subject to special rules governing college women.

"5. Each fraternity will be permitted once during the college year to hold a week-end function extending over two nights and the intervening day, while the college is in session. Out of town guests at these functions shall be lodged at approved homes of private families or at approved lodging houses. Chaperonage for the day shall be approved by the committee of the faculty on student activities. This function shall be one of the five permitted dances.

"6. No fraternity shall hold more than one dance at the time of the Junior Prom, the Sophomore Cotillion, or the Freshman Hop.

"7. Chaperones at fraternity social functions will be expected to report to those in charge of the same any actions on the part of participants which do not meet with their approval."

It takes about 1,500 nuts to hold an automobile together, but any one can scatter it all over the landscape.

"Sem" Girl As Santa Cheers Little Tots

"Sem" girls played Santa Claus just before the holidays, when they visited the Evangelical Orphanage to see that their "little sisters" and "brothers" in that institution had their share of Christmas cheer.

They brought a Christmas tree, which they trimmed with gay bags of colored netting filled with pop corn, nuts, and candy. The bags were made by mothers and friends of the girls in Lewisburg.

The names of the children were written on slips of paper, then shuffled in a box, each student drawing a slip, the purpose of this being the selection of a child to which each might play "big sister." However, there were more girls than children, thus some of the children were fortunate in having two "big sisters."

Elizabeth Sale and Ruth Miller told Christmas stories and Florence Parmley, as a clown, delighted the little folk. "Santa Claus," in the person of Edna Watson, who is very popular at the Homes, carried out her part well. She distributed the gifts which the "big sisters" had provided.

Ice cream and Christmas cookies were served. A delightful afternoon was spent, and it would be difficult to decide which got the more pleasure out of the arrangement—the "big sisters" or the children. The young ladies plan to visit often during the remainder of the college year and they will always be given a royal welcome.

Mr. C. I. Carpenter, assistant manager of the football team, is interested in the boys and hopes to be able to help them along the line of their sports. Kappa Delta Rho fraternity, of which Mr. Carpenter is a member, sent a nice sum of money—"to help make Christmas just a little happier."

BOY, HELD, ADMITS ATTEMPT TO ROB THE WOLFE HOUSE

Eugene Catherman, Local Lad, Caught by Policeman Murtha At Door of Building

WANTED MONEY TO GET OUT OF TOWN TO WORK

Denies Charge That He Had Part in the Bower-Brady Thefts of the Last Few Weeks

A boy, prowling around Wolfe House during the dinner hour when he thought the dormitory was empty, was caught by Policeman William P. Murtha, and forced to confess his intention of robbing the building, on Wednesday, January 13, about 6:20 o'clock. Blanche Thompson, '27, was the only person in Wolfe House at the time.

Miss Thompson, working in her room, thought she heard a peculiar noise, after the other women students had all left for dinner. Looking around, she discovered Policeman Murtha, who was stationed to guard the house. The sound was heard again, and a slim boy was seen turning down the steps of Wolfe House, as if to get away.

Murtha stopped him as a suspicious character, the boy not attempting to run away. He was taken into the house, and Fred Evans, '26, was called from his position as guard of Bower House, to watch the boy, while Murtha went for Dean Clark. The boy calmly said his name was Eugene Catherman, aged 17, 269 South First street, and confessed he had gone first to the rear of Wolfe House, but finding the door locked, had come to the front. "Why didn't you come on into the house after you had started up the steps?" asked Murtha, in questioning Catherman. "Because I saw you in there," was the frank reply.

Catherman was suspected of having had some part in the thefts committed at Bower and Brady houses a few days previously. Ruth Mathews, '28, was in her room at Brady House when, during the dinner hour, it was robbed. She had seen the thief who had asked her where Mrs. Sale's room was. Called in to identify Catherman, she said she could not tell whether he was the same person or not.

A private hearing for Catherman was held in Justice-of-the-Peace Bowersox's office on the corner of Sixth and Market streets, Thursday evening, at 7:30, at which Catherman was charged with having taken part in the robbery of George Flick's cigar store, 124 Market street, last July, when $30 worth of goods, cigarettes, cigars, and pipes, had been carried off. Evidence for this charge was based on a statement of the boy's while he was in the custody of "Morey" Wilebach, '26, and Murtha. Catherman denied having said this, and denied any part in the Bower-Brady thefts, but pleaded guilty to the charge of attempted unlawful entry with intent to commit a felony.

Not being able to get work in Lewisburg, Catherman said he had just wanted to get enough money to take him somewhere where he could work. Mr. Catherman, the boy's father, is the janitor at the Phi Kappa Psi house.

PEPS' BOILER IN A M., BASKETBALLERS IN P. M.

Few of us know that "Mal" Musser, the Bucknell basketball coach, rises at five o'clock on these cold winter mornings. "Mal" is learning the business from the ground up at the factory in which his father has an interest.

At present "Mal's" job is to get a full head of steam up by the time the factory opens. By working so early in the morning he is allowed to leave in the late afternoon to coach the varsity basketball team. If he can fire as well as he can coach, we are sure that he has mastered that phase of the mill business thoroughly.

On Riverside Drive, New York, near Columbia University, stands the International House where 1200 students from 69 countries live. Of these students 525 represent 53 countries. Living under one roof these students from all over the world participate in the most real sort of international education.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

SIGMA CHI

Tim Murray, '24, who is a partner in the Murray Furniture Co., of Dubois, Pa. visited his friends at the Sigma Chi house during a recent week-end.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

The pledges tendered a very enjoyable town dance to the active chapter on Friday, January 15. The house was appropriately decorated in purple and white. One of the novelties of the evening was a large electric star which hung above the fire-place, and had numerals, "29" inscribed on it. The guests and chaperones were Brother and Mrs. Robert Harris, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Brough, Brother Jack Davis, '25, and, "Tommy" Kreidel, '29. Noble and his orchestra furnished an original program of music for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Smith were the guests of the chapter for dinner on Sunday.

The chapter gave a chicken and waffle dinner on Monday evening, January 18, in honor of Brother "Moose" McCormick, '04. The chapter also presented him with a Dunhill pipe. Brother Jack Davis, '25, and "Ged" Brough were guests. "Moose" thanked the chapter and gave a brief outline of his future work at West Point.

The Misses Mary Pratt, Naomi Samuel, and Ann Ingram of Nanticoke, Miss Kathryn Jury of Bloomsburg, and Miss Kathryn Ryan of Johnstown were guests for dinner Saturday, January 16.

"Eddie" Jones, '27, left Lewisburg Sunday for Syracuse where he expects to tickle the ivories with Challis and his orchestra in the Hotel Onondaga. Ted Kemmer, and several other of Bill's old players, are also going to play.

KAPPA SIGMA

Last Monday, "Jimmie" Martin, a member of the Kappa Sigma Chapter at Pitt, paid us a visit to see his friends, "Chuck" Kushell and "Henrie" Riesmeyer. The boys had quite a chat with him after dinner and he seemed greatly interested in Bucknell. In the evening he went with some of the fellows to see the interfraternity basketball games.

Kappa Sig has arranged a "Sem" dance for February 6. Noble's orchestra will play.

The basketball team is hard at work getting ready for the games and it looks as though they are going to come through with flying colors.

ALPHA CHI MU

Last week the Alpha Chi-Mu basketball team lined up against the local high school team in Tustin gym. There was some doubt as to how the fraternity cagers would make out in view of the fact that the high school team was having a winning streak. But under Short's careful coaching the game broke 12-13 in favor of the fraternity men. Paul Schmidt refereed the game.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

The T. U. O. basketball team defeated Coal Township high school at Shamokin, Friday, January 15, by a score of 44-25. This gives the boys an even break in out-of-town games; defeating Milroy 40-16, losing to Danville Y. M. C. A. 25-24, and to Shamokin High School 11-10, and winning over Coal Township 44-25.

Theta Upsilon Omega announces the pledging of Willis G. Snow, '28, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

A "Vic" dance attended by a dozen couples was held on Saturday afternoon. Assistant Professor and Mrs. J. S. Gold, and Miss Helen Barto were the chaperones.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

Louis G. Rode, of Susquehanna University, spent Saturday with friends at the house.

The fellows recently enjoyed treats on Harry E. Knudson, '28, whose fraternity pin "disappeared" during the Xmas vacation.

In playing a certain questioning game the other evening, Arthur B. Stutzman, '29, with his hand upon the Bible, innocently confessed that he loved a certain "Sem" girl. He says that he is patiently waiting for Washington's birthday to approach.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Bucknell Tri Deltas in the neighborhood of Philadelphia held their annual Christmas gathering on the afternoon of December the thirtieth, when they lunched at the Arcadia and attended "Carroll's Vanities" at the Schubert Theatre. Those present were Ann Zerby, '26, Margaret Zerby, '29, Sarah Heysham, '28, Gladys Roberts, '26, Mrs. Roy Schwicker, '24 Miss Sue Plummer, '23, and Miss Miriam Stanger, '24.

MU PHI EPSILON

A French program was given by the Mu Phi Epsilon fraternity in a private recital in the Women's College in the evening of January 11. The numbers were quite interesting, and made a very pleasant evening's entertainment.

The Program was:

Singing ..... The Triangle

PROPOSES NEW TEST FOR MATRICULATES

Pres. Smith of Washington and Lee Univ. Would Ask Them To Pass on Own Fitness

A new type of college entrance examination has come in for consideration by Dr. Henry Louis Smith, President of Washington and Lee University. Unlike all other tests designed to certify the academic fitness of college candidates, it makes no reference to scholastic attainment nor to mental brightness as indicated by psychological or intelligence tests. It is, as Dr. Smith terms it, a test of manhood, an examination of a preparatory school graduate's fitness for college life.

No actual application of the examination is designed by Dr. Smith, he having merely propounded it in the form of a question to be answered mentally by all young men about to enter college.

"The first part of a college course," says President Smith, "is largely a continuation of high school subjects and high school methods, and no well-prepared high school graduate who will average five hours of diligent preparation out of each twenty-four need have any fear of not making at least a passing grade on his fifteen college class meetings per week.

"For, then, out of every hundred of these ambitious, well-trained young Americans should from ten to twenty-five make a dismal and often a tragic and hopeless failure of their longed-for college course before its first year of elementary study is over?

"For every college matriculate whose lack of brain ability or lack of preparatory brain training wrecks his college career, at least ten are failures because they were so fatally unprepared for the intoxicating freedom, the fascinating diversions, and the animal temptations' of college life during the 'fool-kid' period which so often precedes and imitates real manhood.

"Addressing himself to the boys of the country individually, he puts to them the following questions:

"Are you enough of a grown-up, well-bred man to carry through a gentleman's daily personal routine, without a word of advice or suggestion or command, and test your preparation.

"Do you, with reasonable regularity go to bed at some fixed time, with no one to remind you or order or waken you?

"Have you formed the settled habit of personal cleanliness, with thoroughly washed hands and ears and head and body all the time, with clean linen and presentable clothes, with hair and shoes and nails properly cared for every day, with the habit of attending to your laundry and knowing where your various personal belongings are?

"Have you grown-up sense enough to take special care of your teeth during this special period when unsuspected decay and infection may injure your manhood health and wreck your later life with crippling disease?

"Have you learned that the human engine whose poisonous waste is not removed each day is on the road to an early breakdown, or are you such a 'fool-kid' chauffer as to be rather proud of being able to put off such 'interruptions' almost indefinitely without noticeable disability?

"Are you in the habit of gorging your food in big mouthfuls, washing each down with a gulp of liquid, and finding ten or twelve minutes long enough to eat 'plenty of grub' till the next feeding time?

"These few items will help explain the first question of your entrance examination. If you can't make 75 per cent. on this section of the examination, you'd better get busy at once, for you are certainly not getting ready for college, whatever your textbook grades and textbook units and personal conceit may be."

HOW—

STATIC ELECTRICITY CAN SET MOTOR CAR ON FIRE.—

Do you ever wonder why it is that gasoline trucks have a chain hanging down to the ground when they travel along and when they stop? This is done, says the accident prevention department of the Chicago Motor club, to get rid of static electricity, which otherwise might set fire to the tank.

Static electricity in connection with gasoline is a subject which should be more familiar to motorists, as an element of danger is involved. In proof of this the accident prevention department cites the case of a naval surgeon whose automobile was destroyed and its owner severely burned through the lighting of gasoline by a spark produced by frictional electricity. The surgeon had walked some distance to his garage in his overcoat and rubber boots. The friction of the flopping coat against the boots generated the electricity, while the rubber insulated him from the ground and allowed his body to store it. The spark therefore went through the grounded automobile, igniting the gasoline.

Another case is cited of a chauffeur who hung an ordinary five-gallon can on the iron hook of the gas pump. The gasoline had been pumped when a spark jumped from the can to the pump and fired the gasoline. They put out the fire, and as the car was waiting to be filled they repeated the process and the gasoline caught fire again.

WHY—

Limit to Airplane Speed Can Be Fixed

What will be the limit of man's speed through the air? According to Science and Invention, experts and engineers have tried to estimate this limit since the Wright brothers made their first successful flight in a power-driven airplane. One hundred miles an hour was once considered an amazing speed limit for airplanes. This, with many estimates that followed, has been surpassed by the rapid advance of aircraft and motor designs, until up to the present time it is difficult to estimate what the maximum speed of future airplanes will be.

There are, however, two conditions to be considered, namely, the mechanical limit and the physical limit. The latter has already shown itself in closed circuit speed trials when making turns, due to the fact that centrifugal force begins acting on the blood, forcing it away from the pilot's head and rendering him temporarily unconscious. While there are practically no physical defects noted in flying a straight course, outside of nerve strain, the mechanical limits are present. This is known as an airplane's speed range, which is the difference between the low landing speed and the highest level flying speed, the definite landing speed desired becoming the point of departure in the design.

At the annual international air races a landing speed not to exceed 75 miles an hour is fixed, so that safety is not sacrificed in the work of science to advance the world's speed records.

As the airplane at present is the most effective weapon of war, due to its speed and maneuverability and with the leading countries of the world striving to attain constantly increasing speeds, it is safe to estimate velocities in excess of 400 miles an hour in the near future.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

Athletes Speak in Churches

For U. of P. Christian Asso.

Students of the University of Pennsylvania occupied pulpits of 104 churches in the city to explain the work of the Christian Association of the University among college men. The talks are intended to arouse interest in the $750,000 campaign for the proposed building.

The Rev. Charles O. Wright, executive secretary, instructed the student preachers to make no appeals for funds. The speakers merely gave their impression of the work of the Association on the campus.

George C. Thayer, captain of the football team and All-American end, spoke at the morning service at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Whitemarsh. Joseph Wilson, captain of last year's team, spoke at the Church of the Savior. Both are members of the student vestry of the Chapel of the Transfiguration.

Other members of the vestry who spoke in the churches are as follows:

Howard T. Long, captain of the Baseball team and football player, accompanied by John Dern, former quarterback; Foster Stanford, baseball pitcher and member of the varsity football squad; James Spigler, a crew man; Robert Eichelberger, editor-in-Chief of the Pennsylvanian, the student daily, and others.—Public Ledger.

U. of Pittsburgh Dean of Women Defender of Flapper Customs

Vigorous defense of the modern "flapper age" and condemnation of those who attack the youth of today, as well as educational institutions and teachers, was expressed by Miss Thyrsa Amos, dean of women of the University of Pittsburg.

"There have been many printed criticisms recently of our colleges, students, faculties, and alumni," said Miss Amos.

"It does not take any brains to throw a brick, and there are also a great many people who are attacking the fundamental institutions of our society because it is the only way in which they can obtain publicity for themselves.

"Those persons who hurl the bricks are most unfair in that they do not give the individual or the institutions attacked any constructive suggestions on how the alleged evil can be corrected.

"So far as the youth of the land is concerned, I do not hesitate to say that I think pretty well of the flapper age, including its dress.

"Of course, I do not support every expression of the age, but I find that the majority of college girls for example, are really very serious and are doing some fine constructive thinking. As regards our educational institutions, I think they are making the most conservative efforts to forge ahead, and against odds that their critics do not understand.

"We must not attack the youth so relentlessly. It is not only unfair, but vulgar to seize upon some individual instances of undoubted evil portent, flaunt these before the world and then condemn youth as a whole.

"I think the youth of today is splendid and I am very hopeful about the whole situation."—Public Ledger.

U. of P. Has 25000 Volumes Which Deal With Education

A new library containing thousands of books dealing with the study of education, has been opened in Bennet Hall the University of Pennsylvania's newest building, at 34th and Walnut streets. The collection contains approximately 25,000 volumes, and includes the books of the Penniman Library, donated to the University by James Hosmer Penniman, brother of Provost Penniman.

The new library is on the second floor of the new building, which houses the School of Education and the Graduate School. The books were segregated from the University library, in order that they might be more available to the women students of education, according to Asa Don Dickinson, University librarian.

Young women students, in the Home Economics course, known as the "trifles" course, at Drexel Institute, are practicing feeding rats.

The object is to give them first-hand proof of the effect of different foods on the physical growth. The reaction to certain foods upon rats is said to be the same as upon human beings.

The girls are feeding the rodents foods lacking in certain proteins or other essential elements and the results then are studied.

Lafayette College Students "Owe" Their Alma Mater $149.31 Each

Each student who was enrolled in Lafayette College last year "owes" the college $149.31 for his education, according to estimates made on the basis of the annual report of A. M. Lane, college bursar.

It cost Lafayette College $409.81 a student last year to maintain its plant and to provide instruction for the 1,023 students in attendance. The average student paid $206.50 for this instruction. The cost a student was slightly higher than that for the year before when the college spent $397.15 toward the education of each student. Opening of the new Memorial Gymnasium and necessary additions to the college equipment, combined with the increase in the size of the faculty caused the increase in maintenance costs.

86 COLUMBIA UNIV. SENIORS ADMIT HAVING BEEN KISSED

Fifty-eight Columbia College seniors will marry for money if they get the chance. Sixty-five believe prohibition "a bad thing for the country." Fourteen never have danced and only eight admit owning raccoon coats.

Such were the results of a questionnaire answered by 120 of the 300 seniors. Fifty-seven favor bachelorhood. Daily chapel was voted down, 73 to 56. By a vote of 62 to 45, Columbia's honor system was rebuked.

Robert William Rowan of Great Neck, L. I., and George G. Pease of 805 Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn, Captain of the 1925 football team, share the honors of having done most for Columbia during the year. Rowan was selected as the most typical Columbia man, Peace the most popular.

The handsomest senior is Allen Forsythe Mayhew of Kalamazoo, Mich. He is twenty-one, weighs 155, parts his light brown hair in the middle and has a light complexion and red cheeks. Roy Wagner, football end, was voted the most modest.

Eighty-six seniors admitted they had been kissed. Twelve declared their college education had not been worth while. Associate Professor Harry J. Carman of the History Department, was voted the favorite instructor.

Mark Twain is the class's favorite author. John Barrymore and Walter Hampden were named the most popular actors. Forty-five who voted are Republicans and thirty-four, Democrats. The majority expected to be earning $5,000 annually five years after graduation, in June.—New York World.

Quiz Goes The Radio At Goucher

Today was bargain day for radio fans at Goucher College. No more will loud speakers or earphones aid in whiling away the hours twixt supper time and breakfast. President William Wesley Guth has banned them.

Radio is responsible for late hours and consequent loss of efficiency and "pep," Dr. Guth told the students. In the business world, he said, it is easy to pick out the men who own radios. In the morning their faces tell. Therefore the radio ban, "for the physical as well as the mental welfare" of Goucher girls.

University of Chicago Gets $600,000 of $1,500,000 Property

Charitable and educational institutions are the chief beneficiaries in the will of Miss Helen Culver disposing of her $1,500,000 estate.

Miss Culver, who died last August in Lake Forest at the age of 95, was one of the Mid-west's pioneer advocates of women suffrage and had decided millions of dollars to various institutions.

The University of Chicago, which receives more than $1,100,000 from Miss Culver, got an additional $600,000 under the will. Other bequests: Lincoln Institute, Lincoln Ridge, Ky., a school for negroes, $10,000; Idaho Industrial Institute, Weiser, Idaho, $10,000; Berea College, Kentucky, $20,000, and $35,000 to Chicago charities.

EDITOR SUSPENDED

By a committee of his classmates, Lewis Russell, '26, was deprived of his position as editor of the University literary magazine, The Occident. The action came as a result of the appearance of a satiric article on the Nativity in the November issue.

Suspension of the Occident was ordered, until another editor be secured. The new editor will "make such changes in the editorial staff as he deems necessary."

B. U. CENSUS SHOWS 24 DENOMINATIONS

Baptists Lead Among Students; Presbyterians, Methodists, Lutherans in Order

A wide range of interdenominationalism characterizes the enrolment for this year as shown by the census of religions recently compiled at the office of the registrar. Of the 1914 students in attendance at the time of the compilation of the statistics, the Baptists are the most numerous, there being 261 of that denomination. Presbyterians, Methodists, and Lutherans follow in the order named, with enrolments of 185, 182, and 138 respectively. The same order of favoritism is shown by the list compiled especially for the freshmen with the figures running, Baptists, 73; Presbyterian, 54; Methodist, 49; and Lutheran, 44.

"YELPING ALUMNI" HARMFUL

An anonymous writer in The Outlook of January 6 states that the matter with college football is the "yelping alumni." An editorial comment states that the writer of this article is closely identified with college athletics and a keen student of football.

"The biggest menace to college football to-day," he says, "is the yelping alumni. A team must win. A coach must turn out a winning team or the Roman mob turns thumbs down and off comes his head."

"Halfback Grange is a quite natural evolution of the college football system. He is simply the forerunner of other star players who will join professional teams. A star football player is glorified, deified, and his true importance on the campus magnified until all sense of values is lost."

The writer then takes the case of a youngster entering a big college. He is filled with ambition to play football. But he comes from a high school whose team had little reputation, and he is side-tracked by the coaches, who prefer those players who come with ready-made reputations. Therefore, the writer concludes, "The boys who actually need the coaching and the physical and mental development don't get it! The stalwarts who need it least get all of it! That's why I say that football in colleges has been perverted."

COLLEGE BANS CHARLESTON

The Charleston was banned January 7, at the College of William and Mary.

"Dance, after all," it was held, should emphasize grace and beauty, and as the latest fad preserves neither of these qualities, it should hold no place on the program of college dances."

Near East Relief Thanks "Sem" Girls

Two letters in appreciation of the contribution made by the students at he Women's College to the cause of the Near East Relief through the observance of the Golden Rule dinner on December 13 have recently been received by the Registrar. The one is from Miss Rachel Armstrong, field worker, and the other from F. W. King, state comptroller. The letters follow:

"Scranton, Pa., January 9, 1926

"Mr. H. W. Holter, Registrar,
Bucknell University
Lewisburg, Pa.

"My Dear Mr. Holter:

"I received your generous check representing the sacrifice of the Bucknell girls, at the Golden Rule dinner, December 13. This check provides for the support and education of the little orphan girl for a full year. It certainly was worth while and the gift is fully appreciated by the Near East Relief. It s a cause of greatest gratitude on my part, because it takes care of the child in whom I am so deeply interested. Your check has brought the fund up to $302.24; so we are well along toward the $560 mark.

"Kindly express my thanks to all who are interested.

Very sincerely yours,
"Rachel Armstrong,
"Field worker."

"Enclosed herewith is the receipt for $102.24, contributed to Near East Relief, to be applied to Miss Rachel Armstrong's sponsorship. Miss Armstrong has signed the receipt and I have also endorsed it acknowledging receipt of the check which Miss Armstrong forwarded to us.

"Permit me to take the occasion to express to your students through you our deepest appreciation for this splendid expression of their cooperation and interest in the welfare of the orphan wards of the Near East Relief. It is just such contributions as these which enable us to go on with the work of caring for the thousands of little ones until they are old enough to support themselves.

"Again expressing our appreciation for this fine contribution, I am,

Sincerely yours,

"JIMMY" CHAPPELL DIES

"Jimmy" Chappell, long one of the most familiar characters about the campus, died on Saturday evening, January 9, at the home of Mrs. Peter Stahl in town.

"Jimmy's" regular attendance at all the athletic events about the college had made him a well known figure to practically all the students at Bucknell for several decades.

The Reverend H. H. Rupp, pastor of the Reformed Church, preached the funeral service on Tuesday in the Lewisburg cemetery chapel.

WHAT PRICE A PASSING GRADE?

"To crib or not to pass; that is the question."

Too often this seems to be the attitude of some of our students who arrive, too late, at the consciousness that there has been something going on at the college which they have been missing. When the end of a semester draws near and we come face to face with a reckoning of whether or not we are reasonably well trained in the course we are pursuing, there comes a time when the mental fiber undergoes a test. Then it is that the student discovers for what purpose he is in college.

There are some who have no fear of examinations. These are usually the ones who, throughout the year have studied faithfully and thoroughly. Their confidence is based on familiarity with the subject matter that is to be treated. They are in college to learn what the curriculum has to offer.

There are others who approach the examinations as an ordeal which must be suffered and who trust to luck to aid them in "getting by." These are students who have worked at times, but were not unwilling to put study aside at times for lighter diversions. Their fear of the ordeal is real, founded on lessons unlearned and work undone. Some of these are serious students who have been unable to keep up the fast pace required of students who take five or six courses each week. Others are students who, although capable of doing the work, have preferred to spend a greater portion of their time in the self-culture that is found in the extra-curricular and social activities which have been so greatly stressed in American colleges.

There are others who come to the examination period as a final time of grace, a last opportunity to demonstrate their fitness to be credited with completion of a course. They may have worked little or much. Their efforts may have been steady and plodding or fitful and spasmodic, but, in coming to the examination to prove their ability to pass the course, they demonstrate that their purpose in college is to get the essentials of the subjects taught.

But there is a class of people who come to college to get degrees. They do not come for an education, but for the attributes of an education. Unlike the "ordinalists" they will not be content to let luck settle whether or not they shall pass. They are determined to pass by whatever means. It is with these that the practice of cribbing finds its hold.

Unfortunately cribbing does not stop with this class. Mixed together as we are in college we are likely to lose sight of the things that we are here for and begin to feel that our primary object is to get through college. Seeing our fellows "get away" with dishonesty in their work, we are tempted to imitate them. Here comes the test of moral fibre. Obsessed with the idea of getting through college, too many of us fail in that test.

Now that the greatest period of stress is about to begin, let us go over the situation and remind ourselves of the facts. We are young people preparing ourselves for life. The kind of preparation we receive now will largely determine the lives we will lead later. If our college work is to be of real value to us we must get what we get credit for; "getting away with it" is not sufficient. If our college work is not to mean anything to us, it is time to stop bluffing at getting a college education.

Be honest. Pass or flunk on what you know or fail to know, not on how much you can get on a slip of paper or copy from the other fellow. A passing grade at the price of a semester's study is dear enough. A passing grade at the price of lifelong regret is too expensive. You'll feel better for having flunked honestly than for having passed in any other way.

WHAT AN ILL WIND BROUGHT B. U.

It is said that it is an ill wind that brings nobody good. Bucknell has had a hard experience on the basketball floor in the past few years. Formerly possessing teams that were consistent winners, and standing high year after year in the list of successful teams, Bucknell has fallen away in recent years to the point where almost any good college team could trounce her players. The fault, of course, has not been that of the men themselves. With the gymnasium in such shape physically that it was practically impossible to hold games therein, the team has been at a very serious disadvantage. It is not to be wondered at that interest in the sport fell away and that the varsity made such a poor showing.

Yet out of this situation has come a development that may give Bucknell better teams than she has ever had. It all depends upon the loyalty of the undergraduates. With little incentive to try for the varsity team, basketball players in the University have, during these few years, devoted themselves to building up good teams among the different fraternities. The result is that we have a number of very creditable aggregations of tossers. We have more students actually playing basketball at Bucknell, probably, than we ever had at one time before. Among these many players are some of first rate ability.

This situation is ideal if we make it so. It is exactly the sort of situation the new direcor of athletics, John D. Plant, wants to develop. He wants all students, if possible, to take part in athletics. If that can be brought about, we shall develop great numbers of able players for all sorts of sports. By chance we have already done this in basketball. We want to continue this inter-fraternity rivalry.

But we also want to go a step farther if we are to make the situation ideal. We want to keep feeding the rank of our players into the varsity teams. It should be the loyal effort of the fraternity teams to continue to develop skilled men for he University.

There has been dissatisfaction with the system that sought to train up a few supermen in sports and neglected the great bulk of the students while doing it. That was partly the fault of the system and partly the fault of circumstances. The University authorities regret the effect of this system as much as any one can. The appointment of John D. Plant is their effort to improve the situation. But the University authorities and Mr. Plant can do nothing without loyal support. Here is a case where the interested, which claim that loyalty to alma mater comes first, can prove that loyalty. They have already set in motion the very system that it is hoped will prove a cure for the ills of the situation. Let them loyally continue this work, and to the laudable idea of giving more men exercise let them add the still more laudable idea of complete co-operation in this move toward better things. If all do that, the ill wind that has been causing us distress will in the end bring us great benefit.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

The pointer hasn't been operating for several weeks.

There's a point in that, too. We students often start to do something but we haven't the strength, either of will or of intellect, to carry through properly. One of the lessons that certainly ought to be learned by the time a person is ready to graduate from college is the lesson of foresight. Find out what your task involves and then have the strength to carry it to its conclusion.

Perhaps the most significant fact in the developments of the past week was the opening of radio station WJBQ. The practical presentation of Bucknell over the air, through its own station, speaks well for the progressiveness of the college. Bucknell is not the first college to establish its own broadcasting station but the university stations are far from common.

This is distinctly one of those ventures where foresight is needed. Several of the stations that have been opened by other colleges were short-lived. We hope that WJBQ will not be one of the short-lived variety. If those in control of the station plan wisely, and the rest of the people in the University cooperate willingly, there is no reason why WJBQ can not become a great influence for the benefit, not of Bucknell alone, but also of the whole surrounding country.

Another point worthy of mention is the showing made by Bucknell's first freshman basketball team. The mere mention of a freshman team sends a thrill of pride to the heart, but when that team displays its ability as well as our freshmen did against the Dickinson "Jayvees" last Saturday there is added pride.

And when it comes to basketball we want to add a few words for Mal Musser. His work in developing a team after the sport had been almost dead at the University for two years is certainly deserving of the highest praise. No coach in recent years has had the sympathy of the students to a greater extent than Musser now holds it. One reason is that he is teaching his men to play the game, win or lose.

Coming back to the idea of foresight, the Registrar is sending out bills for the second semester. It might be a matter of fine foresight to get those bills adjusted before the first of February.

FROSH FORGET; SORRY NOW; WON'T EVER DO IT AGAIN

Two wayward freshmen faced the Interclass Council on Monday evening. The first of these, Samuel Feastet, had parked his hands in his pockets while strolling about the campus, and must wear a pair of boxing gloves the remainder of the week.

The other freshman, George W. Strahan, was charged with wearing colored socks. As a punishment he must carry with him a miniature clothes line, on which will hang the black socks which he said were in the wash.

tees, the students, and spectators present were resolved into a meeting, the object of which was to solicit from Professor Taylor a copy of his address for publication." A note to this minute says, "The address was published and copyrighted."

I will add that to my mind it was a really great address and especially so where it deals with what Dr. Taylor called the legitimate results of mathematical education and discipline.

Dr. Taylor was born in Massachusetts on October 28, 1791. Soon after graduation from Hamilton College he was made principal of Lowville Academy. Under his leadership the academy soon became one of the leading institutions of its kind in the state of New York. After sixteen years at Lowville as principal of the academy, he was invited to Madison University. He accepted the invitation and became the principal of the Madison academic department. He entered upon his work as such with characteristic energy. He revolutionized the whole department and created a system of instruction and discipline very much advanced in method and efficiency. His success was such that the university in a few years placed him in its chair of mathematics and natural philosophy. In this position he served for seven years, with singular success. Then in 1845, much to the regret of trustees, faculty, and students he resigned in order to accept an invitation to come to Lewisburg.

About thirteen years before Dr. Taylor received his invitation to Lewisburg, the Northumberland Association of Baptists passed a motion looking to the founding of a Baptist school somewhere in central Pennsylvania. The school was to be of the "manual labor" type. After years of discussion and agitation, the movement eventually turned into an effort to establish a high school for "males," another for "females," and a third to be added later. The third was to be a college and a theological institute for qualified students.

The committee that had the school proposition in charge was made up of Baptists, selected by the Association on account of their active interest in Baptist education and denominational extension.

The members of the committee were Dr. William H. Ludwig, the Rev. Charles Tucker, the Rev. Joel T. Bradley, the Rev. J. Green Miles, and James Moore Sr. Associates who were active supporters of the enterprise were Samuel Wolfe, James Moore Jr., Joseph Meixell, Levi B. Christ, and Benjamin Bear.

In carrying forward this venture the committee seemed to feel that with its limited experience in such matters it would be wise to get expert aid, lest it should fall into possible errors and difficulties and defeat its own best efforts. The Rev. Eugenio Kincaid, founder of the Milton Baptist church, a graduate of Madison University, a man in whom the entire central association had full confidence, recommended that the services of Stephen W. Taylor, professor of mathematics at Madison, be sought as the man who was splendidly equipped for the task.

On December 8, 1845, Professor Taylor was appointed "General Agent" and given full charge with authority to go ahead with the school enterprise. He directly came to Lewisburg, looked over the field, studied the problem, and decided to join hands with the committee in the undertaking.

The committee had thought that a building could be put up and a teaching force secured in time to have the school in session by the fall term of 1846.

Dr. Taylor matured his plans and brought them forward. They involved an organized effort, a systematic campaign, and much that was new to the committee.

First, he said, we must raise an endowment—one hundred thousand dollars should be secured before we ask the Legislature for a charter. In addition we should have three suitable buildings—another hundred thousand dollars should be in sight for that. A good library and school apparatus should be secured. All these, he pointed out, were essential to moderate success.

The committee was surprised and somewhat staggered at the vastness of their undertaking as seen through the eyes of Dr. Taylor.

A conference of interested friends was held to consider further the situation. Here Dr. Taylor took the opportunity to assure friends present that he had in mind more than the founding of a local school. He proposed that a wide constituency be built up, and that all parties interested join hands to plan and work together for a great institution. He had in mind a Baptist university and yet a university in a large way undenominational. He planned that trustees and faculty should be Baptist but not exclusively so; and that they be chosen not locally but thoughout the state.

The plans of Dr. Taylor and his propositions in the main part were endorsed by the conference. Soon the work proposed began to take shape. Lewisburg was the site chosen for the institution and Lewisburg was ready to show the way. Subscriptions to an

BUCKNELL FIVE WINS F. AND M. GAME, 28-17

Bucknell won its second game of the season by handing the Franklin and Marshall team its first setback by the score of 28 to 17, Wednesday evening, January 13.

The teams battled evenly through the first half in which the score was knotted no less than five times. Bucknell had only a slim two-point lead when the half whistle blew and this melted soon after the second half opened when Brown sank a two-pointer in the net. Franklin and Marshall scored only once again from the field during the entire half.

Lupco, a transfer from Bucknell, who has been playing regularly with the Lancaster team, was sent into the game during the last few minutes and performed smoothly. After the game he said, "I surely like the fellows and the spirit up here. That was a great hand they gave me."

Seven baskets to Murphy's credit account for half of the Bucknell scoring. Brown of Franklin and Marshall kept his team in the running by his floor work and accurate shooting.

GEORGETOWN SUCCUMBS TO B. U.; MIDDIES WIN

The varsity quintet broke even on its southern swing of the last week-end, winning from Georgetown last Thursday night by the score of 23 to 15, but losing to the Middies at Annapolis on Saturday by a 14 to 40 verdict.

The dribblers played a snappy game at Georgetown, although the going was rough at times. Murphy, the star of the game, was injured, while in the act of shooting, so badly that he was forced to withdraw early from the game at Navy. From the first Bucknell played a whirlwind offensive game, maintaining a lead from the starting whistle. At the beginning of the second half the five man defense functioned the best that it has so far this year and the Georgetown team was held so effectively that it was unable to score from the field during the first fifteen minutes. At one time the Bisons were leading 23 to 8. Then Rigg and Fritzinger were severely jolted. The Georgetown coach sent in a number of subs at this period and a rally lessened the Bucknell advantage, but the Bisons were not in danger at any time during the second half. Murphy was high scorer closely seconded by Nork of Georgetown.

On Saturday the powerful Naval Academy team administered a 40 to 14 drubbing to a rather disorganized Bucknell five. The passing of both teams was snappy and accurate but the Bisons fizzled many easy scoring opportunities. Then, too, Craig, the sensational Navy long shot artist, ran wild with 8 baskets.

The play was hard during the first half which ended 16 to 5, but the Navy gathered speed as the game progressed and swamped the Bisons in the second period. Rigg perhaps played the best game for Bucknell, but Craig of the Navy was by far the individual star of the game.

Schmidt, an old Bucknell football captain who is now coaching at Tome School, umpired the game.

FROSH BEAT DICKINSON JUNIORS BY 46-23 SCORE

The freshman in their initial appearance easily defeated the Dickinson Junior Varsity by a 46 to 23 verdict. The polished passing of the rangy yearlings bewildered the Carlisle team, and both Klosterman and Colestock scored at will, while nearly every player broke into the scoring column as the game progressed.

Dickinson scored first, and for a time it appeared as though the outcome of the game would be doubtful up to the final whistle, but the freshmen gradually drew away from the Dickinson team, leading 20 to 11 at half time. Halicki and Mitchell broke into the game and the teamwork was maintained at the same pace. Mentzer played best for Dickinson. During the game he made several apparently "unconscious" shots which brought the gallery to its feet.

How F. and M. Combined

While Franklin College had remained in Lancaster, Marshall College was established first in York and later in Mercersburg. Travel was so uncertain because of bad roads, more especially in the winter months, when college was in session, that the people of York, Dauphin, Adams, Franklin and other central Pennsylvania counties decided a school should be established which would be nearer to those points.

There's no excuse for long hair now.

endowment were solicited. Dr. Ludwig, Samuel Wolfe, James Moore Jr., and Joseph Meixell each gave the sum of one thousand dollars. More than one hundred citizens of Lewisburg came forward with substantial subscriptions. The Northumberland Baptist Association pledged twenty thousand dollars or twenty per cent. of the proposed endowment.

Dr. Taylor, encouraged by the outlook, prepared a charter for a university on wide lines. He called a meeting of those concerned to consider it. His charter and his plans to have it legally authorized at once, met with approval. He was now ready for Harrisburg. It took seventeen days of persistent effort to convince he Legislature that the terms of the charter were right and proper; and that the purposes of the university at Lewisburg as urged by her promoters were entitled to legislative enactment.

Finally, however, the charter was granted in the exact form composed by Dr. Taylor. It was signed by Governor Francis R. Shunk on February 6, 1846.

In Dr. Taylor's mind the final success of the effort to found a college at Lewisburg depended in the main upon the kind of support it would receive in Philadelphia. Accordingly, "armed with the charter and a guarantee of twenty thousand dollars from the Northumberland Association, he set out for that city. There he spent three months in the interest of the proposed institution."

He first brought his plans before the State Educational Society. Here they were endorsed and a committee appointed to aid in the effort to carry them into effect. This committee was made up of Thomas Wattson, William Jones and Bucknell later became, in turn, head and later became, in turn, chairman of the University Board of Trustees. This committee called a meeting of ministers and interested laymen of Philadelphia. The meeting was held on February 26, 1846, in the First Baptist church and the plans for a university at Lewisburg were endorsed.

The friends in Philadelphia went to work. A subscription toward the one hundred thousand dollar endowment was started. Dr. David Jayne gave $12,000; John P. Crozer, $7,500; William Bucknell, $7,000; Thomas Watson, $2,000. Washington Butcher, W. W. Keen, Israel James, and the Rev. Samuel J. Creswell each gave $1,000. The Philadelphia Association promised to raise one-third of the $100,000 aimed at. It later redeemed its pledge and went high over the top.

Other promising fields in Pennsylvania and New Jersey were successfully canvassed for funds by Dr. Taylor. But he desired now to turn his attention to planning buildings for the proposed university.

The work of soliciting funds was, accordingly, now undertaken by Dr. Eugenio Kincaid and Dr. Wm. Shadrach. The work for the most part devolved upon Dr. Shadrach. He visited nearly every church in Pennsylvania and secured subscriptions from more than four thousand persons. Through his efforts, largely, the hundred thousand dollar endowment was finally raised.

Dr. Taylor was now directing his attention to the problem of grounds and buildings for the university. He visited a number of like institutions and also sought by correspondence to gather "up-to-date" information for his purpose. The outline plans he worked out were adopted by the committee and put into the hands of Thomas U. Walter, a noted architect, who developed them and worked out the necessary details for building.

But before buildings could be erected, on the fifth of October, 1846, nearly eighty years ago, Dr. Taylor gathered together his little group of pupils in the basement of the old Baptist church that stood on Third Street near Market. His little school, now forming, was made up of girls and boys, large and small. All ages and conditions started in with high hopes. Ann thus Bucknell University had its beginning.

The next year Dr. Taylor formed a freshman class, and he carried it through four college years to graduation in 1851.

His assistants in the College were only two professors—George R. Bliss, appointed to the chair of Greek in 1849, and George W. Anderson, appointed to the chair of Latin also in 1849. Dr. Taylor had been made professor of mathematics and natural philosophy the year before, or in 1848.

The teachers in the Academy at this time were Isaac N. Loomis, Alfred Taylor, and Norman Ball.

The students who graduated in this, the University's first class, were:

J. Merrill Linn	Lewisburg
Washington Barnhurst	Philadelphia
Lesuer M. Fish	Beaver County
George Osman Ide	Philadelphia
John M. Lyons	Chester County
Henry Pomerene	Pittsburgh
J. Harvard Castle	Philadelphia

The honor men were J. Merrill Linn and J. Harvard Castle. Commencement Day was Wednesday, August 20, 1851.

The courses of study pursued by this class for the degree of Bachelor of Arts were as follows:

Courses in the preparatory department were, Latin throughout two years, including Caesar and Cicero; four terms of Greek, (the year being divided into three terms), Arithmetic, Alegbra, and English grammar each required three terms. History of the United States and general history each required a term.

Courses prescribed in college were: pure mathematics, five terms; applied mathematics, four terms; Latin, nine terms; Greek, nine terms; philisiphy, including economics, civics, and logic, seven terms; English, one term; chemistry, one term. There were no electives in the college.

I note that, in all, nine terms of prescribed mathematics were established by Dr. Taylor in the make-up of his college curriculum for the Arts degree.

In our more modern way of putting it, thirty semester hours of mathematics were prescribed in the college course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, in the days when our first class graduated, eighty years ago.

Dr. Taylor, being a mathematician loved minute detail in everything. The laws of the University, enacted by the trustees, August, 1851, can scarcely be surpassed for minute and precise detail. These laws were probably the last contribution made by Dr. Taylor toward the founding of Bucknell.

I will quote as examples a few of these laws of 1851.

"No student during term time shall go more than five miles from the University, without the permission of the President."

"No student will be permitted to be absent from his room after ten o'clock at night, except in cases of necessity."

"No student may suffer any one to lodge in his room without leave of some one of his instructors."

In the college catalogue of 1851 the following advice is given: "A free allowance of pocket money leads a student into many snares, and greatly interferes with his progress in study. The money for minors should generally be deposited with some citizen or member of the faculty who will act as guardian and render semi-annual accounts, charging five per cent commission on the amount expended."

Let us go back another eighty years for college laws. This we cannot do for Bucknell, but we can for some of our older colleges. I have here a portion of the diary of one Ebenezer Baldwin, who was a student at Yale in the year 1762. This I have from Dr. Thwing's History.

Quoting from its "Saturday, March 27th, I attended college examination. Heard Mr. Daggett preach two sermons on the trinity of the God-head. Read some in Milton.

"March 30th. Attended prayers. Studied almost the whole day. Went an argument on our forensic question, which was,—'Did Adam know that eternal damnation would be his doom if he ate the forbidden fruit?'

"April 9th. Nicholas Hallicock and Brewster were publicly admonished for having a dance at Milford and for their general conduct. Bull for his going to Milford without permission and for his general conduct was ordered to depart from college and to live under the care of some minister at a distance till he should show signs of reformation and be fit to take a college degree."

It seems to me that in comparison with Yale's ancient discipline, the laws sponsored by Dr. Taylor eighty years ago were modern and reasonable. And for that period in university history, they were commendable.

Indeed all the pioneer work of Dr. Taylor at Lewisburg in the light of today must be rated high. There is much of the heroic in many things he did. What has been said of the great President Timothy Dwight of Yale might well be said of Dr. Taylor "He was a scholar and a teacher. A dignity that commanded respect, an accuracy that inspired confidence, an ardor that kindled interest, and a kindness that won love, were embodied in the man."

Dr. Taylor, as already noted, graduated his first and only class at Lewisburg in 1851, and then resigned to accept the presidency of Madison University, now Colgate. The historic records of Madison have this to say of Dr. Taylor: "He brought with him great strength and popularity. His reputation as an educator and mathematician was second to that of no other. During his first year the number of students in the college increased from 39 to 84. Within the three subsequent years the number reached 216. An endowment of over $60,000 was secured before the end of the first year. The rapidity of the rise of the University under his administration was astonishing to friends and all others. After nearly five years of vigorous rule Dr. Taylor died, lamented by all the friends of the University. His death occurred on January 6, 1856."

Some years later his successor in the presidency, Dr. George F. Eaton, speaking of him said, "Dr. Taylor was a man of great elements of character. Originally endowed with a huge mass of brains and a corresponding breadth of intellect that would have insured distinction in whatever sphere of mental activity he might have engaged, he chose as his vocation the profession of educator. His conscientious purpose and indomitable will made everything subserve this end. And he attained to the highest eminence in this line. He was not ambitious for public demonstration and spoke but seldom in public, but always with pith and pertinency when he did. His recitation and lecture room was the chosen field of his power. Here was his throne and sceptre and undivided dominion. In short, Dr. Taylor was the synonym of massive and unadorned power. His character was a Doric pillar of marble for solidity and simplicity. He might have made a Corinthian or Composite but he deliberately peferred to be solid rather than brilliant, to be useful rather than ornamental. He trimmed away all superfluities of mere grace and decoration and stood forth in the grandeur of simplicity and utility."

Professor Charles Sexton James, who was the successor to Dr. Taylor in the chair of mathematics, was born in Philadelphia, February 6th, 1829. He entered Brown University at the age of sixteen. His course was not a continuous one ad he did not graduate until 1843. As a student he ranked with the best in all departments of study. It is recorded of him that he distinguished himself in Greek. As already stated, he was chosen to membership in Phi Beta Kappa scholarship society in his junior year. For a number of years he was an instructor in the Philadelphia Academy at Eleventh and Market Streets. He was appointed professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in the University at Lewisburg in 1851. The degree of Ph. D. was conferred upon him by Columbian College in 1859.

"Baptist Sketches" by Dr. William Cathcart, has this to say about him: "Professor James, as a scholar, was exact and thorough. As a teacher, for more than a third of a century, he was enthusiastic and eminently successful. The dry problems of pure mathematics were poetry to him, and in his hand were clothed with unknown charms to his classes. Many of Lewisburg's best and most useful graduates refer to his class room as the place of their first and lasting inspiration to exact reasoning and earnest scholarship.

Professor James was singularly modest. Within the circle of his appointed labors he was devotedly loved."

Professor James was my teacher of mathematics. The above sketch of his character is not overdrawn. He died in 1901.

I shall now as I go along bring to your attention a kind of conservatism which in the days of our pioneer professors seemed to be a dominant feature of the mathematics department in the University at Lewisburg.

When Professor James entered upon his work at Lewisburg he found that Dr. Taylor had built up a most excellent mathematics curriculum. In fact it was the standard curriculum of many colleges of the first class. Colleges in 1851 were much alike in these respects.

After twenty-six years of service, Professor James left Bucknell and we note that the requirements in mathematics for the degree of Bachelor of Arts, remained identically the same when he left as they were when he came. In these he had not made a single change.

Moreover, the textbooks which Dr. Taylor had introduced in 1850 when he established the mathematics curriculum were still in use in 1877,—identically the same after 26 years. In the case of Olmsted's texts there was the single variation that they had

Tie a tin to trouble

A TIDY red tin of Prince Albert, to be exact. There's the greatest little trouble-chaser in the known world. Smoke P. A. and pipe-grouches choose the nearest exit.

Yes, Sir, P. A. is right there with the Pollyanna stuff. Sunshine, gladness, the light heart, the bright smile. Because Prince Albert is the cheeriest, chummiest tobacco that ever tumbled into a briar or corncob.

Smoke P. A.—and smile. Cool, comfortable P. A. Fragrant, friendly P. A. Not a tongue-bite or throat-parch in a ton of it. The Prince Albert process hung the "No Admittance" sign on Bite and Parch the day the factory opened.

Get a tidy red tin of P. A. today and give pipe-worries the gate.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

P.A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.
